French, Step by Step, Root by Root

An etymology-driven curriculum, built one word at a time

Adhithya Rajasekaran

This edition compiled incrementally — new chapters added as they are written.

Copyright © Adhithya Rajasekaran. Licensed under Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International (CC BY-SA 4.0). You may share and adapt this work, including commercially, as long as you give appropriate credit and license your own contributions under the same terms.

Preface

This book teaches French one word at a time, and it teaches each word by taking it apart — traced back to its root (usually Latin), then forward to the English cousins you already own, so nothing here is a fresh thing to memorize. It is written for someone starting from zero, whose only shared language is English. jour ("day") arrives next to journal and journey; salut ("hi") turns out to wish you health, like salute and salubrious.

French has a close sibling in Spanish — both are worn-down Latin — so where a French word and its Spanish cousin descend from one Latin root, the book shows both and dwells on the difference between them (why the same dies became French jour but Spanish día; why French keeps bonjour singular where Spanish pluralizes buenos días). Every such comparison is supplied in full by the text — no prior Spanish is assumed; it is offered as enrichment, and a reader who happens to know Spanish simply nods along.

How to use this book

Every numbered section is one word, or one small phrase, and takes a few minutes — the length of a queue, an errand, or the walk to the bus. Read them in order the first time through: each section stands on the ones before it, and nothing is used before it has been taught. After that the book becomes reference, and you can open it anywhere.

Say the French out loud wherever you can. The prompts under Your turn are written to be spoken, and saying a word is most of what makes it stay. The questions under Before you move on carry their own answers in brackets: cover them, answer from memory, then look.

Nothing here is gated behind pronunciation. Each lesson names the one or two sounds its own word needs, exactly where they are needed. The whole system is gathered in a reference at the back of the book — somewhere to look things up when you are curious, never a chapter to sit through first.

Released under CC BY-SA 4.0 — share it, adapt it, teach from it.

Contents

Preface iii

1 Greetings 1
1.1 salut . . . 1
1.2 salut . . . 3
1.3 salut . . . 4
1.4 salut . . . 5
1.5 salut . . . 6
1.6 bien . . . 6
1.7 bon / bonne . . . 8
1.8 le / la / les . . . 9
1.9 jour . . . 10
1.10 bonjour . . . 12
1.11 soir . . . 13
1.12 bonsoir . . . 14
1.13 nuit . . . 15
1.14 bonne nuit . . . 17
1.15 Practice . . . 18

2 Introducing Yourself 21
2.1 je . . . 21
2.2 me . . . 22
2.3 (s')appeler . . . 24
2.4 je m'appelle… . . . 25
2.5 tu / vous . . . 26
2.6 comment . . . 27
2.7 comment vous appelez-vous? . . . 28
2.8 enchanté(e) . . . 30
2.9 Practice . . . 31

3 How Are You? 33
3.1 merci . . . 33
3.2 de rien . . . 35
3.3 aller . . . 36
3.4 comment ça va ? . . . 38
3.5 Comment vas-tu ? / Comment allez-vous ? . . . 39
3.6 comme ci, comme ça . . . 40
3.7 Practice . . . 42

4 Farewells 45
4.1 au revoir . . . 45
4.2 à plus tard . . . 47
4.3 à bientôt . . . 48
4.4 à demain . . . 50
4.5 Practice . . . 51
4.6 é è ê . . . 52
4.7 ç . . . 55
4.8 ï ë ü . . . 57
4.9 à . . . 59
4.10 ê ç ï . . . 60

5 The First Verbs 63
5.1 parler . . . 63
5.2 habiter . . . 65
5.3 travailler . . . 66
5.4 Je parle français . . . 68
5.5 Practice . . . 69

6 Numbers One to Ten 73
6.1 un . . . 73
6.2 deux . . . 75
6.3 trois . . . 76
6.4 quatre . . . 77
6.5 cinq . . . 78
6.6 six . . . 79
6.7 sept . . . 80
6.8 huit . . . 81
6.9 neuf . . . 83
6.10 dix . . . 84
6.11 septembre, octobre, novembre, décembre . . . 85

6.12 Practice 86

7 The Days of the Week 89
7.1 la lune 89
7.2 lundi 90
7.3 mardi 92
7.4 mercredi 93
7.5 jeudi 94
7.6 vendredi 95
7.7 samedi 96
7.8 dimanche 97
7.9 Practice 99

8 Telling the Time 101
8.1 heure 101
8.2 il est, … heures 102
8.3 une heure 104
8.4 midi 105
8.5 minuit 106
8.6 et quart 107
8.7 et demie 108
8.8 moins le quart 109
8.9 Practice 111

9 The Months: Gods and Beginnings 113
9.1 janvier 113
9.2 février 114
9.3 mars 115
9.4 avril 117
9.5 mai 118
9.6 juin 119
9.7 Practice 120

10 The Months: Caesars and Counting 123
10.1 juillet 123
10.2 août 124
10.3 septembre 126
10.4 octobre 127
10.5 novembre 128
10.6 décembre 129

10.7 Practice 130

11 The Four Seasons 133
11.1 le printemps 133
11.2 l'été 134
11.3 l'automne 135
11.4 l'hiver 136
11.5 au printemps, en été 137
11.6 Practice 138

12 Family, and the Oldest Words We Have 141
12.1 le père 141
12.2 la mère 143
12.3 père / father 144
12.4 le frère 145
12.5 la sœur 146
12.6 œ 148
12.7 Practice 149

13 Bread, Water, Wine 153
13.1 le pain 153
13.2 l'eau 154
13.3 le vin 156
13.4 du pain, de l'eau 157
13.5 Practice 158

14 The Welded Teens 161
14.1 onze 161
14.2 douze 162
14.3 -ze 163
14.4 treize 164
14.5 quatorze 165
14.6 quinze 166
14.7 seize 168
14.8 trei-ze 169
14.9 Practice 170

15 Where French Changes Its Mind 173
15.1 dix-sept 173
15.2 seize / dix-sept 174

15.3 dix-huit 176
15.4 dix-neuf 177
15.5 vingt 178
15.6 vīgintī 179
15.7 Practice 180

16 Colours 183
16.1 noir 183
16.2 blanc 184
16.3 l'aube 186
16.4 rouge 187
16.5 bleu 188
16.6 le vin rouge 189
16.7 bleu, blanc, rouge 191
16.8 Practice 192

17 To Have, and How Old You Are 195
17.1 j'ai 195
17.2 tu as 196
17.3 il a, elle a 197
17.4 ai · as · a 199
17.5 nous avons 200
17.6 vous avez 201
17.7 ils ont, elles ont 202
17.8 habēre 203
17.9 Practice 204
17.10 un an, des ans 205
17.11 j'ai vingt ans 207
17.12 Quel âge as-tu ? 208
17.13 j'ai vingt ans / I am twenty 209
17.14 Practice 210

18 The Compound Past 213
18.1 parlé 213
18.2 j'ai parlé 214
18.3 parler · parlé · parlez 216
18.4 fini · vendu 217
18.5 -ātum · -ītum · -ūtum 218
18.6 habeō litterās scriptās 219
18.7 les lettres que j'ai écrites 220

18.8 Practice . . . 221
18.9 il parla . . . 223
18.10 il parla · habló · falou . . . 224
18.11 passé simple · Präteritum · passato … . . . 225
18.12 Practice . . . 227

19 To Be, and the Three Verbs Inside It 229
19.1 je suis . . . 229
19.2 tu es . . . 230
19.3 il est, elle est . . . 231
19.4 nous sommes . . . 233
19.5 vous êtes . . . 234
19.6 ils sont, elles sont . . . 235
19.7 esse . . . 236
19.8 je fus . . . 237
19.9 été . . . 238
19.10 suppletion . . . 239
19.11 être / ser · estar . . . 240
19.12 Practice . . . 242

20 The Past That Takes être 245
20.1 je suis allé . . . 245
20.2 aller · venir · naître · mourir . . . 246
20.3 j'ai couru . . . 248
20.4 je suis monté / j'ai monté les valises . . . 249
20.5 elle est allée . . . 250
20.6 une seule règle . . . 251
20.7 je me suis levé . . . 252
20.8 elle s'est lavée / elle s'est lavé les … . . . 253
20.9 elles se sont souvenues . . . 255
20.10 Practice . . . 256

21 Head and Hand 259
21.1 la tête . . . 259
21.2 (la tête, continued) . . . 261
21.3 la main . . . 261
21.4 (la main, continued) . . . 263

22 Yes and No 265
22.1 oui . . . 265
22.2 (oui, continued) . . . 266
22.3 non . . . 267

23 Please 269
23.1 s'il vous plaît . . . 269

24 Sorry 271
24.1 je suis désolé(e) . . . 271

25 Weather 275
25.1 le temps, il pleut . . . 275
25.2 (le temps, il pleut, continued) . . . 276

26 Dog and Cat 279
26.1 chien, chat . . . 279
26.2 (chien, chat, continued) . . . 280

27 Green and Yellow 283
27.1 vert, jaune . . . 283
27.2 (vert, jaune, continued) . . . 284

28 Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving 287
28.1 prendre . . . 287
28.2 demander . . . 289
28.3 aider . . . 291
28.4 aimer . . . 292

29 Verbs of the Mind 295
29.1 comprendre . . . 295
29.2 penser . . . 297
29.3 lire . . . 299
29.4 écrire . . . 301

30 Hearing, Sleeping, Walking, Running 303
30.1 entendre . . . 303
30.2 dormir . . . 305
30.3 marcher . . . 307
30.4 courir . . . 309

31 Sitting, Standing, Opening, Closing 313
31.1 s'asseoir . . . 313
31.2 se lever, debout . . . 315
31.3 ouvrir . . . 317
31.4 fermer . . . 319

32 Coffee, Tea, Milk, Sugar 323
32.1 le café . . . 323
32.2 le thé . . . 324
32.3 le lait . . . 326
32.4 le sucre . . . 327

33 The People You Introduce 329
33.1 l'ami, l'amie . . . 329
33.2 la famille . . . 330
33.3 l'enfant . . . 331
33.4 la personne . . . 333

34 Cheese, Butter, Salt, Egg 335
34.1 le fromage . . . 335
34.2 le beurre . . . 336
34.3 le sel . . . 338
34.4 l'œuf, les œufs . . . 339

35 Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Stomach 341
35.1 l'œil, les yeux . . . 341
35.2 le nez . . . 343
35.3 la bouche . . . 344
35.4 le ventre . . . 345
35.5 le ventre . . . 346

36 Asking a Question — Three Ways, and Which One to Use 349
36.1 une question . . . 349
36.2 est-ce que . . . 350
36.3 où . . . 351
36.4 quand . . . 352
36.5 comment . . . 353
36.6 combien . . . 354
36.7 pourquoi . . . 355

36.8 parlez-vous . . . 356
36.9 quel, quelle . . . 357

37 Want, Can, Must 359
37.1 vouloir . . . 359
37.2 pouvoir . . . 361
37.3 devoir . . . 362
37.4 Practice . . . 363

38 Five Ways to Point 367
38.1 il y a . . . 367
38.2 c'est . . . 368
38.3 ici, là, là-bas . . . 370
38.4 voici . . . 371
38.5 ce, cet, cette, ces . . . 372
38.6 Practice . . . 373

39 Where Two Words Melt Into One 375
39.1 à . . . 375
39.2 de . . . 376
39.3 au, aux . . . 377
39.4 de la . . . 379
39.5 des . . . 380
39.6 Practice . . . 381

40 Two Ideas, One Sentence 383
40.1 sujet, verbe, objet . . . 383
40.2 et . . . 384
40.3 ou . . . 386
40.4 mais . . . 387
40.5 parce que . . . 388
40.6 Practice . . . 389

41 Three More Ways to Use a Verb 391
41.1 Parle ! Écoute ! . . . 391
41.2 je vais partir . . . 392
41.3 finir . . . 393
41.4 je sais pas . . . 395
41.5 on . . . 396
41.6 Practice . . . 397

42 What the Ear Cannot Hear 399
42.1 la consonne finale . . . 399
42.2 le plural en -s . . . 401
42.3 petit, petite . . . 402
42.4 les bateaux . . . 403
42.5 pas de pain . . . 404
42.6 Practice . . . 405

43 Standing Alone 407
43.1 qui . . . 407
43.2 que . . . 408
43.3 quoi . . . 409
43.4 moi et toi . . . 410
43.5 lui et elle . . . 411
43.6 Practice . . . 412

44 How Much, and What to Call People 415
44.1 beaucoup . . . 415
44.2 un peu . . . 416
44.3 très . . . 417
44.4 assez . . . 419
44.5 Monsieur, Madame . . . 420
44.6 Practice . . . 421

45 Reading — Instructions, a Form, and a First Paragraph 423
45.1 (reading) . . . 423
45.2 (reading) . . . 424
45.3 (reading) . . . 425

46 Writing — My Own Line 427
46.1 (ma propre ligne) . . . 427

47 Writing — With A Clock 429
47.1 (avec la montre) . . . 429

48 Writing — Four Lines, And The Joiner That Moves Nothing 431
48.1 parce que . . . 431

49 Arm, Leg, Foot, Finger, Tooth 433
49.1 le bras . . . 433
49.2 la jambe . . . 434
49.3 le pied . . . 435
49.4 le doigt . . . 435
49.5 la dent . . . 436

50 Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Face, Blood 439
50.1 le cou . . . 439
50.2 l'épaule . . . 440
50.3 le genou . . . 441
50.4 le visage . . . 441
50.5 le sang . . . 442

51 Skin, Nail, Chin, Throat, Cheek 445
51.1 la peau . . . 445
51.2 l'ongle . . . 446
51.3 le menton . . . 447
51.4 la gorge . . . 447
51.5 la joue . . . 448

52 Chest, Stomach, Ankle, Elbow, Wrist 451
52.1 la poitrine . . . 451
52.2 l'estomac . . . 452
52.3 la cheville . . . 453
52.4 le coude . . . 453
52.5 le poignet . . . 454

53 Pain, Fever, Cough, Medicine, Doctor 457
53.1 la douleur . . . 457
53.2 la fièvre . . . 458
53.3 la toux . . . 459
53.4 le médicament . . . 459
53.5 le médecin . . . 460

54 Hospital, Illness, Thirst, Tiredness, Ill 463
54.1 l'hôpital . . . 463
54.2 la maladie . . . 464
54.3 la soif . . . 465
54.4 la fatigue . . . 466

54.5 malade 466

55 Joy, Fear, Anger, Sadness, Happy 469
55.1 la joie 469
55.2 la peur 470
55.3 la colère 471
55.4 la tristesse 471
55.5 heureux 472

56 Sad, Pleased, Daughter, Grandfather, Grandmother 475
56.1 triste 475
56.2 content 476
56.3 la fille 477
56.4 le grand-père 477
56.5 la grand-mère 478

57 Husband, Woman, Uncle, Aunt, Cousin 481
57.1 le mari 481
57.2 la femme 482
57.3 l'oncle 483
57.4 la tante 483
57.5 la cousine 484

58 Neighbour, Guest, Baby, Grandson, Granddaughter 487
58.1 le voisin 487
58.2 l'invité 488
58.3 le bébé 489
58.4 le petit-fils 489
58.5 la petite-fille 490

59 Nephew, Niece, Pupil, Teacher, Laugh 493
59.1 le neveu 493
59.2 la nièce 494
59.3 l'élève 495
59.4 le professeur 495
59.5 rire 496

60 Cry, Wash, Cook, Play, Learn 499
60.1 pleurer 499
60.2 laver 500
60.3 cuisiner 501

60.4 jouer 501
60.5 apprendre 502

61 Teach, Drink, Eat, Give, Live 505
61.1 enseigner 505
61.2 boire 506
61.3 manger 507
61.4 donner 507
61.5 vivre 508

62 Come back, Study, Pay, Use, Show 511
62.1 revenir 511
62.2 étudier 512
62.3 payer 513
62.4 utiliser 514
62.5 montrer 514

63 Clean, Cut, Forget, Look for, Lose 517
63.1 nettoyer 517
63.2 couper 518
63.3 oublier 519
63.4 chercher 519
63.5 perdre 520

64 Look at, Listen to, Wait for, Buy, Know 523
64.1 regarder 523
64.2 écouter 524
64.3 attendre 525
64.4 acheter 525
64.5 savoir 526

65 Leave, Carry, Send, Receive, Feel 529
65.1 laisser 529
65.2 porter 530
65.3 envoyer 531
65.4 recevoir 531
65.5 sentir 532

66 Draw, Paint, Count, Win, Hide 535
66.1 dessiner . . . 535
66.2 peindre . . . 536
66.3 compter . . . 537
66.4 gagner . . . 537
66.5 cacher . . . 538

67 Find, Fish, Chicken, Fruit, Apple 541
67.1 trouver . . . 541
67.2 le poisson . . . 542
67.3 le poulet . . . 543
67.4 le fruit . . . 543
67.5 la pomme . . . 544

68 Banana, Orange, Potato, Tomato, Onion 547
68.1 la banane . . . 547
68.2 l'orange . . . 548
68.3 la pomme de terre . . . 549
68.4 la tomate . . . 549
68.5 l'oignon . . . 550

69 Carrot, Cake, Soup, Honey, Oil 553
69.1 la carotte . . . 553
69.2 le gâteau . . . 554
69.3 la soupe . . . 555
69.4 le miel . . . 555
69.5 l'huile . . . 556

70 Lunch, Dinner, Breakfast, Rice, Pear 559
70.1 le déjeuner . . . 559
70.2 le dîner . . . 560
70.3 le petit-déjeuner . . . 561
70.4 le riz . . . 561
70.5 la poire . . . 562

71 Lemon, Grapes, Jam, Yoghurt, Ham 565
71.1 le citron . . . 565
71.2 le raisin . . . 566
71.3 la confiture . . . 567
71.4 le yaourt . . . 567

71.5 le jambon 568

72 Salad, Pasta, Cream, Pepper, Walnut 571
72.1 la salade 571
72.2 les pâtes 572
72.3 la crème 573
72.4 le poivre 573
72.5 la noix 574

73 Kitchen, Window, Chair, Key, Wall 577
73.1 la cuisine 577
73.2 la fenêtre 578
73.3 la chaise 579
73.4 la clé 580
73.5 le mur 580

74 Roof, Garden, Lamp, Bathroom, Bedroom 583
74.1 le toit 583
74.2 le jardin 584
74.3 la lampe 585
74.4 la salle de bain 585
74.5 la chambre 586

75 Floor, Stairs, Mirror, Living room, Sofa 589
75.1 le sol 589
75.2 l'escalier 590
75.3 le miroir 591
75.4 le salon 592
75.5 le canapé 592

76 Cupboard, Ceiling, Corridor, Glass, Plate 595
76.1 le placard 595
76.2 le plafond 596
76.3 le couloir 597
76.4 le verre 597
76.5 l'assiette 598

77 Spoon, Knife, Fork, Bottle, Cup 601
77.1 la cuillère 601
77.2 le couteau 602
77.3 la fourchette 603

77.4 la bouteille 603
77.5 la tasse 604
77.6 (dialogue) 605
77.7 (dialogue) 607

78 Pen, Paper, Notebook, Pencil, Bag 609
78.1 le stylo 609
78.2 le papier 610
78.3 le cahier 611
78.4 le crayon 611
78.5 le sac 612

79 Phone, Umbrella, Money, Present, Glasses 615
79.1 le téléphone 615
79.2 le parapluie 616
79.3 l'argent 617
79.4 le cadeau 617
79.5 les lunettes 618

80 Box, Suitcase, Ticket, Map, Photo 621
80.1 la boîte 621
80.2 la valise 622
80.3 le billet 623
80.4 la carte 623
80.5 la photo 624

81 Tree, Flower, Leaf, Mountain, River 627
81.1 l'arbre 627
81.2 la fleur 628
81.3 la feuille 629
81.4 la montagne 629
81.5 la rivière 630

82 Sea, Stone, Sand, Beach, Island 633
82.1 la mer 633
82.2 la pierre 634
82.3 le sable 635
82.4 la plage 635
82.5 l'île 636

83 Sun, Star, Cloud, Rain, Snow 639
83.1 le soleil . . . 639
83.2 l'étoile . . . 640
83.3 le nuage . . . 641
83.4 la pluie . . . 641
83.5 la neige . . . 642

84 Wind, Fire, Hill, Desert, Wave 645
84.1 le vent . . . 645
84.2 le feu . . . 646
84.3 la colline . . . 647
84.4 le désert . . . 647
84.5 la vague . . . 648

85 Cow, Pig, Bird, Mouse, Wolf 651
85.1 la vache . . . 651
85.2 le cochon . . . 652
85.3 l'oiseau . . . 653
85.4 la souris . . . 653
85.5 le loup . . . 654

86 Bear, Fox, Snake, Hen, Duck 657
86.1 l'ours . . . 657
86.2 le renard . . . 658
86.3 le serpent . . . 659
86.4 la poule . . . 659
86.5 le canard . . . 660

87 Sheep, Goat, Lion, Monkey, Bee 663
87.1 le mouton . . . 663
87.2 la chèvre . . . 664
87.3 le lion . . . 665
87.4 le singe . . . 665
87.5 l'abeille . . . 666

88 Ant, Elephant, Rabbit, Frog, Tiger 669
88.1 la fourmi . . . 669
88.2 l'éléphant . . . 670
88.3 le lapin . . . 671
88.4 la grenouille . . . 671

88.5 le tigre 672

89 Tortoise, New, Old, Fast, Easy 675
89.1 la tortue 675
89.2 nouveau 676
89.3 vieux 677
89.4 rapide 677
89.5 facile 678

90 Difficult, Dear, High, Full, Empty 681
90.1 difficile 681
90.2 cher 682
90.3 haut 683
90.4 plein 683
90.5 vide 684

91 Strong, Weak, Rich, Poor, Grey 687
91.1 fort 687
91.2 faible 688
91.3 riche 689
91.4 pauvre 689
91.5 gris 690

92 Soft, Dirty, Young, Kind, Narrow 693
92.1 doux 693
92.2 sale 694
92.3 jeune 695
92.4 gentil 695
92.5 étroit 696

93 Thin, Big, Heavy, Light, Sweet 699
93.1 mince 699
93.2 gros 700
93.3 lourd 701
93.4 léger 701
93.5 sucré 702

94 Salty, Bitter, Round, Square, Dry 705
94.1 salé 705
94.2 amer 706
94.3 rond 707

94.4 carré 707
94.5 sec 708

95 Wet, Week, Month, Morning, Always 711
95.1 mouillé 711
95.2 la semaine 712
95.3 le mois 713
95.4 le matin 713
95.5 toujours 714

96 Never, Now, Then, Far, Near 717
96.1 jamais 717
96.2 maintenant 718
96.3 puis 719
96.4 loin 719
96.5 près 720

97 On top, Underneath, Inside, Outside, Today 723
97.1 dessus 723
97.2 dessous 724
97.3 dedans 725
97.4 dehors 725
97.5 aujourd'hui 726

98 Yesterday, Often, Sometimes, Town, Street 729
98.1 hier 729
98.2 souvent 730
98.3 parfois 731
98.4 la ville 731
98.5 la rue 732

99 Shop, School, Bank, Train, Aeroplane 735
99.1 le magasin 735
99.2 l'école 736
99.3 la banque 737
99.4 le train 738
99.5 l'avion 738

100 Car, Bridge, Park, Church, Museum 741
100.1 la voiture . . . 741
100.2 le pont . . . 742
100.3 le parc . . . 743
100.4 l'église . . . 743
100.5 le musée . . . 744

101 Restaurant, Hotel, Pharmacy, Village, Post office 747
101.1 le restaurant . . . 747
101.2 l'hôtel . . . 748
101.3 la pharmacie . . . 749
101.4 le village . . . 749
101.5 la poste . . . 750

102 Police, Theatre, Library, Bakery, Town hall 753
102.1 la police . . . 753
102.2 le théâtre . . . 754
102.3 la bibliothèque . . . 755
102.4 la boulangerie . . . 755
102.5 la mairie . . . 756

103 District, Airport, Clothes, Shirt, Dress 759
103.1 le quartier . . . 759
103.2 l'aéroport . . . 760
103.3 les vêtements . . . 761
103.4 la chemise . . . 761
103.5 la robe . . . 762

104 Trousers, Shoes, Hat, Coat, Skirt 765
104.1 le pantalon . . . 765
104.2 les chaussures . . . 766
104.3 le chapeau . . . 767
104.4 le manteau . . . 767
104.5 la jupe . . . 768

105 Socks, Thirty, Forty, Fifty, Hundred 771
105.1 les chaussettes . . . 771
105.2 trente . . . 772
105.3 quarante . . . 773
105.4 cinquante . . . 773

105.5 cent 774
105.6 (dialogue) 775
105.7 (dialogue) 776

106 Bicycle, Underground, Taxi, Car park, Lift 779
106.1 le vélo 779
106.2 le métro 780
106.3 le taxi 781
106.4 le parking 782
106.5 l'ascenseur 782

107 Supermarket, Cinema, Stadium, Swimming pool, Grocer's shop 785
107.1 le supermarché 785
107.2 le cinéma 786
107.3 le stade 787
107.4 la piscine 787
107.5 l'épicerie 788

108 Office, Factory, Pavement, Crossroads, Red light 791
108.1 le bureau 791
108.2 l'usine 792
108.3 le trottoir 793
108.4 le carrefour 793
108.5 le feu rouge 794

109 Border, North, South, West, Letterbox 797
109.1 la frontière 797
109.2 le nord 798
109.3 le sud 799
109.4 l'ouest 799
109.5 la boîte aux lettres 800

110 Right, Left, World, Journey, Holidays 803
110.1 la droite 803
110.2 la gauche 804
110.3 le monde 805
110.4 le voyage 805
110.5 les vacances 806

111 Rug, Television, Computer, Fridge, Radio 809
111.1 le tapis . . . 809
111.2 la télévision . . . 810
111.3 l'ordinateur . . . 811
111.4 le réfrigérateur . . . 811
111.5 la radio . . . 812

112 Shower, Bathtub, Wardrobe, Shelf, Curtain 815
112.1 la douche . . . 815
112.2 la baignoire . . . 816
112.3 l'armoire . . . 817
112.4 l'étagère . . . 817
112.5 le rideau . . . 818

113 Pillow, Blanket, Towel, Soap, Toothbrush 821
113.1 l'oreiller . . . 821
113.2 la couverture . . . 822
113.3 la serviette . . . 823
113.4 le savon . . . 824
113.5 la brosse à dents . . . 824

114 Toothpaste, Shampoo, Comb, Bin, Broom 827
114.1 le dentifrice . . . 827
114.2 le shampooing . . . 828
114.3 le peigne . . . 829
114.4 la poubelle . . . 829
114.5 le balai . . . 830

115 Vacuum, Laundry, Washing powder, Iron, Pocket 833
115.1 l'aspirateur . . . 833
115.2 le linge . . . 834
115.3 la lessive . . . 835
115.4 le fer . . . 836
115.5 la poche . . . 836

116 Jacket, Tie, Belt, Gloves, Scarf 839
116.1 la veste . . . 839
116.2 la cravate . . . 840
116.3 la ceinture . . . 841
116.4 les gants . . . 841

116.5 l'écharpe 842
116.6 (dialogue) 843
116.7 (dialogue) 844

117 Boots, Cap, Swimsuit, Size, Wallet 847
117.1 les bottes 847
117.2 la casquette 848
117.3 le maillot 849
117.4 la taille 849
117.5 le portefeuille 850

118 Jewel, Ring, Necklace, Perfume, Letter 853
118.1 le bijou 853
118.2 la bague 854
118.3 le collier 855
118.4 le parfum 855
118.5 la lettre 856

119 Beef, Vegetables, Mushroom, Beans, Cucumber 859
119.1 le bœuf 859
119.2 les légumes 860
119.3 le champignon 861
119.4 les haricots 862
119.5 le concombre 862

120 Strawberry, Cherry, Melon, Garlic, Flour 865
120.1 la fraise 865
120.2 la cerise 866
120.3 le melon 867
120.4 l'ail 867
120.5 la farine 868

121 Beer, Juice, Ice cream, Chocolate, Biscuit 871
121.1 la bière 871
121.2 le jus 872
121.3 la glace 873
121.4 le chocolat 873
121.5 le biscuit 874

122 Sandwich, Sauce, Vinegar, Dessert, Meal 877
122.1 le sandwich . . . 877
122.2 la sauce . . . 878
122.3 le vinaigre . . . 879
122.4 le dessert . . . 879
122.5 le repas . . . 880

123 Nurse, Cook, Police officer, Shop assistant, Farmer 883
123.1 l'infirmière . . . 883
123.2 le cuisinier . . . 884
123.3 le policier . . . 885
123.4 le vendeur . . . 885
123.5 l'agriculteur . . . 886

124 Baker, Student, Driver, Lawyer, Engineer 889
124.1 le boulanger . . . 889
124.2 l'étudiant . . . 890
124.3 le chauffeur . . . 891
124.4 l'avocat . . . 891
124.5 l'ingénieur . . . 892

125 Firefighter, Postman, Waiter, Customer, Till 895
125.1 le pompier . . . 895
125.2 le facteur . . . 896
125.3 le serveur . . . 897
125.4 le client . . . 897
125.5 la caisse . . . 898

126 Class, Lesson, Exam, Word, Board 901
126.1 la classe . . . 901
126.2 la leçon . . . 902
126.3 l'examen . . . 903
126.4 le mot . . . 904
126.5 le tableau . . . 904

127 Rubber, Homework, Answer, Idea, Problem 907
127.1 la gomme . . . 907
127.2 les devoirs . . . 908
127.3 la réponse . . . 909
127.4 l'idée . . . 910

127.5 le problème 910
127.6 (dialogue) 911
127.7 (dialogue) 912

128 Music, Sport, Game, Film, Song 915
128.1 la musique 915
128.2 le sport 916
128.3 le jeu 917
128.4 le film 917
128.5 la chanson 918

129 Drawing, Life, Time, Colour, Price 921
129.1 le dessin 921
129.2 la vie 922
129.3 la fois 923
129.4 la couleur 923
129.5 le prix 924

130 Pink, Purple, Brown (chestnut), Brown (of hair, Pretty 927
130.1 rose 927
130.2 violet 928
130.3 marron 929
130.4 brun 929
130.5 joli 930

131 Busy, Free, Open, Closed, Calm 933
131.1 occupé 933
131.2 libre 934
131.3 ouvert 935
131.4 fermé 936
131.5 calme 936

132 Noisy, Last, Next, Famous, Funny 939
132.1 bruyant 939
132.2 dernier 940
132.3 prochain 941
132.4 célèbre 941
132.5 drôle 942

133 Nice, Nasty, Heat, Storm, Fog 945
133.1 sympathique . . . 945
133.2 méchant . . . 946
133.3 la chaleur . . . 947
133.4 l'orage . . . 947
133.5 le brouillard . . . 948

134 Grass, Ear, Lip, Number (on a door, Address 951
134.1 l'herbe . . . 951
134.2 l'oreille . . . 952
134.3 la lèvre . . . 953
134.4 le numéro . . . 953
134.5 l'adresse . . . 954

135 Second, Change (coins), Date, Century, Email 957
135.1 la seconde . . . 957
135.2 la monnaie . . . 958
135.3 la date . . . 959
135.4 le siècle . . . 959
135.5 le courriel . . . 960

136 Zero, Sixty, Seventy, Ninety, Thousand 963
136.1 zéro . . . 963
136.2 soixante . . . 964
136.3 soixante-dix . . . 965
136.4 quatre-vingt-dix . . . 965
136.5 mille . . . 966

137 To begin, To visit (a place), To answer, To put, To believe 969
137.1 commencer . . . 969
137.2 visiter . . . 970
137.3 répondre . . . 971
137.4 mettre . . . 971
137.5 croire . . . 972

138 To know (a person, a place), To prefer, To hope, To drive, To get dressed 975
138.1 connaître . . . 975
138.2 préférer . . . 976

138.3 espérer 977
138.4 conduire 978
138.5 s'habiller 978
138.6 (dialogue) 979
138.7 (dialogue) 980

139 Nothing, None, Neither, Which One, Anything at All 983
139.1 rien 983
139.2 aucun / aucune 984
139.3 non plus 985
139.4 lequel / laquelle 986
139.5 n'importe quoi 987

140 Already, Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Formerly, To Happen 989
140.1 déjà 989
140.2 récemment 990
140.3 avant-hier 991
140.4 autrefois 992
140.5 se produire 992

141 The Future, This Evening, a Plan, To Foresee, To Organise 995
141.1 l'avenir 995
141.2 ce soir 996
141.3 le projet 997
141.4 prévoir 998
141.5 organiser 998

142 Opening Hours, a Notice, the Rent, an Advert, a Bill 1001
142.1 l'horaire 1001
142.2 l'avis 1002
142.3 le loyer 1003
142.4 l'annonce 1004
142.5 la facture 1005
142.6 (dialogue) 1005
142.7 (dialogue) 1006

143 To switch on, To switch off, To jump, To smile, To shout 1007
143.1 allumer 1007
143.2 éteindre 1008
143.3 sauter 1009
143.4 sourire 1009
143.5 crier 1010

144 To explain, To translate, To decide, To try, To continue 1013
144.1 expliquer 1013
144.2 traduire 1014
144.3 décider 1015
144.4 essayer 1015
144.5 continuer 1016

145 To sign, To fill in a form, To phone, To discuss, To quarrel 1019
145.1 signer 1019
145.2 remplir un formulaire 1020
145.3 téléphoner 1021
145.4 discuter 1021
145.5 se disputer 1022

146 To be bored, To have fun, To get angry, To worry, To smoke 1025
146.1 s'ennuyer 1025
146.2 s'amuser 1026
146.3 se fâcher 1027
146.4 s'inquiéter 1027
146.5 fumer 1028

147 To compare, To advise, To convince, To criticise, To prove 1031
147.1 comparer 1031
147.2 conseiller 1032
147.3 convaincre 1033
147.4 critiquer 1033
147.5 démontrer 1034

148 To observe, To take part, To go for a walk, To fold, To own 1037
148.1 observer . . . 1037
148.2 participer . . . 1038
148.3 se promener . . . 1039
148.4 plier . . . 1039
148.5 posséder . . . 1040

149 To discover, To seem, To serve, To suffer, To dream 1043
149.1 découvrir . . . 1043
149.2 sembler . . . 1044
149.3 servir . . . 1045
149.4 souffrir . . . 1045
149.5 rêver . . . 1046

150 To move away, To come near, To chat, To plug in, To deliver 1049
150.1 s'éloigner . . . 1049
150.2 s'approcher . . . 1050
150.3 bavarder . . . 1051
150.4 brancher . . . 1051
150.5 livrer . . . 1052

151 To put up, To pray, To recommend, To slow down, To breathe 1055
151.1 héberger . . . 1055
151.2 prier . . . 1056
151.3 recommander . . . 1057
151.4 ralentir . . . 1058
151.5 respirer . . . 1058
151.6 (dialogue) . . . 1059
151.7 (dialogue) . . . 1060

152 To admire, To act, To move forward, To move back, To lower 1063
152.1 admirer . . . 1063
152.2 agir . . . 1064
152.3 avancer . . . 1065
152.4 reculer . . . 1065
152.5 baisser . . . 1066

153 To notice, To replace, To meet, To blush, To bleed 1069
153.1 remarquer . . . 1069
153.2 remplacer . . . 1070
153.3 rencontrer . . . 1071
153.4 rougir . . . 1071
153.5 saigner . . . 1072

154 Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney 1075
154.1 la santé . . . 1075
154.2 le cerveau . . . 1076
154.3 le poumon . . . 1077
154.4 le foie . . . 1077
154.5 le rein . . . 1078

155 Rest, Sleep, Dream, Anxiety, Love 1081
155.1 le repos . . . 1081
155.2 le sommeil . . . 1082
155.3 le rêve . . . 1083
155.4 l'angoisse . . . 1083
155.5 l'amour . . . 1084

156 Rarely, Afterwards, Finally, From now on, Still 1087
156.1 rarement . . . 1087
156.2 ensuite . . . 1088
156.3 enfin . . . 1089
156.4 désormais . . . 1089
156.5 encore . . . 1090

157 Above, Below, In front, Behind, Beside 1093
157.1 au-dessus . . . 1093
157.2 au-dessous . . . 1094
157.3 devant . . . 1095
157.4 derrière . . . 1095
157.5 à côté . . . 1096

158 So, However, Anyway, On the contrary, Although 1099
158.1 donc . . . 1099
158.2 pourtant . . . 1100
158.3 de toute façon . . . 1101
158.4 au contraire . . . 1101

158.5 bien que 1102

159 Comfortable, Uncomfortable, Polite, Rude, Unpleasant 1105
159.1 confortable 1105
159.2 inconfortable 1106
159.3 poli / polie 1107
159.4 impoli / impolie 1108
159.5 désagréable 1108

160 Deep, Low, Unknown, Dangerous, Safe 1111
160.1 profond / profonde 1111
160.2 bas / basse 1112
160.3 inconnu / inconnue 1113
160.4 dangereux / dangereuse 1114
160.5 sûr / sûre 1114
160.6 (dialogue) 1115
160.7 (dialogue) 1116

161 Modern, Former, Fresh, Spicy, Raw 1119
161.1 moderne 1119
161.2 ancien / ancienne 1120
161.3 frais / fraîche 1121
161.4 épicé / épicée 1121
161.5 cru / crue 1122

162 Worried, With a cold, Single, Married, Divorced 1125
162.1 inquiet / inquiète 1125
162.2 enrhumé / enrhumée 1126
162.3 célibataire 1127
162.4 marié / mariée 1127
162.5 divorcé / divorcée 1128

163 Flat, Dining room, Balcony, Lock, Doorbell 1131
163.1 l'appartement 1131
163.2 la salle à manger 1132
163.3 le balcon 1133
163.4 la serrure 1133
163.5 la sonnette 1134

164 Passport, Customs, Booking, Butcher's, Large river 1137
164.1 le passeport 1137
164.2 la douane 1138
164.3 la réservation 1139
164.4 la boucherie 1139
164.5 le fleuve 1140

165 War, Peace, Army, Soldier, Tradition 1143
165.1 la guerre 1143
165.2 la paix 1144
165.3 l'armée 1145
165.4 le soldat 1145
165.5 la tradition 1146

166 Photographer, Journalist, Architect, Dentist, Pharmacist 1149
166.1 le photographe 1149
166.2 le journaliste 1150
166.3 l'architecte 1151
166.4 le dentiste 1151
166.5 le pharmacien 1152

167 Mother-in-law, Son-in-law, Daughter-in-law, Fiancé, Fiancée 1155
167.1 la belle-mère 1155
167.2 le gendre 1156
167.3 la belle-fille 1157
167.4 le fiancé 1157
167.5 la fiancée 1158

168 Rule, Permission, Ban, Safety, Advice 1161
168.1 la règle 1161
168.2 la permission 1162
168.3 l'interdiction 1163
168.4 la sécurité 1163
168.5 le conseil 1164

169 Postcard, Folder, Pay slip, Label, Guide 1167
169.1 la carte postale 1167
169.2 le dossier 1168

169.3 la fiche de paie 1169
169.4 l'étiquette 1169
169.5 le guide 1170
169.6 (dialogue) 1171
169.7 (dialogue) 1172

170 Castle, Tower, Monument, Statue, Fountain 1173
170.1 le château 1173
170.2 la tour 1174
170.3 le monument 1175
170.4 la statue 1175
170.5 la fontaine 1176

171 Volcano, Plain, Waterfall, Rock, Pebble 1179
171.1 le volcan 1179
171.2 la plaine 1180
171.3 la cascade 1181
171.4 le rocher 1181
171.5 le caillou 1182

172 Plastic, Cotton, Wool, Silk, Leather 1185
172.1 le plastique 1185
172.2 le coton 1186
172.3 la laine 1187
172.4 la soie 1187
172.5 le cuir 1188

173 Ball, Racket, Gym, Swimming, Victory 1191
173.1 le ballon 1191
173.2 la raquette 1192
173.3 la salle de sport 1193
173.4 la natation 1193
173.5 la victoire 1194

174 Company, Colleague, Salary, Meeting, Contract 1197
174.1 l'entreprise 1197
174.2 le collègue 1198
174.3 le salaire 1199
174.4 la réunion 1199
174.5 le contrat 1200

174.6 (dialogue) 1201
174.7 (dialogue) 1201

175 To kiss, To greet, To thank, To invite, To park 1203
175.1 embrasser 1203
175.2 saluer 1204
175.3 remercier 1205
175.4 inviter 1205
175.5 garer 1206

176 To stop, To change, To move, To take off, To hold 1209
176.1 arrêter 1209
176.2 changer 1210
176.3 déplacer 1211
176.4 enlever 1211
176.5 tenir 1212

177 To promise, To allow, To forbid, To protect, To rescue 1215
177.1 promettre 1215
177.2 permettre 1216
177.3 interdire 1217
177.4 protéger 1217
177.5 sauver 1218

178 To snow, To go with, To add, To announce, To appear 1221
178.1 neiger 1221
178.2 accompagner 1222
178.3 ajouter 1223
178.4 annoncer 1223
178.5 apparaître 1224

179 To depend, To share, To avoid, To throw, To turn 1227
179.1 dépendre 1227
179.2 partager 1228
179.3 éviter 1229
179.4 lancer 1229
179.5 tourner 1230

180 To prepare, To introduce, To lend, To propose, To pick up 1233
180.1 préparer . . . 1233
180.2 présenter . . . 1234
180.3 prêter . . . 1235
180.4 proposer . . . 1235
180.5 ramasser . . . 1236

181 To look like, To push, To pull, To waste, To overtake 1239
181.1 ressembler . . . 1239
181.2 pousser . . . 1240
181.3 tirer . . . 1241
181.4 gaspiller . . . 1241
181.5 dépasser . . . 1242

182 To correct, To direct, To destroy, To exaggerate, To celebrate 1245
182.1 corriger . . . 1245
182.2 diriger . . . 1246
182.3 détruire . . . 1247
182.4 exagérer . . . 1247
182.5 fêter . . . 1248

183 To give up, To exchange, To download, To ski, To slip 1251
183.1 renoncer . . . 1251
183.2 échanger . . . 1252
183.3 télécharger . . . 1253
183.4 skier . . . 1253
183.5 glisser . . . 1254
183.6 (dialogue) . . . 1255
183.7 (dialogue) . . . 1256

184 To stir, To pick, To defend, To disappear, To borrow 1257
184.1 bouger . . . 1257
184.2 cueillir . . . 1258
184.3 défendre . . . 1259
184.4 disparaître . . . 1259
184.5 emprunter . . . 1260

185 Muscle, Thumb, Wound, Scar, Cold 1263
185.1 le muscle . . . 1263
185.2 le pouce . . . 1264
185.3 la blessure . . . 1265
185.4 la cicatrice . . . 1265
185.5 le rhume . . . 1266

186 Friendship, Hope, Trust, Courage, Shame 1269
186.1 l'amitié . . . 1269
186.2 l'espoir . . . 1270
186.3 la confiance . . . 1271
186.4 le courage . . . 1271
186.5 la honte . . . 1272

187 In that case, Late, Suddenly, Until, Since 1275
187.1 alors . . . 1275
187.2 tard . . . 1276
187.3 soudain . . . 1277
187.4 jusqu'à . . . 1277
187.5 depuis . . . 1278

188 Near to, Far from, At the bottom, On the right, On the left 1281
188.1 près de . . . 1281
188.2 loin de . . . 1282
188.3 au fond . . . 1283
188.4 à droite . . . 1283
188.5 à gauche . . . 1284

189 Despite, Unfortunately, Luckily, Certainly, Really 1287
189.1 malgré . . . 1287
189.2 malheureusement . . . 1288
189.3 heureusement . . . 1289
189.4 certainement . . . 1290
189.5 vraiment . . . 1290

190 Cheerful, Serious, Shy, Brave, Fearful 1293
190.1 joyeux / joyeuse . . . 1293
190.2 sérieux / sérieuse . . . 1294
190.3 timide . . . 1295

190.4 courageux / courageuse 1295
190.5 peureux / peureuse 1296

191 Simple, Complicated, Necessary, Useful, Useless 1299
191.1 simple 1299
191.2 compliqué / compliquée 1300
191.3 nécessaire 1301
191.4 utile 1301
191.5 inutile 1302

192 Cooked, Ripe, Dark, Clear, Distant 1305
192.1 cuit / cuite 1305
192.2 mûr / mûre 1306
192.3 sombre 1307
192.4 clair / claire 1307
192.5 lointain / lointaine 1308
192.6 (dialogue) 1309
192.7 (dialogue) 1310

193 Sheet, Drawer, Armchair, Saucepan, Frying pan 1311
193.1 le drap 1311
193.2 le tiroir 1312
193.3 le fauteuil 1313
193.4 la casserole 1313
193.5 la poêle 1314

194 Valley, Temperature, Butterfly, Fly, Mosquito 1317
194.1 la vallée 1317
194.2 la température 1318
194.3 le papillon 1319
194.4 la mouche 1320
194.5 le moustique 1320

195 Dialect, Piece of news, Advertising, Screen, Keyboard 1323
195.1 le dialecte 1323
195.2 la nouvelle 1324
195.3 la publicité 1325
195.4 l'écran 1325
195.5 le clavier 1326

196 Butcher, Mechanic, Electrician, Plumber, Worker 1329
196.1 le boucher . . . 1329
196.2 le mécanicien . . . 1330
196.3 l'électricien . . . 1331
196.4 le plombier . . . 1331
196.5 l'ouvrier . . . 1332

197 Bridegroom, Bride, Widower, Success, Failure 1335
197.1 le marié . . . 1335
197.2 la mariée . . . 1336
197.3 le veuf . . . 1337
197.4 le succès . . . 1337
197.5 l'échec . . . 1338

198 Promise, Discount, Sales, Coin, Banknote 1341
198.1 la promesse . . . 1341
198.2 la réduction . . . 1342
198.3 les soldes . . . 1343
198.4 la pièce . . . 1343
198.5 le billet de banque . . . 1344
198.6 (dialogue) . . . 1345
198.7 (dialogue) . . . 1346

199 Entrance, Exit, Luggage, Seat, Steering wheel 1347
199.1 l'entrée . . . 1347
199.2 la sortie . . . 1348
199.3 les bagages . . . 1349
199.4 le siège . . . 1349
199.5 le volant . . . 1350

200 Gate, Fence, Cellar, Attic, Vegetable garden 1353
200.1 le portail . . . 1353
200.2 la clôture . . . 1354
200.3 la cave . . . 1355
200.4 le grenier . . . 1355
200.5 le potager . . . 1356

201 Earth, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Flame 1359
201.1 la terre . . . 1359
201.2 la boue . . . 1360

201.3 la poussière 1361
201.4 la fumée 1361
201.5 la flamme 1362

202 Natural rubber, Metal, Brick, Small bag, Rope 1365
202.1 le caoutchouc 1365
202.2 le métal 1366
202.3 la brique 1367
202.4 le sachet 1367
202.5 la corde 1368

203 Defeat, Championship, Player, Coach, Connection 1371
203.1 la défaite 1371
203.2 le championnat 1372
203.3 le joueur 1373
203.4 l'entraîneur 1373
203.5 la correspondance 1374

204 Interview, Career, Printer, Mobile phone, Sheet of paper 1377
204.1 l'entretien 1377
204.2 la carrière 1378
204.3 l'imprimante 1379
204.4 le téléphone portable 1379
204.5 la feuille de papier 1380
204.6 (dialogue) 1381
204.7 (dialogue) 1382

205 To book, To spend, To save, To order, To dry 1383
205.1 réserver 1383
205.2 dépenser 1384
205.3 économiser 1385
205.4 commander 1386
205.5 sécher 1386

206 To break, To touch, To taste, To heat, To cool down 1389
206.1 casser 1389
206.2 toucher 1390
206.3 goûter 1391
206.4 chauffer 1391

206.5 refroidir 1392

207 To be born, To die, To grow old, To marry, To divorce 1395
207.1 naître 1395
207.2 mourir 1396
207.3 vieillir 1397
207.4 épouser 1397
207.5 divorcer 1398

208 To applaud, To cross, To increase, To decrease, To warn 1401
208.1 applaudir 1401
208.2 traverser 1402
208.3 augmenter 1403
208.4 diminuer 1403
208.5 prévenir 1404

209 To enjoy, To imagine, To point out, To inform, To complain 1407
209.1 profiter 1407
209.2 imaginer 1408
209.3 indiquer 1409
209.4 informer 1409
209.5 se plaindre 1410

210 To reach, To achieve, To give a present, To give back, To recognise 1413
210.1 atteindre 1413
210.2 réaliser 1414
210.3 offrir un cadeau 1415
210.4 rendre 1415
210.5 reconnaître 1416

211 To be silent, To fear, To attempt, To transport, To kill 1419
211.1 se taire 1419
211.2 craindre 1420
211.3 tenter 1421
211.4 transporter 1421
211.5 tuer 1422

212 To fix, To brake, To function, To float, To chase 1425
212.1 fixer . . . 1425
212.2 freiner . . . 1426
212.3 fonctionner . . . 1427
212.4 flotter . . . 1427
212.5 poursuivre . . . 1428

213 To lift, To surprise, To suspect, To squeeze, To suggest 1431
213.1 soulever . . . 1431
213.2 surprendre . . . 1432
213.3 soupçonner . . . 1433
213.4 serrer . . . 1433
213.5 suggérer . . . 1434
213.6 (dialogue) . . . 1435
213.7 (dialogue) . . . 1436

214 To record, To maintain, To exist, To express, To put on weight 1437
214.1 enregistrer . . . 1437
214.2 entretenir . . . 1438
214.3 exister . . . 1439
214.4 exprimer . . . 1439
214.5 grossir . . . 1440

215 Flu, Prescription, Tablet, Syrup, Ointment 1443
215.1 la grippe . . . 1443
215.2 l'ordonnance . . . 1444
215.3 le comprimé . . . 1445
215.4 le sirop . . . 1446
215.5 la pommade . . . 1446

216 Around, Everywhere, Elsewhere, Up there, Suburbs 1449
216.1 autour . . . 1449
216.2 partout . . . 1450
216.3 ailleurs . . . 1451
216.4 là-haut . . . 1451
216.5 la banlieue . . . 1452

217 Almost, About, Only, Together, Nevertheless 1455
217.1 presque . . . 1455
217.2 environ . . . 1456
217.3 seulement . . . 1457
217.4 ensemble . . . 1457
217.5 cependant . . . 1458

218 Curious, Jealous, Proud, Nervous, Quiet 1461
218.1 curieux / curieuse . . . 1461
218.2 jaloux / jalouse . . . 1462
218.3 fier / fière . . . 1463
218.4 nerveux / nerveuse . . . 1463
218.5 tranquille . . . 1464

219 Boring, Fun, Strange, Different, Same 1467
219.1 ennuyeux / ennuyeuse . . . 1467
219.2 amusant / amusante . . . 1468
219.3 étrange . . . 1469
219.4 différent / différente . . . 1470
219.5 pareil / pareille . . . 1470

220 Punctual, Foreign, Friendly, Honest, Patient 1473
220.1 ponctuel / ponctuelle . . . 1473
220.2 étranger / étrangère . . . 1474
220.3 aimable . . . 1475
220.4 honnête . . . 1475
220.5 patient / patiente . . . 1476

221 Scissors, Watch, Pyjamas, Button, Peach 1479
221.1 les ciseaux . . . 1479
221.2 la montre . . . 1480
221.3 le pyjama . . . 1481
221.4 le bouton . . . 1481
221.5 la pêche . . . 1482

222 Society, Government, Law, Court, Judge 1485
222.1 la société . . . 1485
222.2 le gouvernement . . . 1486
222.3 la loi . . . 1487
222.4 le tribunal . . . 1487

222.5 le juge 1488
222.6 (dialogue) 1489
222.7 (dialogue) 1490

223 Battery, Charger, Singer, Concert, Show 1491
223.1 la batterie 1491
223.2 le chargeur 1492
223.3 le chanteur 1493
223.4 le concert 1494
223.5 le spectacle 1494

224 Employee, Pilot, Accountant, Scientist, Researcher 1497
224.1 l'employé 1497
224.2 le pilote 1498
224.3 le comptable 1499
224.4 le scientifique 1499
224.5 le chercheur 1500

225 Experience, Choice, Decision, Possibility, Reason 1503
225.1 l'expérience 1503
225.2 le choix 1504
225.3 la décision 1505
225.4 la possibilité 1505
225.5 la raison 1506

226 Bank card, Cash machine, Bank account, Loan, Debt 1509
226.1 la carte bancaire 1509
226.2 le distributeur 1510
226.3 le compte bancaire 1511
226.4 le prêt 1512
226.5 la dette 1512

227 Wheel, Engine, Toll, Motorway, Fine 1515
227.1 la roue 1515
227.2 le moteur 1516
227.3 le péage 1517
227.4 l'autoroute 1517
227.5 l'amende 1518
227.6 (dialogue) 1519
227.7 (dialogue) 1520

228 Vase, Plant, Seed, Root, Branch 1521
228.1 le vase . . . 1521
228.2 la plante . . . 1522
228.3 la graine . . . 1523
228.4 la racine . . . 1523
228.5 la branche . . . 1524

229 Lightning, Thunder, Climate, Environment, Pollution 1527
229.1 l'éclair . . . 1527
229.2 le tonnerre . . . 1528
229.3 le climat . . . 1529
229.4 l'environnement . . . 1529
229.5 la pollution . . . 1530

230 Thread, Needle, Nail for hammering, Hammer, Ladder 1533
230.1 le fil . . . 1533
230.2 l'aiguille . . . 1534
230.3 le clou . . . 1535
230.4 le marteau . . . 1535
230.5 l'échelle . . . 1536

231 Return, Arrival, Departure, Destination, Landscape 1539
231.1 le retour . . . 1539
231.2 l'arrivée . . . 1540
231.3 le départ . . . 1541
231.4 la destination . . . 1541
231.5 le paysage . . . 1542

232 Magazine, Dictionary, University, Mistake, History 1545
232.1 le magazine . . . 1545
232.2 le dictionnaire . . . 1546
232.3 l'université . . . 1547
232.4 l'erreur . . . 1547
232.5 l'histoire . . . 1548
232.6 (dialogue) . . . 1549
232.7 (dialogue) . . . 1549

233 To iron, To repair, To build, To photograph, To repeat 1551
233.1 repasser . . . 1551
233.2 réparer . . . 1552

233.3 construire 1553
233.4 photographier 1553
233.5 répéter 1554

234 To fill, To empty, To measure, To weigh, To check 1557
234.1 remplir 1557
234.2 vider 1558
234.3 mesurer 1559
234.4 peser 1559
234.5 vérifier 1560

235 To move house, To rent, To rest, To wake up, To do one's hair 1563
235.1 déménager 1563
235.2 louer 1564
235.3 se reposer 1565
235.4 se réveiller 1565
235.5 se coiffer 1566

236 To be enough, To burn, To throw away, To calculate, To hit 1569
236.1 suffire 1569
236.2 brûler 1570
236.3 jeter 1571
236.4 calculer 1571
236.5 frapper 1572

237 To miss, To deserve, To improve, To get worse, To offer 1575
237.1 manquer 1575
237.2 mériter 1576
237.3 améliorer 1577
237.4 empirer 1577
237.5 offrir 1578

238 To reduce, To refuse, To risk, To solve, To fly 1581
238.1 réduire 1581
238.2 refuser 1582
238.3 risquer 1583
238.4 résoudre 1583
238.5 voler 1584

239 To unite, To be worth, To get used to, To realise, To hurry 1587
239.1 unir . . . 1587
239.2 valoir . . . 1588
239.3 s'habituer . . . 1589
239.4 se rendre compte . . . 1589
239.5 se dépêcher . . . 1590

240 To insist, To interrupt, To tie, To mix, To obey 1593
240.1 insister . . . 1593
240.2 interrompre . . . 1594
240.3 attacher . . . 1595
240.4 mélanger . . . 1595
240.5 obéir . . . 1596

241 To cough, To tremble, To scream, To vote, To welcome 1599
241.1 tousser . . . 1599
241.2 trembler . . . 1600
241.3 hurler . . . 1601
241.4 voter . . . 1601
241.5 accueillir . . . 1602
241.6 (dialogue) . . . 1603
241.7 (dialogue) . . . 1604

242 To lose weight, To feed, To go on holiday, To joke, To tidy up 1605
242.1 maigrir . . . 1605
242.2 nourrir . . . 1606
242.3 partir en vacances . . . 1607
242.4 plaisanter . . . 1608
242.5 ranger . . . 1608

243 Plaster, Emergency department, Emergency, Medical appointment, Diet 1611
243.1 le pansement . . . 1611
243.2 les urgences . . . 1612
243.3 l'urgence . . . 1613
243.4 la consultation . . . 1614
243.5 le régime . . . 1614

244 Silent, Clean, Hard, Smooth, Rough 1617
244.1 silencieux / silencieuse 1617
244.2 propre 1618
244.3 dur / dure 1619
244.4 lisse 1619
244.5 rugueux / rugueuse 1620

245 Similar, Fair, False, Ready, Free of charge 1623
245.1 semblable 1623
245.2 juste 1624
245.3 faux / fausse 1625
245.4 prêt / prête 1625
245.5 gratuit / gratuite 1626

246 Generous, Lazy, Hard-working, Talkative, Angry 1629
246.1 généreux / généreuse 1629
246.2 paresseux / paresseuse 1630
246.3 travailleur / travailleuse 1631
246.4 bavard / bavarde 1632
246.5 fâché / fâchée 1632

247 Bill, Tip, Stop, Motorbike, Platform 1635
247.1 l'addition 1635
247.2 le pourboire 1636
247.3 l'arrêt 1637
247.4 la moto 1637
247.5 le quai 1638

248 Mayor, Elections, Vote, Politics, Economy 1641
248.1 le maire 1641
248.2 les élections 1642
248.3 le vote 1643
248.4 la politique 1643
248.5 l'économie 1644

249 Actor, Actress, Poem, Writer, Painter 1647
249.1 l'acteur 1647
249.2 l'actrice 1648
249.3 le poème 1649
249.4 l'écrivain 1649

249.5 le peintre 1650

250 Foreigner, Tourist, Adult, Elderly person, Twin 1653
250.1 l'étranger 1653
250.2 le touriste 1654
250.3 l'adulte 1655
250.4 la personne âgée 1655
250.5 le jumeau 1656
250.6 (dialogue) 1657
250.7 (dialogue) 1658

251 Result, Difference, Example, Truth, Lie 1659
251.1 le résultat 1659
251.2 la différence 1660
251.3 l'exemple 1661
251.4 la vérité 1661
251.5 le mensonge 1662

252 Tax, Form, Envelope, Stamp, Parcel 1665
252.1 l'impôt 1665
252.2 le formulaire 1666
252.3 l'enveloppe 1667
252.4 le timbre 1667
252.5 le colis 1668

253 Driving licence, Helmet, Tunnel, Building site, Block of flats 1671
253.1 le permis de conduire 1671
253.2 le casque 1672
253.3 le tunnel 1673
253.4 le chantier 1673
253.5 l'immeuble 1674

254 Trunk, Thorn, Lawn, Path, Cave 1677
254.1 le tronc 1677
254.2 l'épine 1678
254.3 la pelouse 1679
254.4 le sentier 1679
254.5 la grotte 1680

255 Rubbish, Recycling, Energy, Electricity, Gas 1683
255.1 les déchets 1683
255.2 le recyclage 1684
255.3 l'énergie 1685
255.4 l'électricité 1685
255.5 le gaz 1686

256 Tool, Guitar, Piano, Violin, Drum 1689
256.1 l'outil 1689
256.2 la guitare 1690
256.3 le piano 1691
256.4 le violon 1691
256.5 le tambour 1692

257 Geography, Mathematics, Art, Team, Birthday 1695
257.1 la géographie 1695
257.2 les mathématiques 1696
257.3 l'art 1697
257.4 l'équipe 1697
257.5 l'anniversaire 1698
257.6 (dialogue) 1699
257.7 (dialogue) 1700

Pronunciation (reference) 1701

Glossary 1703

Review Questions 1793

Answer Key 1795

Index 1797

Chapter 1

Greetings

Modes: voice (9) pen (6) Hands-free start: the first of 15 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can greet someone in French, recognize the reply, and choose an appropriate response.
>
> The French greetings, built from their pieces — a word for "good," words for "day," "evening" and "night," and the gender machine that decides their endings. French and Spanish are both daughters of Latin; where a French word and its Spanish cousin split from one Latin root, both appear here, because the difference between them is often the lesson — and the text supplies the Spanish word whether or not you have met it before.

1.1 salut — "hi," and a wish for your health

Your first French word, and a warmer one than it looks. Salut is the casual "hi" — but taken apart, it literally wishes you good health.

Sounds you'll need

- `silent-final` — the final t is silent: salut is sa-LU, not sa-LUT. Most French final consonants go silent. → reference
- `vowel-u` — the u is the French front-rounded ee (say ee with pursed lips), not oo.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salut — informal "hi" (and "bye"). Root: Latin salus, salutem ("health, safety, well-being"). So salut is, at root, a wish of health — the same instinct as English "cheers" or old "hail" (be healthy). The family you already own in English:

- salute, salutation — a greeting (a wishing-of-health).
- salutary, salubrious — health-giving.
- and, from the close cousin salvus ("safe"), save, salvation, safe.

Spanish note: its casual "hi" is hola — an uncertain, rootless interjection. French salut is the opposite: a transparent Latin word meaning "health." Two Romance languages, two totally different casual "hi"s.

Why it's said this way

Salut is strictly informal — friends, family, peers — and it doubles as "bye." For anyone you'd show respect to, or a first meeting, you reach past it for the formal greeting (a few lessons on), exactly as Spanish reaches past hola for buenos días.

Writing — trace the silent t

Keep salut visible. Trace only its final t, once, then say sa-LU: you stop on the u, but the page keeps the t.

Do not copy the word yet; the next lesson traces all of it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "salut" — sa-LU, silent t
- "salut" then English "salute", "salutary" — the health root

Before you move on

What does salut literally wish someone? (Health — from Latin salus.) What happens to its final t? (Silent.)

1.2 salut — let your eye and hand meet one known word

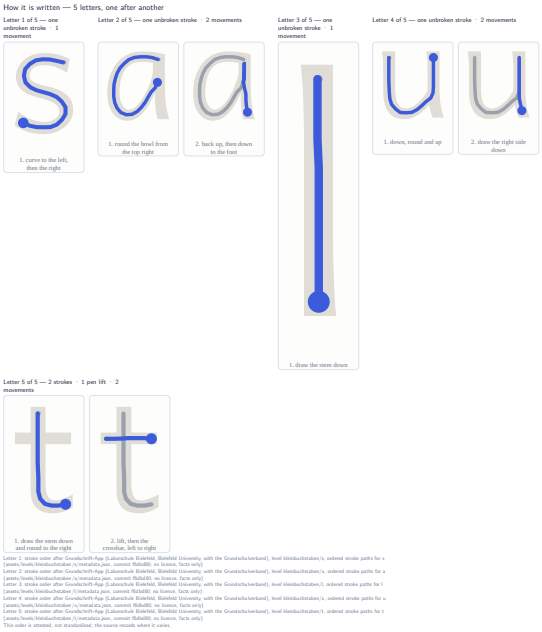

Say the casual greeting you just learned: salut, sa-LU. Today adds no new French. You will only notice how that familiar word sits on a page.

What you've built — one spelling

s a l u t → salut

The word has five written letters. Your voice finishes on u; the final t stays visible and silent. Point to each letter from left to right once.

Writing — trace with the model visible

How salut is written, letter by letter, stroke by stroke

Keep salut visible. Slowly finger-trace the five letters once, left to right. Then trace the word once in the air. Say sa-LU only after your finger reaches the silent t.

This is noticing, not a handwriting test. Use the letter forms you normally write; there is no new alphabet and no demand for perfect penmanship.

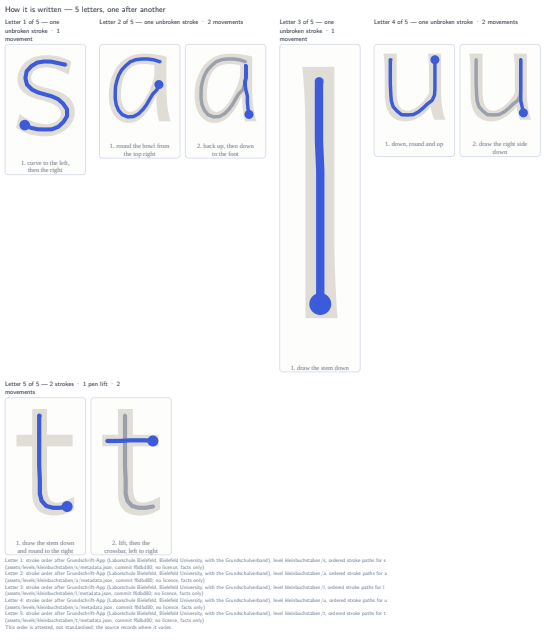

Before you move on

Point to the silent letter. Stop here; copying comes in the next tiny lesson.

1.3 salut — one supported copy

Point to the last letter in salut. It is written t and said as silence. Keep the model on the page for the whole lesson.

Writing — guided copy

How salut is written, letter by letter, stroke by stroke

Copy salut once. You may look back after every letter.

When you finish, touch s-a-l-u-t in your copy and say sa-LU. The eye checks five letters; the voice does not add a final t sound.

Before you move on

Compare only the order and presence of the five letters. Repair one letter if needed, then stop. The model stays visible today.

1.4 salut — look, hide, write, compare

Look at salut for five seconds. Touch the final silent t. Do not copy it yet.

Writing — delayed copy

How salut is written, letter by letter, stroke by stroke

1. cover the model;
2. wait five seconds;
3. write the word once from memory;
4. uncover salut, compare, and repair only the place that differs.

If one letter differs, circle that place and repair only that letter. A repair is part of the exercise, not a failure.

Before you move on

Read your repaired word as sa-LU. Stop after one memory attempt.

1.5 One heard greeting — write what you know

Cover the answer line lower on this page. You will hear one familiar casual greeting. No new vocabulary is hiding in this lesson.

Writing — short dictation

Hear: sa-LU

Write the French greeting from the sound alone. Remember that your pen records one final letter that your voice does not pronounce.

Now uncover and compare: salut. Check only the five letters and the silent final t. Repair one place if needed.

Before you move on

Writing from sound is the endpoint of this four-step runway. It is not yet a DILF mock; later lessons will grow from one known word to contact details, numbers, forms, and short practical messages.

1.6 bien — "well," a whole answer

A tiny, essential word: bien, "well." It carries a good chunk of everyday conversation, and its root reaches straight into English.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-in` — ien is a nasal byan: air through the nose, and the n itself is silent. Not "bee-en." → reference

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bien — "well." Root: Latin bene ("well"). The English bene- family is yours already:

- benefit ("do well"), benevolent ("wish well"), benediction ("speak well"), benign.

  A cross-language aside: Spanish, another daughter of Latin, has the very same word — bien, also from bene, also "well." French and Spanish each inherited the Latin adverb independently and it barely changed in either; when two Romance languages agree this exactly, you're looking straight at the shared Latin parent.

Using it alone: asked "how's it going?", you can answer with one word: "Bien." ("Well / good.")

Grammar Lens: the "good" it pairs with bien is the adverb ("well" — how something is done). The adjective "good" (describing a thing) is a different word — the next lesson. This is the same well vs. good split as English, and the same bien vs. bueno split as Spanish; French's adjective comes from Latin bonus.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bien" — nasal byan
- "bien" then English "benefit", "benevolent"

Before you move on

French bien and Spanish bien come from the same Latin word — which one? (bene, "well.") Adverb or adjective? (Adverb — "good" the adjective is a different word, next.)

1.7 bon / bonne — "good," the block you build greetings from

This is the word that starts French's "good day" and "good evening." Learn it alone first — including the trick that its two forms sound completely different even though they look nearly the same.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-on` — bon is a nasal bõ: the n is silent, the vowel goes through the nose. → reference
- `silent-final` — but bonne (feminine) is bun — the doubled nn cancels the nasal and you actually pronounce an n. So bon (bõ) and bonne (bun) sound different despite looking alike.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bon — "good" (adjective, masculine). bonne — "good" (feminine). Root: Latin bonus / bona ("good"). Your English cousins:

- bonus (borrowed straight from Latin bonus), bonanza, and — via Old French bonté — bounty. Even bonbon ("good-good," a candy).

  Spanish cousin: from the same bonus / bona, Spanish made bueno / buena. Notice French kept it shorter (bon) while Spanish broke the o into a diphthong (bue-). Same Latin word, two accents of wear.

Grammar Lens: adjectives agree with their noun

Like every Romance adjective, bon agrees with its noun's gender and number — bon (masc.), bonne (fem.), bons (masc. pl.), bonnes (fem. pl.). This is Latin's legacy: adjectives change their ending to match the noun (Spanish runs the same machine on bueno / buena). You'll watch it in the next few lessons: the day greeting takes bon, the night one bonne.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bon" (nasal bõ) then "bonne" (bun) — hear the difference
- the four shapes — bon, bonne, bons, bonnes

Before you move on

Why do bon and bonne sound different? (The double nn in bonne cancels the nasal — bõ vs bun.) Which Spanish adjective shares bon's Latin root? (bueno, from the same bonus.)

1.8 le, la, les — "the," and the gender it carries

Before your first noun: the words for "the." French splits "the" by gender — masculine le, feminine la — a habit it inherited from Latin (its sibling Spanish did the same, from the same source).

Sounds you'll need

- le = luh, la = lah, les = lay (the s is silent — `silent-final`). → reference

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

le — "the" (masculine). la — "the" (feminine). les — "the" (plural, both genders). Roots: Latin demonstratives ille / illa / illos ("that one / those"):

- le ← ille, la ← illa, les ← illos — the pointing force ("that") faded into a plain "the," and the initial il- wore off.

  Spanish cousin, exactly: from the same ille / illa / illos, Spanish made el / la / los. French kept le where Spanish kept el — same parent. And those same Latin demonstratives also gave French il ("he") and elle ("she") (Spanish él / ella): article and pronoun, one Latin root. (English "the" is Germanic — unrelated.)

Grammar Lens: French gender, also from Latin

Every French noun is masculine or feminine — a grammatical gender baked into the noun, inherited from Latin: its three genders (masculine, feminine, neuter) collapsed to two, the neuters folding into the masculine. (Spanish, the other Latin daughter, did the very same.) You learn each noun with its article (le or la), because the gender can't be guessed. French has one convenience here: in the plural, both genders share a single article, les.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le", "la", "les"
- "le" (masc.), "la" (fem.), "les" (plural) — the nouns that wear them are coming

Before you move on

le and la come from which Latin words? (ille / illa, "that one" — same as Spanish el/la.) What's the single plural "the"? (les.)

1.9 jour — "day," and a detour through Latin that explains English journey

Your first French noun. In Spanish "day" is día; in French it's jour — they look nothing alike, yet they're cousins. The gap between them is the whole lesson, and it cracks open a shelf of English words.

What to know first

- le / la / les — gender and the articles; jour is masculine, le jour.

Sounds you'll need

- `j-zh` — j is the soft zh of measure: jour starts zh-.
- `vowel-ou` — the letters o-u say oo. So jour = zhoor. → reference

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

le jour — "the day" (masculine). Root: Latin diurnum ("daytime, daily") — itself from dies ("day"). That extra step through diurnum is why jour looks so unlike Spanish día:

- Spanish took dies → día (short path).
- French took the derivative diurnum → jorn → jour (the di- crushed down to j-).

Same ultimate root, two different Latin words, two very different results. And diurnum is a goldmine of English cousins — most of them arrived through French:

- journal (a daily record), journey (originally a day's travel or work — French journée, "a day's worth"), journalist.
- sojourn ("to stay [for days]"), adjourn (à jour, "to [another] day").
- and straight from dies: diurnal, diary — cousins of jour through the grandparent root.

So English journey and Spanish día are cousins, meeting back at Latin dies — one through French jour, one direct. That's the kind of hidden family this whole book is built to show.

Grammar Lens

jour is masculine — le jour — a gender it inherited from its Latin source. As always, learn it with the article. Plural: French adds a (silent) -s — les jours — sounds identical to the singular; only les tells your ear it's plural.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le jour" — luh zhoor
- "jour" then "journal", "journey" — the daily root

- "les jours" — plural, heard only in the les

Before you move on jour and Spanish día share which grandparent root? (Latin dies.) What English travel-word is literally "a day's worth"? (Journey, from journée.)

1.10 bonjour — assembled, and not plural (unlike Spanish)

Snap two words together — bon + jour — and you have the single most important word in French politeness. And there's a sharp contrast with Spanish hiding in it.

What to know first

- bon / bonne · jour

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bonjour = bon ("good") + jour ("day") = "good day." One written word, said bõ- zhoor. bon is masculine because jour is masculine — the agreement from the bon lesson, quietly at work. Both are inherited: bon ← Latin bonus, jour ← Latin diurnum, "daytime" (EtymDB 2.1).

Why it's said this way

Here's the contrast worth banking. Spanish says buenos días — plural, "good days," the fossil of a blessing ("may God give you good days"). French says bonjour — singular, just "good day." French didn't fossilize the plural; it kept the plain, single wish. Same two building blocks (good + day), same Latin roots, but Spanish pluralized the blessing and French didn't. Two neighbours, two instincts. Culturally, bonjour carries weight far beyond "hello": in France, opening almost any interaction — a shop, a bus, a desk — without a bonjour reads as rude. It's the formal, all-purpose daytime greeting (the evening has its own, two lessons on), and the polite default where salut would be too casual.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- build it — "bon" … "jour" … "bonjour"
- "salut" (casual) then "bonjour" (polite) — feel the register gap
- bonjour vs Spanish buenos días — one singular, one plural

Before you move on

bonjour is singular; the Spanish equivalent is plural — what is it, and why plural? (Buenos días, fossil of "may God give you good days.")

1.11 soir — "evening," and the same "late" idea Spanish used

The evening counterpart of jour. And there's a lovely parallel with Spanish waiting: both languages built their "later in the day" word out of the Latin word for late.

What to know first

- jour — the day word; soir is its evening partner.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-oi` — oi = wa: soir is swahr. → reference

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

le soir — "the evening" (masculine). Root: Latin sērum (tempus), "the late [hour]," from sērus ("late"). English cousins are few but real: soirée (an evening party — borrowed straight from French soir), and the rare serotine (a bat that flies in the late evening).

Spanish parallel — this is the good part. Spanish tarde ("afternoon") comes from Latin tardus, "late." French soir ("evening") comes from sērus, "late." Two different Latin "late" words, two languages, the same idea: name the later part of the day after its lateness.

Grammar Lens

soir is masculine — le soir — so, like jour, it will take bon (not bonne) in the greeting. Plural les soirs, the s silent.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le soir" — luh swahr
- "soir" then English "soirée"
- Spanish tarde ← "late", French soir ← "late" — same idea

Before you move on

What did soir's Latin root sērus mean? ("Late.") What Spanish time-word did the exact same thing from a different "late" word? (Tarde, ← tardus.)

1.12 bonsoir — good evening

Same assembly as bonjour, one word swapped. If you have that one, this is nearly free.

What to know first

- bon / bonne · soir · bonjour

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bonsoir = bon ("good") + soir ("evening") = "good evening." bon stays masculine because soir is masculine — same as bonjour, no new agreement to learn. Said bõ- swahr. Soir ← Latin sērō, "late", from sērus (EtymDB 2.1).

Why it's said this way

bonsoir is the evening swap for bonjour: as the day turns to evening (roughly late afternoon on), French speakers switch from bonjour to bonsoir. Both are the polite, all-purpose greeting for their time of day. And like Spanish buenas noches, bonsoir works both arriving and leaving in the evening — "good evening" on the way in, "goodnight-ish" on the way out. (For actually sending someone to bed, French has a separate phrase — the next two lessons.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonsoir" — bõ- swahr
- "bonjour" (daytime) then "bonsoir" (evening) — the pair

Before you move on

What two words build bonsoir, and why does bon stay masculine? (bon + soir; soir is masculine.)

1.13 nuit — "night," and a sound-change that mirrors Spanish

"Night." In Spanish it's noche; in French, nuit. They came from the same Latin word and drifted apart by two different rules — and once you know the rules, you can predict a dozen more words.

What to know first

- le / la / les — nuit is feminine, la nuit.

Sounds you'll need

- nuit = nwee — the u is the front-rounded French u gliding into ee; the final t is silent (`silent-final`). → reference

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

la nuit — "the night" (feminine). Root: Latin noctem (nox, stem noct-). English cousins through the noct- root: nocturnal, nocturne, equinox ("equal night").

The sound-change, side by side with Spanish. Latin noctem went two ways:

- Spanish softened -ct- → -ch-: noctem → noche.
- French turned -ct- → -it-: noctem → nuit.

And it's a rule, not a one-off — watch it repeat:

Latin	Spanish / French	English
noctem	noche / nuit	night
lactem	leche / lait	(lact-, "milk")
factum	hecho / fait	fact

So a Spanish -ch- word and a French -it- word are often the same Latin word — and the English cousin usually kept the -ct-.

Grammar Lens

nuit is feminine — la nuit — inherited from Latin, where nox was feminine (exactly as Spanish la noche is). Its gender matters next lesson: it's why "good night" is bonne nuit, not bon nuit.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la nuit" — lah nwee
- "nuit" then Spanish "noche" — same Latin noctem, two rules
- the row — "noche, nuit, night"

Before you move on

Latin noctem → Spanish noche by -ct-→-ch-; → French nuit by which change? (-ct-→-it-.) Is nuit masculine or feminine? (Feminine — la nuit.)

1.14 bonne nuit — good night, and the feminine side of bon

The last greeting of the day — and the one that finally shows bon in its feminine coat.

What to know first

- bon / bonne · nuit

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bonne nuit = bonne ("good," feminine) + nuit ("night," feminine) = "good night." Here it is at last: because nuit is feminine, bon becomes bonne — and, from the bon lesson, remember they even sound different: bon is nasal bõ, but bonne nuit is bun nwee, with a real n.
So the three evening-ish greetings line up and show the whole agreement rule in one breath:

- *bonjour — jour masculine → bon
- *bonsoir — soir masculine → bon
- bonne nuit — nuit feminine → bonne

Why it's said this way

Unlike bonsoir (an evening greeting), bonne nuit is a farewell for bed — "goodnight," said when parting for sleep. It maps onto the Spanish split you may feel forming: Spanish overloads buenas noches for both, while French keeps bonsoir (evening hello/bye) separate from bonne nuit (off-to-sleep).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bonne nuit" — bun nwee
- the trio — bonjour, bonsoir, bonne nuit — and for each, is bon masculine or feminine, and why?

Before you move on

Why is it bonne nuit but bon jour? (nuit is feminine, jour masculine — agreement.) bonsoir vs bonne nuit — which is "off to bed"? (Bonne nuit.)

1.15 Practice — the French greetings

No new words — just the ones you built, until the register and the agreement are automatic.

What you've built

- salut — casual "hi/bye" (← salus, "health").
- bien — "well," a one-word answer (← bene; Spanish kept the same word).
- bon / bonne — "good," the adjective (← bonus), and its agreement.
- le / la / les — "the," carrying gender (← ille/illa/illos).
- bonjour = bon + jour (masc.) — polite daytime "hello," singular where Spanish is plural.
- bonsoir = bon + soir (masc.) — evening greeting.
- bonne nuit = bonne + nuit (fem.) — off-to-bed "goodnight."

Two threads run through it all: register (salut vs bonjour) and agreement (bon jour / bon soir / bonne nuit).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- greet a friend casually, then a shopkeeper politely — salut / bonjour
- pick the right greeting for right now (day → bonjour, evening → bonsoir)
- bonjour, bonsoir, bonne nuit — and say why each takes bon or bonne

- answer "how are you" in one word — bien

Twice through: Run bonjour → bonsoir → bonne nuit without hesitating on bon/bonne.

Writing — close the first runway

Cover the word salut elsewhere in this chapter. Write the casual greeting once from memory, then uncover it and check the silent final t. This is a chapter-level retrieval of the tiny trace-to-dictation runway, not a new word.

Before you move on

French bonjour is singular; the Spanish morning greeting is plural — name it. (Buenos días.) Next chapter: introducing yourself — "my name is…" — and French's own two words for "you," one familiar and one formal.

Chapter 2

Introducing Yourself

Modes: 🚗 voice (9) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can introduce myself in French, give my name, and understand the other person's name.
>
> Now a first real exchange — "Je m'appelle Mira." / "Comment vous appelez-vous?" / "Je m'appelle Arun." / "Enchanté." — giving your name, asking for someone else's, and saying you are glad to meet them. We build it the same way as the greetings: each piece taken apart first, then assembled.

2.1 je — "I," the smallest word you own

To introduce yourself you need "I." French's is tiny — but it comes from a word you already own whole in English.

Sounds you'll need

- je = zhuh — a soft j (as in measure) plus a light uh.
- Before a vowel it elides: the e drops and an apostrophe takes its place, j'. You'll meet the same squeeze in je m'appelle.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

je — "I." Root: Latin ego. That Latin form survives raw in English:

- ego, egoist, egotism, egocentric — the "I" at the center of the self.

So the word for "I" and the psychologist's ego are the same ancient word — one worn down to a whisper (je), one kept whole (ego). (Spanish wore ego down to yo; French wore it further, to je.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "je" (zhuh)
- "je", then the bare zh of j' — all that is left when the e drops
- the English cousin that kept the Latin whole — ego

Before you move on

What Latin word is je worn down from, and what English word kept it whole? (ego — English ego.) What happens to je before a vowel? (It elides to j'.)

2.2 me — "myself," the same word as English me

The middle piece of je m'appelle. It's a real word with a real history — not just a bit of glue — and you've owned it in English all your life.

Sounds you'll need

- me = muh — a light uh, like je.
- Before a vowel it elides: me appelle → m'appelle (the e drops, the words fuse).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

me — "me / myself." Root: Latin mē (the accusative "me") — literally the same word as English me. The whole family grows from one Proto-Indo-European root me-:

- English me, my, mine;
- Latin mē and meus ("my"), which became French mon / ma / mes.

So the tiny m' in je m'appelle is a first-person marker you've carried in English since childhood — me, my, mine are its cousins.

Grammar Lens: the reflexive set (me / te / se)

me is one of three little pronouns that bounce a verb back onto its doer — me ("myself"), te ("yourself"), se ("himself, herself"). Their roots run in parallel with the one you just met, and two of them you already own in English:

- te ← Latin tē, the cousin of archaic English thee.
- se ← Latin sē, the "self" root behind separate and, at a distance, suicide (suī, "of oneself").

Only me does any work here: it is what gives your own name, je m'appelle. te turns up once, in the informal "what's your name?" at the end of this chapter, and se waits for a lesson that needs it. The set is named so its shape is familiar, not laid out as a grid to memorize — you meet each one where it earns its place.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "me" (muh), then its elision — "m'appelle"
- the English cousins from the same root — me, my, mine
- the set — me (myself), te (yourself), se (oneself)

Before you move on

What Latin word is me from, and what three English words share its root? (mē — me, my, mine.) What are its two siblings, and what does me do to a verb? (te, se; it bounces the action back onto the doer — reflexive.)

2.3 (s')appeler — "to call," and "to call oneself"

French says "my name is" by saying "I call myself." Here's the verb that does it — and a fat English family riding on it.

Sounds you'll need

- appeler = a-play — the -er infinitive ending is a plain "ay."
- In m'appelle the doubled ll keeps a crisp "l": ma-PELL.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

appeler — "to call." Root: Latin appellāre ("to address, call by name"). The English cousins are everywhere in formal language:

- appeal — to call to a higher authority.
- appellation — a name or title (an appellation of wine is its official name).
- appellate, appellant — the court that hears appeals, and the one who brings it.

To name someone is, at root, to call them.

Grammar Lens: reflexive verbs — doing something to yourself

French builds "to be called" from "to call" plus a little word that bounces the action back onto the doer: s'appeler, "to call oneself." That bounce-back word changes for each person:

- me = myself · te = yourself · se = himself/herself.

So "I call myself" needs me: je me appelle → (elided) je m'appelle. English hides the same move in "I call myself" — French just uses it as the normal way to give a name.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "appeler" (a-play)

- the English cousins — appeal, appellation
- "call oneself" with me — je me appelle

Before you move on

What Latin verb is appeler from, and two English cousins? (appellāre — appeal, appellation.) What does a reflexive verb do, and which little word means "myself"? (Bounces the action back on the doer; me.)

2.4 je m'appelle... — "my name is...," literally "I call myself"

Assemble the two pieces you just met — je and (s')appeler — into the single most useful sentence for meeting anyone.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Three atoms, each already taken apart on its own — je (I, ← ego), me (myself, ← mē), appelle (call, ← appellāre):

- je (I) + me (myself) + appelle (call).
- me elides before the vowel of appelle → m'.

  je m'appelle... = word for word "I call myself..." = "my name is..."

Je m'appelle Arun. → "My name is Arun." Je m'appelle Mira. → "My name is Mira."

Why it's said this way

French prefers this verb-based "I call myself" to a literal "my name is." The literal form does exist:

- mon nom est... ("my name is..."), with nom ("name") ← Latin nōmen → English noun, nominate, nominal, nomenclature.

But mon nom est sounds stiff and official — a passport-desk phrase. For a real introduction, reach for je m'appelle. (You now also see why “noun” is literally “a naming word.”)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- “je m’appelle…” then your own name
- what it literally says (“I call myself”)
- the stiff literal alternative — “mon nom est…”

Before you move on

What does je m’appelle literally mean, and why does me become m’? (“I call myself”; elision before the vowel of appelle.) What’s the more literal but stiffer “my name is,” and what English word is nom cousin to? (mon nom est; noun.)

2.5 tu / vous — “you,” familiar and formal

To ask someone their name, you need “you.” French has two, and choosing between them is a small act of social judgment.

Sounds you’ll need

- tu = too, but with the front-rounded French u (lips rounded, tongue forward). vous = voo (silent s).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

- tu (familiar “you”) ← Latin tū.
- vous (formal / plural “you”) ← Latin vōs, “you all.”

English once had the same split — old thou was the tu — but thou died out, leaving one flat you for everyone.

Grammar Lens: two "you"s, chosen by register

- tu — for friends, family, children, peers. Intimate, equal.
- vous — for strangers, elders, anyone you'd show respect — and it's the plural "you all."

The trick: French makes politeness by using the plural on a single person. Addressing one respected person as "you all" is the polite move (French even has a verb for it, vouvoyer). This is the same politeness Spanish builds with usted, but by a different route: Spanish coined a whole new pronoun (from "your grace"); French just borrows its plural. Using tu too early can feel over-familiar — when in doubt, *vous.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tu" (front-rounded u), "vous" (voo)
- who gets tu (friends), who gets vous (strangers, elders)
- the rule of thumb — "when in doubt, vous"

Before you move on

What decides tu vs vous — and what does French do to be polite to one person? (Register — familiar vs respect; it uses the plural (vous) on one person.) What old English word was the lost tu? (thou.)

2.6 comment — "how," from the same quomodo as Spanish cómo

French asks "what's your name?" as "how are you called?" — so first, the word for "how."

Sounds you'll need

- comment = ko-MAHN — the final -ent is a nasal vowel; the t is silent.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

comment — "how." Root: Latin quo modo, "in what manner" — two words fused and worn into one.

- That same quomodo also became Spanish cómo — two Romance languages, one Latin "in-what-way," reshaped differently.
- The piece modo ("manner, measure") is alive in English mode, model, moderate, modify — all about the way a thing is done.

Grammar Lens: French counts names as a matter of "how"

Where English asks "what is your name?", French asks "how are you called?" — comment (how), not what. The question is about the manner of your calling, not a thing to be named. Don't translate word for word; learn the French logic: the name-question runs on comment.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "comment" (ko-MAHN, nasal ending)
- the Latin quo modo → French comment, Spanish cómo
- English mode/model share the modo piece

Before you move on

What two Latin words fused into comment, and what Spanish word shares them? (quo modo — Spanish cómo.) English asks "what is your name?" — what does French literally ask? ("How are you called?")

2.7 comment vous appelez-vous? — "what's your name?"

Assemble it: "how" + "do you call yourself" = the polite question that gets the introduction going.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

- comment (how) + vous appelez-vous ("do you call yourself").

  comment vous appelez-vous? = literally "how do you call yourself?" = the polite "what's your name?"

Comment ← Latin quōmodo, "in what manner", vous ← Latin vōs, and appeler ← Latin appellāre, "to call" (EtymDB 2.1).

Grammar Lens: asking by inversion

A statement — vous vous appelez ("you call yourself") — becomes a question by flipping the verb and the pronoun, joined with a hyphen:

> vous appelez-vous?

That flip is French's formal way to ask anything. The informal version simply swaps in tu:

> comment tu t'appelles? — note te elides to t', exactly as me became m' in je m'appelle.

So the same verb, s'appeler, runs the whole exchange: je m'appelle to give your name, comment vous appelez-vous? to ask for theirs.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "comment vous appelez-vous?" (formal)
- the informal — "comment tu t'appelles?"
- the pair — ask, then answer: "…vous appelez-vous?" / "je m'appelle…"

Before you move on

What does comment vous appelez-vous? literally say? ("How do you call yourself?") How do you turn the statement into a question, and what's the tu version? (Invert verb + pronoun with a hyphen; comment tu t'appelles?)

2.8 enchanté(e) — "delighted," i.e. "pleased to meet you"

The graceful close to an introduction — and it literally says you've been put under a spell.

Sounds you'll need

- enchanté = ahn-shahn-TAY — two nasal vowels (en, an), then a clean "tay." ch = English sh.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enchanté — "delighted." Root: Latin in- ("upon") + cantāre ("to sing, chant"). To enchant was literally to sing a spell upon someone. The magic survives in the English family:

- enchant, incantation, and the plain chant.

So saying enchanté on meeting someone means, gallantly, "I'm enchanted [to meet you]."

Grammar Lens: it agrees with you enchanté follows the gender-agreement rule you met in bon/bonne: it reports the speaker's own gender.

- A man says enchanté.
- A woman says enchantée — an extra -e (same sound, silent).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "enchanté" (ahn-shahn-TAY)
- the English cousins — enchant, incantation, chant

- both forms — enchanté (m.) / enchantée (f.)

Before you move on

What does enchanté literally mean, and from what Latin pieces? ("Enchanted" — in- + cantāre, "to sing upon.") How does a woman say it, and why? (enchantée — it agrees with the speaker's gender.)

2.9 Chapter 2 — the introduction, whole

Every piece is built. Here's the exchange it was all for.

The exchange

French	English
Je m'appelle Mira.	My name is Mira.
Comment vous appelez-vous?	What's your name?
Je m'appelle Arun.	My name is Arun.
Enchanté.	Pleased to meet you.

Every piece traced to a root:

- je ← ego (English ego)
- me ← mē (English me, my, mine)
- (s')appeler ← appellāre (English appeal, appellation)
- comment ← quo modo (Spanish cómo, English mode)
- enchanté ← in-cantāre (English enchant, incantation, chant)

And two habits of French to keep: it gives a name with a reflexive verb ("I call myself") and asks for one with "how" ("how are you called?"), and it makes politeness by using the plural vous on one person.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the whole exchange, both voices

- your own introduction — “je m’appelle …, enchanté(e)”
- ask it back — “comment vous appelez-vous?”

Before you move on

Give your name in French, ask someone else’s, and say you’re pleased to meet them. (Je m’appelle… / Comment vous appelez-vous? / Enchanté(e).) Which two French habits does this exchange show? (Naming with a reflexive verb; asking with “how,” not “what.”) Next chapter: Comment ça va? (“how’s it going?”) and answering with bien again — the responding cycle.

Chapter 3

How Are You?

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 2 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask how someone is in French, answer naturally, and return the question.
>
> Now the small talk that follows a name: thanking, answering a thank-you, and asking how someone is doing. French asks that last question with a verb of motion — not "how are you?" but "how does it go?"

3.1 merci — "thank you," and it means mercy

You can introduce yourself in French. Next you'll ask how are you? — and every polite answer needs merci first. It hides a word you already know: mercy.

Sounds you'll need

- `r-uvular` — merci = mehr-SEE, with the soft guttural French r at the back of the throat (never the Spanish tap). Stress the end: *mehr-SEE.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

merci — "thank you." Root: Latin mercēs, "wages, reward, price, that which is earned." Saying merci originally invoked a reward owed for a kindness — and, in old religious use, a plea for divine mercy (a reward you haven't earned).
That one root merc- ("pay, trade, reward") pays out a huge English family:

- mercy, merciful — the reward/pity sense.
- mercenary — a soldier who fights for wages.
- merchant, commerce, market, mercantile — buying and selling, the price sense (Latin mercārī, "to trade").
- Even Mercury — the Roman god of merchants.

Why it's said this way

Here's a lovely contrast to lock in:

language	"thank you"	literal root
French	merci	mercēs — reward / mercy
Spanish	gracias	grātia — grace / favour
Portuguese	obrigado	obligātus — "I am obliged"

Three Romance sisters, three different pictures of gratitude: French hands you a reward, Spanish hands you grace, Portuguese declares itself obliged. Same feeling, three metaphors — this is exactly the kind of thing worth noticing, not just memorizing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "merci" — mehr-SEE, guttural r
- "merci" then English "mercy, merchant, commerce" — one family
- French merci (reward) vs Spanish gracias (grace) — feel the difference

Before you move on

What everyday English word is merci a cousin of? (Mercy.) And its "trade" cousins? (Merchant, commerce, market, mercenary.) How does its metaphor differ from Spanish gracias? (merci = reward/ mercy; gracias = grace.) Next: the reply to a thank-you.

3.2 de rien — "you're welcome," or "it was nothing"

Someone says merci. The easy reply: de rien — literally "of nothing." You wave the favour off as no trouble — and Spanish pulls this exact trick too.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-in` — rien is a nasal ending: the air goes out through the nose and there is no hard n to stop it. duh RYAN, with that final vowel humming rather than closing.
- `r-uvular` — that guttural French r again, at the back of the throat.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

- de = "of / from" (Latin dē).
- rien = "nothing." And here is the beautiful part.

rien comes from Latin rem — the accusative of rēs, "a thing." In Latin rem meant a thing, something real. But French kept using it inside negations — ne … rien, "not … a thing" — until the thing word absorbed the "nothing" and rien came to mean 'nothing' all by itself.
Latin rēs also gives English real, republic (rēs pūblica, "the public thing"), and rebus. So rien is, at the root, a real thing that learned to mean nothing at all.

Why it's said this way

If that sounds familiar, it should: Spanish did the identical thing with nada (← Latin nāta, "a born thing" → "nothing"). Two sister languages, the same move — the word for thing collapses into the word for nothing:

language	"you're welcome"	the "nothing" word, from Latin
French	de rien	rien ← rem, "a thing"
Spanish	de nada	nada ← nāta, "a born thing"

Two sister languages, one instinct: wave the favour off as no thing at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "merci" … "de rien" — the full exchange, both voices
- French de rien and Spanish de nada back to back — same idea, two "thing → nothing" words

Before you move on

What did rien ("nothing") originally mean in Latin? (rem — a thing.) What Spanish word pulled the same trick, and from what? (nada ← nāta, "a born thing.") Next: the verb French uses for "how are you?" — and it's not "to stand" like Spanish, but to go.

3.3 aller — "to go," the verb behind "how are you?"

Spanish asks how are you with estar, "to stand." French asks it with aller, "to go" — how does it go? Same question, a different picture of a life: one language stands, the other walks. Meet aller.

Sounds you'll need

- `er-ending` — the infinitive -er is a clean ay: aller = ah-LAY (the double l is just one l sound; the r is silent here).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aller means "to go." Its origin is one of the great messes of French — it is suppletive, meaning it was stitched together from three different Latin verbs, and you can still see the seams in its everyday forms:

- je vais ("I go") ← Latin vādere, "to go, to rush" → English invade, evade, wade (all "going" words).
- nous allons ("we go"), and the infinitive aller ← Latin ambulāre, "to walk" → English amble, ambulance (a walking hospital), preamble, perambulate.
- j'irai ("I will go") ← Latin īre, "to go" → English exit (ex-it, "he goes out"), transit, initial.

So a single French verb carries three Latin roots for motion. You don't need to conjugate it yet — just recognize one form for the next lesson:

- ça va = "it goes" (the va is from vādere) — the beating heart of French small talk.

Grammar Lens: "going" as "being"

Lots of languages borrow a motion verb to talk about state: English says "how are you getting on? / how's it going?" French made that the standard: Comment ça va? = "How does it go?" Hold the metaphor — it makes the next lesson obvious.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "aller" — ah-LAY
- "ça va" — sa VA, "it goes"
- English "amble, ambulance" (walk) and "invade, evade" (go) — aller's two big families

Before you move on

What does aller literally mean, and how many Latin verbs is it stitched from? (To go; three — ambulāre, vādere, īre.) Which everyday form means "it goes"? (ça va.) So Comment ça va? literally asks — what? ("How does it go?") Next: ask it for real.

3.4 Comment ça va ? — "how are you?"

You know comment, "how," and ça va, "it goes." Assemble the most useful neutral check-in in spoken French.

> Comment ça va ? — "How are you?" literally: "How does this go?"

The even shorter Ça va ? is extremely common. Answer with the same words:

> Ça va ? — Ça va. "How's it going? — It's going / I'm fine."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

- comment comes from Latin quōmodo, "in what manner";
- ça comes from ecce hoc, "behold this";
- va is the third-person form of aller, "to go."

French pictures wellbeing as going. Spanish uses a "standing" verb instead; the comparison is a memory hook, not a prerequisite. Pronounce comment roughly ko-mahn: the ending is nasal and the written t is silent in this neutral phrase.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Comment ça va ?"
- the shorter question — "Ça va ?"

- the pair — "Ça va ? — Ça va."

Twice through: "Ça va ? — Ça va."

Before you move on

What does Comment ça va ? literally ask? ("How does it go?") Which verb owns va? (Aller.) What is the shortest version? (Ça va ?) How can you answer it? (Ça va.) Next: choose tu or vous explicitly.

3.5 Comment vas-tu ? / Comment allez-vous ?

Comment ça va ? avoids naming the listener. Now use the tu / vous choice you learned when you gave your name.

Grammar Lens: a ladder of three registers

French offers a neat climb from casual to formal. tu is the familiar "you" (a friend, a peer); vous is the formal or plural "you" (a stranger, an elder, a group).

register	question	literally
casual, universal	Comment ça va ? (or Ça va ?)	"How does it go?"
informal, one friend	Comment vas-tu ?	"How go you?"
formal or plural	Comment allez-vous ?	"How go you (vous)?"

Vas and allez are simply the tu and vous forms of aller, "to go." Formal writing and careful speech invert verb and pronoun: allez-vous, literally "go-you." For a stranger or a boss, reach for Comment allez-vous ?

Sounds you'll need

The final t of comment is normally silent. Before vowel-initial allez, liaison can carry it across:

Comment allez-vous ? — roughly ko-mahn-ta-lay-voo

That linking sound is not an extra word; it is a normally silent consonant surfacing between two words.

Use Ça va ? as the easy neutral default, vas-tu for a friend when you want explicit informality, and allez-vous for formal or plural address.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to a friend — "Comment vas-tu ?"
- to a stranger — "Comment allez-vous ?"
- the neutral default — "Ça va ?"

Twice through: "Vas-tu — friend. Allez-vous — formal or plural."

Before you move on

Which form addresses one friend? (Comment vas-tu ?) Which is formal or plural? (Comment allez-vous ?) What sound appears in the liaison? (The normally silent t of comment.) Next: the "so-so" answer.

3.6 comme ci, comme ça — the classic French shrug

Someone asks Ça va? You're not great, not bad. The perfect, gloriously French answer — a phrase English borrowed whole — is comme ci, comme ça: "like this, like that." A verbal shrug of the shoulders.

First, twenty seconds of review. From your first greetings: bien — "well" (← Latin bene). So Ça va bien = "It's going well." Now the answer for when it's only going.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

comme ci, comme ça — literally "like this, like that." Every piece is an old friend:

- comme = "like, as" — from Latin quōmodo, "in what manner." That's the same root as *comment ("how") from last lesson! comment = "in what manner (as a question)"; comme =

"in the manner of, like." One Latin word, two French children.

- ci = "here / this" ← Latin ecce hic, "behold here."
- ça = "there / that" ← Latin ecce hoc, "behold this" — the same ça from Ça va?.

So you're literally waving a hand: a bit like this way, a bit like that way — neither up nor down.

Grammar Lens: your answer set for Ça va?

answer	sense
Bien, merci	well, thank you
Ça va	fine / okay ("it goes")
Comme ci, comme ça	so-so
Pas mal	not bad

Why it's said this way

Every language has its shrug, and each paints it differently: Spanish says más o menos ("more or less") or regular, Italian says così così ("so so"), French says comme ci, comme ça ("like this, like that"). Same gesture, three pictures.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "comme ci, comme ça" — with a little hand-wobble in the voice
- answer "Ça va?" three ways — "Bien" / "Ça va" / "Comme ci, comme ça"
- notice comme and comment share a root — quōmodo

Before you move on

What does comme ci, comme ça literally mean? ("Like this, like that.") What "how"-word shares comme's root? (comment — both from quōmodo.) What's the Spanish equivalent shrug? (más o menos / regular.) Next: put the whole exchange together.

3.7 Practice — "comment ça va ?", start to finish

No new words. This chapter's atoms — merci, de rien, aller, ça va, comme ci comme ça — assemble into a real exchange, run formally and informally. It picks up right where the introduction exchange left off.

The exchange

Formal (a stranger, an elder):

— Bonjour. Comment allez-vous ? — Bien, merci. Et vous ? — Comme ci, comme ça. — [later, after a small favour] — Merci ! — De rien.

Informal (a friend):

— Salut ! Ça va ? — Ça va, et toi ? — Comme ci, comme ça.

The glue word is et vous ? / et toi ? — "and you?" (et = "and," Latin et; toi is the stressed "you"). It bounces the question back — exactly like Spanish ¿y usted? / ¿y tú?

What you've built this chapter

- merci — thank you (← mercēs, "reward / mercy").
- de rien — you're welcome (← rem, "a thing" → "nothing"; twin of Spanish de nada).
- aller / ça va — "to go," the verb French uses for how are you (vs Spanish estar, "to stand").
- Comment ça va ? / allez-vous ? / vas-tu ? — the casual, formal, and informal question.
- bien / ça va / comme ci comme ça / pas mal — the answer ladder.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the full formal exchange, both voices
- the same informally — allez-vous → ça va, vous → toi
- chain the introduction onto this one — "Je m'appelle … Comment allez-vous ?"

Twice through: "Ça va ? — Ça va, et toi ?" until it's reflex.

Before you move on

Which verb carries French "how are you?", and how does its metaphor differ from Spanish's? (aller, "to go" — how does it go? — vs estar, "to stand.") What does de rien literally say, and its Spanish twin? ("Of nothing"; de nada.) Next chapter: farewells.

Chapter 4

Farewells

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) pen (3) Hands-free start: the first 5 of 10 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can end a French conversation politely and choose a farewell that fits the situation.

You can open a French conversation; now close it. French has one plain goodbye and a small family of soft ones, all built the same way — the preposition à ("to") followed by a time word — and this chapter also teaches the accents, the cedilla and the trema you have been reading all along.

4.1 au revoir — "goodbye," i.e. "until we see each other again"

You can open a French conversation; now close it. The standard goodbye is au revoir — and where Spanish adiós commends you to God, French makes a promise to see you again.

Sounds you'll need

- `r-uvular` — two guttural French r's: oh ruh-VWAHR.
- `vowel-oi` — -voir = vwahr (the oi = wa, as in soir, the evening).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

au revoir is au + revoir = "at the re-seeing":

- au = "at/to the" (a fusion of à + le).
- revoir = "to see again" = re- ("again") + voir ("to see").

So au revoir literally means "until the seeing-again" — a small promise that this isn't the end. It's built on voir, from Latin vidēre, "to see" — one of the richest roots in English:

- vision, visible, visit, visa, view, video ("I see").
- re-vise ("look again"), e-vident ("seen out"), pro-vide, super-vise, sur-vey.

Why it's said this way

Here's a satisfying cross-language pair: German says the exact same thing. Auf Wiedersehen = auf ("on") + wieder ("again") + sehen ("to see") = "on the seeing-again." French and German, side by side, both promise a re-seeing; Spanish adiós instead commends you to God. Same moment, two different pictures.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "au revoir" — oh ruh-VWAHR
- "au revoir" then English "vision, revise, video" — the vidēre family
- French au revoir and German auf Wiedersehen — both "see you again"

Before you move on

What does au revoir literally mean? ("Until the seeing-again.") What Latin verb is voir from, and two English cousins? (vidēre — vision, video, revise.) Which other language builds its goodbye the same "see again" way? (German auf Wiedersehen.) Next: "see you later."

4.2 à plus tard — the casual "see you later"

The everyday, friendly "see you later" is à plus tard — and among friends it shrinks to just à plus (ah PLUSS, and here you do sound the final s). It's the French twin of Spanish hasta luego.

Sounds you'll need

- `silent-final` — in the full phrase, plus is ploo (silent s): ah ploo TAR. But in the clipped à plus, the s is pronounced: ah PLUSS.
- tard = tar (silent d).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

à plus tard = literally "to more late" → "see you later."

- à = "to / at" (Latin ad) — French's all-purpose farewell preposition, the way Spanish leans on hasta: à + a time = a soft goodbye.
- plus = "more," from Latin plūs — the plus you already write in English (and the plu- of plural, surplus).
- tard = "late," from Latin tarde, "slowly, late." English keeps it in tardy and retard ("hold back, make late").

So à plus tard is "until more-late" — see you at some later point.

Why it's said this way

Spanish inherited that identical Latin tarde — the word you met giving your name — but the two languages grew it in different directions. French kept it meaning late (tard); Spanish grew it into afternoon (tarde). One Latin word, two everyday meanings. And where French leans on à for its soft goodbyes, Spanish leans on hasta ("until"): hasta luego is the twin of à plus tard.

Grammar Lens: the "à ..." farewells

French's soft goodbyes are all à + a time word — mirror this against Spanish hasta:

French	Spanish	"until / to …"
à plus tard / à plus	hasta luego	later
à + "soon" (next lesson)	hasta pronto	soon
à + "tomorrow" (the lesson after)	hasta mañana	tomorrow

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "à plus tard" (ah ploo TAR), then clipped "à plus" (ah PLUSS)
- "tard" then Spanish "tarde" — the same Latin tarde, "late"
- English "tardy, retard" — held back, late

Before you move on

What does à plus tard literally mean? ("To more late.") What Spanish word is tard identical to at the root, and what does each mean now? (tarde — French "late", Spanish "afternoon".) What preposition carries French's soft goodbyes, like Spanish hasta? (à.) Next: "see you soon."

4.3 à bientôt — "see you soon"

For when you'll genuinely meet again shortly: à bientôt, "see you soon" — the French twin of Spanish hasta pronto. It hides a word you already know from your first greetings: bien.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-in` — bien = byan, nasal (the sound you met in your first greetings).
- bientôt = byan-TOH; the circumflex on ô just marks a long o, and the final t is silent. Whole phrase: ah byan-TOH.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

à bientôt = "to soon" → "see you soon."

- à = "to" (the farewell preposition again).
- bientôt = "soon," and it's a compound you can pull apart: - bien = "well" (from Latin bene, the bene of benefit). - tôt = "early / soon." - Together, bien + tôt = "well-soon" → quite soon. (French loves gluing bien onto words for emphasis — bientôt "soon", bienvenue "welcome" = "well-come".)

The circumflex ô is itself a little history lesson: a circumflex usually marks an s that dropped out (hôtel was hostel, forêt was forest). tôt came from an older tost — so the hat on ô is the ghost of a lost s.

Grammar Lens: bien, the intensifier

You met bien as "well" (an answer to ça va?). Here it's doing a second job: gluing onto another word to strengthen it — bien + tôt = "soon indeed." Same word, new trick.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "à bientôt" — ah byan-TOH
- pull it apart — "bien" (well) + "tôt" (early) = bientôt (soon)
- "à bientôt" = Spanish "hasta pronto" — see you soon

Before you move on

What two words hide inside bientôt? (bien "well" + tôt "early" → soon.) What does the circumflex on ô usually mark? (A dropped s — tost → tôt.) What's the Spanish equivalent of à bientôt? (hasta pronto.) Next: "until tomorrow."

4.4 à demain — "see you tomorrow"

Parting for the day: à demain, "until tomorrow" — the twin of Spanish hasta mañana. And demain shares a hidden root with mañana that's worth seeing.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-in` — demain = duh-MAN: the -ain is the nasal you heard in bien; the final consonant is silent. ah duh-MAN.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

à demain = "to tomorrow" → "see you tomorrow."

- à = "to" (the farewell preposition, one last time).
- demain = "tomorrow," from Latin dē māne, "from the morning": - dē = "from" · māne = "in the morning." - The next "morning" is tomorrow → de mane fused into demain.

English keeps māne too, in the poetic matins (morning prayers) and matinée (a morning/daytime show).

Why it's said this way

Spanish mañana ("tomorrow / morning") comes from Latin (hōra) maneana — built on the same māne, "morning." So French demain and Spanish mañana are cousins through one Latin word: both turn "morning" into "tomorrow," just assembled differently — French says from-morning, Spanish says morning-ish hour.

Grammar Lens: the "à ..." farewells, complete

Your French soft-goodbye set, mapped to Spanish:

French	Spanish	when
à plus tard / à plus	hasta luego	later (default)
à bientôt	hasta pronto	soon
à demain	hasta mañana	tomorrow

…and au revoir for the plain goodbye.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "à demain" — ah duh-MAN
- "demain" ← dē māne "from morning"; Spanish "mañana" ← maneana — same māne
- the three "à …" goodbyes — à plus tard / à bientôt / à demain

Before you move on

What does demain literally come from? (dē māne — "from the morning.") What Spanish word shares that māne root? (mañana.) Which French goodbye for parting until tomorrow? (à demain.) Next: put the farewells together.

4.5 Practice — saying goodbye in French

No new words. The farewells — au revoir and the three à … goodbyes — now close a real conversation and fold back into everything since salut.

Your turn: choosing the right goodbye

you're...	say
parting plainly / politely	au revoir
expecting to meet again shortly	à bientôt
casual "see you"	à plus (tard)
leaving for the day	à demain

The exchange, start to finish

Everything from the French Chapters 1–4:

— Salut ! Je m'appelle Chloé. Comment tu t'appelles ? — Je m'appelle Marc. Enchanté. — Ça va ? — Ça va bien, merci, et toi ? — Bien. Bon… à demain, Marc. — Oui, à demain, Chloé. Au revoir !

What you've built this chapter

- au revoir — the plain goodbye ("until the seeing-again"; the voir / vidēre family; twin of German auf Wiedersehen).
- à plus tard / à bientôt / à demain — later / soon / tomorrow, all à + a time, mirroring Spanish's hasta.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the full conversation, both voices — salut to au revoir
- pick the goodbye — a friend you'll see tomorrow? (à demain); a polite plain goodbye? (au revoir)

Twice through: Run the exchange, greeting to goodbye, without stopping.

Before you move on

What does au revoir literally promise? (A re-seeing — "until we see again.") Which preposition carries French's soft goodbyes? (à — like Spanish hasta.) You can now hold a whole short French exchange, hello to goodbye. Next chapter: your first verbs — to speak, to live somewhere, to work.

4.6 é è ê — the three hats on e, and the one that hides an s

French sprinkles little marks over its vowels, and they are not decoration — each does a specific job. You've read one since enchanté, and another on the à of your goodbyes. Three of them ride on e, and one of the three hides a word you already know in English.

You'll want to know: the three accents, and what they do

- é — accent aigu (rising stroke, like Spanish's). It fixes the sound: é = a crisp "ay" (no glide). enchanté, été ("summer").

- è — accent grave (falling stroke). è = an open "eh" as in bed. première ("first" — English borrowed it as premiere), Genève ("Geneva"). The grave also just separates look-alikes: a ("has") vs à ("to") — same job as Spanish tu/tú.
- ê — accent circonflexe (a little hat). This one is a fossil.

Why it's said this way

Centuries ago French dropped an s before certain consonants, and left a hat where it used to stand. English, having borrowed the older form, usually still has that s — so the circumflex is a decoder ring between the two languages:

French (hat)	the lost *s	English kept it
forêt	forest	forest
hôpital	hospital	hospital
île	isle	isle / island
bête	beste	beast
fête	feste	feast
pâte	paste	paste / pasta
goût	gust	(Latin gustus, cf. gusto)

So when you meet a circumflex, mentally slot an s back in and an English cousin often appears. Hôpital → hospital. It's the single most useful reading trick in French spelling.

Writing: the three accents

How these letters are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: é, è, ê

All three are small strokes above the vowel: é leans right (up-stroke), è leans left (down-stroke), ê is a little peak (^). Get the lean right — é and è are different sounds, so the direction matters.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "é" = ay (enchanté), "è" = eh (première) — hear the two sounds
- forêt → forest, hôpital → hospital, île → isle — put the s back
- "à" vs "a" — the grave that only separates

Before you move on

Which accent makes e say "ay," and which "eh"? (é aigu = ay; è grave = eh.) What does the circumflex ê usually mark, and how do you use it? (A lost s — slot it back to find the English cousin: forêt → forest.) Next writing lesson: the little hook under c — the cédille.

4.7 ç — the little tail that softens c

You've seen it in français and garçon. The cédille is the tiny hook under a c — ç — and it exists to solve one specific spelling problem.

You'll want to know: the problem the cedilla solves

In French (as in Latin, Italian, Spanish), c is soft (an s sound) before e and *i, but hard (a k) before a, o, *u:

- ce, ci → soft: ceci = suh-SEE.
- ca, co, cu → hard: car, comme, cure = k.

So "franc-ais" would read frank-ay — wrong. To force the soft s before a/o/u, French adds the hook: ç.

- français = *frahn-SEH (not "frank-").
- garçon = *gar-SOHN ("boy").
- ça = sa ("that" — the ça of ça va?).
- reçu = *ruh-SU ("received").

The rule is tidy: ç only ever appears before a, o, u — never before e/i, where c is already soft and the hook would be pointless.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The cédille is literally "a little z." Its name is Spanish zedilla ("little zeta") — medieval scribes wrote a small subscript z under the c to say "pronounce this like z/s, not k." Over time the little z shrank into the hook you write today. So ç = c + a ghost z. (Spanish later dropped it; French and Portuguese kept it — ç is alive in português itself.)

Writing: the cedilla

How ç is written, stroke by stroke

Write a normal c, then add a small hook curling left off the bottom, like a tiny 5's tail. Only ever under c, only before a/o/u.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "français", "garçon", "ça" — the ç forcing a soft s
- imagine no cédille — "franc-ais" as frank-ay — that's what it prevents

Before you move on

What does the cédille do, and before which letters does it appear? (Keeps c soft (s) — only before a, o, u.) What is the hook, historically? (A shrunken subscript z — Spanish zedilla, "little z".) Next writing lesson: the two dots — the tréma.

4.8 ï ë ü — the two dots that say "say me on my own"

The last French mark: two little dots over a vowel — the tréma (English calls it a diaeresis). It answers one question the reader would otherwise get wrong: do these two vowels blend, or not?

You'll want to know: the problem the trema solves

French loves to fuse vowel pairs into one sound: a-i says eh, a-u oh, o-u oo, o-i wa. Usually that's what you want. But sometimes two vowels really should be sounded separately — and the tréma is how the spelling says so: "break these apart; pronounce the marked vowel on its own."

- naïve = *na-EEV (na-i, two syllables) — not "nave." (English kept the dots: naïve.)
- Noël = *no-EL ("Christmas") — o and e separately, not "nurl."
- maïs = *ma-EES ("corn"). Without the dots the same letters blend to meh, a different word: the dots flip the meaning.
- Citroën, Israël, égoïste — same rule: split the vowels.

So the tréma is the opposite of a blend instruction: where a-i says "merge," aï says "don't."

Writing: the trema

How these letters are written, one after another, stroke by stroke: ï, ë, ü

Two dots, side by side, above the vowel that starts its own sound — the second vowel of the pair (na-ï-ve). (It looks like a German umlaut, but the job is different: German ä/ö/ü change the vowel; the French tréma separates it. Same two dots, opposite purpose — that's the next lesson.)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "naïve" = na-EEV, "Noël" = no-EL — two syllables each
- "maïs" (ma-EES, corn), then the blended meh the dots forbid

Before you move on

What does the tréma tell you to do? (Pronounce the two vowels separately, not blended.) How is it different from a German umlaut? (Tréma separates vowels; umlaut changes a vowel's sound.) That's the French writing kit: é è ê, ç, and ï ë.

4.9 à — one word, three goodbyes

Three soft goodbyes, from memory. Say all three, then say the one word every one of them begins with.

You'll want to know: the soft goodbyes are all à plus a time

à plus tard	to more late — later, the default
à bientôt	to well-soon — soon
à demain	to tomorrow

One preposition and a word for when. Choosing between them is choosing a distance in time, and nothing else about the sentence moves.

bonne nuit is not in that family and is worth keeping apart: it is for someone going to bed, not for someone leaving a room. Said on the way out of an afternoon meeting it lands oddly.

Grammar Lens: tu and vous, and where the choice actually shows tu is the familiar you, for a friend or a peer; vous is the formal or plural one, for a stranger, an elder, a group. The climb is visible in the question: Comment vas-tu ? against Comment allez-vous ? The verb changes with the pronoun, so the choice is not a single word you can swap late — it is decided before the sentence starts.

What you've built — thanks, and the shrug

merci and its reply de rien, "of nothing" — the same modesty Spanish reaches for with de nada.
And the shrug: comme ci, comme ça, "like this, like that". Every language paints that gesture differently — Spanish weighs it (más o menos, more or less), Italian doubles a word (così così), French points twice. One gesture, three pictures.

Before you move on

What do the three soft goodbyes share? (à, plus a word for when.) Who is bonne nuit for? (Someone going to bed.) Where does the tu-vous choice show itself? (In the verb — vas-tu against allez-vous.) And what does de rien say literally? (Of nothing.)

4.10 ê ç ï — three marks, three different jobs

forêt, hôpital, île. One letter is missing from each, and English still has it. Say which letter, before reading on.

Script: what each mark is actually for

The three arrived a page apart and do three unrelated jobs. Sorted by what they change, they stop looking like a single topic called accents:

mark	what it changes
ê the circumflex	nothing you say — it records an s that fell out
ç the cédille	the sound — it keeps c soft before a, o, u
ï the tréma	the grouping — read this vowel on its own

The circumflex is the odd one and the useful one. French dropped an s before certain consonants and left a hat where it stood; English borrowed the older spelling and kept the s. So forêt is forest, hôpital is hospital, île is isle. A hat is a decoder ring, not a pronunciation instruction.

The other two are instructions. ç exists because c would otherwise go hard before those three vowels; ï exists because two vowels side by side would otherwise be read as one sound.

Your turn

- Look: at a word with a hat and say the English word that kept the s
- Say it: a c before a with the hook and without it
- Say it: two vowels with the tréma and without, and hear them split
- Trace it: each of the three marks once

Before you move on

Which of the three changes nothing you say? (The circumflex.)
What does it record? (A lost *s, which English usually still has.)
What does the cédille stop happening? (A hard c before a, o, u.)
And what does the tréma ask you to do? (Read the vowel separately.)

Chapter 5

The First Verbs

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can build short present-tense French sentences with the chapter's first verbs.
>
> Until now you have assembled fixed phrases. This chapter hands you a pattern instead: the regular -er verbs, the largest verb family in French by a wide margin. Learn the one template and thousands of verbs come with it — and with it you build your first sentence that nobody handed you pre-made.

5.1 parler — "to speak," and the great regular French verb

Until now you've assembled fixed phrases. parler ("to speak") is your first real verb — and it's the model for the biggest French verb family by far: the -er verbs. Learn this one pattern and you can drive thousands.

Sounds you'll need

- `er-ending` — the infinitive -er is a clean ay: parler = par-LAY (the r is silent in the ending). The stem is parl-.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

parler comes from Late Latin parabolāre, "to tell parables, to discourse" — from parabola, "a comparison, a speech" (itself from Greek parabolē, "a throwing-beside"). So to speak, in French, is at root to tell parables. That root fans into English:

- parable — the story-comparison itself.
- parole — a spoken word of honour (a prisoner's parole).
- palaver — a long talk; parley — to talk terms; even parliament — a talking-place.

Grammar Lens: the -er present tense (and its silent trap)

Drop -er, add the ending for the person:

person	ending, on *parler	sounds like
je	-e: je parle	parl
tu	-es: tu parles	parl
il / elle	-e: il parle	parl
nous	-ons: nous parlons	par-LON
vous	-ez: vous parlez	par-LAY
ils / elles	-ent: ils parlent	parl

Here is the great French surprise: -e, -es, and -ent are all SILENT — je parle, tu parles, ils parlent all sound identical, just parl. Only nous (-ons) and vous (-ez) are audible.

Grammar Lens: why French keeps its pronouns

That silence has a consequence which shapes the whole language. In Spanish the ending alone tells you who is speaking — hablo ("I speak") against hablas ("you speak") — so the pronoun can be dropped. In French your ear cannot hear any difference between parle, parles and parlent, so the pronoun must stay to carry the person. Je and tu are not optional decoration in French; they are the only thing telling you who is doing the speaking.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "parler" — par-LAY
- "je parle, tu parles, il parle" — all parl, identical

- "parler" then English "parable, parole, palaver" — the parabola root

Before you move on

What Latin word is parler from, and its English cousins? (parabolāre ← parabola — parable, parole.) Which three present-tense endings are silent? (-e, -es, -ent — je/tu/ils all sound parl.) Why does French keep je/tu when Spanish drops yo/tú? (The endings are silent, so the pronoun carries the person.) Next: the verb "to live."

5.2 habiter — "to live," and it's about having a place

A second -er verb — snap it into the exact template you just learned. habiter ("to live, to dwell") lets you say where you live, the answer to a "where?" question.

Sounds you'll need

- `silent-final` — the h is silent (French h never sounds): habiter = a-bee-TAY. Same -er = ay ending as parler.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

habiter comes from Latin habitāre, "to dwell, to keep on having [a place]" — the frequentative of habēre, "to have." To dwell somewhere is to keep having it as your place. That root is thoroughly English:

- habitat — the place a creature dwells.
- inhabit, inhabitant, habitation — to dwell in / one who dwells.
- and (via habēre, "have") habit — what you "keep having," and able, ability (what you "have" it in you to do).

Grammar Lens: same -er template

Drop -er, add the endings — identical to parler, silent trap and all: | j'habite · tu habites · il habite | (all a-BEET) |

| nous habitons · vous habitez | (a-bee-TON · a-bee-TAY) |
Note j'habite — je elides to j' before the vowel of habite (the h is silent, so it counts as a vowel). Now you can say where you live:

J'habite à Paris. — "I live in Paris."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "habiter" — a-bee-TAY, silent h
- "j'habite, tu habites, il habite" — all a-BEET
- "habiter" then English "habitat, inhabit" — the habitāre root

Before you move on

What Latin verb is habiter from, and what does it literally involve? (habitāre, "keep having a place" — from habēre, "to have.") English cousins? (Habitat, inhabit, habitation.) Say "I live in Paris." (J'habite à Paris.) Next: the verb "to work."

5.3 travailler — "to work," and the torture behind "travel"

A third -er verb, and it shares its dark, delightful origin with a Spanish word you may already know: travailler ("to work") began as a word for torture, and it's the secret ancestor of English travel.

Sounds you'll need

- `ai-y` — the -ill- is a y glide: travailler = tra-va-YAY. Same -er = ay ending.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

travailler comes from Vulgar Latin tripaliāre, "to torture" — from tripalium, a Roman instrument of torture made of three stakes (tri- "three" + pālus "stake" → English pale, impale).

The slide of meaning is grim and logical: torture → painful toil → work. And two English words came down the same road:

- travail — painful, laborious effort.
- travel — journeying was once such an ordeal that travail (toil) became travel (to make a journey). You are, etymologically, tortured every time you travel.

Why it's said this way

Spanish trabajar ("to work") comes from the very same tripaliāre — a perfect cross-language twin, torture and all. The middle of the word went one way in each language: the -al- stayed in French (travail, travailler) and softened to -aj- in Spanish (trabajo, trabajar).

Grammar Lens: same -er template

| je travaille · tu travailles · il travaille | (all tra-VYE) |
| nous travaillons · vous travaillez | |

Je travaille à Paris. — "I work in Paris."

Nothing new to learn — that's the point. One template, every -er verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "travailler" — tra-va-YAY
- "je travaille" — je tra-VYE, "I work"
- travailler → travail → travel — torture became a journey; twin of Spanish trabajar

Before you move on

What did travailler originally mean, and from what device? ("To torture," ← tripalium, three stakes.) What two English words share the root? (Travail and travel.) Its Spanish twin? (Trabajar — same tripaliāre.) Next: build your first full sentence — "I speak French."

5.4 Je parle français — your first real sentence

The moment it all pays off: you take a verb you conjugated and a noun, and build a sentence no one handed you pre-made — Je parle français, "I speak French."

Sounds you'll need

- `soft-c-s` — français = frahn-SEH. The cedilla under the ç forces a soft s where a plain c would have been hard.
- The opening fran- is nasal, and the final -ais is a plain eh.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

français = "French" — both the language and a French person — from Francia, "land of the Franks": the Germanic people who settled Roman Gaul and gave France its name. And here is the twist: the Franks' own name meant "free." That is why English frank and frankly mean open and unguarded, and why the old French coin was called a franc.

Grammar Lens: two rules hiding in four words

Snap together two things you own:

> Je (I, ← ego) + parle (speak, from parler) = Je parle français.

A complete, grammatical French sentence. Two rules are hiding in it:

- You keep the je. Spanish drops its pronoun — hablo español says "I speak Spanish" with no word for "I," because the ending -o carries the person. French cannot do that: parle, parles and parlent all sound alike, so the pronoun must stay. This is the single biggest structural difference between French and its Iberian cousins.
- No article on the language here: je parle français, not je parle le français.

Swap the pieces and it generates:

- J'habite à Paris. — "I live in Paris."
- Tu parles français ? — "Do you speak French?" (just raise the tone).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Je parle français" — zhuh parl frahn-SEH
- keep the je — French can't drop it (unlike Spanish hablo)
- swap — "Tu parles français ?", "J'habite à Paris"

Before you move on

Where does français come from, and what did the Franks' name mean? (Francia, "land of the Franks"; the name meant "free" — English frank.) Why must French keep je where Spanish drops yo? (French endings are silent, so the pronoun carries the person.) Next: practice.

5.5 Practice — making sentences with -er verbs

For the first time you're not reciting phrases — you're building sentences from a pattern. Drill the three verbs, and burn in the French rule the whole language turns on: keep the pronoun (the endings are silent).

Your turn: conjugate on command

Run each through je / tu / il:

- parler: je parle · tu parles · il parle — all parl
- habiter: j'habite · tu habites · il habite — all a-beet
- travailler: je travaille · tu travailles · il travaille — all tra-vye

Every singular form (and the ils form) sounds the same — the -e/-es/ -ent are silent. That's why je, tu, il stay put: they carry the person your ear can't hear.

Your turn: say something real

— Tu parles français ? — Oui, je parle français. (Do you speak French? — Yes, I speak French.) — Tu habites à Lyon ? — Oui, j'habite à Lyon. Je travaille à Paris. — Merci ! — De rien.

What you've built this chapter

- the regular -er present tense — drop -er, add -e/-es/-e/-ons/ -ez/-ent; the singular + ils endings are silent, so the pronoun is mandatory (the big contrast with Spanish/Italian pro-drop).
- parler (← parabolāre → parable/parole), habiter (← habitāre → habitat/inhabit), travailler (← tripalium → travail/travel; twin of Spanish trabajar).
- Je parle français — your first self-assembled sentence (français ← Francia, the Franks = "free").

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- conjugate all three verbs, je/tu/il — hear that they don't change
- answer about yourself — where you live, where you work, what you speak
- chain it — "Bonjour ! Je parle français. Tu parles français ? … Au revoir !"

Twice through: "Tu parles français ? — Oui, je parle français."

Before you move on

Which -er endings are silent, and what follows from that? (-e, -es, -ent — so French keeps its subject pronouns.) Give "I" forms of the three verbs. (Je parle, j'habite, je travaille.) Say "I live in Paris. I work in Lyon." (J'habite à Paris. Je travaille à Lyon.) French now moves in real sentences.

Chapter 6

Numbers One to Ten

Modes: 🚗 voice (12) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 12 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from one to ten in French and use the numbers in a short exchange.
>
> The ten most-reused words in the language, taken one at a time. Each is a Latin numeral that barely moved on its way into French, so English has already handed you half of them — and four of them left a copy of themselves in the calendar, still counting two months out of place.

6.1 un — one

Numbers are the most-reused words in any language, and French inherited them from Latin almost unchanged. You already half-know them through English. We take them one at a time, starting with the first.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-un` — un is a nasal vowel, close to "uh" hummed through the nose. No n is ever pronounced. The letters u-n are a single sound, not two.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

un (1) comes from Latin ūnus, and that root is everywhere in English:

- unit — one thing counted

- union — many made one
- unique — one of its kind
- universe — everything turned into one

English one and a/an descend from the same ancient word, worn down at home rather than borrowed. Spanish keeps the Latin shape more plainly: uno.

Grammar Lens: one word for "one" and "a"

French draws no line between "one" and "a/an." un does both jobs, and it takes the gender of the noun it stands in front of:

- un before a masculine noun — un jour, "a day" or "one day"
- une before a feminine noun — une nuit, "a night" or "one night"

You met that same masculine/feminine split in le and la. It is the same split, on a different word. Spanish does exactly this too (un / una). The counting words that follow never change shape; this first one is the only one that does.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "un" — hum it through the nose, no n at the end
- "un jour" then "une nuit" — same word, two genders
- "un" then English "unit, union, unique" — hear the ūnus

Before you move on

How do you say one in French? (un, nasal, with no n sounded.) What two things does it mean? (One, and a/an.) What is its feminine form, and when do you use it? (une, before a feminine noun — une nuit.) Next: the number two.

6.2 deux — two

One down. The second number brings a vowel your mouth has to be taught, and a final letter you must not say.

Travailler and Spanish trabajar are twins from one Latin word: French kept the -al-, Spanish softened it to -aj-.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-eu` — say "eh," then round your lips as if for "oo" without moving your tongue. That rounded eu is the whole word: deux = deuh.
- `silent-final` — the x is silent. French writes letters at the end of a word that it has stopped pronouncing, and this is your first one.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

deux (2) comes from Latin duo, which English borrowed several times over:

- duo — two performers
- dual, duel — of two
- duet — a piece for two
- double — Latin duplus, "two-fold"

Spanish went the other way with the same word and wore it down to dos.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "deux" — round the lips, stop before the x
- "un, deux" — count what you have so far
- "deux jours" — two days

Before you move on

How do you say two? (deux, deuh.) What happens to the x? (Nothing — it is silent.) Which English words carry the same Latin duo? (Duo, dual, duet, double.) Count what you have. (Un, deux.) Next: the number three.

6.3 trois — three

The third number shows you the most French vowel spelling there is: oi, which sounds nothing like either letter in it.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-oi` — the pair oi is always wa. So trois = trwa.
- `silent-final` — the s is silent here, exactly as the x was in deux.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

trois (3) comes from Latin trēs. Look at what happened next: French turned it into trois and Spanish into tres. Same Roman word, worn two different ways — the clearest picture yet of how one language becomes two.
English took the Latin form whole, over and over:

- trio — three players
- triple — three-fold
- trident — three teeth
- triangle — three corners

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "trois" — trwa, one syllable
- "un, deux, trois" — the count so far
- "trois" then Spanish "tres" — one Latin word, two shapes

Before you move on

How do you say three? (trois, trwa.) What sound does oi always make? (Wa.) Which Latin word gave both trois and Spanish tres? (trēs.) Count to three. (Un, deux, trois.) Next: the number four.

6.4 quatre — four

The fourth number is the first that runs to two syllables, and it ends in a letter French writes but barely breathes.

Sounds you'll need

- quatre = KA-truh. The qu- is a plain k; no w sound survives.
- `silent-final-e` — the closing -e is a whisper, not a vowel you lean on.
- `r-uvular` — the French r is made at the back of the throat, near where you would gargle, and never rolled at the tip of the tongue.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quatre (4) comes from Latin quattuor. English borrowed the Latin stem and kept the qua- visible in every one:

- quart — a fourth of a gallon
- quarter — a fourth of anything
- quatrain — a four-line verse
- quadrant — a quarter of a circle

Spanish stayed nearer the Latin with cuatro; French compressed the middle of the word away.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quatre" — KA-truh, the r at the back of the throat

- "un, deux, trois, quatre"
- "quatre" then English "quarter, quadrant" — the same quattuor

Before you move on

How do you say four? (quatre, KA-truh.) Where in your mouth is the French r made? (At the back of the throat.) Which English words come from quattuor? (Quart, quarter, quatrain, quadrant.) Next: the number five, which closes the first hand.

6.5 cinq — five

Five closes the first hand — and this one came into English so completely that you have handled it on a pair of dice.

Sounds you'll need

- `soft-c-s` — a c before i or e is an s. So cinq opens with s, not k.
- `nasal-in` — the in is nasal, like the un you met in un, but with the tongue further forward. The q at the end is sounded: sank.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cinq (5) comes from Latin quīnque. English took the Latin stem for counting words:

- quintet — five players
- quintessence — the fifth essence, the one the ancients set above earth, water, air and fire

And English took the French word whole for one job: cinque, the five on a die or a playing card. Spanish, again, kept the Latin q: cinco.

Grammar Lens: what the first five have in common

Set the five beside their Latin parents and one fact stands out: the numbers barely moved. ūnus, duo, trēs, quattuor, quīnque went into French as the five words you have learned, and into Spanish as uno, dos, tres, cuatro, cinco. Words used every day by every speaker are the words a language changes least.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "cinq" — sank, the q sounded
- "un, deux, trois, quatre, cinq" — count the whole hand
- "cinq jours" — five days

Twice through: "un, deux, trois, quatre, cinq"

Before you move on

How do you say five? (cinq, sank.) Why does the c sound like s? (It stands before i.) Which English word for the 5 on a die is French? (cinque.) Count to five. (Un, deux, trois, quatre, cinq.) Next: the number six, and a rule about final letters that turn on and off.

6.6 six — six

Six is spelled like the English word and means the same thing. The new thing here is not the word. It is that its last sound switches on and off depending on what follows.

Sounds you'll need

- Counting on its own, six ends in an s sound: sees.
- The i is the short, tight vowel of English machine, not of sit.

Grammar Lens: a final letter that comes and goes

French final consonants are not a fixed yes or no. six has three settings, and which one you hear is decided by the next word:

- counting, or standing alone — the s is sounded: sees
- before a consonant — the s falls silent: six livres = see livres
- before a vowel — it comes back voiced, as a z: six ans =

see-z-ans

That third case is called liaison: a silent ending waking up to bridge into a vowel. French does this constantly, and you will meet it in every chapter from here on.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

six (6) comes from Latin sex, which is where English got:

- sextet — six players
- sextant — an instrument marking a sixth of a circle
- semester — Latin sex mensis, "six months"

Spanish made seis from the same sex.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "six" alone — sees, the s sounded
- "six livres" — see livres, the s gone
- the count so far, one through six
- "six ans" — see-z-ans, the s back as a z

Before you move on

How do you say six when counting? (Sees, with the s.) What happens to that s before a consonant? (It goes silent — six livres.) And before a vowel? (It returns as a z — six ans. That is liaison.) Next: the number seven, and a secret hidden in the calendar.

6.7 sept — seven

Seven is the first of four numbers that left a copy of themselves in the calendar. Learn the number and you have been handed a month.

Sounds you'll need

- sept = set. The p is written and never spoken.
- The final t, unusually, is spoken. French keeps a handful of final consonants alive, and this is one of them.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sept (7) comes from Latin septem. The same septem stands, undisguised, at the front of a month you already know:

- septembre — French for September
- septet — seven players

The month is worth staring at. Septembre announces itself as the seventh, and everybody uses it as the ninth. That gap has an explanation, and it is waiting at the end of this chapter. Spanish made siete from the same septem.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "sept" — set, no p
- the count so far, one through seven
- "sept" then English "September" — the seven inside the month

Before you move on

How do you say seven? (sept, set.) Which written letter is silent? (The p.) Which month carries the same Latin septem? (September, in French as in English — the ninth month, for a reason we come to.) Next: the number eight.

6.8 huit — eight

Every number so far has looked like its Latin parent. This one looks like nothing at all — and that is the lesson.

Sounds you'll need

- `silent-h` — French never pronounces a written h. Not here, not anywhere.
- huit = weet, with the final t sounded.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

huit (8) comes from Latin octō, and the road it travelled is worth following step by step:

octō → oit → huit

The c dropped out, the vowels softened, and a written h grew on the front as a prop. The number came out unrecognisable. English, which borrowed the Latin form directly, kept it whole in octave, octagon and octopus — the eight-armed one.
Here is the consolation: French kept the old shape in the month. Octobre still carries oct- in plain sight. The eight vanished from the number and survived in the calendar. Spanish made ocho, which sits about halfway along the same road.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "huit" — weet, no h, with the t
- the count so far, one through eight
- the road — "octō, oit, huit" — then the month, where the oct- held (English "October" kept it too)

Before you move on

How do you say eight? (huit, weet.) What does French do with a written h? (Never pronounces it.) Which Latin word is huit worn down from, and where can you still see it? (octō — kept intact in the month: French's, and English October.) Next: the number nine.

6.9 neuf — nine

You met a final letter that goes silent before a consonant. Nine shows you the other move: a final letter that changes shape to reach a vowel.

Sounds you'll need

- neuf = nuhf. The vowel is the rounded eu you learned in deux, and the f is sounded.

Grammar Lens: the f that turns into a v

Standing before a vowel, the f of neuf softens into a v:

- neuf ans ("nine years") = neu-v-ans
- neuf heures ("nine o'clock") = neu-v-eures

This is the same instinct you saw in six ans: French will not let a consonant sit awkwardly against a following vowel, so it bends the sound to bridge them. With six the ending woke up as a z; with neuf it softens to a v. Both are liaison, doing the one job of keeping the line smooth.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

neuf (9) comes from Latin novem. Once again the month kept the number visible: novembre wears its nov- on the outside, and English has novena, a devotion of nine days. Spanish made nueve.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "neuf" — nuhf, with the f
- "neuf ans" — neu-v-ans, the f softened
- "six ans, neuf ans" — a z and a v, the same bridging move

Before you move on

How do you say nine? (neuf, nuhf.) What happens to the f before a vowel? (It becomes a v — neuf ans.) Which month keeps the same Latin novem? (November, in French as in English.) Next: the number ten, and the count is complete.

6.10 dix — ten

The last number of the count, and the one you have been carrying in your pocket in English without knowing it.

Sounds you'll need

- Counting on its own, dix ends in an s sound: dees.
- It behaves exactly like six: silent before a consonant (dix livres = dee livres), and back as a z before a vowel (dix ans = dee-z-ans).

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dix (10) comes from Latin decem, and it has left tracks in three places you already walk:

- décembre — the month that says "ten"
- decimal — counting by tens
- dime — a tenth of a dollar. That one came through Old French disme, from Latin decima, "a tenth." The coin in an American pocket is a French word for a tenth part.

Spanish made diez from the same decem.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dix" alone — dees
- "dix livres", then "dix ans" — silent, then z
- "dix" then English "decimal, dime" — the decem in both

Before you move on

How do you say ten on its own? (dix, dees.) Which other number shares its on-and-off ending? (six.) Which American coin is a worn-down French word for a tenth? (The dime, from disme ← decima.) Next: why those four months are counting wrong.

6.11 The months that are off by two

Four times in this chapter a number turned up at the front of a month, and four times the arithmetic was wrong by two. Here is why.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Line up what the four months say against where they sit:

month	says	sits at
septembre	seven (septem)	9th
octobre	eight (octō)	10th
novembre	nine (novem)	11th
décembre	ten (decem)	12th

Every one is two places late, and all four are late by the same two places. A single event moved them.

The old Roman year began in March, not January. Counting from March, September genuinely was the seventh month and December the tenth — the names were accurate. Later, two months named for Julius Caesar and the emperor Augustus were fixed into the middle of the year, and the start of the year was moved back to January. The counting months were shoved two places along. Their Latin names never caught up.

So every December, in French and in English alike, you are saying the Roman word for ten. Spanish carries the identical fault: diciembre is decem too.

Before you move on

What does septembre mean, and which month is it? (Seven — and it is the ninth.) In which month did the old Roman year begin? (March.) Which two months were pushed in, and for whom? (The two named for Julius Caesar and Augustus.) What number are you saying when you say décembre? (Ten, Latin decem.)

6.12 Practice — counting to ten, out loud and in use

Ten words, taken one at a time. Now run them together until the chain is one motion, then put it to work.

Your turn: the whole count

Up, then down:

un, deux, trois, quatre, cinq, six, sept, huit, neuf, dix

Twice through: the count from one to ten

Then backwards, which is where a memorised chant stops helping and the words have to be individually yours: dix, neuf, huit, sept, six, cinq, quatre, trois, deux, un.

Your turn: the endings that move

Three numbers change sound depending on what comes next. Say each pair and listen for the difference:

- six livres / six ans — silent, then z
- dix livres / dix ans — silent, then z
- neuf livres / neuf ans — f, then v

Your turn: say something real

— Bonjour ! Un jour ? — Non, deux jours.

— Trois ? — Non, deux. Merci !

— De rien. Bonne nuit — une nuit, deux nuits.

Say how many, then correct yourself. The exchange is short on purpose: every word in it is already yours, from this chapter or from the first.

What you've built this chapter

- un to dix — the ten most-reused words in the language, each of them a Latin numeral that barely moved on the way in.
- un / une — the number one doubling as "a/an," and taking gender.
- liaison — six, dix and neuf changing their final sound to reach a following vowel.
- the four months at the end of the year — still counting seven to ten, two places out of place ever since the Roman year stopped starting in March.

Before you move on

Count from one to ten without stopping. Now backwards. Which three numbers change their ending before a vowel, and how? (Six and dix to a z, neuf to a v.) What is the difference between un jour and une nuit? (Gender — the same word for "one" and "a," agreeing with the noun.) Why does the twelfth month say ten? (The Roman year began in March, and two months were later inserted.)

Chapter 7

The Days of the Week

Modes: voice (7) eyes (2) Hands-free start: the first 7 of 9 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name the days of the week in French and use them in simple plans.

Seven day-names that are a map of the sky. Five carry a Roman planet-god and all of them carry Latin dies, "day" – so half of every weekday comes free, and English names the same gods on the same days under Germanic names. Then two days where a later faith wrote over the planets entirely.

7.1 la lune — the Moon

The seven-day week is one of the oldest things any language carries, and the French day-names are a map of the sky. Before we read the map, one of the objects on it.

Sounds you'll need

- `front-rounded-u` — the French u has no English equivalent. Say "ee," and then, without moving your tongue, round your lips as though for "oo." That is u. So lune is lün, never loon.
- `silent-final-e` — the closing -e is a whisper, not a syllable of its own.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

la lune is feminine, so it takes la, the article you already know. It comes from Latin lūna, which English kept in a small family:

- lunar — of the Moon
- lunation — one full cycle of it
- lunatic — someone the Moon was believed to have unsettled, back when moonlight was thought to disturb the mind

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "lune" — lün, lips rounded and tongue forward
- "la lune" — feminine, so la
- "lune" then English "lunar, lunatic" — the same lūna

Before you move on

How do you say the Moon? (la lune, la lün.) Which article does it take, and why? (la — the word is feminine.) How do you make the French u? (Say "ee," then round the lips without moving the tongue.) Next: the day named after it.

7.2 lundi — Monday

You have the Moon. Add one ending and you have the first day of the week — and, with it, the second half of five more words.

Sounds you'll need

- lundi = luh(n)-DEE, opening with the nasal un you met in the number un.
- The weight falls on the second syllable. French leans on the end of a word where English leans near the front: MON-day against lun-DI.

Grammar Lens: every weekday ends in "day"

Every French weekday ends in -di, always said DEE. That -di is Latin diēs, "day" — the same word English puts at the end of Monday, and French puts at the end too.
So a French weekday reads as "[god]'s day," the god in front and the day behind:

> lundi = lūnae ("of the Moon") + diēs ("day") = the Moon's day

The Romans named each day for a planet-god, and the planets were the gods. Learn to hear that -di and half of five more words is already yours.

Why it's said this way

English Monday says the identical thing — Moon plus day — but out of Germanic parts rather than Latin ones. The two languages did not copy each other. They inherited the same Roman week and each translated it into its own words. That is why the days will keep lining up as we go, and why they will line up through their meanings rather than their sounds.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "lundi" — luh(n)-DEE, weight on the end
- it split — "lune" plus "-di": the Moon's day
- "lundi, Monday" — the same sentence in two languages

Before you move on

How do you say Monday? (lundi, luh(n)-DEE.) What does the -di mean, and from which Latin word? ("Day," from diēs.) What does lundi mean once you take it apart, and what does Monday mean? (Both: the Moon's day.) Next: the day of the war-god.

7.3 mardi — Tuesday

The second day carries the best story in the week: mardi and Tuesday look nothing alike and are, underneath, exactly the same word.

Sounds you'll need

- mardi = mar-DEE, with the r made at the back of the throat, as in quatre.
- The familiar -di closes it, so only the first syllable is new.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mardi is Latin Martis diēs, "the day of Mars" — the god of war, and the red planet named for him.

Why it's said this way

English Tuesday is named for Tiw, the Germanic war-god. French mardi is named for Mars, the Roman one. Different gods, different sounds — and the same day, because it is the same slot in the same week.

Here is how that happened. The Romans mapped their gods onto the planets and named the days for them. When the week reached the Germanic-speaking peoples, they did not borrow the Roman names; they swapped in their own gods, matching them role for role. Scholars call that interpretatio germanica: translating a pantheon rather than a word.

So the two languages will keep agreeing about which god each day belongs to while disagreeing about that god's name. Once you know that, every remaining weekday has an English key.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mardi" — mar-DEE, the r at the back of the throat
- "lundi, mardi" — the first two, both ending DEE
- the bridge — "mardi is Mars, Tuesday is Tiw, both the war-god"

Before you move on

How do you say Tuesday? (mardi, mar-DEE.) Which god is it named for? (Mars, the war-god.) Why do mardi and Tuesday line up despite sharing no sound? (Same day, same role — Latin used Mars, the Germanic peoples put in their own war-god Tiw.) Next: the messenger's day.

7.4 mercredi — Wednesday

The longest day-name of the week, and the first place to try the key you were handed: find the god, and English will tell you the day.

Sounds you'll need

- mercredi = mair-kruh-DEE, three syllables with the weight at the end.
- Two throat-r sounds in one word, one in each of the first two syllables. Take it slowly; this word is worth drilling on its own.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mercredi is Latin Mercuriī diēs, "the day of Mercury" — the messenger of the gods, and the swiftest planet. English kept the god's name in mercurial, "quick-changing," and gave it to the metal that runs like water.

Why it's said this way

Apply the key from mardi. English Wednesday is Woden's day — and Woden is the god the Romans matched to Mercury, both of them travellers, guides and carriers of the dead. Same day, same role, two names. English still spells the d it stopped pronouncing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mercredi" — mair-kruh-DEE, slowly, both r sounds at the back

- "lundi, mardi, mercredi" — three down
- the key again — "Mercury for the Romans, Woden for the Germanic peoples, one day"

Before you move on

How do you say Wednesday? (mercredi, mair-kruh-DEE.) Which god is it named for? (Mercury, the messenger.) Which god does English name the same day for? (Woden — the god Rome matched to Mercury.) Next: the day of the king of the gods.

7.5 jeudi — Thursday

The fourth day belongs to the king of the gods, and it introduces the sound most people get wrong on their first attempt at French.

Sounds you'll need

- `j-zh` — the French j is the soft buzz in the middle of English measure or vision. It is never the hard j of jam.
- `vowel-eu` — the rounded eu you learned in deux.
- Together: jeudi = zheu-DEE.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jeudi is Latin Jovis diēs, "the day of Jove" — Jove being the other name of Jupiter, king of the gods and the largest planet. English keeps Jove in the phrase by Jove, and keeps the god's temperament in jovial: cheerful, the way people born under Jupiter were said to be.

Why it's said this way

The key once more. English Thursday is Thor's day — Thor, the thunder-god, matched to Jupiter, who also threw the lightning. Two pantheons, one sky-king, one day. Every weekday so far has agreed on the god's job and disagreed on the god's name.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "jeudi" — zheu-DEE, the soft j of "measure"
- "mercredi, jeudi" — the pair
- the bridge — "Jupiter and Thor, both the thunder-king, one day"

Before you move on

How do you say Thursday? (jeudi, zheu-DEE.) What English sound is the French j? (The buzz in measure, never the j of jam.) Which god is jeudi named for, and which god does Thursday name? (Jupiter, or Jove — and Thor.) Next: the day of the morning star.

7.6 vendredi — Friday

The fifth day closes the planet-week, and it is the only one named for a goddess.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-en` — the opening en is nasal, sent through the nose like the un of lundi but with the mouth more open. So vendredi = van-druh-DEE.
- The r is the throat-r again, and the ending is the familiar DEE.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vendredi is Latin Veneris diēs, "the day of Venus" — goddess of love and the brightest thing in the sky after the Sun and Moon. Her name is still in English venerate, "to hold in reverence."

Why it's said this way

The last application of the key, and the cleanest. English Friday is Frigg's day — Frigg, the Germanic goddess of love and marriage, matched to Venus. Five days, five gods, and every single pairing made by role.
That is the whole planet-week: lundi the Moon, mardi Mars, mercredi Mercury, jeudi Jupiter, vendredi Venus. Two days are left, and neither of them is a planet — which is the next surprise.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vendredi" — van-druh-DEE, the en through the nose
- the work week — "lundi, mardi, mercredi, jeudi, vendredi"
- each as a god — "Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus"

Twice through: the five weekdays, in order

Before you move on

How do you say Friday? (vendredi, van-druh-DEE.) Which goddess is it named for, and who does English name it for? (Venus — and Frigg.) Give the five planet-days in order. (Lundi, mardi, mercredi, jeudi, vendredi.) Next: the two days where the planets stop.

7.7 samedi — Saturday

Five days named for planets — and then two that are not. The weekend is where religion overwrote astronomy, and French shows both layers.

Sounds you'll need

- samedi = sam-DEE. The a is open, and the middle e is so light it nearly disappears: two syllables in practice, not three.
- `nasal-none` — the am here is not nasal, because the m is followed by a vowel that pulls it into the next syllable.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

samedi still carries the -di of diēs, so the shape of the week holds. What changed is the first half. It is sambatī diēs, from Latin Sabbatum, which is Hebrew shabbāt — "to cease, to rest."

Not a god. An instruction.

Why it's said this way

By the Roman pattern this should have been Saturn's day — and in English it still is. Saturday is the one weekday English kept a Roman god for, while replacing the other four with Germanic ones.
French did the reverse. It kept the Roman gods on the weekdays and let this one go: Latin-speaking Christians took the Jewish Sabbath and put it here, so the planet was written over by the rest-day.
So Saturday and samedi are the same day under two ideas — the planet against the Sabbath — and the two languages swapped exactly which half of the week they preserved.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "samedi" — sam-DEE, the middle e almost gone
- "vendredi, samedi" — the pair
- the contrast — "samedi is the Sabbath, Saturday is Saturn"

Before you move on

How do you say Saturday? (samedi, sam-DEE.) Where does the first half come from? (The Sabbath — Latin Sabbatum, Hebrew shabbāt, "to rest.") Which planet-god does English keep on this day that French dropped? (Saturn.) Next: the last day, where even the -di moves.

7.8 dimanche — Sunday

Six days have ended in -di. The seventh breaks the pattern in public — and once you see how, it is not a break at all.

Sounds you'll need

- `ch-sh` — the French ch is sh, as in English machine. Never ch as in church.

- `nasal-an` — the an is nasal, the same open nasal as the en of vendredi: French spells that one sound two ways.
- Together: dimanche = dee-MAHNSH.

Grammar Lens: the ending that moved to the front

Look at the first two letters. Dimanche. That is the same *diēs every other day of the week ends with, sitting at the front instead.

diēs Dominica → di-manche → dimanche

Latin let the two words come in either order, and for this one day the order that survived is "day of the Lord" rather than "the Lord's day." So the pattern did not break; it flipped. All seven days still carry diēs, and dimanche is the only one that wears it where you can see it first.

Why it's said this way

Dominica comes from Dominus, "lord, master" — which English holds in dominion, dominate, and, worn much smoother, dame. English kept Sunday, the star. French dropped it entirely for "the Lord's day." Put beside samedi, that makes the weekend two different rewrites of the same Roman week:

- samedi — the planet replaced by the Sabbath, a day of rest
- dimanche — the Sun replaced by the Lord, a day of worship

Five days of Roman sky, then two days where a later faith wrote over it. The French week is a record of both.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dimanche ← Old French diemenche ← Latin dies Dominica, "the Lord's day" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dimanche" — dee-MAHNSH, the ch as sh

- "samedi, dimanche" — the weekend
- the whole week — "lundi, mardi, mercredi, jeudi, vendredi, samedi, dimanche"

Before you move on

How do you say Sunday? (dimanche, dee-MAHNSH.) Where did its diēs go? (To the front — diēs Dominica.) What does it mean literally? ("The Lord's day.") What does English keep on this day that French dropped? (The Sun.) Next: the whole week, run together.

7.9 Practice — the whole week

Seven days, taken one at a time. Now put them in a row and make the row automatic — a week you have to assemble is a week you cannot use.

Your turn: the seven, in order

Read down the column, then cover the right-hand side and read down the left:

French	English
lundi	Monday
mardi	Tuesday
mercredi	Wednesday
jeudi	Thursday
vendredi	Friday
samedi	Saturday
dimanche	Sunday

Twice through: the seven days, in order

Then start from jeudi and go round to mercredi. A list you can only say from the top is a list you have memorised rather than learned.

Your turn: name the god

Five of the seven still name a planet. Say each day, then what is inside it:

- lundi — la lune, the Moon

- mardi — Mars
- mercredi — Mercury
- jeudi — Jupiter
- vendredi — Venus

Every one of those ends in -di, Latin diēs, "day."

What you've built this chapter

- the -di rule — every weekday ends in Latin diēs, "day," so half of five words came free.
- the planet week — Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, named by Rome.
- the key to English — Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday name the same gods by their Germanic names, matched role for role. The days agree about the god's job and disagree about the god's name.
- the weekend rewrite — samedi is the Sabbath where English keeps Saturn; dimanche is the Lord's day where English keeps the Sun. And in dimanche the diēs moved to the front.

Before you move on

Give the seven days without stopping. Now start from jeudi. What does the -di mean? ("Day," Latin diēs.) Which two days are not named for a planet, and what replaced them? (samedi, the Sabbath; dimanche, the Lord's day.) Why do mardi and Tuesday mean the same thing? (Same day, same role — the war-god, called Mars in Latin and Tiw in Germanic.)

Chapter 8

Telling the Time

Modes: voice (8) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 8 of 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for and tell the time in French.
>
> One noun, one frame and three small additions. heure is the same word as English hour, both from Latin hora and both keeping an h neither language ever said; il est … heures counts the hours where English says o'clock; and midi and minuit are one idea used twice, the middle of the day and the middle of the night.

8.1 heure — the hour

With your numbers in hand you are one word away from telling the time. This is that word — and it turns out you have been saying it in English your whole life.

Sounds you'll need

- `silent-h` — the h of heure is silent, exactly as in English hour. Say eur.
- `liaison-z` — because the word begins with a vowel sound, the number in front links straight onto it. That is the liaison you met counting: deux heures = deu-z-eur, trois heures = troi-z-eur.

The silent h is why the liaison happens at all. A written h that is never pronounced is not a consonant in the way; the number hears a vowel and reaches for it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

heure comes from Latin hōra, which came from Greek hōrā. The Greek word did not mean "hour." It meant a period, a season, the right time — the goddesses of the seasons were the Horae. Latin narrowed it to a fixed slice of the day, and French wore hōra down to heure. English took the same Latin hōra and made hour. So heure and hour are one word spelt two ways — and the silent h in both is a fossil of the Latin spelling that neither language ever said aloud.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "heure" — eur, no h at all
- "deux heures" — deu-z-eur, the number linking on
- "trois heures, six heures, dix heures" — hear the z each time

Before you move on

How do you say hour? (heure, eur.) Why does a number link onto it with a z? (The h is silent, so the word starts with a vowel sound.) What did the Greek hōrā originally mean? (A season, the right time — the Horae were the season-goddesses.) Next: the frame that puts a number in front of it.

8.2 il est ... heures — telling the clock

One word for the hour, one small frame to hang it in, and the clock is yours. Take the frame whole for now — it never changes.

Grammar Lens: French counts the hours

To say the time, French uses a fixed opening — il est — then the number, then heures:

il est + number + heures

Il est deux heures. Read it literally and it says "it is two hours." French counts the hours. English does something stranger and then hides it: two o'clock is a worn-down two of the clock, which counted the hours too before it shrank.
Learn il est as one unbreakable piece for now. It is the same it is that English uses for weather and time — a subject that stands for nothing in particular — and you will meet the verb inside it properly later.

Sounds you'll need

- il est = *eel-eh. The final t of est is silent on its own.
- But before heures, with its silent h, that t wakes up and links: il est une heure = eel eh-t-ün-eur. Another liaison, the same instinct as deux heures.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

il est ... heures — il ← Latin ille, "that"; est is Latin est, "is"; heure ← Latin hora, "hour". All three are inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "il est" — eel-eh, no t sounded
- "Il est deux heures." — eel eh deu-z-eur
- "Il est six heures. Il est dix heures."

Twice through: "Il est deux heures."

Before you move on

What frame tells the time in French? (il est + number + heures.)
What does Il est deux heures say literally? ("It is two hours.")
What is English o'clock worn down from? (Of the clock — which counted hours too.) Next: the one hour that takes a different ending.

8.3 une heure — one o'clock

Eleven of the twelve hours behave identically. One does not, and the reason is a rule you already met on a different word.

Grammar Lens: one hour, two hours

heure is a feminine noun, so "one" in front of it is une, not un — the same gendered "one" you learned counting. And because the noun counts, it takes a plural -s from two upwards:

- Il est une heure. — one o'clock. One hour, so no -s.
- Il est deux heures. — two o'clock. Two hours, so -s.

Now listen rather than read. That -s is silent, like every plural -s in French. Une heure and deux heures end in the identical sound. The plural is visible on the page and inaudible in the air — what your ear actually uses to tell them apart is the number in front, which is why French never drops it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Il est une heure." — eel eh-t-ün-eur
- "Il est deux heures." — eel eh deu-z-eur
- both again and notice the ending never changes — only the number does

Before you move on

How do you say one o'clock? (Il est une heure — une, because heure is feminine.) When does heure take an -s? (From two upwards.) Can you hear that -s? (No — it is silent, so the number carries the count.) Next: the two hours that refuse a number altogether.

8.4 midi — noon

Two hours in the day do not get a number. They get a name, because they are the pivots the rest of the day turns on. Here is the first.

Sounds you'll need

- midi = mee-DEE, two clean syllables with the weight at the end.
- Both vowels are the tight French i of machine, never the i of sit.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

midi is Latin medius diēs, "the middle day," and both halves are still visible:

> mi- ("middle," from medius) + -di (diēs, "day") = the day's middle

You already own the second half. That -di is the same diēs that ends lundi and mardi — here it has come round to the front of a different word. And medius is the English medium, median, mid and middle, all one family.

Grammar Lens: a name instead of a number

Because midi is the hour, it does not take heures. Drop the number and drop the noun:

> Il est midi. — "It is noon."

Not "it is twelve hours" with a number in the slot. The frame stays; what goes into it is a name.

Why it's said this way

English noon is Latin nōna hōra, "the ninth hour" — which in Roman reckoning was the middle of the afternoon. Over centuries the meal it named crept earlier, and the word came with it until it landed on midday and stopped. So English says noon and means "the ninth hour"; French says midi and means what it says.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "midi" — mee-DEE
- "Il est midi." — no number, no heures
- it split — "mi- plus -di: the day's middle"

Before you move on

How do you say noon? (midi, mee-DEE.) What are its two halves? (mi-, "middle," and -di, diēs, "day.") Where have you met that -di before? (Ending lundi and mardi.) Why is there no heures after it? (Midi is the hour.) Next: its opposite number.

8.5 minuit — midnight

The second pivot, and it is built from a word you have had since the very first chapter.

Sounds you'll need

- minuit = mee-NWEE. The ui is a single gliding sound, wee, not two vowels taken in turn.
- The final t is silent, as it is in nuit itself.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

minuit is Latin media nox, "the middle night," and the two halves are as plain as they were in midi:

> mi- ("middle," medius again) + -nuit (nox, "night") = the night's middle

The second half is the nuit you learned in your first week. Latin nox has the stem noct-, which English carries in nocturnal and, straight through its Germanic side, in night itself.
So the two pivots of the French day are one idea applied twice: the middle of the day, and the middle of the night. English builds midday and midnight out of exactly the same two pieces.

Grammar Lens: the same rule as midi

minuit is the hour, so no number and no heures:

Il est minuit. — "It is midnight."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "minuit" — mee-NWEE, the ui as one glide
- "Il est midi. Il est minuit." — the two pivots
- both split — "the day's middle, the night's middle"

Before you move on

How do you say midnight? (minuit, mee-NWEE.) What are its two halves? (mi-, "middle," and nuit, "night," from Latin nox.) Which English word carries the noct- stem? (Nocturnal.) Say both pivots. (Il est midi. Il est minuit.) Next: the quarter hour.

8.6 et quart — quarter past

Whole hours are not enough to make an appointment. Three small additions finish the clock, and the first is already half-known to you from counting.

Sounds you'll need

- quart = kar. The qu- is a plain k, and the final t is silent.
- The r is the throat-r, as in quatre.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quart is "a fourth part," and it comes from the same Latin quattuor that gave you quatre. English took the identical word and made quarter — a fourth of an hour, a fourth of a gallon, a fourth of a town. Once you see quatre inside quart, it stops being a new word and becomes a number you already have, doing a different job.

Grammar Lens: adding to the hour

French adds the quarter with et ("and"), after the hour:

> Il est deux heures et quart. — "It is a quarter past two."

Read literally: "it is two hours and a quarter." French does not say "past"; it adds.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quart" — kar, no t
- "Il est deux heures et quart."
- "quatre, quart" — the number and the fourth part, one root

Before you move on

How do you say a quarter? (quart, kar.) Which number is it built on? (quatre — Latin quattuor.) How do you say quarter past two? (Il est deux heures et quart.) Next: the half hour.

8.7 et demie — half past

Same move as the quarter, a different fraction — and a spelling that tells you something about the word it leans on.

Sounds you'll need

- demie = duh-MEE. The first e is the light, almost-swallowed vowel you met in the middle of samedi.
- The final -e is silent, so demie and demi sound identical.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

demie comes from Latin dimidius, "halved" — literally di- ("apart") plus medius, the "middle" you have now met twice, in midi and minuit. To halve a thing is to cut it at its middle.

English borrowed the French form as the prefix demi-: a demigod is half a god, a demitasse is half a cup.

Grammar Lens: why it is demie and not demi

The -e on the end is agreement. It follows heure, which is feminine, so the half agrees with it and takes a feminine -e:

> Il est deux heures et demie. — "It is half past two."

After midi and minuit, which are masculine, it drops the -e:

> Il est midi et demi. — "It is half past twelve."

Your ear cannot tell them apart; the page can. That is the same silent-agreement pattern as the plural -s on heures.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "demie" — duh-MEE
- "Il est deux heures et demie."
- "Il est midi et demi." — masculine, so no -e on the page

Before you move on

How do you say half past two? (Il est deux heures et demie.) Why does demie carry an -e? (It agrees with heure, which is feminine.) What is inside Latin dimidius? (Medius — the same "middle" as in midi.) Next: the one that subtracts.

8.8 moins le quart — quarter to

Twice now you have added to the hour. The last piece of the clock does the opposite, and it does it with a word you can read on a calculator.

Sounds you'll need

- moins = mwa(n). The oi is wa, as in trois, and the in is nasal, as in cinq.
- The final s is silent. Two familiar sounds and one silent letter — nothing in this word is new.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

moins is Latin minus, and it means exactly what minus means: less, taken away. English uses the Latin form untouched for subtraction, and keeps the same root in minor, minimum and diminish.

Grammar Lens: French subtracts from the next hour

To say "quarter to," French does not look back at the hour that has passed. It names the hour coming, and takes the quarter off it:

> Il est trois heures moins le quart. — "It is a quarter to three."

Literally: "it is three hours minus the quarter." English does the same arithmetic and hides it behind the word to; French shows its working. So the three additions to the hour are one small system:

- et quart — the hour, plus a quarter
- et demie — the hour, plus a half
- moins le quart — the next hour, minus a quarter

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "moins" — mwa(n), no s
- "Il est trois heures moins le quart."
- the three in a row — "deux heures et quart, deux heures et demie, trois heures moins le quart"

Before you move on

How do you say quarter to three? (Il est trois heures moins le quart.) Which hour does French name in that sentence, the one gone or the one coming? (The one coming — it subtracts from it.) What Latin word is moins? (Minus.) Next: the whole clock, put to use.

8.9 Practice — reading the clock

One frame, one noun and three small additions. Put them together and you can say any time on a clock face.

Your turn: whole hours

Put each of these into the frame — Il est … — then cover the right column and read back from the left:

French	English
une heure	one o'clock
deux heures	two o'clock
six heures	six o'clock
dix heures	ten o'clock

Twice through: the four whole hours, each inside Il est …

Listen for the liaison each time: ün-eur, deu-z-eur, see-z-eur, dee-z-eur.

Your turn: the two that take a name

- Il est midi. — noon, "the day's middle"
- Il est minuit. — midnight, "the night's middle"

No number and no heures: each of them is the hour.

Your turn: the parts of the hour

French	English
deux heures et quart	quarter past two deux heures et demie	half past two trois heures moins le quart	quarter to three midi et demi	half past twelve

Say all four inside the frame and hear the clock move. The third names the hour ahead and subtracts from it.

What you've built this chapter

- heure — the same word as English hour, both Latin hōra, both keeping a silent h neither language ever pronounced.
- il est ... heures — French counts the hours; English says o'clock.
- agreement you cannot hear — une heure against deux heures, et demie against et demi. The page shows it; the ear uses the number in front.
- midi and minuit — one idea twice: the middle of the day and of the night, with the -di of lundi and the nuit of your first chapter.
- adding and subtracting — et quart, et demie, moins le quart.

Before you move on

Say one o'clock, then two. (Il est une heure. Il est deux heures.) Say noon and midnight, and what each means literally. (Midi, the day's middle; minuit, the night's middle.) Say quarter past two, half past two, quarter to three. Which of those names an hour that has not arrived? (Quarter to — moins le quart subtracts.) Why do heure and hour both carry a silent h? (Both are Latin hōra, where it was already silent.)

Chapter 9

The Months: Gods and Beginnings

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the first six months in French and say which Roman figure each one carries.
>
> Six months, and not one of them is a number. The calendar is a procession of Roman gods and festivals carried almost unchanged out of Latin – Janus in the doorway of the year, the Februa that cleaned the city before it turned, and the war-god who already owns a weekday.

9.1 janvier — January

The week was a map of the sky. The calendar is a procession of Roman gods and emperors, carried almost unchanged out of Latin — and it opens with the one god who faces both ways at once.

Sounds you'll need

- `j-zh` — the soft j of measure, the one you met in jeudi.
- `nasal-an` — the an is nasal.
- Together: janvier = zhan-vee-AY, three syllables, weight at the end.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

janvier is Latin Januarius, "the month of Janus."
Janus is the god of doorways — of gates, of thresholds, of any moment where one thing stops and another starts. He is carved with two faces, one looking back and one looking forward, because that is what a doorway is.
Put the first month of the year in his care and the name explains itself: the month that stands in the door, looking back at the year that closed and forward into the one opening. English January is the identical word; a janitor was once a doorkeeper, from the same janua, "door."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "janvier" — zhan-vee-AY, the soft j of jeudi
- the god — "Janus, two faces, the doorway of the year"
- "janvier" then English "January, janitor" — one door-god in all three

Before you move on

How do you say January? (janvier, zhan-vee-AY.) Which god is it named for, and what is he god of? (Janus — doorways, beginnings.) Why does he have two faces? (One looks back, one looks forward — the year's threshold.) Next: the month named for a washing.

9.2 février — February

Eleven of the twelve months are named for a god, an emperor or a number. This one is named for a festival — and specifically for a cleaning.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-e-acute` — the é is a tight, bright ay, said with the mouth narrow. It is the accent that tells you the vowel is that one and no other.

- février = fay-vree-AY. The r is the throat-r, and the ending is the same -AY as janvier.

Why it's said this way

février is Latin Februarius, from the Februa — a Roman festival of purification held in this month.
That placement is the interesting part. The old Roman year began in March, so February was the last month, and the city cleaned itself before the year turned. The month is named for the scrubbing that came before the fresh start.
English February is the same word, and English speakers have been quietly dropping its first r for centuries.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "février" — fay-vree-AY, the é bright and narrow
- "janvier, février" — the first two, both ending -AY
- the reason — "the Februa, the cleaning before the year turned"

Before you move on

How do you say February? (février, fay-vree-AY.) What is it named after? (The Februa, a festival of purification.) Why did a cleaning-festival fall at the end of the year? (The Roman year began in March, so February closed it.) Next: a month you already know as a day.

9.3 mars — March

This one you have already half-learned, in a different part of the calendar. The war-god who owns Tuesday also owns a month.

Sounds you'll need

- mars = marss. The final s is sounded here — one of the small set of French words that keeps it.

- Do not read it as English Mars, which has a different vowel; the French a is open and flat.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mars is Latin Martius, the month of Mars, the war-god.
Now put it beside the weekday:

- mars — Martius, his month
- mardi — Martis diēs, his day

The same god, twice in the calendar. Spot one and you already know the other, which is the first time a French word has paid you back in two different systems at once. English keeps the god's name in martial, "of war," and in the planet Mars.

Why it's said this way

March was the first month of the old Roman year. That single fact has now explained three separate things you have met: why février's cleaning festival came at the end, why the counting months land two places late, and why the war-god gets the opening of the year — campaigning season began when the weather turned.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mars" — marss, the s sounded
- the pair — "mars, mardi": his month and his day
- "janvier, février, mars" — the first three

Before you move on

How do you say March? (mars, marss, with the s.) Which god is it named for? (Mars, the war-god.) Which weekday is named for the same god, and what is the difference between the two words? (mardi — Martis diēs, his day; mars is Martius, his month.) Which month opened the old Roman year? (March.) Next: the month the buds open.

9.4 avril — April

Every month so far has had a firm answer behind it. This one has a guess — and the guess is old enough that the Romans were already making it.

Sounds you'll need

- avril = a-VREEL. Two syllables; the r sits at the back of the throat, and the i is the tight vowel of machine.
- The final l is sounded.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avril is Latin Aprilis, and where Aprilis came from is genuinely uncertain. The oldest guess, and still the best one, is Latin aperīre, "to open" — the month the buds open.
It is worth noticing that this is a guess, and saying so. A book that hands you a confident story for every word is inventing some of them. English aperture, an opening, comes from that same aperīre, so if the guess is right, an aperture and April are the same idea: something unclosing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "avril" — a-VREEL, the l sounded
- "mars, avril" — the pair
- the guess — "aperīre, to open; the buds open"

Before you move on

How do you say April? (avril, a-VREEL.) What is the best guess at its root, and what does it mean? (aperīre, "to open.") How certain is that? (Not very — it is a guess, and an ancient one.) Next: the goddess of growing.

9.5 mai — May

The shortest month-name in French, and one of the shortest words you have met: three letters, one syllable.

Sounds you'll need

- `ai-y` — the pair ai is a single sound, close to the e of English bed. So mai = may, in one beat. Neither letter is heard on its own.
- This is the same ai you will meet again and again; it is one of the most common vowel pairs in French, and it never splits.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mai is Latin Maius, the month of Maia — an old Italic goddess of growth and increase, worshipped long before the Romans wrote much down about her.
Her name is thought to sit on the same root as Latin maior, "greater," which English carries in major, majority and mayor. If that is right, then mai is the growing month in the plainest sense: the one where things get bigger.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "mai" — may, one beat, the ai never split
- "avril, mai" — the pair
- the goddess — "Maia, growth; and maior, greater"

Before you move on

How do you say May? (mai, may.) What sound does the pair ai make? (One sound, close to the e of bed — never two.) Which goddess is the month named for, and what is she goddess of? (Maia — growth.) Next: the queen of the gods.

9.6 juin — June

The sixth month closes the half-year, and it belongs to the one figure in the calendar who outranks everybody else in it.

Sounds you'll need

- `j-zh` — the soft j again, as in jeudi and janvier.
- `nasal-in` — the in is nasal, as in cinq.
- Together: juin = zhwa(n), one syllable. It is shorter than it looks.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

juin is Latin Junius, the month of Juno — queen of the gods, wife of Jupiter, and the goddess of marriage.
That last detail still shows. June is the traditional wedding month across Europe because it was her month, and couples wanted her on their side.
You have already met her husband: jeudi, Jovis diēs, is Jupiter's day. So the calendar now holds both halves of the divine marriage — his day and her month.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "juin" — zhwa(n), one syllable
- "mai, juin" — the pair
- the couple — "juin is Juno's month, jeudi is Jupiter's day"

Before you move on

How do you say June? (juin, zhwa(n), one syllable.) Which goddess is it named for? (Juno, queen of the gods.) Why are weddings held in June? (She is the goddess of marriage, and it is her month.) Which day belongs to her husband? (jeudi — Jupiter's.) Next: the first six, run together.

9.7 Practice — the first half of the year

Six months, taken one at a time. Run them together now, then say what is inside each one.

Your turn: the six, in order

Read it: down the left, then cover the right and read back

French	English
janvier	January
février	February
mars	March
avril	April
mai	May
juin	June

Twice through: the six months, in order

Four of them end in that same unstressed -AY; mars and mai are the two short ones, and they are the two easiest to lose.

Your turn: name what is inside

Say each month, then the figure or thing behind it:

- janvier — Janus, the two-faced god of doorways
- février — the Februa, a festival of purification
- mars — Mars, the war-god (and mardi is his day)
- avril — perhaps aperīre, "to open," though nobody is certain
- mai — Maia, goddess of growth
- juin — Juno, queen of the gods

What you've built this chapter

- six month names, each of which is a Roman figure rather than a number.
- one word paying twice — mars and mardi are the same god's month and day, which is the first time a French word has cashed out in two systems.

- the old Roman year began in March, which has now explained three separate oddities: why a cleaning-festival names February, why the war-god opens the year, and why four months you have seen are counting two places out.

Before you move on

Give the six months without stopping. Now start from avril. Which month shares its god with a weekday, and which weekday? (mars — with mardi, both Mars.) Which month is named for a festival rather than a person? (février, the Februa.) Which one is a guess? (avril — perhaps aperīre, "to open.")

Chapter 10

The Months: Caesars and Counting

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name the last six months in French and explain why four of them are counting wrong.

Two men put their names on a calendar of gods, and the four months after them have been miscounting since long before either was born. juillet is Julius Caesar and août is the emperor Augustus — but neither added a month: Quintilis and Sextilis were renamed. What pushed septembre to décembre two places out was janvier and février, added at the front of a year that used to begin in March.

10.1 juillet — July

Six months named for gods and a festival. The next two are named for men — the only two months in the year that carry a person who actually lived.

Sounds you'll need

- `ill-mouille` — the ill in the middle is not an l sound at all. It is a y, as in English yes. This spelling is everywhere in French and it catches every beginner once.
- With the soft j of juin: juillet = zhwee-YAY.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

juillet is Latin Julius, and the Julius in question is Julius Caesar. He reformed the entire calendar — the Julian calendar is his, and it ran Europe for sixteen centuries. He did not add a month while doing it. The month was already there, and it was called Quintilis, "the 5th." After his death it was renamed in his honour, and Quintilis has not been heard since.
English July is the same name, worn down a different way from the same Julius.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "juillet" — zhwee-YAY; the ill is a y, never an l
- "juin, juillet" — both open with the soft j, and they are easy to confuse; say them back to back until they separate
- the man — "Julius Caesar: Quintilis, the 5th, renamed for him"

Before you move on

How do you say July? (juillet, zhwee-YAY.) What sound does the ill make? (A y, as in yes — never an l.) Who is it named for, and what did he do to the calendar? (Julius Caesar — he reformed it.) Did he add this month to the year? (No — it already existed as Quintilis, "the 5th," and was renamed for him.) Next: the emperor who copied him.

10.2 août — August

The most violently worn-down word in the French calendar. Four letters on the page, and barely two sounds in the mouth.

Sounds you'll need

- août = oot, and in much of France simply oo. The a is not sounded, and the final t is optional.
- `circumflex` — the little hat on the û is a gravestone. It marks a letter that used to be there and is gone: older French wrote aoust, and when the s fell silent the hat took its place.

You have met that hat before, on hôpital and forêt in English's hospital and forest. Wherever you see a circumflex, try putting an s after the vowel and see whether an English word appears.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

août is Latin Augustus, the first Roman emperor.
Julius Caesar had a month renamed for him. His heir Augustus, not to be outdone, had the next one renamed for himself: Sextilis, "the 6th," became Augustus.
Note what neither man did. Neither one added a month. Quintilis and Sextilis were already sitting in the year; the two most powerful men in Rome simply took the two of them and wrote their own names over the top. The calendar did not get longer. Two of its months just stopped being numbers and started being people.

Why it's said this way

Ten of the twelve months are a god, a festival or a number. Two are people.
Julius and Augustus put themselves among the gods, in the most public place available — the calendar everybody has to say out loud. They did not need to build anything to do it; they only had to rename what was there. Two thousand years later, France still says both their names every summer, and nobody thinks of either man while doing it. That is what winning looks like at scale.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "août" — oot, and hear how little of the spelling survives
- "juillet, août" — the two men, back to back
- the hat — "aoust lost its s, and the circumflex marks the grave"

Before you move on

How do you say August? (août — oot, or simply oo.) What does the circumflex mark? (A lost letter — here an s, from older aoust.) Who are the two months named for people? (Julius Caesar and the emperor Augustus.) Did either of them add a month to the year? (No — they renamed two that already existed, Quintilis and Sextilis, "the 5th" and "the 6th.") Next: the four that are still counting.

10.3 septembre — September

You met this word while counting, as the proof that sept means seven. Now take it as a month in its own right.

Sounds you'll need

- septembre = sep-TAHM-bruh. The em in the middle is nasal, and the closing -re is barely a syllable.
- All four of the counting months end this same way, so learning it once buys you four.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

septembre is Latin september, "the seventh" — from septem, the seven you can already count with.

You know why it sits ninth: the old Roman year began in March, so counting from there, september really was the seventh. Then janvier and février were added at the front of the year — centuries before either Caesar was born — and every month behind them slid two places without being renamed. The name never caught up.

That is worth being exact about, because the story is usually told wrong. It was not Julius and Augustus. They renamed two months in the middle and added nothing; the damage was done long before them, at the front of the year.

What is new here is the word: septembre is now yours as a month, not only as evidence about a number.

English September is the identical Latin word, carrying the identical mistake.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "septembre" — sep-TAHM-bruh, the em through the nose
- "sept, septembre" — the number and the month it hides in
- "août, septembre" — the emperor, then the month that miscounts for an older reason

Before you move on

How do you say September? (septembre, sep-TAHM-bruh.) What number is inside it? (sept, seven — Latin septem.) Which month is it actually? (The ninth.) What put it two places out — the emperors, or something older? (Older: janvier and février were added at the front of a year that used to begin in March.) Next: the eighth month, which is the tenth.

10.4 octobre — October

Of the four counting months, this is the one that rescues a number you could no longer see.

Sounds you'll need

- octobre = ok-TOH-bruh. The o sounds are both closer to English taught than to toe.
- Same -bruh ending as septembre.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

octobre is Latin october, "the eighth," from octō.
Here is why this word matters more than the other three. When you learned to count, octō had been battered past recognition on its way to huit — the c gone, the vowels softened, a written h propped on the front. The number kept none of its ancestry.
The month kept all of it. Oct- stands there in plain sight, exactly as Latin left it, and English octave, octagon and octopus stand beside it. The eight vanished from the number and survived in the calendar.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "octobre" — ok-TOH-bruh
- the contrast — "huit, octobre": the same eight, unrecognisable and intact
- "septembre, octobre" — the pair

Before you move on

How do you say October? (octobre, ok-TOH-bruh.) What number is inside it? (octō, eight.) Why is the eight easier to see here than in the number huit? (Huit wore its Latin away; the month kept it.) Next: the ninth, which is the eleventh.

10.5 novembre — November

The third of the four, and by now you can predict both the shape and the arithmetic.

Sounds you'll need

- novembre = no-VAHM-bruh, the em nasal and the ending the same -bruh as the last two.
- Three months in a row have now ended identically. That is the pattern paying out.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

novembre is Latin november, "the ninth," from novem — the nine you count with as neuf.
Unlike huit, neuf still shows its Latin: novem to neuf is a short walk, and the nov- is right there in both. English keeps the same root in novena, a devotion of nine days.
Be careful of one false friend: Latin novus means "new," and English novel and novelty come from that, not from novem. Two similar roots, two different ideas. November is a count, not a newness.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "novembre" — no-VAHM-bruh
- "neuf, novembre" — the nine in both
- "septembre, octobre, novembre" — three in a row, one ending

Before you move on

How do you say November? (novembre, no-VAHM-bruh.) What number is inside it? (novem, nine — the neuf you count with.) Does it have anything to do with "new"? (No — that is Latin novus, a different root.) Next: the last of them, and the biggest number.

10.6 décembre — December

The twelfth month, and it says ten. This is the last and largest of the four miscounts, and after it the year closes.

Sounds you'll need

- décembre = day-SAHM-bruh. The é is the bright ay of février, the c before e is an s, and the em is nasal.
- The familiar -bruh closes it for the fourth and final time.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

décembre is Latin december, "the tenth," from decem.
That root is one of the most productive you have met. It gave you the number dix; it gives English decimal, decade and decimate; and it reached an American pocket as the dime, through Old French disme from Latin decima, "a tenth part."
So every December, in French and English alike, you say the Roman word for ten and mean the twelfth month. Spanish carries the identical fault: diciembre is decem too.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "décembre" — day-SAHM-bruh
- "dix, décembre, dime" — one Latin decem in three places
- all four — "septembre, octobre, novembre, décembre"

Before you move on

How do you say December? (décembre, day-SAHM-bruh.) What number is inside it? (decem, ten — the dix you count with.) Name two English words from the same root. (Decimal, decade, decimate — or the dime.) Next: all twelve, together.

10.7 Practice — the whole year

Twelve months, six at a time. Run the whole year now, and hear where it breaks.

Your turn: the twelve, in order

Read it: down the left, then cover the right and read back

French	English
janvier	January
février	February
mars	March
avril	April
mai	May
juin	June
juillet	July
août	August
septembre	September
octobre	October
novembre	November
décembre	December

Twice through: the twelve months, in order
Then start from juillet and go round to juin.

Your turn: the two hard pairs

Two pairs cause almost all the trouble. Drill them alone:

- juin / juillet — zhwa(n) against zhwee-YAY. Both open with the soft j and neither is long.
- mars / mai — marss against may. The two short ones, and the two most easily swallowed.

What you've built this chapter

- twelve month names, and the year runs end to end.
- two men in a calendar of gods — juillet for Julius Caesar, août for the emperor Augustus. Neither added a month: Quintilis and Sextilis, "the 5th" and "the 6th," were already there and were renamed.
- why the last four miscount — the Roman year began in March, and janvier and février were later added at the front, sliding septembre through décembre two places along. Their Latin names never caught up. The emperors get blamed for this and had nothing to do with it.
- a number rescued — octō is unrecognisable inside huit and perfectly legible inside octobre. When a word wears down, look for a longer relative that did not.

Before you move on

Give the twelve months without stopping. Now start from septembre. Which two are named for people, and who? (juillet, Julius Caesar; août, the emperor Augustus.) Did either add a month? (No — both were renamings.) So what pushed the counting months two places out? (janvier and février, added at the front of a year that began in March.) Which month shows a number that its own French numeral has lost? (octobre — the octō that vanished from huit.)

Chapter 11

The Four Seasons

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 4 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the four seasons in French and say that something happens in one of them.
>
> Four small Latin poems about heat, sleep and first things. printemps is prīmum tempus, "the first time"; été is aestās, "heat"; hiver is hībernum, the wintry season that gave English hibernate. And three seasons take en while spring takes au, for a reason that is not about seasons at all.

11.1 le printemps — spring

Twelve months name gods, emperors and numbers. The four seasons are something else entirely: four small Latin poems about heat, sleep and first things. Here is the first thing.

Sounds you'll need

- le printemps = luh pran-TAHN. Two nasal vowels in one word: the in of prin- and the em of -temps.
- Everything after that second nasal is silent. The -ps on the end is not said at all.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

printemps is two Latin words fused: prīmum tempus, "the first time."

> prin- = prīmum, "first" — English prime, primary, premier
> -temps = tempus, "time, season" — English temporal, tempo
>
> So spring is the year's prime time, and the French say so every time they name it. Older French used primevère, from the same prima vera, "first spring" — which Italian keeps to this day as primavera.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le printemps" — luh pran-TAHN, both vowels through the nose
- it split — "prīmum tempus: the first time"
- "décembre, printemps" — the year ending, then the year beginning
- "printemps" then Italian "primavera" — two names for one idea

Before you move on

How do you say spring? (le printemps, luh pran-TAHN.) What are its two halves? (prīmum, "first," and tempus, "time.") How many nasal vowels does it hold? (Two.) What does Italian call the same season? (Primavera — the same "first spring.") Next: the hot one.

11.2 l'été — summer

Spring was named for its place in the year. Summer is named for what it feels like.

Sounds you'll need

- été = ay-TAY. Both é are the bright, narrow ay you met in février.
- `elision` — the article does not stay le. Before a vowel sound it drops its own vowel and clamps on: le été is impossible, so it becomes l'été, said as one word, lay-TAY.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

été is Latin aestās, and aestās means "heat."
Not "the third season" or "the warm months" — just heat. Summer, in Latin and so in French, is named for the thing itself. English keeps the same root in estival, "of summer," and in aestivate, which is what an animal does when it sleeps through the hot season rather than the cold one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "l'été" — lay-TAY, one word, the article clamped on
- "le printemps, l'été" — hear the article change shape
- the meaning — "aestās: heat"

Before you move on

How do you say summer? (l'été, lay-TAY.) Why is it l' and not le? (The word starts with a vowel, so the article elides.) What does the Latin aestās mean? (Heat.) Next: the one English borrowed whole.

11.3 l'automne — autumn

Three of the four seasons are a Latin idea reshaped by French. This one is a Latin word that French barely touched, and then handed to English intact.

Sounds you'll need

- `diphthong-au` — the letter pair a-u is a single o sound, closer to English taught than to cow. It never sounds like ow.
- automne = o-TON. Here is the oddity worth knowing: the m is written and the n is not sounded — the spelling keeps a letter the mouth dropped.
- With elision: l'automne = lo-TON.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

automne is Latin autumnus, and unlike the other three seasons nobody is sure what autumnus originally meant. It may not even be Latin in origin.
What is certain is where it went. English took autumn from French, spelling and silent letter and all — which is why English writes an n it does not say in exactly the same place. Two languages carrying the identical silent letter, because one copied the other's spelling.
American English mostly prefers fall, a Germanic word for the leaves coming down; autumn is the French one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "l'automne" — lo-TON, the a-u a single o
- "l'été, l'automne" — both elide
- French "automne" then English "autumn" — the same silent letter twice

Before you move on

How do you say autumn? (l'automne, lo-TON.) What sound does a-u make? (A single o.) Which written letter is not pronounced, and does English do the same? (The n — and yes, English autumn copied the spelling from French.) Next: the cold one, and a bear.

11.4 l'hiver — winter

The last season, and it shares a root with the deepest sleep in the animal world.

Sounds you'll need

- `silent-h` — the h is silent, exactly as in heure. And because a silent h is no obstacle, the article elides straight through it: l'hiver, lee-VAIR.
- The r at the end is the throat-r, and it is sounded.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hiver is Latin hībernum, short for hībernum tempus — "the wintry season." Like printemps, it is a tempus phrase with the tempus worn off.
Now follow that root sideways. English hibernate is hībernāre, and it means, with no metaphor at all, "to spend the winter." A bear hibernating is a bear wintering.
So the same Latin word gave French a season and English a kind of sleep — one naming the time, the other naming what you do in it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "l'hiver" — lee-VAIR, the h silent and the article through it
- "heure, hiver" — two silent h, two elisions
- the pair — "hiver and hibernate: the season and the sleeping"

Before you move on

How do you say winter? (l'hiver, lee-VAIR.) Why does the article elide in front of an h? (The h is silent, so the word begins with a vowel sound.) What does English hibernate literally mean? ("To spend the winter.") Next: how to say you are in a season.

11.5 au printemps, en été — saying you are in a season

You have the four seasons. Now put something in one — and meet a rule with exactly one exception, which turns out not to be an exception at all.

Grammar Lens: three take en, one takes au

Three of the four use en:

en été · en automne · en hiver

And spring does not:

au printemps

Learn it as a list and it is an oddity to memorise. Look at the words and it stops being odd. Été, automne and hiver all begin with a vowel sound — that is why each of them elides its article to l'. Printemps begins with a consonant, and it is the only one that does. So the split is not about seasons at all. It is the same vowel-or-consonant question that decided le against l', asked one more time about a different little word. French keeps asking it, and once you hear it you stop needing the list.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three — "en été, en automne, en hiver"
- the one — "au printemps"
- the reason aloud — "three start with a vowel, one starts with a consonant"

Twice through: "au printemps, en été, en automne, en hiver"

Before you move on

How do you say "in summer"? (en été.) In winter? (en hiver.) In spring? (au printemps — not en.) And why is spring different? (It is the only season starting with a consonant; the other three begin with a vowel sound, which is also why they elide to l'.)

11.6 Practice — the turning year

Four seasons, four small Latin poems. Run them, then put a month inside each one.

Your turn: the four, in order

Read it: down the left, then cover the right and read back

French	English
le printemps	spring
l'été	summer
l'automne	autumn
l'hiver	winter

Twice through: the four seasons, in order

Notice which article each one carries. Three elide to *l' and one does not, and that single fact is about to do a second job.

Your turn: in a season

- au printemps — the consonant one
- en été · en automne · en hiver — the three vowel ones

Now join what you learned last chapter to what you learned this one. Say each month inside its season:

> en hiver — janvier, février · au printemps — mars, avril, mai en été — juin, juillet, août · en automne — septembre, octobre

What you've built this chapter

- four season names, each one a Latin sentence worn down to a word: printemps is "the first time," été is "heat," hiver is "the wintry season," and automne is a word so old nobody is sure of it.
- two of them still pay out in English — estival from aestās, and hibernate, which means, with no metaphor, "to spend the winter."
- au against en, and the reason behind it: printemps is the only season beginning with a consonant. It is the same vowel-or-consonant question that decided le against l', asked about a different word.

Before you move on

Give the four seasons. Which three take en, and which takes au? (En été, en automne, en hiver; au printemps.) Why? (Spring is the only one starting with a consonant.) What does printemps literally mean? ("The first time.") Which English word means "to spend the winter"? (Hibernate — from the same hībernum as hiver.)

Chapter 12

Family, and the Oldest Words We Have

Modes: voice (6) pen (1) Hands-free start: the first 5 of 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name the four closest family members in French, each with its article, and use one sound-law to recognise their English cousins.

Four words — père, mère, frère, sœur — and every one of them is older than Latin. Each also hands you an English word you already knew: paternal, maternal, fraternal, sorority. One sound-law, Grimm's p→f and t→th, turns père into father and frāter into brother in a single move, and the fused letter œ arrives here, in sœur and cœur.

12.1 le père — father

The calendar took you back two thousand years, to Rome. This word goes back further than Rome — further than Latin, further than any written language at all.

Sounds you'll need

- `e-grave` — the è is open, the mouth wider than for é. Think of the e in English bed, held a moment longer.
- `r-uvular` — the r is the French one, made at the back of the throat.

- Together: le père = luh PEHR, one syllable after the article.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

père is Latin pater, worn down by French mouths for fifteen centuries until only four letters were left.
pater itself is inherited, not invented. Behind it stands Proto-Indo-European ph₂tḗr — a word nobody ever wrote down, reconstructed from the shapes its descendants kept. Sanskrit pitṛ́, Greek patḗr, Latin pater: the same word, spoken across a continent, for longer than anyone can document.
English never borrowed père, but it borrowed pater itself, over and over, and left it visible every time:

- paternal, paternity — "of a father"
- patron — a man who stands to you as a father would
- patriarch, expatriate, patrimony

So the French word is short and the English cousins are long, and they are the same word. When père looks like nothing you know, say paternal and the p and the t are still there.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le père" — luh PEHR, the è open and the r in the throat
- the ladder — "*ph$_2$tḗr, pater, père"
- "père → paternal, patron" — the p and t still standing

Before you move on

How do you say "the father"? (le père, luh PEHR.) Which article does it take, and what does that tell you? (le — it is masculine.) What Latin word is it? (pater.) Name two English words with that pater still inside them. (paternal, patron — also paternity, patriarch.) Next: the other half of the pair.

12.2 la mère — mother

The same word, one letter different, one article different — and a much stranger set of English cousins waiting at the end of it.

Sounds you'll need

- la mère = lah MEHR. The vowel is the identical open è you just met in père; only the first consonant changes.
- Say them back to back — père, mère — and hear that the rhyme is exact. That rhyme is not a coincidence; it is two inherited words worn down by the same mouths in the same way.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mère is Latin māter, from Proto-Indo-European méh₂tēr.
The obvious English cousins are the ones you would guess:

- maternal, maternity — "of a mother"
- matron, matriarch, alma mater

And then there is one nobody guesses. Latin took māter and built materia from it — originally the usable wood of a tree, the growing part, the stuff a mother-trunk yields. Roman writers then stretched materia to mean the stuff anything is made of, and English inherited it twice over:

- material — what a thing is made of
- matter — stuff itself, the physical world

So when a physicist says matter, the word underneath is mother. That is the kind of thing etymology is for: not a party trick, but a reminder that abstract vocabulary is almost always a concrete word that travelled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la mère" — lah MEHR

- the pair — "le père, la mère"; the rhyme is exact, the articles are not
- the surprising one — "māter → materia → matter"

Before you move on

How do you say "the mother"? (la mère, lah MEHR.) Which article, and why is it not the same as père's? (la — mère is feminine.) Give both parents together. (le père, la mère.) Which everyday English word for physical stuff comes from māter? (matter — through materia, the wood a tree yields.) Next: why English says father where French says père.

12.3 père / father — one sound-law

You have met two words that mean what English father and mother mean, and look almost nothing like them. That is about to stop being true.

Grammar Lens: the same word went down two roads

French took pater and māter straight from Latin. English did not borrow them from anybody. It inherited the very same Proto-Indo-European words down a different branch of the family — and on that branch, one systematic change hit every word at once. It is called Grimm's law, and the part that matters here is short: p became f, and t became th.

Apply it and watch the disguise fall off. Each row is one inherited word, shown first as it is reconstructed, then down each of the two roads:

Proto-Indo-European	Latin → French	English
*ph$_2$tḗr	pater → père	father
*méh$_2$tēr	māter → mère	mother

père keeps the p; father shifts it to f. The t of pater is still a t in French and has become th in English. Nothing else moved.

This is why the resemblance between maternal and mother feels different from the resemblance between paternal and father: maternal came into English late, borrowed whole from Latin with its t intact, while mother came down the long way and took the sound-change with it. Two arrivals of one word, centuries apart.

The point is not the pair. It is that sound-change is regular — it applies to a language wholesale, not word by word — which is exactly what makes a word you have never seen guessable.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the law — "p becomes f, t becomes th"
- "père, father" — then "mère, mother"; hear the same word twice
- the two arrivals — "maternal came by boat, mother came on foot"

Before you move on

Which two sounds does Grimm's law change, in the version you need here? (p → f and t → th.) Are père and father borrowed from each other? (No — they are the same inherited word, arriving by two different roads.) Why does maternal keep its t while mother does not? (maternal was borrowed late from Latin; mother came down the Germanic road and took the sound-change.) Next: the brother.

12.4 le frère — brother

Parents done. The next word rhymes with both of them, and it lets you use the sound-law you just learned instead of only hearing about it.

Sounds you'll need

- le frère = luh FREHR. The same open è, the same throat r — and now an r on each side of the vowel, which is the only hard part.
- Say père, then frère. One consonant has been added at the front; everything else is identical.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

frère is Latin frāter, from Proto-Indo-European b^{h}réh$_2$tēr.
Now use what you have. English brother is that same PIE word down the Germanic road: the t became th, exactly as it did in father and mother. The law you just met explains a third pair without being told to.
By the Latin road, English got the formal set:

- fraternal, fraternity, fraternize
- and, softened through Old French frere, friar — a monk who is literally a brother of his order

Fraternity and friar are the same word twice, once in a lecture hall and once in a monastery, and the difference between them is only how long each spent in a French mouth on the way.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le frère" — luh FREHR, an r on both sides of the vowel
- the three so far — "le père, la mère, le frère"
- the law again — "frāter, brother: the t went to th"
- "frère → fraternal, friar"

Before you move on

How do you say "the brother"? (le frère, luh FREHR.) What Latin word is behind it? (frāter.) Which sound-change turns frāter into English brother? (The same one: t → th.) What is a friar, underneath the word? (A brother — the same frère, worn down through Old French.) Next: the sister, and a letter you have not met.

12.5 la sœur — sister

Three words that rhyme, and then this one. Père, mère, frère — and sœur, which refuses the pattern and brings a letter with it.

Sounds you'll need

- la sœur = lah SUR, but not the sur of English sure. Round your lips as if to say oo, then say eh without moving them. That rounded front vowel is what œu spells.
- The r is the throat r, as in the other three.
- The strange letter is œ, an o and an e fused into one. It gets a lesson of its own next; for now, read it as the single vowel you just made.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sœur is Latin soror — and you can watch it collapse:
soror → seror → suer → sœur
Two syllables ground down into one, which is why it stopped rhyming with its three relatives. They were worn evenly; this one was worn out of shape.
English kept soror whole in the borrowed words:

- sorority, sororal
- and a nun is still addressed as Sister in English and ma sœur in French, the same word in both mouths

English sister is not from soror by borrowing — it comes down the Germanic road from the same PIE swésōr. So soror and sister are cousins who have not spoken since before either language existed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la sœur" — lips rounded, then eh without moving them
- the pair — "le frère, la sœur"
- the collapse — "soror, seror, sœur"
- all four — "le père, la mère, le frère, la sœur"

Before you move on

How do you say "the sister"? (la sœur, lah SUR with rounded lips.) What Latin word is behind it? (soror.) Why does it not rhyme with the other three? (It was worn down from two syllables to one — soror → sœur.) An English word that kept soror whole? (sorority.) Next: that fused letter, on its own.

12.6 œ — one letter, not two

You have just read a word containing a character English does not own. It is worth two minutes on its own, because it is not decoration and it is not rare.

Script: œ, one letter and not two œ is an o and an e pushed together into a single letter. French calls it e dans l'o — "e in the o" — which is exactly what it looks like.

Three things follow, and they are the whole lesson:

- It counts as one letter when you spell aloud. sœur is spelled s-œ-u-r: four letters, not five.
- Writing it as two separate letters — soeur — is a substitution, the way writing ae for æ is. French readers accept it and French typography does not; a printed book, a newspaper and a road sign all use œ.
- It is not a separate sound of its own. In sœur the vowel is spelled œu, the rounded vowel you made in the last lesson.

Its capital exists too, and looks like what you would expect: Œ.

Writing: œ, and the everyday words that need it

The list of everyday œ words is short enough to hold in your head, and you already have one of them:

- la sœur — the sister, which you have
- le cœur — the heart

The words for "egg" and "eye" need it too, and both come later in this book as words in their own right, so learning the letter now means that when they arrive, only the meaning is new. le cœur is here because you will meet it everywhere else — it is one of the most common nouns in the language.

Your turn

- Say it: the name of the letter — "e dans l'o"
- Say it: spell it — "s-œ-u-r", four letters
- Say it: the two words — "sœur, cœur"
- Write it: œ three times: draw the o, then start the e inside its right edge

Before you move on

How many letters is œ? (One.) What does French call it? (e dans l'o — "e in the o".) How many letters in sœur? (Four — s-œ-u-r.) Name another word that uses it. (cœur, the heart.) Next: putting the family together.

12.7 Practice — four words, one law

Four words, learned one at a time. Run them as a set now, and then cash in what each one buys you in English.

Your turn: the set, with articles

The article is half the word, and a family word said bare is a word half learned.

Say these aloud:

- "le père, la mère" — the parents, masculine then feminine
- "le frère, la sœur" — the siblings, same order
- all four straight through, then in reverse

Twice through: "le père, la mère, le frère, la sœur"

Your turn: the three that rhyme, and the one that does not

Say these aloud:

- "père, mère, frère" — one vowel, three times: the open è
- "sœur" after them, and hear the break
- why it broke — "soror ground down two syllables into one"

Your turn: cash in the English

Each French word hands you an English one you already knew and never thought about, and the French is the key rather than the lock.

Say these aloud:

- "père → paternal, patron"
- "mère → maternal, matter"
- "frère → fraternal, friar"
- "sœur → sorority"

What you've built this chapter

- four family words, each with its article.
- one sound-law — Grimm's law, $p \to f$ and $t \to th$. It is why père is father, mère is mother and frāter is brother, and it turned three separate memorisations into one fact.
- a letter — œ, one character, waiting in cœur.
- a habit worth more than any of them: when a French word looks like nothing, reach for the long formal English word rather than the short common one. Père is opaque next to father and obvious next to paternal.

Before you move on

Give all four family words with their articles. (le père, la mère, le frère, la sœur.) Which two are feminine? (la mère, la sœur.) State Grimm's law in the form you need. (p → f, t → th.) Use it:

what English word is frāter? (brother.) How many letters is œ, and name a word besides sœur that has it. (One; cœur.) Which English word for physical stuff traces back to mère? (matter.)

Chapter 13

Bread, Water, Wine

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name bread, water and wine in French, and ask for some of any of them.
>
> Three things on a table, and two opposite fates for one kind of word: aqua dissolved into eau, a single vowel spelled with three letters, while vīnum stayed legible in wine, vine and vinegar. pānis gave French its bread and English its companions. Then one rule that English simply leaves out — de plus the article, contracting to du — turns each noun from the thing into some of it.

13.1 le pain — bread

Food at last. This one word sits at the centre of the French table, and it hides what may be the loveliest word-story English has.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-in` — the -ain is a nasal vowel: the air goes through the nose and the n is never said as a consonant of its own.
- `silent-final` — nothing after that vowel is pronounced.
- Together: le pain = luh PA(N), where the (n) is the nose and not a letter you hear. It is masculine: le pain.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins pain is Latin pānis, "bread." That much is unremarkable. What the root did in English is not.

Take com-, "with," and put pānis after it. com + pānis — "one you break bread with." That is a companion, and the word means nothing else:

- companion, company — a company was first a group who ate together, and only later a body of soldiers or a business
- pantry — the room the bread is kept in
- pannier — a bread-basket, now the bag slung over a bicycle or a donkey

So le pain and companion are the same root wearing two different jobs. French kept the bread; English kept the friendship built on it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le pain" — luh PA(N), the vowel through the nose
- the sum — "com + pānis: one you break bread with"
- "pain → companion, company, pantry"

Before you move on

How do you say "the bread"? (le pain, luh PA(N).) Is the n a consonant here? (No — it marks the vowel as nasal.) What Latin word is it? (pānis.) What does companion literally mean? ("One you break bread with" — com- + pānis.) Next: the drink that wore away to a single vowel.

13.2 l'eau — water

Every word so far has been worn down a little. This one was worn down almost completely — and you can still hear what it used to be, in English.

Sounds you'll need

- `o-eau` — eau is pronounced "oh." That is the entire word. Three written letters, e-a-u, spelling one vowel sound and nothing else.
- `elision` — it begins with a vowel sound, so the article elides: l'eau, not le eau. The same elision you met on l'été.
- Together: l'eau = loh. Two letters heard, four written.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

eau is Latin aqua. Say those two aloud, one after the other, and the distance is almost comic.
Watch the erosion happen, though, and each step is small:
aqua → ewe → eaue → eau
The q goes, then the w-sound goes, then the final vowel goes, and what is left is a held "oh" with a spelling that remembers the rest.
French, quite literally, drank the consonants out of aqua.
Meanwhile the loud original survived — in English, which borrowed the Latin word whole and never wore it at all: aquatic, aquarium, aqueduct, aqualung. Italian barely touched it either: acqua.
So l'eau and aquarium are the two far ends of one word, and English is holding the end that still looks like Latin.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "l'eau" — loh, one vowel and no more
- the erosion — "aqua, ewe, eaue, eau"
- the two ends — "l'eau, aquarium"
- "le pain, l'eau" — and notice why one elides and the other does not

Before you move on

How do you say "the water"? (l'eau, loh.) How many sounds are in eau? (One.) Why is the article l' and not le? (eau begins with a vowel sound.) What Latin word is underneath it? (aqua.) Where can you still hear aqua loud and whole? (English — aquatic, aquarium, aqueduct; and Italian acqua.) Next: the drink that refused to wear down.

13.3 le vin — wine

Eau dissolved down to one vowel. This word, sitting on the same table, did the opposite — and the reason is not linguistic.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-in` — the same nasal you met in pain, spelled -in this time rather than -ain. Two spellings, one vowel.
- `silent-final` — again, the n is the nose and not a consonant.
- Together: le vin = luh VA(N). Say pain and vin back to back and hear that only the first consonant differs.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vin is Latin vīnum — and unlike aqua, it is still recognisable everywhere it went.
English has it several times over, by several routes:

- wine — vīnum borrowed into early Germanic, long before French existed
- vine, vineyard — the plant it comes from
- vinegar — French vin + aigre, "sour wine," which is exactly what vinegar is
- vintage, vinyl — the harvest year, and a plastic named from wine spirit

Why did aqua dissolve while vīnum held? Because words wear down with use and hold their shape when they are traded. Water is what you have; wine is what you buy, ship, tax and write down. A word that keeps appearing on a bill of lading in three countries stays legible in all three.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le vin" — luh VA(N), the nose again
- the near-pair — "le pain, le vin"; one consonant apart
- "vin → wine, vine, vinegar"
- the contrast — "l'eau wore away, le vin did not"

Before you move on

How do you say "the wine"? (le vin, luh VA(N).) Which other word this chapter has the same vowel? (le pain.) What Latin word is behind it? (vīnum.) What does vinegar literally say? (Sour wine — vin + aigre.) Next: how to ask for some of any of them.

13.4 du pain, de l'eau — asking for some

You have three things on the table and no way to ask for any of them yet. le pain is the bread — a particular loaf. What you actually want at a table is some bread, and French makes you say so.

Grammar Lens: French says "of the", where English says nothing

English can drop the word entirely. "I'd like bread" is perfectly good English. French cannot: it marks an unmeasured amount of a thing with de plus the article the noun already takes.

de + le pain → du pain — some bread

de + le vin → du vin — some wine

de + l'eau → de l'eau — some water

That is one rule, not three. de + le always contracts to du; de + l' has nothing to contract, so it simply stays apart. You are not learning a new list here — you are putting de in front of the article you already know, and letting the vowel rule you already met decide the shape.

And the contrast is worth hearing directly:

- le pain — the bread, that loaf, the one on the table
- un pain — a loaf, one whole item you could pick up
- du pain — some bread, an amount with no edges

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three — "du pain, du vin, de l'eau"
- the reason — "de plus the article; du where it contracts"
- the ladder on one noun — "le pain, un pain, du pain"

Twice through: "du pain, du vin, de l'eau"

Before you move on

How do you say "some bread"? (du pain.) Some wine? (du vin.) Some water? (de l'eau — eau takes l', so there is nothing to contract.) What are the two words hiding inside du? (de + le.) What is the difference between un pain and du pain? (un pain is a loaf, one whole item; du pain is some bread, an amount with no edges.) Next: all three together.

13.5 Practice — the table, and asking for some of it

Three nouns and one rule. Run the nouns first, then put the rule on each of them in turn.

Your turn: the three, with their articles

Say these aloud:

- "le pain, l'eau, le vin"
- the odd one — "l'eau elides, because it opens with a vowel"

- the near-pair — “le pain, le vin”; the same nasal, one consonant apart

Twice through: “le pain, l’eau, le vin”

Your turn: now ask for some

Say these aloud:

- “du pain, du vin, de l’eau”
- each noun three ways — “le pain, un pain, du pain”
- the same three ways for wine — “le vin, un vin, du vin”

Your turn: two words that wore differently

Say these aloud:

- the erosion — “aqua, ewe, eaue, eau”
- the survival — “vīnum: wine, vine, vinegar”
- the sum — “com plus pānis: companion”

What you’ve built this chapter

- three nouns you can put on a table, each with the right article.
- one rule for “some” — de plus the article, contracting to du where it can. It is the first time French has asked you to say something English simply leaves out.
- two opposite fates for one kind of word. aqua dissolved into eau; vīnum is still legible in four English words. Everyday things wear down, traded things stay legible — which is a rule you can use on words you have not met yet.
- a root that paid twice — pānis gave French its bread and English its companions.

Before you move on

Give all three with their articles. (le pain, l’eau, le vin.) Why does only one of them elide? (eau begins with a vowel sound.) Ask for some of each. (du pain, du vin, de l'eau.) What two words are inside du? (de + le.) Which Latin word wore down to a single vowel, and which one barely moved? (aqua → eau; vīnum → vin.)

Chapter 14

The Welded Teens

Modes: 🚗 voice (9) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from eleven to sixteen in French, and say which half of each word is the digit and which is the ten.
>
> Six numbers French did not build. It inherited them from Latin already welded shut — ūndecim, duodecim, trēdecim — and wore them down to one syllable each. The -ze they all share is decem, the same ten already hiding in dix and in décembre, and the front of every one of them is its own digit: deux in douze, six in seize. The digit comes first and the ten comes second, which is a choice, and French is about to make the other one.

14.1 onze — eleven

You can count to ten. The eleventh number is where you find out that French did not build its teens at all — it inherited them, already welded shut.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-on` — the on is a nasal vowel, the same one you have in bonjour.
- `z-voiced` — the z is buzzed, not hissed: your throat should vibrate.
- Together: onze = ONZ, one syllable.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

onze is Latin ūndecim — ūnus ("one") plus decem ("ten"), fused into one word before French existed.
Notice what French did not do. English says eleven, which is its own strange word; German says elf. French could have said dix-un, "ten-one," and it does not. It took the Latin compound whole and wore it down: ūndecim → onze, four syllables into one.
That is worth flagging now, because it will not last. French keeps this inherited style for exactly six numbers, and then abandons it in front of you.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "onze" — ONZ, the vowel through the nose, the z buzzed
- the count so far — "huit, neuf, dix, onze"
- what is inside it — "ūnus plus decem: one-ten"

Before you move on

How do you say eleven? (onze, ONZ.) What two Latin words are fused inside it? (ūnus and decem — "one" and "ten".) Did French build this word out of dix and un? (No — it inherited ūndecim already joined.) Next: twelve, the same way.

14.2 douze — twelve

One welded number could be an accident. Two of them is a pattern, and this one lets you hear the join.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-ou` — the letters o-u make a single pure oo, as in English food. Never two sounds.
- `z-voiced` — the same buzzed z as onze.
- Together: douze = DOOZ, one syllable.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

douze is Latin duodecim — duo ("two") plus decem ("ten"). And this time you can see both halves survive into the French. Say deux, then say douze, and listen to the front of each: deu-, dou-. That is the same digit, and it did not disappear — it was only worn down. The back half is doing the same thing. onze and douze both end in -ze, and both come from a Latin word ending in -decim. Two words, one shared ending, and a strong hint about where that ending came from.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "douze" — DOOZ, the o-u a single pure vowel
- the digit surfacing — "deux, douze"
- the pair — "onze, douze"; hear the shared ending

Before you move on

How do you say twelve? (douze, DOOZ.) Which small number can you hear at the front of it? (deux.) What Latin word is it from? (duodecim.) What ending do onze and douze share? (-ze.) Next: what that -ze actually is.

14.3 -ze — the ten you keep meeting

Onze and douze share an ending. Before you learn four more words that also share it, it is worth two minutes to find out what it is — because you have already met it twice, wearing other clothes.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The -ze on the end of onze and douze is Latin decem, "ten." That is all it is. ūn-decim → on-ze. duo-decim → dou-ze. The Latin -decim has been ground down to a single buzzed consonant and a silent vowel, but it is still the word ten, still sitting in the back half of the number, still telling you what the number is built on.

Now put it beside the other two places you have already met that same decem:

- dix — ten itself, worn down from decem at the front instead of the back
- décembre — the old tenth month, which kept decem almost intact
- -ze — the same ten, welded onto a digit and nearly erased

One Latin root, three disguises, and you now hold all three. This is the single most useful habit this book can give you: when a scrap of a word looks familiar, it usually is, and the long word is the one that tells you what the short one was.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three disguises — "dix, décembre, onze"
- the claim — "the -ze is decem; it means ten"
- the two you have — "onze, douze"; and hear the ten on the end of both

Before you move on

What is the -ze of onze and douze? (Latin decem, "ten".) Name two other French words where you have already met that same decem. (dix and décembre.) Which of the three kept it most intact? (décembre.) Next: thirteen, with the ten now visible on the end.

14.4 treize — thirteen

With the -ze identified, the rest of the welded teens stop being words to memorise and start being sums you can read.

Sounds you'll need

- The ei is the open è you met in père and frère — treh, not tray.
- `z-voiced` — the buzzed z again.
- Together: treize = TREHZ, one syllable, with the throat r at the front.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

treize is Latin trēdecim — trēs ("three") plus decem ("ten").
Read it as a sum now rather than a word:
trei- is trois, worn down · -ze is decem, worn down
Say trois, then treize, and the front half answers for itself. You are not learning a thirteenth arbitrary noise; you are reading three and ten stuck together and then rubbed smooth.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "treize" — TREHZ, the open è
- the digit surfacing — "trois, treize"
- the three you have — "onze, douze, treize"

Before you move on

How do you say thirteen? (treize, TREHZ.) What are its two halves? (trois and the -ze that is decem.) Count from eleven. (Onze, douze, treize.) Next: fourteen, the longest of them.

14.5 quatorze — fourteen

Every teen so far has been one syllable. This one is two, and the reason is that it started out longer than any of them.

Sounds you'll need

- quatorze = ka-TORZ. Two syllables, weight on the second.
- The qu is a plain k, exactly as in quatre — never a kw.
- `z-voiced` — the buzzed z closes it, like all the others.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quatorze is Latin quattuordecim — quattuor ("four") plus decem. Quattuordecim is five syllables. Quatorze is two. French has thrown away more than half the word and still kept both ideas: quator- is the four, -ze is the ten.
Set it beside its own digit — quatre, KATR — and the family resemblance is obvious once you stop expecting the spelling to match. Both begin quat-; the number simply grew a syllable to carry the ten.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quatorze" — ka-TORZ, the qu a plain k
- the digit surfacing — "quatre, quatorze"
- the four you have — "onze, douze, treize, quatorze"

Before you move on

How do you say fourteen? (quatorze, ka-TORZ.) How is the qu pronounced? (A plain k.) What Latin word is behind it? (quattuordecim.) Count from eleven. (Onze, douze, treize, quatorze.) Next: fifteen.

14.6 quinze — fifteen

Back to one syllable — and this is the teen whose Latin half you are most likely to already know from English.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-in` — the in is the nasal vowel you have in pain and vin.
- The qu is a plain k again.
- Together: quinze = KANZ, one syllable, the vowel through the nose.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quinze is Latin quīndecim — quīnque ("five") plus decem.
The French digit cinq has travelled a long way from quīnque, so quinze does not obviously look like cinq. But the Latin quīn- is loud in English, and that is the way in:

- quintet — a group of five
- quintuplet — one of five
- quintessence — the fifth essence, the one the ancients added to earth, water, air and fire

So when cinq and quinze refuse to look related, go through English: quintet is the bridge between them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "quinze" — KANZ, the vowel through the nose
- the bridge — "cinq, quintet, quinze"
- the five you have — "onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze"

Before you move on

How do you say fifteen? (quinze, KANZ.) Which English words carry the same quīn-? (quintet, quintuplet, quintessence.) Why is that useful here? (cinq and quinze do not look alike; the English word is the bridge between them.) Next: sixteen, the last of the welded ones.

14.7 seize — sixteen

The sixth and last of them. After this word the pattern you have spent five lessons learning simply stops — which is the next chapter's whole subject.

Sounds you'll need

- The ei is the open è, the same vowel as treize.
- `z-voiced` — the buzzed z one last time.
- Together: seize = SEHZ. Say treize and seize back to back: one consonant apart, and they rhyme exactly.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

seize is Latin sēdecim — sex ("six") plus decem.
That is the sixth and final inherited compound. Latin had them beyond this point too, but French did not keep them, and you are about to see what it did instead.
Note also what seize is not. It is not dix-six. Nothing in the first six teens is built out of dix plus a digit — every one of them arrived from Latin already joined, and French merely wore them down. That distinction is the thing to hold on to going into the next chapter.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "seize" — SEHZ
- the rhyme — "treize, seize"
- all six — "onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize"

Before you move on

How do you say sixteen? (seize, SEHZ.) Which other teen rhymes with it? (treize.) Is it built from dix and six? (No — it came from Latin sēdecim already fused.) Count all six. (Onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize.) Next: which end of each word is the digit.

14.8 trei-ze — which half is which

You have six words and you know their ending is ten. One question is left, and it is the one that makes the next chapter make sense: which end of the word is the digit?

Grammar Lens: digit in front, ten behind

In all six, the digit comes first and the ten comes second.
Trēdecim is "three-ten," not "ten-three."
Each word is its own small number worn down, with the ten stuck on the back:

number	the digit in front	the ten behind
onze	on- ← un	-ze
douze	dou- ← deux	-ze
treize	trei- ← trois	-ze
quatorze	quator- ← quatre	-ze
quinze	quin- ← cinq	-ze
seize	sei- ← six	-ze

Say each pair slowly — deux, douze; six, seize — and the small number surfaces every time.
Hold on to the order, not just the halves. Digit-first is a choice, and a language can make the other one. French is about to.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the rule — "digit first, ten second"
- the six pairs — "un/onze, deux/douze, trois/treize, quatre/quatorze, cinq/quinze, six/seize"
- the shape of one — "trei- is three, -ze is ten"

Twice through: "onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize"

Before you move on

In treize, which half is the three and which is the ten? (trei- is the three; -ze is the ten.) So is 13 built as "three-ten" or "ten-three"?

(Three-ten — the digit comes first.) Which digit is hiding in quatorze? (quatre.) Next chapter: the number where French reverses that order and stops fusing altogether.

14.9 Practice — eleven to sixteen

Six words, learned one at a time. Run them as a block, then take each one apart again from memory.

Your turn: the run

Say these aloud:

- "onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize"
- from ten — "dix, onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize"
- backwards — "seize, quinze, quatorze, treize, douze, onze"

Twice through: "onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize"

Your turn: surface the digit

Say these aloud:

- each pair — "un/onze, deux/douze, trois/treize"
- the harder three — "quatre/quatorze, cinq/quinze, six/seize"
- the one that needs English — "cinq, quintet, quinze"

Your turn: the ten on the end

Say these aloud:

- the three disguises — "dix, décembre, -ze"
- one sum aloud — "trei- is three, -ze is ten, treize is thirteen"

What you've built this chapter

- six numbers, eleven to sixteen.
- one ending explained — the -ze is decem, the same ten you already had in dix and décembre. Three disguises, one root.
- the order — digit in front, ten behind. Treize is "three-ten."
- a way in when a word refuses — cinq and quinze do not look alike, and English quintet stands between them. Reach for the long formal English word whenever the short French one has worn past recognition.

Before you move on

Count eleven to sixteen without stopping. (Onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize.) What is the -ze? (Latin decem, "ten".) Which comes first in these words, the digit or the ten? (The digit.) Which digit is in quatorze? (quatre.) Were any of these built out of dix plus a digit? (No — all six arrived from Latin already fused.)

Chapter 15

Where French Changes Its Mind

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can count from seventeen to twenty in French, and name the two things that change at seventeen.
>
> At exactly seventeen, French stops inheriting numbers and starts building them — and swaps the order of the parts while doing it. seize is six-ten, fused; dix-sept is ten-seven, built out of two words you already own. Most language change is too slow to point at; this seam sits between two consecutive numbers and you can say both sides of it aloud. Then vingt arrives as a single inherited word again, and it is the number French will later count in: quatre-vingts, four twenties.

15.1 dix-sept — seventeen

Six words in a row arrived from Latin already welded. Here is the seventh, and you can read it at sight — which is exactly the surprise.

Sounds you'll need

- dix-sept = dees-SET. The x of dix becomes an s sound here, and the p of sept is silent as always.
- `final-consonant` — the t of sept is pronounced. That is unusual for a final consonant in French, and sept keeps it in every position.
- Two words, one hyphen, one number.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

There is no Latin ancestor to trace here, and that is the point. dix-sept is dix and sept, the two words you have had since the counting chapter, put side by side with a hyphen. Nothing has been worn down, nothing is hiding, nothing needs an etymology. It says ten-seven and it means seventeen.

Latin did have a fused word for this — septendecim — and French threw it away. After six inherited compounds the language simply stopped, and started building numbers out of parts the speaker already had.

You have just watched a language change its mind mid-count. The next lesson is about what exactly changed, because it is two things and not one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dix-sept" — dees-SET, and the final t is heard
- the seam — "seize, dix-sept"; one is welded, one is built
- the parts — "dix, sept, dix-sept"

Before you move on

How do you say seventeen? (dix-sept, dees-SET.) What two words is it made of? (dix and sept.) Did French inherit this one from Latin the way it inherited seize? (No — Latin had septendecim and French abandoned it, building the number out of parts instead.) Next: the two things that changed at this exact number.

15.2 seize / dix-sept — the seam

Put the two words side by side — seize, then dix-sept — and something changed between them. Two things did, and most people only notice one.

Grammar Lens: strategy and direction, both at once

The obvious change is strategy. Up to sixteen the numbers are fused — single words inherited whole and worn down. From seventeen they are transparent — built in the open out of words you already have. The change nobody notices is direction, and it is a question of which half comes first:

number	shape	what comes first
seize	sē-decim, fused	the digit: six-ten
dix-sept	dix + sept, built	the ten: ten-seven

Seize is six-ten. Dix-sept is ten-seven. The two halves have swapped places. So at exactly one number, French changed how it makes the word and which way round the parts go — and it never went back. That is worth seeing because it is a rare thing to catch. Languages usually change too slowly to point at. Here the join is visible between two consecutive numbers, and you can say both sides of it out loud.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- across the seam — "seize, dix-sept"
- the first change — "fused, then built"
- the second change — "six-ten, then ten-seven"
- the summary — "at seventeen, both the method and the order flipped"

Before you move on

Name the two things that change between seize and dix-sept. (The strategy — fused becomes built; and the direction — digit-first becomes ten-first.) Which half comes first in seize? (The digit: six-ten.) And in dix-sept? (The ten: ten-seven.) Next: eighteen, which now costs you nothing.

15.3 dix-huit — eighteen

This is the first number in the book that costs you nothing. You already know the rule; this is just applying it.

Sounds you'll need

- dix-huit = dee-ZWEET. The x of dix buzzes into a z here, because huit begins with a vowel sound.
- `silent-h` — the h of huit is not said, which is why the z can carry straight across into it.
- The final t of huit is pronounced.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dix + huit, ten and eight. Nothing more.
What is worth a moment is what Latin did here instead, because it is stranger than anything French does. For 18 and 19 Latin did not add — it subtracted. Eighteen was duodēvīgintī: "two from twenty." Nineteen was ūndēvīgintī, "one from twenty."
Every language descended from Latin dropped that. French, Spanish and Italian all count up to twenty rather than down from it. So the plain ten-eight in front of you is not a lazy simplification — it is the survivor of a competition, and the elegant subtraction trick is the thing that lost.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dix-huit" — dee-ZWEET, the x buzzing into the vowel
- the pair — "dix-sept, dix-huit"; hear dees- then dee-z-
- what Latin said — "two from twenty"

Before you move on

How do you say eighteen? (dix-huit, dee-ZWEET.) Why does the x buzz here but hiss in dix-sept? (huit begins with a vowel sound; sept does not.) How did Latin build eighteen? (By subtracting — duodē- vīgintī, "two from twenty".) Did French keep that? (No.) Next: nineteen.

15.4 dix-neuf — nineteen

The last of the built teens — and a word that quietly means two different things.

Sounds you'll need

- dix-neuf = dees-NUF. The x hisses as an s here, the way it does in dix-sept, because neuf begins with a consonant.
- The eu is the rounded vowel you made in sœur: lips rounded, tongue forward.
- The final f is pronounced.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dix + neuf, ten and nine.
The interesting part is neuf itself, which is two words wearing one coat:

- neuf = nine, from Latin novem
- neuf = new, from Latin novus

Those were distinct in Latin and French wore them into the same four letters. So un livre neuf is "a new book," and neuf livres is "nine books," and only the position tells you which.
They are not unrelated, either. The same nov- is behind English novel, novice, innovate and November — the old ninth month, which is the counting month you already met. Novem and novus are cousins from far enough back that nobody is quite sure which sense came first.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dix-neuf" — dees-NUF, the f heard

- all three built teens — "dix-sept, dix-huit, dix-neuf"
- the double word — "neuf is nine, and neuf is new"

Before you move on

How do you say nineteen? (dix-neuf, dees-NUF.) What are its two parts? (dix and neuf.) What else does neuf mean besides nine? (New — from novus, where the number is from novem.) Which month carries the same nov-? (novembre.) Next: twenty, and a different system again.

15.5 vingt — twenty

Three built numbers in a row, and then this — which is not built out of anything at all.

Sounds you'll need

- vingt = VA(N). The in is the nasal vowel you have in vin and pain.
- `silent-final` — the g and the t are both silent. Four written letters after the vowel, none of them heard.
- Say vin and vingt aloud: standing alone they are identical. Only the spelling and the sentence tell them apart.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vingt is Latin vīgintī, and that is the whole story: an old, single, inherited word, like dix and unlike dix-sept.
So the count you have just walked through has three systems in it, not two:

- 11–16 — inherited, fused, digit first
- 17–19 — built, transparent, ten first
- 20 — inherited again, a single word built from nothing

Twenty is not the end of a pattern. It is the start of a different one, because vingt is the number French will later count in.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vingt" — VA(N), everything after the vowel silent
- the homophones — "vin, vingt"; identical on their own
- the last four — "dix-sept, dix-huit, dix-neuf, vingt"

Before you move on

How do you say twenty? (vingt, VA(N).) How many of its letters after the vowel are pronounced? (None.) Which word from the table chapter sounds exactly the same? (vin, wine.) Is vingt built out of smaller numbers? (No — it is a single inherited word, from vīgintī.) Next: what that vīgintī went on to do.

15.6 vīgintī — the number French counts in Vingt looks like an ending. It is a beginning, and this lesson is here so that a famous French oddity is already explained before you meet it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Latin vīgintī did not only give French vingt. It gave English a word for an idea:
vigesimal — counting in twenties, the way decimal is counting in tens.
Most of Europe counts in tens. But a way of counting in twenties survived underneath French, and it surfaces in the higher numbers. Eighty in French is not "eight-ten." It is:

quatre-vingts — literally four twenties

Four twenties is eighty. And ninety-nine, famously, is quatre-vingt-dix-neuf — "four twenties, ten, nine."
You are not learning those numbers here. You are learning why they will look the way they do, so that when they arrive they are a consequence rather than a shock. English keeps one fossil of the same habit: a score is twenty, and "four score and seven years ago" is quatre-vingt-sept in a different language.

So vingt is the base of a second counting system hiding inside a decimal one — which is a much better thing to know at twenty than at eighty.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the English word — "vigesimal: counting by twenties"
- the preview — "quatre-vingts, four twenties, eighty"
- the English fossil — "four score and seven"

Before you move on

What does vigesimal mean? (Counting by twenties.) What does quatre-vingts literally say, and what number is it? ("Four twenties" — eighty.) Which English word for twenty preserves the same habit? (A score.) Next: all ten numbers together.

15.7 Practice — across the seam, and up to twenty

You can now count to twenty. Run the whole thing, and listen for the place where the machine changes.

Your turn: the full count

Say these aloud:

- eleven to twenty — "onze, douze, treize, quatorze, quinze, seize, dix-sept, dix-huit, dix-neuf, vingt"
- from one, the whole way
- the four new ones alone — "dix-sept, dix-huit, dix-neuf, vingt"

Twice through: "dix-sept, dix-huit, dix-neuf, vingt"

Your turn: hear the seam

Say these aloud:

- the two words either side — "seize, dix-sept"
- what changed first — "fused, then built"
- what changed second — "six-ten, then ten-seven"

Your turn: the x that cannot decide

Say these aloud:

- hissing — "dix-sept, dix-neuf"; both follow a consonant
- buzzing — "dix-huit"; it follows a vowel sound
- the reason aloud — "the x buzzes into a vowel and hisses before a consonant"

What you've built this chapter

- four numbers, seventeen to twenty, and with them the whole count to 20.
- a seam you can point at — at seventeen French changed both its strategy and its direction, and never went back. Most language change is too slow to witness; this one sits between two consecutive numbers.
- three systems in ten numbers — inherited and fused, built and transparent, then a single inherited word again at vingt.
- an oddity explained before you meet it — vīgintī is why eighty will be quatre-vingts, four twenties.

Before you move on

Count from eleven to twenty without stopping. Which number is the seam, and what two things change there? (Seventeen — fused becomes built, and digit-first becomes ten-first.) Why does the x of dix buzz in dix-huit but hiss in dix-neuf? (huit begins with a vowel sound.) What will quatre-vingts mean, and why? ("Four twenties” — eighty; from vīgintī, the vigesimal habit.)

Chapter 16

Colours

Modes: 🚗 voice (8) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 8 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name four basic colours in French, put a colour after the noun it describes, and say which of them are not Latin.
>
> Four colours with two different homelands. noir walked down from Latin niger and rouge from a root older than Latin — the same one behind English red, rust and German rot. But blanc and bleu are Frankish, Germanic words that displaced Latin ones inside a Romance language, which is the opposite of the usual traffic. albus did not die when blanc took its job; it stopped being a colour and became l'aube, the dawn. And the colour goes after its noun — le vin rouge — with bonjour as the exception the reader already says every day.

16.1 noir — black

Four colours in this chapter, and they do not have four similar stories. Start with the one that behaves exactly as you would expect, so the surprises stand out later.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-oi` — the oi is wa, one gliding vowel. It is the same oi you have in trois and soir.
- `r-uvular` — the final r is sounded here, made in the throat.
- Together: noir = NWAR, one syllable.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

noir is Latin niger, "black." Nothing was borrowed and nothing is hiding: the word walked straight down from Rome into French, and did the same into its sisters — Spanish negro, Italian nero.
English took niger too, but only as a metaphor. To denigrate someone is, literally, to blacken them — to darken a name rather than a thing. The colour stayed in the Romance languages; the insult is what crossed into English.
So noir is the plain case. Hold on to that, because the next colour is not plain at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "noir" — NWAR, the oi a single gliding vowel
- the family — "niger, noir, negro, nero"
- the English one — "denigrate: to blacken a name"

Before you move on

How do you say black? (noir, NWAR.) What Latin word is it from? (niger.) What does denigrate literally mean? (To blacken — to darken someone's name.) Next: white, which did not come from Latin at all.

16.2 blanc — white

Every word in this book so far has come down from Latin. This one did not, and the direction it came from is the opposite of what usually happens.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-an` — the an is the nasal vowel you have in janvier.
- `silent-final` — the c at the end is not pronounced.
- Together: blanc = BLA(N), one syllable, nothing after the nose.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Latin had a perfectly good word for white: albus. French does not use it.
blanc is Frankish — a Germanic word, from blank*, meaning not "white" exactly but "shining, gleaming, flashing." The Franks are the people who gave France its name, and they gave it its word for white as well.
That direction is the surprising part. Latin words pour into Germanic languages constantly; English is more than half built of them. Traffic the other way, a Germanic word displacing a Latin one inside a Romance language, is much rarer.
Why did albus lose? Most likely because blank was more vivid. Albus is a flat, plain white; blank is a white that shines. Colour words are replaced by the more dramatic option surprisingly often — the exciting word wins and then calms down into the ordinary one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "blanc" — BLA(N), the c silent
- the pair — "noir, blanc"
- the origin — "Frankish blank: shining"
- the two stories — "noir walked down from Rome, blanc walked in from the north"

Before you move on

How do you say white? (blanc, BLA(N).) Is the final c sounded? (No.) Which language did it come from? (Frankish — Germanic, not Latin.) What did blank* actually mean? ("Shining, gleaming.") What was the Latin word it displaced? (albus.) Next: where albus went instead.

16.3 l'aube — the white that stopped being a colour

Blanc took the job. That does not mean albus was thrown away — words that lose an argument usually go and do something else.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Latin albus is still all around you. It simply stopped being the word for the colour, and survives inside words for things that are white:

- l'aube — the dawn: the sky going white. French, and pronounced lohb
- l'aubépine — the hawthorn, literally the "white thorn"
- album — English, from a blank white tablet you wrote on
- albino — English, someone white-skinned

That is a pattern worth naming, because it will keep happening. When a newer word takes over a plain everyday meaning, the older one does not vanish. It gets pushed into the specific — a time of day, a particular tree, a technical term — and stays there for centuries, unnoticed.
So French has two whites after all. One you say when you mean the colour, and one you say without knowing you are saying it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "l'aube" — lohb, the dawn
- the white inside it — "albus: the sky going white"
- the English survivors — "album, albino"
- the two whites — "blanc for the colour, aube for the hour"

Before you move on

What does l'aube mean, and what is white about it? (The dawn — the sky going white.) Which Latin word is inside it? (albus.) Name two English words that kept the same albus. (album, albino.) What happens to a word when a newer one takes its everyday job? (It survives in the specific — a time, a tree, a technical term.) Next: red, which is older than Latin.

16.4 rouge — red

Noir came from Latin and blanc from the Franks. This one goes back further than either — further than Latin itself.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-ou` — the letters o-u make the pure oo you have in douze.
- `soft-j` — the g here is the soft zh of measure, the same sound as the j in janvier.
- Together: rouge = ROOZH, one syllable. English borrowed the word whole for makeup and kept the French sound with it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rouge is Latin rubeus, "reddish." But rubeus is itself inherited, from a Proto-Indo-European root h₁rewd^{h}- so old that its children are scattered across the whole family:

- Latin ruber, rubeus → French rouge, and English ruby, rubric
- English red, rust, ruddy
- German rot

So rouge and red are not lookalikes that happen to mean the same thing. They are actual cousins, separated for something like five thousand years and still saying the same colour.
That is not an accident of this one word. Red is one of the oldest colours any language names — after black and white, it is almost always the third colour a language gets a word for, and often the only other one for a long time. A word that old survives everywhere because it was never not needed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "rouge" — ROOZH, the soft g
- the cousins in a row — "rouge, red, rot"
- the Latin ones — "ruber, ruby, rubric"
- the three you have — "noir, blanc, rouge"

Before you move on

How do you say red? (rouge, ROOZH.) How is the g pronounced? (Soft — the zh of measure.) Are rouge and English red borrowed from each other? (No — they are cousins from the same Proto-Indo-European root.) Name two more of that root's children. (rust, ruddy, ruby, rubric, German rot — any two.) Next: blue, which went abroad and came home.

16.5 bleu — blue

The fourth colour, and the second one that is not Latin. Once is a curiosity; twice is a pattern about who was actually living in France.

Sounds you'll need

- `vowel-eu` — the eu is the rounded front vowel you made in sœur: lips rounded, tongue forward.
- `silent-final` — there is no consonant after it to say.
- Together: bleu = BLUH, one syllable, and shorter than English speakers expect.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bleu is Frankish *blāo — Germanic again, borrowed exactly the way blanc was.
Then something neat happened. English took bleu from French. So English blue is a Germanic word that walked into France, spent centuries there changing its shape, and was then borrowed back into a Germanic language. It went abroad and came home wearing different clothes.
Meanwhile German never sent its copy anywhere: it still says blau, which is what blāo* sounded like all along. Say blau, bleu, blue in a row and you are hearing one word at three stages of one journey.
(French has a second, more poetic blue as well — azur, ultimately from Arabic lāzaward*, "lapis lazuli." You have almost certainly seen it already, on the map: the Côte d'Azur.)*

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "bleu" — BLUH, lips rounded, and keep it short
- the round trip — "blau, bleu, blue"
- the two Frankish ones — "blanc, bleu"
- all four — "noir, blanc, rouge, bleu"

Before you move on

How do you say blue? (bleu, BLUH.) Which language did it come from? (Frankish — Germanic, like blanc.) What is odd about English blue? (It is a Germanic word that English borrowed from French — it went abroad and came back.) What did German keep? (blau.) Next: where the colour goes in the sentence.

16.6 le vin rouge — where the colour goes

You have four colours and a table full of nouns. Putting them together takes one rule, and English gets it the other way round.

Grammar Lens: the colour comes second

English puts the colour in front of the noun: red wine, white bread. French puts it behind:

> le vin rouge — the wine red
>
> le pain blanc — the bread white

The order feels backwards for about a week and then stops feeling like anything. What makes it stick faster is noticing that you already say the exception.
bonjour is bon + jour — a good day, with the adjective in front. So French does both, and the split is not random: a small handful of very common, very short adjectives go before the noun — bon, bonne, and a few others you will meet — while nearly everything else, colours included, goes after.
That is the useful form of the rule. Not "French adjectives follow the noun," which the word bonjour would immediately contradict, but: the short common ones lead, and everything else follows.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the two wines — "le vin rouge, le vin blanc"
- with bread — "le pain blanc"
- the exception you already own — "bonjour: bon comes first"
- the rule as one line — "short and common in front, everything else behind"

Twice through: "le vin rouge, le vin blanc"

Before you move on

How do you say "red wine"? (le vin rouge — the colour second.) White bread? (le pain blanc.) Which everyday word puts its adjective first? (bonjour — bon + jour.) State the rule in one line. (Short, common adjectives go in front; everything else, colours included, goes after.) Next: the three colours on the flag.

16.7 bleu, blanc, rouge — the flag

Three of your four colours are the flag, and saying them in its order is the easiest way to keep them. There is also a joke buried in them.

Why it's said this way

The French flag is named by its colours, left to right:

bleu, blanc, rouge

Say it in that order and it comes as one unit rather than three words. French speakers say it that way constantly — le drapeau bleu-blanc-rouge — and it is by far the most common context in which all three appear together.
Now count where they came from:

- bleu — Frankish, Germanic
- blanc — Frankish, Germanic
- rouge — Latin, from a root older than Latin

So the tricolour is two-thirds Germanic. The flag of the most self-consciously Latin nation in Europe names itself with two borrowed Germanic words and one inherited one, and no one notices, because a word stops being foreign the moment everybody uses it.
That is the honest summary of this chapter: of four basic colours, half came from the north. Half of French's most everyday vocabulary is not doing what the label "Romance language" would lead you to expect.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the flag — "bleu, blanc, rouge"
- all four colours — "noir, blanc, rouge, bleu"

- the sources — “Latin, Frankish, Latin, Frankish”
- the finding — “the tricolour is two-thirds Germanic”

Twice through: “bleu, blanc, rouge”

Before you move on

Name the flag’s colours in order. (bleu, blanc, rouge.) Which two of them are Germanic borrowings? (bleu and blanc.) So what fraction of the tricolour is Germanic? (Two-thirds.) And of the chapter’s four colours? (Half.) Next: all four, put to work.

16.8 Practice — four colours and where they came from Four words, and then the thing that makes them worth more than four words: each one has a passport.

Your turn: the four

Say these aloud:

- “noir, blanc, rouge, bleu”
- the flag order — “bleu, blanc, rouge”
- the two nasal ones — “blanc”; and the two that end in a vowel sound — “bleu”

Twice through: “noir, blanc, rouge, bleu”

Your turn: put them on nouns

Say these aloud:

- “le vin rouge, le vin blanc”
- “le pain blanc”
- the order out loud — “the noun, then the colour”
- the exception — “bonjour”

Your turn: where each one came from

Say these aloud:

- "noir — Latin niger; denigrate"
- "blanc — Frankish blank, shining"
- "rouge — Latin rubeus; red, rot, ruby"
- "bleu — Frankish blao; blau, bleu, blue"
- the one that changed jobs — "albus became l'aube, the dawn"

What you've built this chapter

- four colours, and the flag as a set.
- word order — the colour goes after the noun, and bonjour is the exception you already said before you knew it was one.
- half of them are not Latin. blanc and bleu are Frankish, which runs against the usual direction of traffic: Latin words flood into Germanic languages, not the reverse.
- a word that lost and survived anyway — albus gave up the colour and kept the dawn. That is what usually happens to a displaced word, and it is worth looking for.

Before you move on

Give the four colours. (noir, blanc, rouge, bleu.) Which two are Germanic? (blanc and bleu.) Say "red wine." (le vin rouge — the colour second.) Which Latin word for white did French drop, and where did it end up? (albus — in l'aube, the dawn, and in English album and albino.) Are rouge and red borrowed from each other? (No — cousins, from one Proto-Indo-European root.)

Chapter 17

To Have, and How Old You Are

Modes: 🚗 voice (14) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 14 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can use all six forms of avoir, and ask and answer how old someone is the way French does it — by having years rather than being them.
>
> The verb French leans on hardest, taken one person at a time. Its three singular forms are written ai, as and a and sound the same, which is why French keeps the subject pronouns Spanish drops; its plural endings -ons and -ez survived and are unmistakable. Then the sentence the verb exists for: J'ai vingt ans, "I have twenty years". Never "to be", and ans cannot be dropped — and every Romance language on the continent agrees while every Germanic one does not.

17.1 j'ai — I have

The verb French leans on hardest starts here, with the form you will say most — and it is one sound long.

Sounds you'll need

- `elision` — it is j'ai, never je ai. Before a vowel je drops its e, the same move that turns le eau into l'eau.
- The ai is a single vowel, close to English eh.
- Together: j'ai = zhay. One syllable, and the whole of "I have."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

j'ai is Latin habeō, "I have."
Say those two aloud: ha-be-o, then zhay. Three syllables become one, and not one consonant of the Latin survives into the vowel.
French does this harder than any of its sisters. Italian kept ho, Spanish kept he — both still a whole syllable with a consonant. French kept a vowel. It is the same appetite that ground aqua down to eau, and you will see it again every time a very common word looks like nothing.
The rule of thumb is worth having now: the more often a word is said, the more of it wears away. That is why the most useful words in a language are usually its least recognisable ones.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "j'ai" — zhay, one syllable
- the erosion — "habeō, ho, he, j'ai"
- a whole sentence — "J'ai un frère"

Before you move on

How do you say "I have"? (j'ai, zhay.) Why is it not je ai? (Elision — je drops its e before a vowel.) What Latin word is it from? (habeō.) What do Italian and Spanish still keep that French does not? (A whole syllable — ho, he.) Next: the same verb, said to one person.

17.2 tu as — you have

The second form of the verb, and the first sign that this paradigm is easier to say than it looks to read.

Sounds you'll need

- `silent-final` — the s of as is not pronounced.
- tu as = tü ah. The u of tu is the tight front-rounded vowel; the as is a bare open ah.

- Say j'ai and tu as back to back and notice how little work the verb is doing in either.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

as is the tu form — the one you use with a friend, a child, or anyone you would call by their first name. It is the same tu you met when you learned which "you" to pick.
The written s is a signal to the eye and nothing to the ear. That is the normal state of affairs in French verbs: the endings are alive on the page and almost dead in the mouth. It is why the pronoun is not optional — as on its own would tell a listener nothing about who has something.
Keep that in mind as the paradigm fills in. You are learning six written forms and rather fewer sounds. Avoir itself is inherited from Latin habēre, "to have" (EtymDB 2.1).

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tu as" — tü ah, the s silent
- the pair — "j'ai, tu as"
- with a noun — "Tu as un frère"

Before you move on

How do you say "you have" to a friend? (tu as, tü ah.) Is the s pronounced? (No.) Why can you not drop the pronoun? (The verb form alone does not say who — the pronoun carries it.) Next: he and she.

17.3 il a, elle a — he has, she has

The third form, and the shortest verb you will ever meet: one letter.

Sounds you'll need

- a is a bare open ah — the same sound as tu as, with nothing written after it.
- il a = eel ah. elle a = el ah.
- All three singular forms are now in your mouth, and the next lesson is about what they have in common.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

a is the form for il (he) and elle (she), and it is a single letter carrying an entire verb. It goes back to Latin habet, "has", worn down to one letter; avoir is inherited from habēre (EtymDB 2.1).
You already know the two pronouns from the articles: le and la split the world into masculine and feminine, and il and elle do the same for people. French has no separate word for it — a table is elle, a book is il, because the noun's gender decides.
One thing to notice for later. When French turns this into a question by putting the verb first, two vowels would collide — a il ? — so a t is pushed in between them: a-t-il ?, "has he?" That t means nothing at all. It is there purely so the mouth has something to land on.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "il a, elle a" — eel ah, el ah
- the three singulars — "j'ai, tu as, il a"
- the question shape — "a-t-il ?"; the t is only there for the mouth

Before you move on

How do you say "he has"? (il a.) And "she has"? (elle a.) How many letters is the verb? (One.) What is the t doing in a-t-il ? (Nothing — it keeps two vowels from colliding.) Next: why those three forms are harder to hear than to read.

17.4 ai · as · a — three spellings, one ear

You have the three singular forms. Say them one after another and listen to how much difference there actually is.

Grammar Lens: the endings are for the eye

Written, the three singular forms are ai, as, a — three different words. Spoken, as and a are the same bare ah, and ai is a single vowel too. The written endings differ; your ear has almost nothing to work with. This is not a quirk of avoir. It is the central fact about French verbs, and it has one large consequence: the pronoun is compulsory. Spanish can say tengo and drop the yo, because -o means "I" out loud. French cannot drop the je, because the ending that would have carried it went silent centuries ago. So French kept the pronoun and Spanish did not, and the two languages ended up in different places for the same reason: what the ear can still hear decides what the sentence must carry.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three verb forms bare — "ai, as, a"; hear how close they are
- them with their pronouns — "j'ai, tu as, il a"
- the consequence — "the pronoun does the work the ending stopped doing"

Twice through: "j'ai, tu as, il a"

Before you move on

Write it: the three singular forms (ai, as, a.) How many distinct sounds are there? (Effectively one — a bare vowel.) Why can French not drop its subject pronouns the way Spanish can? (Because the endings are silent — the pronoun is the only thing left that says who.) Next: the plural, where the endings come back to life.

17.5 nous avons — we have

Three forms that sound alike, and then this: an ending you can actually hear.

Sounds you'll need

- nous avons = noo-za-VO(N). The s of nous wakes up and buzzes into the vowel — that is the liaison you already know.
- `nasal-on` — the -ons ending is a nasal vowel; the n is the nose, not a consonant.
- Weight on the last syllable, as almost always in French.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avons is Latin habēmus, "we have."
Here the paradigm turns around. The three singular endings wore away to nothing; -ons did not. It is a full syllable, it is unmistakable, and it belongs to nous and nothing else.
That pattern holds across French verbs: -ons for nous, -ez for vous. Once you have those two you can hear the plural coming in any verb in the language, regular or not. avoir is one of the most irregular verbs French has, and it still obeys this.
So the difficulty is not spread evenly. The singular is a listening problem and the plural is not.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nous avons" — noo-za-VO(N), the s buzzing across
- the contrast — "il a" then "nous avons"; one is a vowel, one is a syllable
- the ending alone — "-ons is always nous"

Before you move on

How do you say "we have"? (nous avons, noo-za-VO(N).) Which ending marks nous? (-ons.) Why is this form easier to hear than il a? (The plural endings survived where the singular ones went silent.) Next: the other you.

17.6 vous avez — you have

The second plural ending, and a form you will use with strangers far more often than with crowds.

Sounds you'll need

- vous avez = voo-za-VAY. The same buzzing liaison as nous avons.
- `vowel-e-acute` — the -ez is the bright, narrow ay of février. The z is silent.
- Say nous avons, vous avez together: -ons, -ez, the two plural endings of nearly every French verb.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avez is Latin habētis, and it goes with vous.
vous is two things at once. It is the plural "you" — several people. And it is the polite "you" for one person, which is the use you will need first and most: a shopkeeper, a stranger, anyone you have not been invited to call tu.
So vous avez is what you say to one person you are being careful with. Getting this wrong is one of the few grammar mistakes in French that a listener hears as a mistake about them rather than about the language, which is why tu and vous is worth more attention than most endings.
The verb form does not change between the two meanings. Only who you are looking at does.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vous avez" — voo-za-VAY
- the two plural endings — "nous avons, vous avez"
- the two jobs — "vous to a group, vous to one stranger"

Before you move on

How do you say "you have" politely? (vous avez, voo-za-VAY.) What are the two jobs vous does? (Plural you, and polite you to one person.) Which ending marks vous? (-ez.) Next: the last form, and the odd one.

17.7 ils ont, elles ont — they have

The sixth and last form, and the one that does not resemble the other five.

Sounds you'll need

- ils ont = eel-ZO(N). The s of ils buzzes across into the vowel.
- `nasal-on` — ont is one nasal vowel; the n and t are both silent.
- elles ont = el-ZO(N), identical but for the first vowel.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ont is Latin habent, and it is the odd one out: every other form of avoir has an a in it, and this one does not.

There is a trap here worth meeting before you fall into it. ils ont is "they have." In two chapters you will meet "they are," one consonant away from it and just as common. The way to keep them apart is the liaison: ils ont buzzes — eel-z-o(n) — and the "are" form hisses. The buzz means have.

That is the whole paradigm. Six forms, and you now have all of them: j'ai · tu as · il a · nous avons · vous avez · ils ont

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ils ont" — eel-ZO(N), the buzz

- "elles ont" — el-ZO(N), the same buzz; the buzz means have
- all six in order

Before you move on

How do you say "they have"? (ils ont, eel-ZO(N).) What tells your ear that it means have? (The buzz — ils ont links with a z; the "they are" form you meet later hisses.) What is unusual about ont among the six forms? (It is the only one with no a in it.) Next: where the whole verb came from.

17.8 habēre — the root you already met

You have all six forms of avoir. You have also, without being told, already learned its root — in a different verb, several chapters ago.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avoir is Latin habēre, "to have."
Now recall habiter, "to live somewhere." That is Latin habitāre — and habitāre is just habēre run through a pattern that means "keep doing it." To habitāre a place is to keep having it.
So avoir and habiter are the same verb twice: one wore down to a vowel, the other kept the h, the b and the t because it was said far less often. The two French verbs sitting at opposite ends of the same root are a compact demonstration of the rule you met with j'ai: frequency is what erodes a word.
English borrowed the Latin whole and shows the root undisguised every time:

- habit — what you have regularly
- inhabit — to have a place; the exact twin of habiter
- exhibit — to hold out
- prohibit — to hold back

Four English words, one French verb you use constantly, and one French verb you met learning to say where you live — all the same handful of Latin letters.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the root — "habēre"
- the two French verbs — "avoir, habiter"
- the English four — "habit, inhabit, exhibit, prohibit"
- the twins — "habiter, inhabit"

Before you move on

What Latin verb is avoir from? (habēre.) Which other French verb you already know comes from it? (habiter — from habitāre, "to keep having a place".) Which English word is habiter's exact twin? (inhabit.) Why did avoir wear down so much further than habiter? (It is said far more often — frequency erodes a word.) Next: all six forms, together.

17.9 Practice — the whole of avoir

Six forms, learned one at a time. This is the first time they stand together — and a paradigm you have already built is a recap, not a wall.

Your turn: the six in order

Say these aloud:

- "j'ai, tu as, il a, nous avons, vous avez, ils ont"
- the singulars alone — "j'ai, tu as, il a"
- the plurals alone — "nous avons, vous avez, ils ont"

Twice through: "j'ai, tu as, il a, nous avons, vous avez, ils ont"

Your turn: the two halves sound different

Say these aloud:

- the three that blur — "ai, as, a"
- the two that do not — "-ons, -ez"
- "ils ont" with its liaison — eel-z-o(n); the buzz means have

Your turn: use it

Say these aloud:

- "J'ai un frère"
- "Tu as une sœur"
- "Nous avons du pain"
- the root — "avoir, habiter, inhabit"

What you've built so far

- six forms of the verb French leans on hardest, one lesson each.
- a listening fact — the singular endings are silent, so French keeps its subject pronouns where Spanish drops them.
- a root that pays twice — habēre gave French avoir and habiter, and English habit, inhabit, exhibit, prohibit.

Before you move on

Give all six forms without stopping. Which three sound effectively the same? (ai, as, a.) Which two endings can you always hear? (-ons and -ez.) What do you hear in ils ont that marks it as have? (The buzz — ont takes a liaison z.) What Latin verb is behind all of it? (habēre.)

17.10 un an — a year

One small word, and it unlocks the single most common question anyone will ask you in a new language.

Sounds you'll need

- `nasal-an` — an is a nasal vowel, the same one in blanc and janvier. The n is the nose, not a consonant.
- `silent-final` — the plural ans adds a written s and no sound at all.
- un an = a(n)-NA(N): the n of un links across into the vowel.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

an is Latin annus, "year," and English kept it whole in a whole shelf of words:

- annual — happening each year
- anniversary — literally the year turning (annus + vertere, "to turn")
- annals — a record kept year by year
- per annum — English never even translated this one

You have met annus's neighbours already: the months came out of the same Roman calendar, and janvier stands at the door of exactly this word.
French also has a second word for year, année, and the difference is real but small: an counts years, année describes them as a stretch of time. For counting — which is what the next lesson does — you want an.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "un an" — a(n)-NA(N), both vowels through the nose
- the plural — "deux ans, dix ans"; the s is silent
- the English family — "annual, anniversary, annals"

Before you move on

How do you say "a year"? (un an.) What Latin word is it? (annus.) Does the plural ans sound different from an? (No — the s is silent.) What does anniversary literally say? (The year turning.) Next: what French does with avoir and ans together.

17.11 j'ai vingt ans — having your years

Here is the first thing French lets you say that English cannot say the same way at all.

Grammar Lens: age is something you have

English is its age: you are twenty. French has it:

J'ai vingt ans. — literally, "I have twenty years."

Two things follow, and both are absolute.
The verb is avoir, never "to be." Building it with French's "to be" is not a stylistic choice; it is simply wrong, and it is the single most common thing an English speaker gets wrong in their first month.
And ans cannot be dropped. English says "I'm twenty" with no noun at all. French must name the years: J'ai vingt on its own means nothing.
One sound to get right. vingt normally ends in silence — you learned it as VA(N), with the g and t both dead. Put ans after it and the t wakes up: vin-t-a(n). That is liaison, doing what it always does — reviving a buried consonant when a vowel follows it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "J'ai vingt ans" — with the liaison, vin-t-a(n)
- the rule — "avoir, never 'to be'"
- the buried t waking — "vingt" alone, then "vingt ans"
- your own age, with the numbers you have

Twice through: "J'ai vingt ans"

Before you move on

How does French say "I'm twenty"? (J'ai vingt ans — "I have twenty years".) Which verb, and which is wrong? (avoir; "to be" is wrong.) Can you drop ans the way English drops "years"? (No.) What happens to the t of vingt before ans? (It wakes up — vin-t-a(n), a liaison.) Next: how to ask.

17.12 Quel âge as-tu ? — asking someone's age

You can answer the question. Now you can ask it — and this is a phrase worth taking whole rather than building.

Sounds you'll need

- Quel âge as-tu ? = kel AHZH ah-tü.
- `circumflex` — the hat on â is the gravestone you met on août: it marks a lost s. Older French wrote aage, and before that Latin had aetāticum.
- The g of âge is the soft zh of rouge.
- The polite form is Quel âge avez-vous ? — kel AHZH ah-vay-VOO.

The exchange

Take it as one unit, the way you took Comment vous appelez-vous ?

— Quel âge as-tu ? — "What age do you have?"

— J'ai vingt ans. — "I have twenty years."

Notice the question uses avoir as well. The whole exchange is built on having, on both sides — which is what makes it a pair worth memorising together rather than two separate facts.

And âge is a word you already own in English. Age came into English from French, hat and all, having lost its s on the way: Latin aetāticum → aage → âge → English age.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Quel âge as-tu ?" — kel AHZH ah-tü
- the polite one — "Quel âge avez-vous ?"
- both halves — "Quel âge as-tu ? J'ai vingt ans."
- the hat's meaning — "â marks a lost s, like août"

Twice through: "Quel âge as-tu ? J'ai vingt ans."

Before you move on

How do you ask a friend their age? (Quel âge as-tu ?) And a stranger? (Quel âge avez-vous ?) Which verb does the question use? (avoir — the same as the answer.) What does the circumflex on â mark? (A lost s.) Next: who else in Europe does it this way.

17.13 "having" your years — who else does it

French is not being strange here. It is on one side of a line that runs straight across Europe, and the line is exactly where you would draw it.

Why it's said this way

Ask the same question in six languages and count the verbs.

language	"I am 20"	verb
French	j'ai vingt ans	have
Spanish	tengo veinte años	have
Italian	ho venti anni	have
Portuguese	tenho vinte anos	have
German	ich bin zwanzig Jahre alt	be
English	I am twenty	be

A clean split, and not a coincidental one: every Romance language on that list has its years, and every Germanic one is them.
French treats age as something you carry: a count of years in your possession, which grows. English treats it as something you are, a property like tall or tired.

Neither is more logical. What matters is that the choice is inherited rather than reasoned: French did not decide this, it received it, along with the rest of what Latin left behind. And it means the mistake you are most likely to make — je suis vingt ans — is you importing your own family's habit into another one.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

j'ai vingt ans — ai ← Latin habeo, "I have"; vingt ← Latin viginti; an ← Latin annus, "year". All three are inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the four that have — "j'ai, tengo, ho, tenho"
- the two that are — "ich bin, I am"
- the line — "Romance has its years; Germanic is its years"
- the French one again, correctly — "J'ai vingt ans"

Before you move on

Which language family uses have for age? (Romance — French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese.) Which uses be? (Germanic — German, English.) Is either one more logical? (No — the choice is inherited, not reasoned.) Which error does that make an English speaker likely to commit? (Je suis vingt ans — importing English's be.) Next: all of it together.

17.14 Practice — to have, and how old you are

A verb and a sentence. Run the verb first, then use it for the thing it will earn its keep on.

Your turn: the paradigm, cold

Say these aloud:

- all six — "j'ai, tu as, il a, nous avons, vous avez, ils ont"
- backwards — "ils ont, vous avez, nous avons, il a, tu as, j'ai"
- "ils ont" — the liaison buzz that means have

Twice through: "j'ai, tu as, il a, nous avons, vous avez, ils ont"

Your turn: the exchange

Say these aloud:

- "Quel âge as-tu ?"
- "J'ai vingt ans" — with the liaison, vin-t-a(n)
- the polite pair — "Quel âge avez-vous ?"
- your own age

Your turn: use the verb on what you own

Say these aloud:

- "J'ai un frère, j'ai une sœur"
- "Nous avons du pain et du vin"
- the root pair — "avoir, habiter"

What you've built this chapter

- the whole of *avoir, six forms, one lesson each, and a paradigm you built rather than one you were handed.
- why French keeps its pronouns — the singular endings went silent, so je, tu and il carry what the verb stopped saying.
- age is something you have — J'ai vingt ans, never "I am," and ans is compulsory. Every Romance language on the continent agrees with French, and every Germanic one disagrees.

- one root, two verbs, four English words — habēre gave avoir and habiter, plus habit, inhabit, exhibit, prohibit.

Before you move on

Give the six forms of avoir. Ask a friend their age. (Quel âge as-tu ?) Answer with your own. Which verb must you never use for age? (The verb "to be".) Can ans be left out? (No.) Which other French verb shares avoir's root? (habiter.) What marks ils ont as have? (The buzz of its liaison.)

Chapter 18

The Compound Past

Modes: voice (12) Hands-free start: all 12 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can build and use French's everyday past tense, and recognise the second past tense that only appears in writing.
>
> French's everyday past is avoir plus a participle that never moves, so it costs one new form rather than six. It exists because habeō litterās scriptās once meant plain possession — 'I have letters, written ones' — and hardened into a tense, which is also why a participle still agrees when its object comes first. Then the other past: il parla, which you read in every novel and never hear. It is the same inherited tense Spanish says every day as habló, and it retreated into writing across a connected block of France, southern Germany and northern Italy while the languages at the western edge kept theirs.

18.1 parlé — the past participle

Before French can talk about the past it needs one new form of the verb, and for the verbs you already have it is the smallest change imaginable.

Grammar Lens: -er becomes -é

Take an -er verb and put an accent where the r was:

> parler → parlé · habiter → habité · travailler → travaillé

That form is the past participle. On its own it is not a tense and not even really a verb — it is closer to an adjective, and parlé means something like "spoken," the way written or broken work in English. That is worth holding on to, because it explains everything this chapter does next. You are not learning a past tense yet. You are learning a part, and the tense gets built out of it in the next lesson. All three of your -er verbs behave identically. There is no list to learn and no exception in this class at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the swap — "parler, parlé"
- the other two — "habiter, habité; travailler, travaillé"
- what it is — "spoken, lived, worked: adjectives, not tenses"

Before you move on

What is the past participle of parler? (parlé.) What changes? (The -er becomes -é.) Is parlé a past tense on its own? (No — it is closer to an adjective, "spoken.") Give the participles of habiter and travailler. (habité, travaillé.) Next: what to build with it.

18.2 j'ai parlé — the past built from "have"

You have both halves of French's everyday past tense already. This lesson only puts them next to each other.

Grammar Lens: avoir, then the participle

The recipe is two words:

avoir (conjugated) + past participle

So, with parlé:

- j'ai parlé — I spoke, I have spoken
- tu as parlé — you spoke

- il a parlé — he spoke
- nous avons parlé — we spoke
- ils ont parlé — they spoke

Only avoir changes. The participle sits there, identical in every line. So this is not six new forms — it is the verb you spent last chapter on, with one unchanging word after it.
Notice too that French makes no distinction English insists on. J'ai parlé is both "I spoke" and "I have spoken"; there is no separate form for the two. Where English has two past tenses to choose between, French conversation mostly has this one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the recipe — "avoir, then the participle"
- the run — "j'ai parlé, tu as parlé, il a parlé, nous avons parlé, ils ont parlé"
- another verb — "j'ai travaillé, j'ai habité"
- the two English meanings — "I spoke, I have spoken; French has one form"

Twice through: "j'ai parlé, tu as parlé, il a parlé"

Before you move on

What are the two parts of the compound past? (avoir* conjugated, then the past participle.) Which part changes with the person? (Only avoir.) Say "we worked." (Nous avons travaillé.) How many English tenses does j'ai parlé cover? (Two — "I spoke" and "I have spoken".) Next: a spelling trap you cannot hear.

18.3 parler · parlé · parlez — one sound, three jobs

Say the infinitive, the participle and the vous form out loud, one after the other. Now try to hear a difference.

Grammar Lens: your ear gets no help at all parler, parlé and parlez are pronounced exactly the same: par-LAY.

Three different jobs, three different spellings, one sound:

- parler — to speak (the infinitive)
- parlé — spoken (the participle)
- parlez — you speak (the vous form)

This is the same phenomenon you met with ai, as and a, and it has the same cause: French endings survive on the page and die in the mouth. But it lands harder here, because these three are different parts of speech, and only the sentence around them says which one you heard. The good news is that the sentence always does. Vous parlez has a pronoun in front of it. J'ai parlé has avoir in front of it. Parler has nothing in front of it, or another verb, the way English speak follows want to. In practice you never have to decide — which is why French speakers are untroubled by a distinction that looks impossible written down.
For writing, though, you do have to choose, and choosing wrongly is the single most common spelling mistake native French speakers make.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three — "parler, parlé, parlez"; one sound
- each in its frame — "vous parlez", "j'ai parlé"
- the rule of thumb — "what comes before it tells you which"

Before you move on

How many of parler, parlé and parlez sound different? (None — all three are par-LAY.) What tells you which one you are hearing? (What comes before it — a pronoun, avoir, or nothing.) Which is the participle? (parlé.) Next: the verbs that do not end in -er.

18.4 fini · vendu — the other two classes

Every verb you have met so far ends in -er. That is by far the biggest group, and it is not the only one.

Grammar Lens: three classes, three vowels

French verbs are sorted by how the infinitive ends, and each group makes its participle with its own vowel:

infinitive ends in	participle ends in	example
-er	-é	parler → parlé
-ir	-i	fini, "finished"
-re	-u	vendu, "sold"

fini and vendu are the standard examples, and they are here as examples of the pattern rather than words to add to your vocabulary — neither verb has had a lesson of its own in this book yet. What you want from this lesson is the shape: when you meet a verb, its infinitive ending already tells you what its participle will look like. That is three facts, not three hundred. And -er is the group that matters most in practice: it holds the overwhelming majority of French verbs, and it is the only group still taking new members — every verb French invents or borrows becomes an -er verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three endings — "é, i, u"
- the three participles — "parlé, fini, vendu"
- the useful half — "-er is the big one, and the only one still growing"

Before you move on

What vowel ends the participle of an -ir verb? (-i.) And an -re verb? (-u.) And -er? (-é.) Which class is by far the largest? (-er — and it is the only one that still takes new verbs.) Next: where those three endings came from.

18.5 -ātum · -ītum · -ūtum — where the endings came from

Three participle vowels, and two of them are inherited. The third is French tidying up after itself, which is a different kind of fact.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Latin marked its participles with a -t- and a vowel in front of it:

- parlé ← -ātum
- fini ← -ītum
- vendu ← -ūtum

French wore away the -t- and the ending, and kept the vowel. English, which borrowed from Latin rather than inheriting it, kept the -t- instead — you can see it whole in fini*te, acu*te, statu*te. Same suffix, two salvage strategies: French saved the vowel, English saved the consonant.

Now the third one, which is the interesting one. -ūtus* was rare in Latin. It turns up in a handful of words — minūtus (small, hence minute), tribūtus (assigned, hence tribute) — and nothing like a whole class.

French and Italian took that small, scrappy group and spread it across an entire conjugation. So -é and -i are straight inheritance, and -u is largely the language tidying up by analogy: a pattern noticed in a few words and then applied on purpose to many.

That is worth separating from ordinary etymology. Most of what this book shows you is erosion — words wearing down. This is the opposite force: speakers regularising, making a language tidier than they received it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three Latin endings — "-ātum, -ītum, -ūtum"
- what English kept — "finite, acute, statute"; the t survived
- the odd one — "-ūtus was rare, and French spread it"
- the two forces — "erosion wears words down; analogy tidies them up"

Before you move on

What did French keep from the Latin participle ending, and what did English keep? (French kept the vowel; English kept the -t-, as in finite, acute, statute.) Which of the three French endings is not straight inheritance? (-u — -ūtus was rare in Latin and French spread it over a whole class.) What is that process called? (Analogy — speakers regularising.) Next: why this tense exists at all.

18.6 habeō litterās scriptās — the buried possessive

There is an obvious question about this tense that is worth asking: why have? What does owning something have to do with the past?

Grammar Lens: it was never a tense to begin with Latin could say:

habeō litterās scriptās — "I have letters, written ones."

Read that as Latin, not as French. It is not a past tense. It is habēre in its plain, ordinary sense — I possess some letters — with scriptās as an adjective describing them, agreeing with litterās in gender and number the way any Latin adjective would.
The sentence says nothing about who did the writing, and nothing about when. It says: I own letters, and their condition is written. Then centuries pass. The phrase gets said constantly, the possession fades out of it, and what is left is the doing: I wrote. A construction about owning an object hardened into a construction about having done an action.

This happens to be one of the best-documented examples of the whole process, and you can watch it happen in the surviving texts. It is also why English "I have written" exists — English built the same thing, from the same starting point, independently.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the Latin — "habeō litterās scriptās"
- what it meant — "I have letters, written ones"
- what it became — "I wrote"
- the shift in one line — "possession hardened into a tense"

Before you move on

What did habeō litterās scriptās originally mean? ("I have letters, written ones" — plain possession.) What part of speech was scriptās? (An adjective, describing the letters.) What did the phrase turn into? (A past tense — "I wrote".) Why does French build its past out of have? (Because the construction began as one about having.) Next: the fossil that construction left behind.

18.7 les lettres que j'ai écrites — the fossil

The possessive is gone from the meaning. It is not gone from the spelling, and the place it survives is one of the strangest rules in French.

Grammar Lens: the participle still agrees, when the object goes first

Normally the participle never changes:

J'ai écrit les lettres. — "I wrote the letters." écrit, plain.

Move the object in front of the verb, though, and the participle agrees with it — feminine, plural, exactly as an adjective would:

> Les lettres que j'ai écrites. — "The letters that I wrote." écrites.

That -es is the two-thousand-year-old adjective ending from habeō litterās scriptās, still doing the job it was doing in Latin. The meaning moved on; the agreement stayed behind.
Two things make this bearable. First, you can almost never hear it — écrit and écrites sound the same, so it is a writing rule far more than a speaking one. Second, it now has an explanation instead of being arbitrary: the participle agrees when the thing it describes comes before it, which is where an adjective could still see it.
French schoolchildren spend years on this rule and are taught it as a list of conditions. It is really one fact with a very long memory.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the plain order — "J'ai écrit les lettres"
- the object first — "Les lettres que j'ai écrites"
- what the -es is — "an adjective ending, two thousand years old"
- the consolation — "you cannot hear it"

Before you move on

When does the past participle agree with the object? (When the object comes before the verb.) Why does it agree at all? (Because it was an adjective first, describing the thing that was possessed.) Can you hear the agreement in écrites? (No — it is a writing rule.) Next: all of it, together.

18.8 Practice — the past you actually say

> One tense, built from two things you already had. Run it, then take it apart again.

Your turn: build it

Say these aloud:

- "j'ai parlé, tu as parlé, il a parlé, nous avons parlé, vous avez parlé, ils ont parlé"
- with your other verbs — "j'ai travaillé, nous avons habité"
- what moves and what does not — "avoir changes; the participle never does"

Twice through: "j'ai parlé, tu as parlé, il a parlé"

Your turn: the three endings

Say these aloud:

- "é, i, u"
- the participles — "parlé, fini, vendu"
- the Latin — "-ātum, -ītum, -ūtum"; and English "finite, acute, statute"

Your turn: the sound trap and the fossil

Say these aloud:

- the three that sound alike — "parler, parlé, parlez"
- the old meaning — "I have letters, written ones"
- the fossil — "Les lettres que j'ai écrites"

What you've built so far

- a past tense, made of a verb you already knew and one unchanging word.
- three participle endings, one per verb class, two inherited and one spread by analogy.
- an explanation for the *have: the construction began as plain possession — I have letters, written ones — and hardened into a tense.

- a fossil you can point at: the agreement in écrites is an adjective ending that has outlived the grammar that required it.

Before you move on

Say "we spoke." (Nous avons parlé.) Which half changes with the person? (avoir.) Give the three participle vowels. (-é, -i, -u.) Which three forms of parler sound identical? (parler, parlé, parlez.) When does the participle agree? (When the object comes first.) Next: the other past tense — the one you will read and never say.

18.9 il parla — the past you read but never say

French has a second past tense. You will meet it on the first page of almost any novel and never once hear it in a conversation.

Grammar Lens: recognise it, do not produce it

It is called the passé simple, and it is one word where the compound past is two:

meaning	passé simple	passé composé
he spoke	il parla	il a parlé
they spoke	ils parlèrent	ils ont parlé
he had	il eut	il a eu

You do not need to produce these, and you should not try. Nobody says them. Using one out loud sounds roughly like announcing "thus spake he" in an English pub.

What you need is to recognise them, because they carry the past tense of essentially all French literature. A reader who stalls at il parla stalls on page one of everything.

So this is the first thing in this book that is deliberately half-learned, and that is a real distinction worth making: some things you learn to say, and some you learn only to understand. Treating those as the same job is what makes beginners feel they must master everything before reading anything.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair — "il parla … il a parlé"; same meaning, two registers
- the plural pair — "ils parlèrent … ils ont parlé"
- where you meet it — "in a novel, not a conversation"

Before you move on

What is il parla? (The passé simple — "he spoke".) Where will you meet it? (In writing, especially novels — never in speech.) Do you need to produce it? (No — recognition only.) What is the everyday equivalent? (il a parlé.) Next: who else kept this tense alive.

18.10 il parla · habló · falou — the same tense, four fates

The tense French retired to its libraries is a tense other people use to order coffee.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

il parla comes from the plain Latin perfect, handed straight down with no rebuilding at all. Which means it is the same tense as these:

language	"he spoke"	status
French	il parla	books only
Spanish	habló	everyday speech
Portuguese	falou	everyday speech
Italian	parlò	regional

One Latin ancestor, four different fates. A Spaniard saying habló and a French novelist writing il parla are using the same inherited form, and only one of them sounds archaic doing it.

That is worth sitting with, because it undoes an assumption. A tense is not formal or informal, literary or everyday, by its nature. Register is not a property of a form; it is a property of what a particular community of speakers happens to have kept.

French did not decide il parla was fancy. It just stopped saying it, and the books did not.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the sisters — "il parla, habló, falou, parlò"
- the split — "one of them is literary; the others are lunch"
- the finding — "register is not in the form, it is in the speakers"

Before you move on

What Latin tense is il parla? (The plain perfect, inherited directly.) Which languages still say it every day? (Spanish — habló — and Portuguese — falou.) So what makes a tense "literary"? (Not the form — what its speakers kept using.) Next: what pushed it out, and where else that happened.

18.11 the same retreat, three times over

French pushed its old past tense into books and replaced it with a compound built on have. It is not the only language that did.

Why it's said this way

language	the simple past	what replaced it in speech
French	passé simple	passé composé — j'ai parlé
German	Präteritum	Perfekt — ich habe gesagt
Italian	passato remoto	passato prossimo — ho parlato

Three languages, two Romance and one Germanic, each built a compound past out of "have," and each let that compound push the inherited simple past out of conversation and into writing.
The obvious reading is that this is a natural drift any language might undergo. The better reading is geographical. France, southern Germany and northern Italy form one connected block, and the change spread through it by contact, over the same few centuries — carried by people who lived near each other, across language boundaries that were never barriers to anything.

Linguists call that an areal change: one that travels by neighbourhood rather than by descent. And the evidence is at the edges. Spanish and Portuguese, out at the western rim, largely did not get it — they kept their simple past in everyday speech, which is why habló is still ordinary. Though Spain's Spanish has begun drifting the same way, with he hablado taking ground: the change reaching the edge, late.
So the map explains what the family tree cannot. Italian and Spanish are close relatives that behave differently here, and French and German are distant relatives that behave the same — because what mattered was who was standing next to whom.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

passé simple — passé, "passed", goes back to Latin passus, "a step"; simple ← Latin simplex. (EtymDB 2.1)

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three retreats — "passé simple, Präteritum, passato remoto"
- the three replacements — "j'ai parlé, ich habe gesagt, ho parlato"
- the shape — "a connected block: France, southern Germany, northern Italy"
- the edge — "Spanish and Portuguese kept theirs"

Before you move on

Which three languages made the same swap? (French, German, Italian.) Was it three separate inventions? (No — one change spreading by contact across a connected block.) What is that kind of change called? (Areal.) Which languages at the edge kept their simple past? (Spanish and Portuguese.) Next: everything together.

18.12 Practice — two pasts, and why

One tense to say and one to recognise. Run both, and keep the jobs separate.

Your turn: the one you say

Say these aloud:

- "j'ai parlé, tu as parlé, il a parlé, nous avons parlé, vous avez parlé, ils ont parlé"
- "j'ai travaillé, nous avons habité"
- the three endings — "é, i, u"

Twice through: "j'ai parlé, nous avons travaillé"

Your turn: the one you read

Say these aloud:

- the pairs — "il parla … il a parlé"; "ils parlèrent … ils ont parlé"
- the sisters — "il parla, habló, falou, parlò"
- the job — "recognise it; do not say it"

Your turn: the two histories

Say these aloud:

- where the tense came from — "I have letters, written ones"
- the fossil — "Les lettres que j'ai écrites"
- the three retreats — "passé simple, Präteritum, passato remoto"

What you've built this chapter

- the past tense you will actually use, built from avoir and a participle that never moves.
- three participle endings, and the fact that one of them was spread by analogy rather than inherited.
- an origin: the tense began as plain possession and hardened, which is why it uses have at all — and why a participle still agrees when its object comes first.
- a second past you only read, and the reason it is only read: not because the form is fancy, but because a block of neighbouring languages stopped saying theirs at roughly the same time, and the ones at the edge did not.

Before you move on

Say "they worked." (Ils ont travaillé.) Which part of the compound past changes? (avoir.) Which three forms of parler are homophones? (parler, parlé, parlez.) What is il parla, and what do you do with it? (The passé simple — recognise it, never say it.) Why does the participle agree in les lettres que j'ai écrites? (It was an adjective first, and the object comes before it.)

Chapter 19

To Be, and the Three Verbs Inside It

Modes: voice (12) Hands-free start: all 12 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can use all six forms of être, and explain why it has no pattern to find.
>
> The most irregular verb in French, and the irregularity turns out to have a shape. There is no pattern in être because être is THREE verbs: es- from esse for the present and infinitive, fu- from fuī for the passé simple — the same root as English be — and ét- from stāre, 'to stand', which supplied a whole limb of participles and the imperfect. The patching is called suppletion, and English does it too, with go and went. Spanish inherited the same two Latin verbs and made the opposite choice: it kept ser and estar apart and made you pick.

19.1 je suis — I am

The partner of avoir, and the most irregular verb in French. That irregularity is not carelessness; it is age.

Sounds you'll need

- je suis = zhuh SWEE. The s at the end is silent.
- The ui is a single glide: start at the tight u of tu and slide straight into ee.
- Do not hear an English swiss; there is no s at the end.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

suis is Latin sum, "I am."
Before you go looking for a pattern in this verb: there is not one. être is the most irregular verb in French, and it is irregular for the same reason English be / am / is / was is. These are among the oldest word-shapes in Europe, said millions of times a day for three thousand years, and constant use does not regularise a word — it protects it. Rare verbs get tidied up by analogy; the commonest ones are said too often for anyone to forget them, so they keep whatever shape history left them with.
So the six forms are six things to learn, and that is the honest situation. What this chapter can give you instead of a pattern is an explanation — because the irregularity turns out to have a shape once you know where the pieces came from.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "je suis" — zhuh SWEE, the final s silent
- a whole sentence — "Je suis fatigué"
- the Latin — "sum, suis"

Before you move on

How do you say "I am"? (je suis, zhuh SWEE.) Is the final s pronounced? (No.) What Latin word is it? (sum.) Why is this verb so irregular? (It is very old and very common — constant use protects a shape rather than tidying it.) Next: the same verb, to a friend.

19.2 tu es — you are

After suis, the shortest form in the verb — and one that is easy to swallow entirely.

Sounds you'll need

- tu es = tü ay. Two letters, one vowel sound.
- The s is silent, as it was in tu as.
- Careful: tu es and tu as differ only in that vowel — ay against ah. Say them back to back until the difference is deliberate.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

es is Latin es, unchanged. Latin said es for "you are" and French still does, which for a form this heavily used is unusual — most such words are ground down past recognition.
The pair to watch is not Latin, though. It is tu es against tu as: "you are" and "you have," one vowel apart, both extremely common, both with a silent s. English keeps them far apart; French does not.
That is the practical difficulty of this verb. Not the etymology — the fact that its forms are short, unstressed, and easily confused with avoir's.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "tu es" — tü ay
- the pair to keep apart — "tu es, tu as"
- both verbs together — "je suis, j'ai"

Before you move on

How do you say "you are" to a friend? (tu es, tü ay.) Which other very common form does it nearly collide with? (tu as, "you have".) What is the difference? (Only the vowel — ay against ah.) What Latin word is es? (es — unchanged.) Next: he and she.

19.3 il est, elle est — he is, she is

You have said this one already, many times, without knowing it was part of a verb.

Sounds you'll need

- il est = ee-LAY. The s and t are both silent, and the l of il runs into the vowel.
- Before a vowel the buried t wakes: est-il ? = eh-TEEL.
- elle est = el-AY.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

est is Latin est, also unchanged — and it is very probably the single most frequently said word-form in French.
You already own it. il est trois heures, "it is three o'clock," is this exact form; so is every time you have said what time it was. The clock chapter handed you a piece of être several chapters before the verb arrived, which is the ordinary way a language teaches itself: the commonest forms turn up inside fixed phrases long before anybody explains them.
Note also that il here is not "he." In il est trois heures it refers to nothing at all — French requires a subject even when there is nobody to be one. That is the same reason the pronoun cannot be dropped: the sentence needs the slot filled.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "il est, elle est"
- what you already knew — "il est trois heures"
- the three singulars — "je suis, tu es, il est"

Before you move on

How do you say "he is"? (il est, ee-LAY.) Where have you said this form before? (Telling the time — il est trois heures.) Who is il in that sentence? (Nobody — French needs the subject slot filled even when there is no subject.) Next: the plural, and a form with no French shape at all.

19.4 nous sommes — we are

Every verb you have met marks nous with -ons. Watch what this one does.

Sounds you'll need

- nous sommes = noo SOM. The s of nous buzzes across into the vowel.
- The final -es is silent; the word ends on the m.
- Compare nous avons, which ends in a nasal. This one does not.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sommes is Latin sumus.
And notice what is missing. Every other verb you have met marks nous with -ons: nous avons, nous parlons. This verb does not. There is no -ons here at all, and no way to derive sommes from anything. That is the shape of this verb's irregularity: it does not bend the rules, it predates them. The -ons ending is a regularity French built up over centuries, and être was already too well-worn and too heavily used to be dragged into it.
So sommes is not an exception to a rule. It is a survival from before the rule existed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "nous sommes" — noo SOM
- the missing ending — "nous avons, nous parlons, nous sommes"
- the reason — "it predates the rule, it does not break it"

Before you move on

How do you say "we are"? (nous sommes, noo SOM.) Which usual ending is missing? (-ons.) Why? (être is older than that regularity and was too common to be pulled into it.) What Latin word is it? (sumus.) Next: the form that keeps a hat.

19.5 vous êtes — you are

The politeness form, and the one that wears its history on the page.

Sounds you'll need

- vous êtes = voo-ZET. The s of vous buzzes into the vowel.
- `circumflex` — the hat on ê marks a lost s, the same gravestone you met on août and âge.
- The final -es is silent.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

êtes is Latin estis, "you are" — and you can read the erosion straight off the page.
estis → estes → êtes. The s after the first vowel fell silent and then fell out of the spelling, and the circumflex was put there to mark where it had been. This is the third time you have met that hat doing exactly this job, and by now it should be a reflex: see a circumflex, try putting an s back.
Do it here and êtes becomes estes, which is visibly Latin estis. Do it on août and you get aoust. Do it on âge and you get aage, from aetāticum.
The infinitive works the same way: être was estre, from Vulgar Latin essere*. The hat is not decoration on any of them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vous êtes" — voo-ZET
- put the s back — "êtes, estes, estis"
- the same trick on the infinitive — "être, estre"
- the two plurals — "nous sommes, vous êtes"

Before you move on

How do you say "you are" politely? (vous êtes, voo-ZET.) What does the circumflex mark? (A lost s.) Put it back — what do you get? (estes, from Latin estis.) And on the infinitive être? (estre.) Next: the last form, and the one you must not confuse with avoir.

19.6 ils sont, elles sont — they are

The sixth form, and the one you were warned about two chapters ago.

Sounds you'll need

- ils sont = eel SO(N). The on is nasal; the t is silent.
- Here is the pair to drill: ils sont hisses, ils ont buzzes. eel-so(n) against eel-zo(n).
- That single consonant is the whole difference between they are and they have.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sont is Latin sunt.
You now have both of the verbs French is built on, and their ils forms are one sound apart. That is worth two minutes of drilling on its own, because the two sentences it distinguishes are both things you will say constantly.
The full set, and you built every piece of it:
je suis · tu es · il est · nous sommes · vous êtes · ils sont Six forms and no pattern — which is what the next three lessons are about, because the reason there is no pattern turns out to be more interesting than a pattern would have been.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ils sont" — eel SO(N), hissing
- the pair — "ils sont, ils ont"; hiss for are, buzz for have

- all six — "je suis, tu es, il est, nous sommes, vous êtes, ils sont"

Before you move on

How do you say "they are"? (ils sont, eel SO(N).) How do you hear it against ils ont? (A hiss against a buzz.) Give all six forms of être. Is there a pattern in them? (No — and the next lessons explain why.) Next: where these forms actually came from.

19.7 esse — the first stem

Six forms with no pattern between them. Put them beside their Latin and something appears — not a pattern, but a seam.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Every present form of être comes from Latin esse, "to be":

- je suis ← sum · nous sommes ← sumus · ils sont ← sunt
- and the two short ones, tu es ← es, il est ← est, arrived practically untouched

Say each pair aloud and the irregularity stops looking random. The s- is there every time, and the forms are as scattered in Latin as they are in French — sum, es, est, sumus, estis, sunt is not a tidy paradigm either. French did not break this verb. It received it broken, and Latin had received it broken too.
The infinitive comes from the same place, by a detour. Classical Latin's infinitive was esse, which is short and odd; Vulgar Latin rebuilt it on the ordinary pattern as essere, and essere* → estre → être.
So one stem, es-, accounts for the present tense and the infinitive. That is most of what you have learned so far. The rest of the verb comes from somewhere else entirely.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pairs — "sum suis, sumus sommes, sunt sont"

- the stem — "es-, for the present and the infinitive"
- the rebuild — "esse, essere, estre, être"

Before you move on

Which Latin verb are all the present forms from? (esse.) Was Latin's version regular? (No — sum, es, est, sumus, estis, sunt is already scattered; French inherited the mess.) Where does the infinitive être come from? (Vulgar Latin essere, a rebuild of esse.) Next: a part of the verb that is not from esse at all.

19.8 je fus — the second stem

The past of this verb does not begin with an s. That is not a sound change. It is a different verb.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The passé simple of être — the literary past you learned to recognise — is je fus, il fut.
There is no way to get fus from suis, and nobody has ever tried. It comes from Latin fuī, and fuī comes from Proto-Indo-European b^{h}uH-, "to grow, to become."
That root went somewhere you will recognise. b^{h}uH- is also the source of English be. So English's be and French's fus are the same ancient word, and neither of them is related to French suis — which is the cousin of English is and am.
English has exactly the same patchwork, and nobody notices because it is their own: am and is from one root, be from another, was and were from a third. French is doing what English does. It is only visible here because it is somebody else's language.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the form — "je fus, il fut"
- the root — "fuī, from *b^{h}uH-: to grow, to become"

- the surprise — "that root is English be"
- the English patchwork — "am, is, be, was: three roots"

Before you move on

What is je fus? (The passé simple of être — "I was".) Is it related to suis? (No — different root entirely.) Which Latin word is it from? (fuī.) Which English word comes from the same root? (be.) Does English do the same thing? (Yes — am/is, be, and was come from three different roots.) Next: the third stem, and it is a verb about standing.

19.9 été — the third stem

Two stems so far. The third is the largest, and it is not a form of "to be" in any language — it is a verb about standing.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The past participle of être is été. It has nothing to do with suis and nothing to do with fus. It comes from Latin stāre, "to stand."
And it is not one stray form. Every être form beginning ét- comes from the standing verb:

- été — the past participle ← stātum
- étant — the present participle ← stantem
- j'étais, il était — the imperfect ← stābam

That is a whole limb of the verb, borrowed wholesale from a different one.
The idea is not far-fetched. "How are you?" is how do you stand? in more languages than not — English still says how do you stand on this, and standing means status. A verb for standing drifting into a verb for being is one of the best-worn paths in language.
Stāre left French other things too, outside être: rester ← re-stāre, "to stay," and coûter ← constāre, "to cost." What it did not do in French is survive as a separate verb meaning "to be."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the participle — "été"
- the limb — "été, étant, j'étais": all from stāre
- the meaning — "to stand"
- its other children — "rester, coûter"

Before you move on

What is the past participle of être? (été.) Which Latin verb is it from? (stāre, "to stand".) Which other être forms come from the same place? (Every one beginning ét- — étant, j'étais, il était.) Name two French verbs outside être from stāre. (rester, coûter.) Next: the name for what this verb is doing.

19.10 suppletion — three verbs in a trench coat

You have three stems and three different origins. There is a name for this, and having the name makes it stop being strange.

Grammar Lens: a paradigm filled in from elsewhere

Lay out what être is made of:

- es- — the present tense and the infinitive, from esse
- fu- — the passé simple, from fuī
- ét- — the participles and the imperfect, from stāre

One verb, three ancestors, and the joins are invisible unless somebody points at them.
The name for this is suppletion: one verb's paradigm filled in with pieces of another. It is not a French disease and not a sign of decay. It happens to the most used verbs in every language, and only to them — a verb has to be extremely common for speakers to tolerate a completely unpredictable form, and extremely common verbs are also the ones people reach for when another verb is missing a form.

English does it constantly and you have never thought about it:

- go / went — went was stolen outright from wend
- am / is / be / was — the same three-way patchwork as être
- good / better — better is not from good at all

So the answer to "why is être so irregular?" is now complete. It is irregular because it is old, common, and assembled from three verbs. There was never a pattern to find, and the time you might have spent hunting for one is better spent on the six forms themselves.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three stems — "es-, fu-, ét-"
- the word — "suppletion"
- the English case — "go, went; and went was taken from wend"
- the conclusion — "no pattern, because it is three verbs"

Before you move on

Name être's three stems and what each covers. (es- present and infinitive, fu- the passé simple, ét- participles and imperfect.) What is the name for a paradigm filled in from another verb? (Suppletion.) Give an English example. (go/went, or am/be/was, or good/better.) Which verbs does it happen to? (The most used ones — only they are common enough to survive it.) Next: what Spanish did with the same two verbs.

19.11 être / ser · estar — the same two verbs, twice

Stāre should have rung a bell. If you have ever looked at Spanish, you have met it wearing its own name.

Why it's said this way

Spanish has two verbs for "to be," and choosing between them is famously the hardest thing about beginner Spanish:

- ser ← esse
- estar ← stāre

Those are the same two Latin verbs French has. French did not get a different inheritance; it made a different decision with the same one.

- Spanish kept them apart as two verbs, and made every speaker choose between them for the rest of their life.
- French kept one verb, être ← esse, and quietly swallowed a large limb of stāre — the ét- forms — into it.

Neither language invented anything. They took the same two words and resolved the overlap in opposite directions, and the result is that a French speaker never thinks about stāre while a Spanish speaker thinks about it every day.
This is worth carrying beyond this chapter, because it is the general shape of how related languages differ. They rarely differ because one has something the other lacks. They differ because both inherited the same crowded set of options and tidied it up differently.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the Spanish pair — "ser, estar"
- their sources — "ser from esse, estar from stāre"
- the French answer — "one verb, être, which absorbed the ét- limb"
- the finding — "same two words, opposite solutions"

Before you move on

Which two Latin verbs lie behind Spanish ser and estar? (esse and stāre.) Are they the same two behind French être? (Yes — the identical inheritance.) What did each language do? (Spanish kept them apart as two verbs; French kept one and absorbed stāre's ét- forms.) Why do related languages usually differ? (They inherited the same options and tidied them differently.) Next: all six forms, together.

19.12 Practice — the whole of être

Six forms and three ancestors. Run the forms first; the history is what makes them stay.

Your turn: the six

Say these aloud:

- "je suis, tu es, il est, nous sommes, vous êtes, ils sont"
- backwards — "ils sont, vous êtes, nous sommes, il est, tu es, je suis"
- two sentences — "Je suis français", "Je suis fatigué"

Twice through: "je suis, tu es, il est, nous sommes, vous êtes, ils sont"

Your turn: the two verbs side by side

Say these aloud:

- the buzz and the hiss — "ils ont, ils sont"
- the vowel pair — "tu as, tu es"
- both verbs from the top — "j'ai … je suis"

Your turn: the three stems

Say these aloud:

- "es- from esse: the present and the infinitive"

- "fu- from fuī: the passé simple, and English be"
- "ét- from stāre: to stand"
- the name — "suppletion"; and "go, went"

What you've built this chapter

- the second verb the language rests on, six forms, one lesson each.
- an explanation instead of a pattern. There is no pattern in être because it is three verbs: esse, fuī and stāre, patched into one paradigm.
- a word for that — suppletion — and the knowledge that English does exactly the same with go/went and am/be/was.
- a comparison that generalises. Spanish kept ser and estar apart; French kept one verb and absorbed the other's limb. Related languages usually differ not by what they inherited but by how they tidied it.

Before you move on

Give all six forms of être. How do you hear ils sont against ils ont? (Hiss against buzz.) Name the three stems and their sources. (es- ← esse, fu- ← fuī, ét- ← stāre.) What is the process called? (Suppletion.) Which Spanish verb is stāre? (estar.)

Chapter 20

The Past That Takes être

Modes: voice (10) Hands-free start: all 10 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can choose between avoir and être in the past, and say what the participle agrees with and why.
>
> A short closed list of verbs refuses avoir and takes être, and it is easier as a shape than a list: arriving and leaving, in space or in life. Two corrections come with it — motion verbs like running take avoir, because motion is not transition, and five verbs switch to avoir the moment they take an object, which shows the rule is about the sentence rather than the verb. Then the agreement, which is audible for once: elle est morte. And underneath avoir's rule, être's rule and the pronominal rule sits one fact — the participle was an adjective, and it agrees with whatever it described.

20.1 je suis allé — the past built from "be"

You built a past tense out of avoir. Now meet the verbs that will not have it.

Grammar Lens: some verbs take être instead

The recipe is the same shape as before, with the other verb in front:

être (conjugated) + past participle

aller, "to go," is the headline case. Its past is not j'ai allé. It is:

- je suis allé — I went
- tu es allé — you went

- il est allé — he went
- nous sommes allés — we went
- ils sont allés — they went

Say j'ai allé to a French speaker and it will land as clearly wrong, the way I have went lands in English.
So you now have two past tenses that are really one tense with two auxiliaries, and the only question a verb ever raises is: which one? For the vast majority it is avoir, and this chapter is about the short list that says otherwise — what is on it, what is deceptively not on it, and the visible thing that happens to the participle when être is used.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "je suis allé, tu es allé, il est allé"
- the contrast — "j'ai parlé … je suis allé"
- the error, so you can hear it — "j'ai allé is wrong, like I have went"

Twice through: "j'ai parlé … je suis allé"

Before you move on

How do you say "I went"? (Je suis allé.) Which auxiliary does aller take? (être.) What is wrong with j'ai allé? (The wrong auxiliary — it sounds like I have went.) Which auxiliary do most French verbs take? (avoir.) Next: which verbs are on the short list.

20.2 aller · venir · naître · mourir — the shape of the list

Textbooks give this as a list to memorise, usually a dozen verbs long. It is much easier to hold as a shape.

Grammar Lens: arriving and leaving

The verbs that take être are these: aller (go), venir (come), partir (leave), arriver (arrive), entrer, sortir, monter, descendre, naître (be born), mourir (die), rester (stay), tomber (fall).
Read them as a shape and the list stops needing memorising:

> going, coming, being born, dying — arriving and leaving, in space or in life.

Every one of them is about crossing a threshold. Entering or leaving a place; entering or leaving the world; going up, going down, falling, staying put at the end of a movement. They are not verbs about doing something. They are verbs about ending up somewhere. Hold on to that phrasing, because it is what makes the next two lessons make sense. It is also why the participle behaves the way it does: if the verb describes where you ended up, the participle is describing you — and you will see it agree with you accordingly.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the four corners — "going, coming, born, dying"
- the shape — "arriving and leaving, in space or in life"
- the test — "not doing something; ending up somewhere"
- "je suis allé, je suis venu, je suis resté"

Before you move on

Give the shape of the être list in one line. (Arriving and leaving, in space or in life — going, coming, being born, dying.) What do all these verbs have in common? (They cross a threshold — they are about ending up somewhere, not about doing something.) Name three. (aller, venir, partir, naître, mourir, rester, tomber — any three.) Next: the verbs that look like they belong and do not.

20.3 j'ai couru — not every motion verb qualifies

> "Verbs of motion take être" is the rule most learners are given, and it will mislead you within a week.

Grammar Lens: moving is not arriving

These are all motion verbs, and every one of them takes avoir:

- j'ai marché — I walked
- j'ai couru — I ran
- j'ai nagé, j'ai dansé, j'ai voyagé — I swam, danced, travelled

You can run for an hour and arrive nowhere. That is the whole distinction. The être verbs are not about movement; they are about arriving, leaving and changing state — crossing a threshold, as the last lesson put it.
J'ai couru describes what your legs did. Je suis parti describes that you are no longer here. The first is an activity; the second is a change in where you are, and it is the change that takes être.
So correct the rule in your head now, before it costs you anything: not motion — transition.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the avoir ones — "j'ai marché, j'ai couru, j'ai dansé"
- against the être ones — "je suis parti, je suis arrivé"
- the corrected rule — "not motion, transition"
- the test — "you can run for an hour and arrive nowhere"

Before you move on

Which auxiliary does "to run" take? (avoir — j'ai couru.) But is it not a motion verb? (Yes — which is why "motion verbs take être" is the wrong rule.) State the right one. (Transition, not motion — arriving, leaving, changing state.) Next: the verbs that use both.

20.4 je suis monté / j'ai monté les valises

A handful of verbs sit on both sides of the line, and which side they are on depends on the sentence rather than the verb.

Grammar Lens: an object flips the auxiliary monter, descendre, sortir, rentrer and passer take être when they stand alone, and avoir the moment they take a direct object:

> Je suis monté. — "I went up." No object; être.
>
> J'ai monté les valises. — "I took the suitcases up." An object; avoir.

This looks like an extra rule to memorise. It is the opposite: it is the rule you already have, doing exactly what it said it would.
Je suis monté describes where I ended up — a transition, so être.
J'ai monté les valises describes something I did to the suitcases — an action on an object, so avoir. The verb has not changed its meaning much; what has changed is whether the sentence is about a transition or about an action, and that is the only thing the auxiliary has ever cared about.
So these verbs are not exceptions. They are the clearest demonstration that the rule is about the sentence, not the verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair — "Je suis monté … J'ai monté les valises"
- the same for going out — "Je suis sorti … J'ai sorti le vin"
- the reason — "transition takes être; an action on an object takes avoir"
- the conclusion — "what decides it is the sentence, not the verb"

Before you move on

Which auxiliary in je suis monté? (être — no object, a transition.) And in j'ai monté les valises? (avoir — a direct object.) Is this a new rule? (No — it is the same rule: transition takes être, an action on an object takes avoir.) Next: what happens to the participle.

20.5 elle est allée — the participle agrees

With avoir, the participle almost never moved. With être it moves every time, and this is the one agreement in French you can actually hear.

Grammar Lens: it agrees with the subject

French	English
Il est allé.	He went.
Elle est allée.	She went.
Ils sont allés.	They went.
Elles sont allées.	They (f.) went.

The participle takes the subject's gender and number — exactly like an adjective.

And the reason is the same fossil you already met. Elle est allée began as a plain description: "she is gone," with gone describing her, in the same way elle est fatiguée describes her. It was never an action she performed on something. It was a state she was in — which is precisely the shape of every verb on this list. So the participle agreed with her, and it still does.

One practical note. With aller you cannot hear the difference: allé and allée are identical aloud. But some of these verbs end in a consonant, and then you can — il est mort against elle est morte, where the t wakes up. That makes this the rare French agreement rule that is not purely a spelling problem.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the four — "il est allé, elle est allée, ils sont allés, elles sont allées"

- one you can hear — "il est mort, elle est morte"
- the reason — "she is gone: gone describes her"
- the parallel — "elle est fatiguée, elle est allée"

Before you move on

With être, what does the participle agree with? (The subject.) Say "she went." (Elle est allée.) Why does it agree? (It began as a description of her — "she is gone" — so it behaved like an adjective.) Which example lets you hear the agreement? (il est mort against elle est morte.) Next: the one rule under both auxiliaries.

20.6 une seule règle — both halves are the same fact

You now have two agreement rules that look unrelated. They are one rule, and seeing that is worth more than either of them.

Grammar Lens: the participle agrees with whatever it described auxiliary	the participle agrees with	because it was...

avoir	a preceding object — les lettres que j'ai écrites	"I have letters, written"
être	the subject — elle est allée	"she is gone"

Two rules, two different targets — and one explanation covering both. The participle was an adjective, and an adjective agrees with the thing it describes. That is all either rule says.

- With avoir, the thing described was the object you possessed: the letters are the written ones. So the participle agrees with the object — and only when the object comes first, because that is where an adjective could still reach it.
- With être, the thing described was the subject: she is the gone

one. So the participle agrees with her.

Both are the same sentence-shape from Latin, one built on habēre and one built on esse, and in both the participle is doing an adjective's job. French textbooks teach these as two chapters and a long list of exceptions. They are one idea with a two-thousand-year memory, and once you have the idea most of those exceptions write themselves.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the avoir case — "les lettres que j'ai écrites"
- the être case — "elle est allée"
- the single rule — "the participle agrees with whatever it described"
- the two old sentences — "I have letters written … she is gone"

Before you move on

With avoir, what does the participle agree with? (A preceding object.) With être? (The subject.) State the one rule underneath both. (The participle was an adjective and agrees with whatever it described.) Why does the avoir rule need the object to come first? (Because that is where an adjective could still reach it.) Next: the verbs that take être and ignore its rule.

20.7 je me suis levé — the pronominal family

The être list was short and closed. Here is one more family that takes être, and it has no end to it.

Grammar Lens: all of them, without exception

A pronominal verb is one carrying the little reflexive pronoun you met when you learned to give your name — the me of je m'appelle, the se of s'appeler.
Every one of them takes être in the past. No list, no shape to memorise, no exceptions:

je me suis levé — I got up

elle s'est lavée — she washed

Notice the word order: the reflexive pronoun comes before the auxiliary, not after it. Je me suis levé, not je suis me levé.
That gives you two ways into être, and they work differently. The verbs from the earlier list are a closed set you can hold as a shape. The pronominals are an open class identified by their form — if it has a me, te or se, it takes être, and you never have to ask.
But be careful with what comes next. They take être, and they do not follow être's agreement rule.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "je me suis levé"
- "elle s'est lavée"
- the word order — "je me suis levé"; the pronoun comes first
- the rule — "if it has me, te or se, it takes être"

Before you move on

Which auxiliary do pronominal verbs take? (être — all of them.) How do you recognise one? (It carries me, te or se.) Where does that pronoun sit? (Before the auxiliary — je me suis levé.) Is this a closed list like the earlier one? (No — it is an open class.) Next: the trap in their agreement.

20.8 elle s'est lavée — the auxiliary lies about the rule

Pronominal verbs take être. Now watch them ignore être's agreement rule completely.

Grammar Lens: être on the outside, avoir underneath

They agree with a preceding direct object — which is avoir's rule, not être's. Usually that object is the reflexive pronoun, and sometimes it is not:

> Elle s'est lavée. — She washed herself. se is the direct object, and it comes first, so the participle agrees.
>
> Elle s'est lavé les mains. — She washed her hands. The object is les mains, and it follows, so there is no agreement.
>
> Elles se sont parlé. — They spoke to each other. se is indirect — you speak to someone — so there is no agreement.

Which is, satisfyingly, the rule you already had. Nothing new has been introduced: the participle agrees with a preceding direct object, exactly as it did in les lettres que j'ai écrites.
The lesson to take is about appearances. The auxiliary looks like être and the agreement behaves like avoir, and if you let the first tell you about the second you will get it wrong every time. The auxiliary is not what decides agreement; it never was. What decides it is what the participle is describing.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- agreement — "Elle s'est lavée"
- no agreement, object after — "Elle s'est lavé les mains"
- no agreement, indirect — "Elles se sont parlé"
- the warning — "the auxiliary looks like être; the agreement is avoir's"

Before you move on

Which agreement rule do pronominal verbs follow? (avoir*'s — a preceding direct object.) Why does elle s'est lavée agree? (se is the direct object and comes first.) Why does elle s'est lavé les mains not? (The object is les mains and it follows.) Why does elles se sont parlé not? (se is indirect — you speak to someone.) Next: the group that escapes even this.

20.9 elles se sont souvenues — the verbs with no other form

One small group escapes even the rule you just learned, and it escapes for a reason you can work out rather than memorise.

Grammar Lens: no object to be an object of

A few verbs exist only in pronominal form. There is no plain version of them at all:

- se souvenir — to remember
- s'enfuir — to flee
- s'évanouir — to faint

There is no souvenir quelqu'un, no enfuir quelque chose. The se is not doing a job you could describe as direct or indirect, because there is no non-reflexive verb for it to be the object of. It is simply part of the word.
So the previous lesson's test cannot be run on them, and they fall back to agreeing with the subject:

> Elles se sont souvenues. — They remembered.

Which is where this chapter's whole argument lands. The agreement is not decided by the auxiliary, and not by a list of verb types. It is decided by what the participle is describing — and when there is no object in the picture at all, the only thing left for it to describe is the subject.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three — "se souvenir, s'enfuir, s'évanouir"
- the example — "Elles se sont souvenues"
- the reason — "no plain verb, so the se is not an object of anything"
- the landing — "what is left for the participle to describe is the subject"

Before you move on

What is special about se souvenir? (It exists only in pronominal form — there is no plain souvenir verb.) So what does its participle agree with? (The subject — elles se sont souvenues.) Why can the direct-object test not be applied? (There is no non-reflexive verb for se to be the object of.) Next: all of it together.

20.10 Practice — which auxiliary, and what agrees

Two questions cover this whole chapter: which auxiliary, and what does the participle describe. Run both.

Your turn: which auxiliary

Say these aloud:

- the contrast — "j'ai parlé … je suis allé"
- the shape of the list — "arriving and leaving, in space or in life"
- the trap — "j'ai couru, j'ai marché"; motion is not transition
- the switch — "je suis monté … j'ai monté les valises"

Twice through: "je suis allé, je suis venu, je suis resté"

Your turn: what the participle agrees with

Say these aloud:

- the four — "il est allé, elle est allée, ils sont allés, elles sont allées"

- the audible one — "il est mort, elle est morte"
- the avoir side — "les lettres que j'ai écrites"
- the single rule — "it agrees with whatever it described"

Your turn: the pronominals

Say these aloud:

- "je me suis levé"
- the three cases — "elle s'est lavée; elle s'est lavé les mains; elles se sont parlé"
- the group with no plain form — "elles se sont souvenues"

What you've built this chapter

- a second auxiliary, and a short closed list that is easier as a shape than a list: arriving and leaving, in space or in life.
- two corrections to the rule you would have been given. Motion verbs do not take être — transition verbs do; and five verbs switch the moment they take an object, which shows that what decides the auxiliary is the sentence, not the verb.
- an agreement you can hear — il est mort, elle est morte.
- one rule under everything: the participle was an adjective, and it agrees with whatever it described. Avoir's rule, être's rule and the pronominal rule are that one fact seen from three angles.

Before you move on

Say "she went." (Elle est allée.) Which auxiliary does "to run" take, and why? (avoir — it is motion, not transition.) What flips monter to avoir? (A direct object.) Which agreement rule do pronominal verbs follow? (avoir*'s — a preceding direct object.) State the one rule under all of it. (The participle agrees with whatever it described.)

Chapter 21

Head and Hand

Modes: voice (3) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first of 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the head and the hand in French with the right article, and point out the Latin manus hiding inside English manual, manufacture and maintain.
>
> Say la main with its nasal -ain, then run the manus family out loud — manual, manuscript, maintenir — and land on manufacture, 'made by hand', now the name for the opposite.

21.1 la tête — "the head"

The first body part, and one of the best etymologies in French. The word for head is not the Latin word for head.

You'll want to know: The word

la tête — the head. Feminine, so la.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Latin's word for "head" was caput. You can see it surviving all over Europe:

Portuguese	cabeça
Spanish	cabeza
Italian	capo (now "chief, boss")
English	captain, capital, decapitate

French has caput too, and in two layers. Inherited, worn down by use: chef ("chief," originally "head"), chapitre, cap (a headland), achever ("to finish" — to bring to a head). Re-borrowed later, straight from written Latin: capital, capitaine, décapiter.
What French does not use it for is the thing on your shoulders. Tête comes from Latin testa: an earthenware pot, a shell, a potsherd.

Why it's said this way

Soldiers' slang. Roman troops called the skull a testa the way English speakers say someone got hit on the noggin — a noggin being a small mug. It was a joke, it spread, and eventually the joke replaced the real word in Gaul and Italy.
So a French speaker saying j'ai mal à la tête is, historically, saying "my pot hurts."
Testa is still visible in English test — which began as the shallow pot an alchemist used to assay metals.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la tête"
- "j'ai mal à la tête" — "my head hurts"
- the joke — "testa = a pot"
- the receipt — "teste → tê-te"

Before you move on

Say "the head." (La tête — feminine.) Does it come from Latin caput? (No — from testa, an earthenware pot.) Why a pot?

(Roman soldiers' slang for the skull, which replaced the proper word.) Where did caput survive in French? (Inherited in chef, chapitre, cap, achever; re-borrowed in capital, capitaine, décapiter — just never for the head itself.) What does the circumflex on tête record? (A lost *s — teste, still visible in English test.) Next: the hand.

21.2 (la tête, continued) — The circumflex is a receipt

Before going on: say la tête again, and what it means.

Sounds you'll need

Look at the accent: tête. Chapter W01 taught what a circumflex records — a letter that used to be there, almost always an s.

testa → Old French teste → modern tête

The s stopped being pronounced, and the accent was put in to mark the grave. That is why English, which borrowed from Old French before the s fell, still has it in test.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to la tête, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to la tête? Say it once more, without looking.

21.3 la main — "the hand"

Where tête abandoned its Latin ancestor, this one kept it — and then lent it to English several dozen times over.

Je suis monté, but j'ai monté les valises: a direct object flips the helper to avoir.

You'll want to know: The word

> la main — the hand. Feminine, and worth flagging: it ends in a consonant and still takes la. French gender is not predictable from the ending, which is why this book always gives you the article.

The -ain is the nasal vowel of pain, the bread — say them together: pain, main.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Main comes from Latin manus, "hand." That word is inside an enormous number of English words, and once you see it you cannot unsee it:

English	literally
manual	done by hand
manufacture	made by hand (manus + facere "to make") manuscript	written by hand (manus + scrībere)
maintain	hold in the hand (manū tenēre)
manage	to handle — via Italian maneggiare, of horses
manoeuvre	work by hand (manū operārī)

Manufacture is the one worth pausing on. It means "made by hand" — and it now names precisely the thing that isn't.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la main" — and hear pain, main
- "j'ai mal à la main"
- the family — "manual, manuscript, maintain — all a hand"
- the irony — "manufacture = made by hand"

Before you move on

Say "the hand." (La main — feminine, despite the consonant ending.) What Latin word is it from? (Manus.) Give three English words built on it. (Manual, manufacture, manuscript, maintain, manage, manoeuvre.) What does manufacture literally mean? ("Made by hand" — now the name for the opposite.) And maintenir? (Manū tenēre, "hold in the hand".) Next: the rest of the body.

21.4 (la main, continued) — French kept it too

Before going on: say la main again, and what it means.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Maintenir / English maintain is Latin manū tenēre, "to hold in the hand" — a hand, plus the verb tenēre, "to hold."
So maintenance — the least romantic word in any office — is literally keeping something in hand.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to la main, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to la main? Say it once more, without looking.

Chapter 22

Yes and No

Modes: 🚗 voice (3) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 3 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can answer yes or no in French, send non through my nose as a nasal vowel, and recognise the ne … pas pair that carries negation inside a sentence.
>
> The oui / non pair said back to back, non's -on nasal placed against bon and bonjour, and the ne … pas frame named as the sentence-level negation to come.

22.1 oui — yes

> Where Spanish kept Latin's word for yes, French built a brand-new one — and named half a country after it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

oui = yes. Just two sounds, wee.
Its Romance cousins (Spanish sí, Italian sì) come from Latin sīc "thus." French took a different road entirely. oui comes from Old French oïl, and oïl is a squeezed-down Latin phrase:

> hoc ille ("this [is] it") → o-il → oui

You answered "yes" by saying, in effect, "that's the one."

Why it's said this way

This mattered so much it became a map. In the Middle Ages France was divided by how people said yes:

- the north said oïl → the langue d'oïl (which became modern French)
- the south said oc → the langue d'oc — still visible in the region name Languedoc, and in the language Occitan

One little answer-word, drawn as a border.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "oui" — wee
- the origin — "hoc ille → oïl → oui": that's the one
- the contradiction — "Tu ne viens pas ? — Si !"

Before you move on

How do you say yes in French? (oui.) What Latin phrase is it worn down from? (hoc ille, "this is it," via oïl.) What were the langue d'oïl and langue d'oc named after? (The two medieval words for yes.) When do you answer si instead of oui? (To contradict a negative — Tu ne viens pas? — Si!)

22.2 (oui, continued) — The other "yes," si

Before going on: say oui again, and what it means.

Grammar Lens: The other "yes," si

French keeps a second yes — si — for one special job: contradicting a negative. When someone says something isn't so and you insist it is, you answer si, not oui:

Tu ne viens pas ? ("You're not coming?") — Si ! ("Yes I am!")

(That si is the Latin sīc the Spanish sí also comes from — French kept it only for this contradicting move.)

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to oui, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to oui? Say it once more, without looking.

22.3 non — no / not

After French's home-grown oui, its no is the family word, shared straight with Spanish — but said the French way, through the nose.

Every pronominal verb takes être in the past: je me suis levé, elle s'est lavée.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

non = no. It comes from Latin nōn, the same source as Spanish no and Italian no:

Latin nōn	→
Spanish	no
Italian	no
French	non

Spanish dropped the n and left a clean no. French kept the n — but turned it into a nasal vowel: you don't quite touch your tongue to say the final n, you send the vowel through your nose. That's the sound written -on in non, bon, bonjour — you've met it before.

Grammar Lens: The seed of French negation

The word that actually carries negation inside a French sentence isn't non but its unstressed twin, ne — both worn down from the same Latin nōn. Modern French usually reinforces ne with a second word, giving the pair ne … pas:

> Je ne parle pas français = "I do not speak French."

For now, non on its own is your answer-word. In ne … pas, the ne is non's cousin from nōn; the pas was added later — it originally meant "a step" (Latin passus), as in "not walk a step" — and simply stuck. That fuller sentence negation is something you'll build later.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "non" — nasal, through the nose, like the -on in bon
- the pair with yes — "oui / non"
- the family — Latin nōn → Spanish no, French non

Before you move on

How do you say no in French? (non.) What Latin word is it from, and which Spanish word is its twin? (nōn; Spanish no.) What did French do to the n that Spanish dropped? (Kept it as a nasal vowel — the -on sound.) What pair does full French negation usually wrap around the verb? (ne … pas.)

Chapter 23

Please

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say please in French and choose between s'il vous plaît and s'il te plaît depending on who I am speaking to.
>
> Say s'il vous plaît with its silent final -t, take it apart into 'if it pleases you', then switch to s'il te plaît for a friend. The chapter's only lesson, so the payoff covers everything it introduces.

23.1 s'il vous plaît — please

French doesn't order you to do things — it asks, very politely, if it would please you.

Some verbs exist only with se: se souvenir, to remember. Elles se sont souvenues.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'il vous plaît = please — but taken apart it's a tiny sentence:

> s' (si, "if") + il ("it") + vous ("you") + plaît ("pleases") > → "if it pleases you."

You're not demanding; you're checking whether the favour would please them. It's the polite indirectness Spanish also uses in por favor ("for a favour") — same courtesy, built a different way.
The verb plaît is from Latin placēre, "to please" — which English borrowed wholesale: please, pleasure, pleasant, and (via "calm, pleasing") even placid.

Grammar Lens: Formal and familiar

French chooses the word for "you" by who you're talking to — and please comes in both:

- s'il vous plaît — vous, the formal / plural you (a stranger, an elder, a room). Often written SVP.
- s'il te plaît — te, the familiar you (a friend, a child).

Two sounds to respect: the final -t of plaît is silent (pleh), and plaît itself carries the ai = eh you've met.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "s'il vous plaît" — final t silent, see voo pleh
- taken apart — "if it pleases you"
- familiar — "s'il te plaît" to a friend

Before you move on

How do you say please in French? (s'il vous plaît.) What does it literally mean? ("If it pleases you.") Which Latin verb is plaît from, and what English words come from it? (placēre — please, pleasure, placid.) When do you say s'il te plaît instead? (To someone you address as tu — a friend or child.)

Chapter 24

Sorry

Modes: 🚗 voice (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: its only lesson.

> By the end of this chapter: I can apologise in French and pick between je suis désolé(e), pardon and excusez-moi for the situation I am actually in.
>
> Say je suis désolé(e) knowing it literally means 'I am desolate', then place pardon as the quick reflex and excusez-moi as the attention-getter. The chapter's only lesson, so the payoff covers everything it introduces.

24.1 je suis désolé(e) — "I'm sorry" (literally "I am desolate")

You already know s'il vous plaît, "please" — "if it pleases you." French's "sorry" is, secretly, a much bigger word than it sounds: désolé is the same word as English desolate.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

- je suis = "I am."
- désolé (feminine désolée) = "sorry," but literally "made utterly alone / devastated." It comes from Latin dēsōlāre, "to make solitary" — dē- ("thoroughly, completely") + sōlus ("alone"), the very root of English sole, solo, solitary, and desolate itself.

So je suis désolé(e) literally says "I am desolate" — French reaches for a word of real devastation to say a plain "sorry," the way English keeps "terribly sorry" as an option rather than a requirement.

Why it's said this way

French keeps two more courtesy words for different jobs:

- pardon — a quick, all-purpose "sorry / pardon me" (bumping someone, a small slip). It comes from pardonner, Latin per- ("thoroughly") + dōnāre ("to give") — "to give completely," i.e. to forgive. The neat part isn't that French and Spanish coined this separately — it's that they didn't have to: perdōnāre was already one word in Late Latin, so French pardonner and Spanish perdón/perdonar are simply two children of the same inherited word, not two languages independently landing on the same idea.
- excusez-moi — "excuse me," from excuser < Latin ex- ("out of, free from") + causa ("cause, charge") — literally "to free from a charge." Reach for this to get someone's attention, not to apologize for a real fault.

Je suis désolé(e) carries the most regret; pardon is the quick, light reflex; excusez-moi is for getting attention. Native speakers slide between all three by feel.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "désolé" — sorry / desolate — then "je suis désolé," I am sorry
- the quick one — "pardon"
- the attention one — "excusez-moi"

Before you move on

What does désolé literally mean, and what English word is it identical to? ("Made utterly alone" — the same word as English desolate.) What is pardon built from, and why does Spanish perdón look just like it? (Per- "thoroughly" + dōnāre "to give" — both simply inherited the same already-formed Latin word, perdōnāre.) What's excusez-moi for? (Getting someone's attention, not apologizing for a real fault.)

Chapter 25

Weather

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can talk about the weather in French — quel temps fait-il, il fait chaud, il fait froid, il pleut.
>
> Use le temps in both its senses, build the weather with faire (il fait chaud / il fait froid), and say il pleut with the Latin pl- cluster French kept intact. The chapter's only lesson, so the payoff covers everything it introduces.

25.1 le temps, il pleut — the same Latin word, a different fate for "rain"

> You've seen Spanish's tiempo mean both "time" and "weather" at once, from Latin tempus. French has the exact same word, the exact same double meaning — because this widening happened within Latin itself, before French and Spanish went their separate ways.

The two words: le temps — time and weather

le temps = both "time" and "weather" — from Latin tempus, same as Spanish's tiempo (English kept only the "time" half: temporal, tempo). So quel temps fait-il ? ("what's the weather like?") is literally "what time does it make?" — the identical construction inside Spanish's ¿qué tiempo hace?.

Grammar Lens: il fait chaud / il fait froid

Il fait chaud. — "It's hot." — literally "it makes hot." Il fait froid. — "It's cold." — literally "it makes cold."

Same hacer-style periphrasis as Spanish, just with French's own faire ("to make/do").

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le temps" — time, or weather, depending on context
- "il fait chaud. il fait froid." — it's hot/cold
- "il pleut" — it's raining, pl- kept intact from Latin

Before you move on

What two things does le temps mean, and where does this polysemy come from? ("Time" and "weather" — from Latin tempus, already double-sensed before French/Spanish split apart.) Does French's il pleut show the same pl- → ll- shift as Spanish's llueve? (No — French kept the pl- cluster intact; only Spanish underwent that shift.)

25.2 (le temps, il pleut, continued) — il pleut

Before going on: say le temps, il pleut again, and what it means.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Il pleut. — "It's raining." — from pleuvoir ← Latin pluere, "to rain" — the same Latin verb behind Spanish's llueve. But here's the honest difference: Spanish underwent the pl- → ll- shift (pluere → llover), while French kept the pl- cluster fully intact — pleuvoir still visibly starts with pl-, just like the Latin original. So the same Latin verb took two different sound-change paths in its two daughters:

one eroded the cluster, one preserved it.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to le temps, il pleut, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to le temps, il pleut? Say it once more, without looking.

Chapter 26

Dog and Cat

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a dog and a cat in French and say why chien is the regular descendant of canis while chat is a word that travelled out of Egypt.
>
> Say chien and check its ca- → cha- shift against champ and chanter, then say chat and place it beside Spanish gato and Italian gatto as one inherited cattus. The chapter's only lesson, so the payoff covers everything it introduces.

26.1 chien, chat — the regular one, and the well-traveled one

You've met Spanish's perro, a genuine unsolved mystery, and Latin's own canis/fēlēs→cattus history. French's two animal words tell a cleaner story: one is perfectly regular, the other is the same well- documented word you already know.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chien ("dog") comes straight from Latin canis (accusative canem) — and unlike Spanish, French kept it. Two separate, regular changes are stacked here: the initial c→ch is the same ca- → cha- palatalization you can check against other Latin words — campus → champ ("field"), cantāre → chanter ("to sing"); the a→ie in the middle is a different, later shift specific to words like canem (known as Bartsch's Law — the outcome is completely regular and undisputed, even though the precise phonetic trigger is still debated). Put together, chien is a fully regular sound change, following French's own rules predictably — a genuinely different story from Spanish, where the expected descendant (can) got pushed aside by the still-unexplained perro.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "chien" — dog, the regular descendant of canis
- "champ, chanter" — the same ca- → cha- shift, in field and to sing
- "chat" — cat, the same word as Spanish's gato, from Egypt via Rome

Before you move on

Is chien a regular or irregular descendant of Latin canis? (Regular — the same ca- → cha- shift as champ and chanter.) Does French show the same perro-style mystery Spanish does for "dog"? (No — French kept the expected Latin word.) What word does chat continue, and where did that word most likely originate? (Cattus, most likely Afro-Asiatic, traveling with the cat out of Egypt.)

26.2 (chien, chat, continued) — chat

Before going on: say chien, chat again, and what it means.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chat ("cat") continues cattus, the same Late Latin word — most likely ultimately Afro-Asiatic (compare Nubian kadis) — that spread along Roman trade routes as domestic cats themselves spread out of Egypt. This is the identical word behind Spanish's gato and Italian's gatto — French, Spanish, and Italian all independently inherited the exact same Late Latin replacement for Classical fēlēs.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to chien, chat, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to chien, chat? Say it once more, without looking.

Chapter 27

Green and Yellow

Modes: 🚗 voice (2) 🚗 Hands-free start: both lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name green and yellow in French, and say how solid the claimed link between jaune and German gelb actually is.
>
> Say vert as the ordinary Romance inheritance from viridis, say jaune as galbinus 'yellow-green', and state the jaune / gelb cousinhood as probable rather than certain. The chapter's only lesson, so the payoff covers everything it introduces.

27.1 vert, jaune — the expected inheritance, and a hidden PIE-level cousin

French's green word is exactly what you'd expect. Its yellow word hides something you won't expect at all — a secret cousin sitting inside German.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vert ("green") ← Latin viridis — and this is genuinely the standard source of "green" across nearly every Romance language: Spanish verde, Italian verde, Portuguese verde, Catalan verd. No surprise here — a clean, shared inheritance.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "vert" — green, the standard Romance word
- "jaune" — yellow, literally "yellow-green"
- the probable cousin — "jaune, gelb" — likely the same ancient PIE root, two completely different paths, though the link isn't airtight

Before you move on

Is vert a typical or unusual Romance word for "green"? (Typical — the standard source across nearly all Romance languages.) What did Latin galbinus, the source of jaune, literally mean? ("Yellow-green.") What German word is usually called jaune's deep PIE cousin, and how solid is that link? (Gelb — both usually traced to PIE ghel-*, "to shine," though modern Latin scholarship treats galbus's origin as genuinely unknown, so the connection is probable, not certain.)

27.2 (vert, jaune, continued) — jaune

Before going on: say vert, jaune again, and what it means.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jaune ("yellow") ← Latin galbinus, which literally meant "yellow-green" — an extended form of galbus, from Proto-Indo-European ghel-, "to shine" (with derivatives covering green, yellow, and gold alike — the same root gives Greek khlōros, "greenish-yellow"). Here's the genuinely surprising part: this same PIE root, *ghel-, is also usually cited as the source of German's gelb and English's yellow — by a completely separate, Germanic path (Proto-Germanic *gelwaz). Honesty check, though: the galbus→ghel-* link itself is less secure than it looks — some modern Latin scholarship treats galbus's origin as unknown rather than confirming the connection. So jaune and gelb are probably cousins at the Proto-Indo-European level, despite one reaching French through Latin and the other reaching German directly through Germanic — just don't treat that link as airtight.

Your turn

- Say it: what this lesson added to vert, jaune, in one sentence

Before you move on

What did this lesson add to vert, jaune? Say it once more, without looking.

Chapter 28

Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I take, ask, help and like or love in French, break prendre's stem the way its plural requires, and know that je t'aime bien is weaker than je t'aime rather than stronger.
>
> Run the chapter's four verbs together with je — je prends, je demande, j'aide, j'aime — then turn aimer over: one verb covers like and love, the thing named decides which, and adding bien downgrades it. Reaches back past the chapter to re-say le chien and le chat from Chapter 22, le vert from Chapter 23, and the s'il vous plaît request from Chapter 19.

28.1 prendre — "to take," the verb your hand does

> You already have la main, the hand. Here is the verb that hand performs — and it turns out to be hiding inside a surprising number of English words you use without thinking.

You'll want to know: the word

> prendre — to take. Said PRAHN-druh: the -en- is the nasal vowel of an, sent through the nose, not a clean en.
>
> Je prends le pain. — I take the bread.

The -ds of je prends is silent. You say prahn, and stop.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prendre ← Latin prehendere, "to grasp, to seize," which Romans themselves shortened to prendere. That short form is the one French inherited — and English borrowed the family repeatedly:

- prehensile — a tail that grasps.
- apprehend — to seize (ad- "toward" + grasp); reprehensible, something to be seized back on.
- prison ← Latin prehensiō, "a seizing" — a jail is, literally, a taking-hold.
- surprise — French sur- "over" + prendre: an over-taking.
- enterprise, something undertaken; apprentice, one who takes on.
- impregnable — from Old French imprenable, "not takeable." Nothing to do with pregnancy.

Manus gave you a hand that holds — manual, maintain. Prendere gives you the hand that closes.

Grammar Lens: the stem that doubles

Prendre is irregular, and its irregularity is one clean rule: the stem loses its d, and in the ils form it doubles its n. Say the six:

- je prends — prahn
- tu prends — prahn
- il prend — prahn (all three identical to the ear)
- nous prenons — pruh-NOHN, and the nasal is gone
- vous prenez — pruh-NAY, nasal gone again
- ils prennent — PREN, a doubled n and a flat e

So the nasal survives in the singular and dies in the plural. That is the whole verb.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "prendre" — PRAHN-druh, nasal in the middle
- "je prends le pain" then "nous prenons le pain" — nasal, then no nasal
- "je prends la main" — I take the hand, the manus you already have
- the family — "prehensile, apprehend, prison, surprise" — all a grasp

Before you move on

Say "I take the bread." (Je prends le pain — and the -ds is silent.) What happens to the nasal in nous prenons? (It disappears; the stem flattens to pruh-.) What did Latin prehendere mean, and what is a prison literally? (To grasp; a prison is "a seizing".) And the hand that does the taking? (La main.)

28.2 demander — "to ask," and the trap it sets in English

Prendre was taking. This one is the opposite move: putting a question out. And it is the word most likely to make you sound furious when you meant to sound polite.

You'll want to know: the word

demander — to ask. Said duh-mahn-DAY: the -an- is that same nasal from prendre, and the -er ending is a clean ay.

Je demande l'heure. — I ask the time.

It is an ordinary -er verb, so nothing in it breaks: je demande, tu demandes, il demande, nous demandons, vous demandez, ils demandent. Only nous and vous are audible; the other four all sound duh-MAHND.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

demander ← Latin dēmandāre, "to hand over, to entrust" — dē- plus mandāre. And mandāre is itself two words: manus, "hand," plus dare, "to give." Giving into the hand.
So the manus you met in la main is sitting inside this verb too:

- mandate — what was placed in someone's hands to carry out.
- command — com- + mandāre: to entrust an order; and commandment, ten of them.
- mandatory — handed over as an obligation; remand, handed back.

One family, two very different jobs: manual is work done by the hand, mandate is a charge given into it.

Why it's said this way

> Careful. French demander means simply "to ask." It is neutral, everyday and perfectly polite. English demand is forceful — a thing you insist on.

Je demande l'heure is "I'm asking the time," not "I demand the time." The English word drifted toward force; the French one never did. Translate demander as ask, every time, and you will never be rude by accident.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "demander" — duh-mahn-DAY, nasal in the middle
- "je demande l'heure" — I ask the time, not demand it
- "je prends, je demande" — take, then ask
- the family — "mandate, command, mandatory" — a hand and a giving

Before you move on

Say "I ask the time." (Je demande l'heure.) Does demander carry the force of English demand? (No — it is the ordinary, polite word for asking.) What two Latin words are inside mandāre, and which one do you already know? (Manus "hand" — the source of la main — plus dare, "to give.")

28.3 aider — "to help," and the English word that is really the same word

You can ask for something now. This is the verb for what you hope the other person then does — and it is one of the rare cases where the English cousin is not a distant relative but the very same word, spelled shorter.

You'll want to know: the word

aider — to help. Said ay-DAY: the ai- is a plain ay, the -er ending is another ay. Two of them in a row.

Vous m'aidez. — You are helping me.

Another ordinary -er verb: j'aide, tu aides, il aide, nous aidons, vous aidez, ils aident. The j' is the elision you already make in j'ai.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aider ← Latin adiūtāre, a repeated-action form of adiuvāre — ad- "toward" plus iuvāre, "to help." English took the same verb through French and clipped it:

- aid — the noun and verb; aide, a person who is your help.
- aide-de-camp — literally a "camp helper," an officer's assistant.
- adjutant, the officer who assists; adjuvant, a substance in medicine that helps another one work.

Two honesty notes. English help is Germanic and has no connection to aider whatsoever. And juvenile is not in this family: that is Latin iuvenis, "young," a different word that merely resembles iuvāre.

Grammar Lens: asking for it politely

Put the verb together with the courtesy you already have:

> Vous m'aidez, s'il vous plaît. — Help me, please. Tu m'aides, s'il te plaît. — the same request, to a friend.

The register has to match on both halves. Vous takes s'il vous plaît; tu takes s'il te plaît. Mixing them — tu m'aides, s'il vous plaît — is the mistake a beginner makes most, and a French ear catches it instantly.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "aider" — ay-DAY, two ay sounds
- "j'aide" then "vous aidez"
- "vous m'aidez, s'il vous plaît" — both halves formal
- "tu m'aides, s'il te plaît" — both halves familiar
- "je demande, vous aidez" — I ask, you help

Before you move on

Ask a stranger for help, politely. (Vous m'aidez, s'il vous plaît.) And a friend? (Tu m'aides, s'il te plaît — both halves change together.) What Latin verb is aider from, and which English word is the same word? (Adiūtāre; English aid.) Is English help related? (No — it is Germanic, unrelated.)

28.4 aimer — one verb for "like" and "love," and the word that weakens it

Three verbs so far: je prends, je demande, j'aide. The fourth does a job English needs two words for — and the way you soften it is the opposite of what you would guess.

You'll want to know: the word

> aimer — to like and to love. Said ay-MAY: the ai- is ay, the -mer is may.
>
> J'aime le chien. — I like the dog. J'aime le chat. — I like the cat.

An ordinary -er verb: j'aime, tu aimes, il aime, nous aimons, vous aimez, ils aiment. French does not choose between "like" and "love" — the thing you name does. A dog, a colour, a food: that reads as like. A person: love.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aimer ← Latin amāre, "to love," and English is full of it:

- amateur — one who does a thing for love, not for money.
- amorous, full of love; enamoured, in it; paramour, beside it.
- amiable and amicable — from amīcus, "friend"; amity between nations.

An honest stop, though: unlike viridis behind vert, amāre has no agreed ancestor beyond Latin. It is often guessed to be a nursery word, a baby's amma, but that is a guess. The trail genuinely ends at Latin.

Why it's said this way

> Je t'aime. — I love you. Full strength. Je t'aime bien. — I like you. Much weaker.

Every English speaker gets this backwards. Bien means "well," so je t'aime bien looks like it ought to be more. It is less. Adding bien downgrades love to friendly liking, which is exactly why je t'aime bien is the polite way to turn someone down.
With a thing, no such danger: j'aime bien le chat is simply "I quite like the cat." The trap only bites when the object is a person.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "j'aime le chien" then "j'aime le chat" — liking, because they are animals
- "j'aime le vert" — I like green
- "je t'aime" then "je t'aime bien" — love, then only liking
- the four verbs — "je prends, je demande, j'aide, j'aime"
- "vous m'aidez, s'il vous plaît" — the request, once more
- "aimer, amateur, amiable" — the amāre family, which stops at Latin

Before you move on

Which is stronger, je t'aime or je t'aime bien? (Je t'aime — bien makes it weaker.) Say "I like the dog" and "I like green." (J'aime le chien. J'aime le vert.) What does amateur literally mean, and how far back does amāre go? (One who does it for love; the trail stops at Latin.) Say the chapter's four verbs with je. (Je prends, je demande, j'aide, j'aime.)

Chapter 29

Verbs of the Mind

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I understand, think, read and write in French, and take comprendre apart into com- plus prendre — so understanding, in French, is grasping.
>
> Say the chapter's four with je — je comprends, je pense, je lis, j'écris — and take écrire apart into scrībere 'to scratch' plus the propped-up é- that also made école and étoile. Reaches back past the chapter to la main and manus from Chapter 17, which meet écrire inside the single word manuscript, and to prendre and aimer from Chapter 24.

29.1 comprendre — "to understand," which is just taking, together

This is the cheapest verb you will ever learn, because you already own all of it. Prendre was "to take." Put com- in front, and French tells you what it thinks understanding actually is.

You'll want to know: the word

comprendre — to understand. Said kohn-PRAHN-druh: two nasals in a row, kohn then prahn.

Je comprends. — I understand. Vous comprenez ? — Do you understand?

The -ds of je comprends is silent, exactly as in je prends.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

comprendre is com- ("together, with") + prendre ("to take"), and Latin had already built it: comprehendere, "to grasp several things at once." Nothing has been added since. To understand, in French, is to get your hand around the whole of it.
English took the long Latin form and the short French one both:

- comprehend — the full Latin spelling, straight through.
- comprehensive — having taken everything in; comprehension.
- comprise — from French compris, "taken together": what a thing takes in.

And you can hear the metaphor still alive in English: we say we grasp an idea, or that a point is over our heads — out of reach of the hand.

Grammar Lens: the same verb, so the same forms

Because comprendre is prendre with a prefix, it breaks in exactly the same places. Nothing new to memorise — say the six and hear the nasal die in the plural, just as before:

- je comprends — kohn-PRAHN
- tu comprends — kohn-PRAHN
- il comprend — kohn-PRAHN (three identical to the ear)
- nous comprenons — kohn-pruh-NOHN, nasal gone from the stem
- vous comprenez — kohn-pruh-NAY
- ils comprennent — kohn-PREN, the doubled n again

This is worth more than one verb. Every French verb built on prendre behaves this way, so the pattern you drilled once now pays out repeatedly.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "je prends" then "je comprends" — the second is the first, plus com-
- "nous prenons, nous comprenons" — both lose the nasal
- "vous comprenez ?" then answer "oui" and then "non"
- "comprendre, comprehend, comprise" — one family, two spellings

Before you move on

What two pieces is comprendre made of, and what does the whole literally mean? (Com- "together" + prendre "to take" — to take together.) Say "we understand." (Nous comprenons — nasal gone, like nous prenons.) Someone asks vous comprenez ? — give both possible answers. (Oui or non.)

29.2 penser — "to think," which began as weighing

Understanding, you saw with comprendre, is grasping. This verb says thinking is weighing — and once you know that, half a dozen English words you use in money and medicine suddenly line up behind it.

You'll want to know: the word

penser — to think. Said pahn-SAY: the -en- is the nasal you have been making since prendre, and -er is a clean ay.

Je pense. — I think. Vous pensez ? — Do you think so?

A completely regular -er verb after the strain of comprendre: je pense, tu penses, il pense, nous pensons, vous pensez, ils pensent. Four of the six sound identical — pahns — and only nous and vous stand out.

Sounds you'll need

Two nasals sit close together in French and beginners flatten them into one. Hold them apart by saying them back to back:

- non — the -on nasal, rounded, lips pushed forward.
- pense — the -en nasal, unrounded, mouth wider and flatter.

Same trick every time: your lips tell the two apart, not your tongue.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

penser ← Latin pēnsāre, "to weigh carefully," a repeated-action form of pendere, "to weigh, to hang." Roman weighing was done by hanging things from a balance, which is why one root covers both. English inherited the whole scale:

- pensive — weighing something in your mind.
- compensate — to weigh one thing against another until they balance; expense and expend, money weighed out; dispense, weighed apart.
- pension — originally a weighing-out, a payment; poise, a balance held.
- suspend and pendant — the hanging half of the same root.

The prettiest cousin is a flower. French pensée means "a thought" — and English borrowed it, sound and all, as pansy.
One honest note: English think is Germanic and is not related to any of this. The two words mean the same thing and share no history.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "penser" — pahn-SAY
- "non, pense" — the round nasal, then the flat one
- "je pense" then "je comprends" — I think, I understand

- "penser, pensive, compensate, pansy" — all a weighing

Before you move on

Say "I think" and "do you think so." (Je pense. Vous pensez ?) What did Latin pēnsāre mean, and name three English cousins. (To weigh — pensive, compensate, expense, pension, poise.) What flower is French for "a thought"? (The pansy, from pensée.) Which of non and pense has the rounded lips? (Non — pense is flat and wide.)

29.3 lire — "to read," which used to mean "to pick up"

A short word with an enormous family behind it. Before lire meant reading, its Latin ancestor meant gathering — and that older sense is why a dozen English words that seem unrelated turn out to be relatives.

You'll want to know: the word

lire — to read. Said leer, with the throaty French r at the end.

Je lis le français. — I read French.

Lire is irregular, and its stem grows an s in the plural. Say the six:

- je lis — lee, the -s silent
- tu lis — lee
- il lit — lee (three identical again)
- nous lisons — lee-ZOHN, and there is the s
- vous lisez — lee-ZAY
- ils lisent — LEEZ

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lire ← Latin legere, whose first meaning was "to gather, to pick out." Reading was a later use of it: your eye picks the letters up off the page one after another. Both senses left English words behind. The reading half:

- legible, able to be picked out; lecture, "a reading"; lesson, from lectiō, the passage read aloud.
- legend — literally "things which must be read."

The gathering half, which is the surprise:

- collect — gather together; select, gather apart; elect, pick out; neglect, fail to pick up at all.
- elegant — originally "choosy," someone who picks well; diligent; intellect, what picks between things.

One honest limit. Greek's legein — the -logy in every science name — is a cousin, not a parent: it descends from the same ancient root alongside Latin legere, rather than from it. And French le livre, "book," is not in this family at all; that is Latin liber, a separate word.

Your turn

- Say it: "lire" — leer, throaty r
- Say it: "je lis" then "nous lisons" — the s appears
- Read aloud, gathering the words one by one: "le chien, le chat"
- Say it: "je lis le français" then "je pense"
- Say it: "legible, lecture, collect, elect, elegant" — all a picking out

Before you move on

Say "I read French" and "we read." (Je lis le français. Nous lisons — the s only appears in the plural.) What did Latin legere mean first? (To gather, to pick out — reading came second.) Which of collect, elegant and book is not in this family? (Book — French livre is from liber, a different word.) Now say these two aloud. (Le chien, le chat.)

29.4 écrire — "to write," born from a scratch

You can think, understand and read. The last of the four is the one that puts something back out — and its French spelling still carries a repair job the language did more than a thousand years ago.

You'll want to know: the word

écrire — to write. Said ay-KREER: the é is a sharp ay, then the throaty r at the end, as in lire.

J'écris le français. — I write French.

Irregular, and the stem grows a v in the plural:

- j'écris — ay-KREE
- tu écris — ay-KREE
- il écrit — ay-KREE
- nous écrivons — ay-kree-VOHN, and there is the v
- vous écrivez — ay-kree-VAY
- ils écrivent — ay-KREEV

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

écrire ← Latin scrībere, "to scratch, to incise." A Roman wrote by scratching a stylus across wax, and the verb never forgot it. English took the Latin form whole:

- scribe, script, scripture, scribble.
- describe — scratch it down; prescribe, subscribe, inscribe.

Now the é. Latin scrībere began with sc-, and a French-speaking mouth could not start a word that way, so it propped one up with a vowel in front: scrībere → escrire → écrire. The same repair ran through the whole language — schola became école, spatha became épée, stella became étoile. That accent is not decoration: it is standing where an s used to be.

And the best cousin belongs to both halves of this chapter. Manuscript is manus + scrībere — "scratched by hand." La main and écrire meet inside one English word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "écrire" — ay-KREER
- "j'écris" then "nous écrivons" — the v appears in the plural
- the four of this chapter — "je comprends, je pense, je lis, j'écris"
- "j'écris à la main" — I write by hand; that is manuscript, taken apart
- "j'aime lire" then "j'aime écrire" — I like reading, I like writing
- "je prends le pain, et j'écris" — the taking verb, still there
- "lire, écrire" — gathering off the page, scratching onto it

Before you move on

Say "I write" and "we write." (J'écris. Nous écrivons — the v arrives in the plural.) What did scrībere literally mean, and why does écrire start with an é? (To scratch; French propped a vowel in front of Latin's sc-, the same repair that made école and étoile.) Pull manuscript apart. (Manus "hand" — your la main — plus scrībere, "scratched": written by hand.) Now say the four verbs of this chapter with je. (Je comprends, je pense, je lis, j'écris.)

Chapter 30

Hearing, Sleeping, Walking, Running

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that I hear, sleep, walk and run in French, use ça marche for "that works," and say why entendre carries English's intend inside it while the Latin verb for hearing ended up in English instead.
>
> Run the chapter's four verbs together with je — j'entends, je dors, je marche, je cours — then use courir's spelling to settle why canis became chien while currere stayed hard at the front: the ca- shift only ever struck c before a. Reaches back past the chapter to le chien and its palatalization from Chapter 22, le chat from the same chapter, il fait chaud and il pleut from Chapter 21, and the ne … pas negation from Chapter 18.

30.1 entendre — "to hear," and the stretching inside it

You can think and understand. Now the ear — and French's word for it is English's intend.

You'll want to know: the word

entendre — to hear. Two nasal an sounds in a row, then the -dre of prendre: say it ahn-TAHN-druh.

J'entends le chien. — I hear the dog.

The -ds of j'entends is silent, as in je prends.

Grammar Lens: the nasal that stays put

Prendre's nasal dies in the plural. Entendre looks like its twin and does the opposite — the stem never moves:

- j'entends — jahn-TAHN
- tu entends — ahn-TAHN
- il entend — ahn-TAHN (three identical to the ear)
- nous entendons — ahn-tahn-DOHN, nasal still there
- vous entendez — ahn-tahn-DAY
- ils entendent — ahn-TAHND

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

entendre ← Latin intendere — in- "toward" plus tendere, "to stretch." To intendere was to stretch a thing out and aim it: a bowstring, a journey, your attention. English kept the family — intend, plainest of them, plus intent, intense, tension, a tent (a stretched skin), extend and pretend.
Set your three mind-verbs together: French pictures each as a different thing the body does.

- comprendre — to grasp together, built on prendre.
- penser — to weigh, from pēnsāre.
- entendre — to stretch toward.

Why it's said this way

From its oldest French records entendre already covers a span at once: to hear, to attend, to understand, to intend. Nothing arrived late. What happened since is that the other senses fell away and hearing took the word outright — because Latin's verb for hearing, audīre, wore down in French to ouïr and stopped being usable. English kept that family instead: audio, audience, audible, audition.
The abandoned senses survive in phrases French never rebuilt:

- entendu — "understood," "agreed."
- s'entendre — to hear one another, and so to get along.
- l'entente — an understanding between parties, borrowed into English whole in Entente Cordiale.

So the two languages split one Latin pair: French hears with the verb English uses for intending, and English hears with the verb French let go.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "entendre" — ahn-TAHN-druh, two nasals
- "j'entends le chien"
- "nous prenons" then "nous entendons" — one flattens, one holds
- "j'écris, je comprends, j'entends"
- the three pictures — stretching, grasping, weighing
- "intend, tension, tent" — all a stretching

Before you move on

Say "I hear the dog" and "we hear." (J'entends le chien. Nous entendons — and unlike nous prenons, nothing flattens.) What did intendere mean, and which English verb is its plainest survival? (To stretch toward; intend.) Why did French hand hearing to this verb? (Latin's audīre wore down to ouïr and fell out of use — English kept the audīre words instead.) What does s'entendre mean? (To get along.)

30.2 dormir — "to sleep," and the room named after it

After a verb that changed jobs, here is one that never changed. Dormir is Latin's word for sleeping, handed on almost untouched — and it hides one trap.

You'll want to know: the word

dormir — to sleep. Said dor-MEER, with the throaty French r in the middle and at the end.

Le chat dort. — The cat is sleeping.

French has no separate "is sleeping" form. Il dort covers both "he sleeps" and "he is sleeping"; the plain present does all the work.

Grammar Lens: the m that goes missing

The stem is dorm-, and in the singular French throws the m away. Listen for where it comes back:

- je dors — dor
- tu dors — dor
- il dort — dor (three identical, the m gone)
- nous dormons — dor-MOHN, and there it is
- vous dormez — dor-MAY
- ils dorment — DORM

One rule, and you have the whole verb: singular loses the last stem consonant, plural gets it back. A small family of -ir verbs shares the shape, so learning it once is worth more than one verb.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dormir ← Latin dormīre, "to sleep." Spanish kept dormir, Italian dormire, Portuguese dormir — the verb crossed into its daughter languages untouched, which is rarer than it sounds. English has no inherited descendant; it borrowed the family later, through French:

- dormitory ← dormītōrium, a sleeping place; French wore the identical word down to dortoir.
- dormant — Old French dormant, "sleeping"; a dormant volcano is asleep.
- dormer — a roof window, from Old French dormeor, because the room behind it was where you slept.

And an honest stop. The dormouse looks like the best cousin of the lot and is not one. The story needs an Anglo-Norman word for "sleeper" that nobody has found in a text, and dormouse's real origin is unknown. A guess in circulation, not an etymology.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "dormir" — dor-MEER, throaty r
- "je dors" then "nous dormons" — the m vanishes, then returns
- "le chat dort" — the cat, the travelling word out of Egypt
- "j'entends le chat" then "le chat dort"
- "dormir, dormitory, dormant" — one Latin verb, borrowed back
- "je comprends" then "je dors"

Before you move on

Say "the cat is sleeping" and "we sleep." (Le chat dort. Nous dormons — the m is silent in the singular and audible in the plural.) Where does dormitory come from? (Latin dormītōrium, "a sleeping place" — and French wore the same word down to dortoir.) Is the dormouse in this family? (No — that is folk etymology; the word's real origin is unknown.) And chat — an inherited Latin word, or a traveller? (A traveller, from cattus, moving with the cat itself out of Egypt.)

30.3 marcher — "to walk," and the step hiding inside French negation

You can hear and you can sleep. Now move. This verb does a second job too, used dozens of times a day.

You'll want to know: the word

marcher — to walk. Said mar-SHAY: the -er is a clean ay, and the ch is sh, never k.

Je marche. — I walk.

After dormir's vanishing m, this one asks nothing: an ordinary -er verb. Je marche, tu marches, il marche, nous marchons, vous marchez, ils marchent — four of the six sound identical, just marsh.

Why it's said this way

Marcher is also the everyday verb for a thing working. A machine, a plan, an arrangement: if it functions, it walks.

Ça marche. — "That works." Also "Fine," "Deal," "Sounds good." Ça ne marche pas. — "That doesn't work."

There is your ne … pas from the answer-word non, round a real verb at last. And ça marche alone is an agreement, two words long. Entendre once held several jobs and shed all but hearing. Marcher holds two right now.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Here the honest answer is that nobody is certain. Old French marchier first meant "to trample, to tread on," and two accounts compete:

- Frankish markōn, "to mark, to press a step in" — preferred by most reference works.
- Late Latin marcāre, from marcus, "a hammer" — a blow and a tread being one motion.

Three consequences, in falling order of certainty:

- English march, the verb, is borrowed straight from marcher. Secure whichever origin is right.
- English mark is Germanic, from Old English mearc. A relative only if the Frankish account holds — conditional, not a fact.

- French la marche, a borderland, with marquis and German margrave, comes from the Germanic noun marka, "boundary" — a separate arrival.

And one cousin you own already. The pas in ne … pas began as Latin passus, "a step." Je ne marche pas is, underneath, "I do not walk a step."

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "marcher" — mar-SHAY, sh not k
- "je marche" then "nous marchons"
- "ça marche" — that works, that's fine
- "non", then "je ne marche pas" — and pas is a step
- "j'entends, je dors, je marche"
- "nous dormons, nous marchons" — one stem shifts, one never does

Before you move on

Say "I walk" and "that works." (Je marche. Ça marche.) What are the two competing origins? (Frankish markōn, "to press a step in," or Latin marcus, "a hammer." Genuinely unsettled.) Which English word is certainly related, and which only might be? (March, borrowed straight from marcher; mark only if the Frankish account is right.) What did pas mean before it meant "not"? (A step.)

30.4 courir — "to run," and why it is not chourir

Hearing, sleeping, walking — and now the fastest of the four. Its Latin root is one of the busiest in English, and its spelling settles a question the dog raised.

You'll want to know: the word

courir — to run. Said koo-REER, throaty at both *r*s.

Le chien court. — The dog runs.

Grammar Lens: the same endings, a different stem

Courir takes dormir's singular endings — -s, -s, -t, all silent:

- je cours — koor
- tu cours — koor
- il court — koor
- nous courons — koo-ROHN
- vous courez — koo-RAY
- ils courent — KOOR

But the resemblance stops there. Dormir sheds a consonant in the singular: dorm- becomes dor-. Courir sheds nothing — its stem cour- has nothing spare to lose.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Marcher left a choice between a Frankish verb and a Latin hammer. This one leaves none. courir ← Latin currere, "to run," which English mined harder than almost any other verb:

- current and currency both run; a cursor runs across a screen; a course is a run, a corridor a running-place.
- courier, one who runs; curriculum, literally "a running."
- concur, run together; occur, run up against; excursion.

Now the spelling question. Chien came from canis, and its c turned into ch — the shift that made champ and chanter. So why is this verb not chourir? Because that shift only struck c before a. Currere had c before u, untouched, so the k survived. One rule, two regular outcomes. One honest limit. Latin carrus, "wagon," gave English car and cargo, and descends from the same very old root. But Latin borrowed carrus from Gaulish: a cousin by another road, not a word built out of currere.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the chapter's four with je — "j'entends, je dors, je marche, je cours"
- "le chien court" then "le chat dort"
- "il fait chaud, je cours"
- "il pleut, je ne cours pas"
- "je dors, nous dormons" then "je cours, nous courons" — one sheds
- "chien" then "courir" — ch before a, k before u
- "current, course, courier, curriculum" — every one a running
- "ça marche" — the agreement, two words

Before you move on

Say the chapter's four verbs with je. (J'entends, je dors, je marche, je cours.) What does curriculum literally mean? (A running — from currere.) Why did canis become chien while currere stayed hard? (The shift only hit c before a.) Which of the four began as a stretching? (Entendre — intendere, to stretch toward.) Now: "the dog runs" and "it is hot." (Le chien court. Il fait chaud.)

Chapter 31

Sitting, Standing, Opening, Closing

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can sit down, get up, open and close in French, hold both accepted paradigms of s'asseoir apart, say why French needs two pieces — se lever and debout — where English has one verb "to stand," and know that ouvrir takes marcher's endings despite its -ir spelling.
>
> Say the chapter's four with je — je m'assieds, je me lève, j'ouvre, je ferme — drill ouvrir and fermer as one pair now that both carry the same endings, and take fermer apart into firmāre, 'to make firm', the verb that gave Italian fermare 'to stop' and Spanish firmar 'to sign'. Reaches back past the chapter to open and close la main from Chapter 17, to close because il pleut from Chapter 21, and to ask in both registers and then apologise, from Chapters 19 and 20.

31.1 s'asseoir — "to sit down," a verb you do to yourself

You have walked and you have run. Now stop. French does not say "I sit" — it says "I seat myself," and that extra word is one you own.

You'll want to know: the word

s'asseoir — to sit down. Said sah-SWAHR.

Je m'assieds. — I sit down. Said juh mah-SYAY.

The m' is the me inside je m'appelle: French treats sitting as something you do to yourself, so the pronoun is not optional.

Keep two ideas apart. S'asseoir is the movement, lowering yourself into a chair. Je suis assis is the state after it, "I am seated." English lets sit cover both; French makes you choose.

Grammar Lens: one verb, two accepted sets

The only verb in this book with two correct answers, both in dictionaries. Learn this series whole:

- je m'assieds — mah-SYAY
- tu t'assieds — tah-SYAY
- il s'assied — sah-SYAY (three identical to the ear)
- nous nous asseyons — noo-zah-say-YOHN
- vous vous asseyez — voo-zah-say-YAY
- ils s'asseyent — sah-SAY

Then recognise the rival singulars je m'assois, tu t'assois, il s'assoit — ordinary spoken French. Their plurals (assoyons, assoyez) are much rarer in France, so the series above is the safer one to own. Since 1990 the infinitive may also be spelled s'assoir. Nothing here is wrong; the language never chose.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'asseoir ← Vulgar Latin adsedēre, a remaking of Classical adsidēre — ad- "at" plus sedēre, "to sit." Latin had built the compound; French only wore it down. And sedēre is everywhere in English:

- sedentary, sitting work; a session, "a sitting"; sediment, what sits at the bottom.
- reside, sit back; preside and president, sitting in front; assiduous, sitting at a task.
- siege — an army sitting down before a city; possess, obsess, subsidy.

- A bishop's see is his sedēs, his seat.

Dormir English only borrowed. This root it owns from birth too: sit, seat and settle come down the Germanic road from the same source.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "s'asseoir" — sah-SWAHR
- "je m'assieds" then "nous nous asseyons"
- "je m'appelle" then "je m'assieds" — the same little m'
- "je m'assieds" then "je suis assis" — movement, then state
- "je marche, je cours, je m'assieds, je dors"
- "j'entends" — the ear needs no chair
- "sedentary, session, siege" — every one a sitting

Before you move on

Say "I sit down" and "we sit down." (Je m'assieds. Nous nous asseyons.) Why is the pronoun there? (French sits you yourself down — the same m' as in je m'appelle.) What is a siege, literally? (A sitting — an army sitting down before a city.) Which English words are cousins of sedēre by birth rather than borrowing? (Sit, seat, settle.) Now the pair: "je cours" and "je dors."

31.2 se lever, debout — standing, which French says in two pieces

You sat down. Getting up is harder, because French has no single verb for "to stand." It splits the idea in two.

You'll want to know: the movement

se lever — to get up, to rise. Said suh luh-VAY.

Je me lève. — I get up. Said juh muh LEV.

Reflexive, as s'asseoir is: you raise yourself. After that verb's two paradigms this is a relief — an ordinary -er verb with one habit. Silent ending, and the e takes a grave accent; spoken ending, and it flattens:

- je me lève — LEV
- tu te lèves — LEV
- il se lève — LEV
- nous nous levons — luh-VOHN, flat
- vous vous levez — luh-VAY, flat
- ils se lèvent — LEV

You'll want to know: the state debout — standing, upright. Said duh-BOO.

Je suis debout. — I am standing.

Se lever is the movement, debout the state — the split between sitting down and being seated. Debout is no verb: attach it to être.

Opened, it is transparent:

de + bout → debout

"On end": a bout is a tip or end, so standing is being set on your end. French did once have a plain verb for standing, ester; it survives only in a courtroom phrase, which is why the language builds this from pieces.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lever ← Latin levāre, "to raise" — built on levis, "light in weight." To raise a thing is to lighten it. Hence elevate, elevator, levitate, levity; a lever, which lightens a load; alleviate, relieve, relief; leaven.

So two of this book's verbs come from one corner of Roman thought. Penser is pēnsāre, "to weigh"; lever is levāre, "to make light."

Thinking weighs, rising un-weighs, and sedēre just sits there. One correction. Bout comes from bouter, "to strike," taken from Frankish — and its English relative by descent is beat. Butt looks closer but is a later borrowing back out of French.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "se lever" — suh luh-VAY
- "je me lève" then "nous nous levons" — sharp, then flat
- "je m'assieds" then "je me lève" — down, then up
- "je suis debout" — the state, on être
- "je me lève et je cours"
- "je pense" then "je me lève" — weighing, then lightening
- "elevate, lever, relief" — all a raising

Before you move on

Say "I get up" and "we get up." (Je me lève. Nous nous levons — the accent appears only when the ending is silent.) How does French say "I am standing"? (Je suis debout — a state pinned to être, not a verb; debout is "on end.") Penser came from weighing; what does lever come from? (Levis, "light in weight".) And the opposite movement? (Je m'assieds.)

31.3 ouvrir — "to open," an -ir verb wearing -er endings

You can sit and rise. Now something for the hand. This verb is French conjugation's small trap: spelled like one family, behaving like another.

You'll want to know: the word

ouvrir — to open. Said oo-VREER.

J'ouvre la main. — I open my hand.

French says la main where English says "my hand"; with your own body the article does the work. And listen to that nasal — pain, main — the same -ain you have been making since the bread.

Grammar Lens: the endings it should not have Ouvrir ends in -ir, so you would expect it to run like dormir. It does not. It takes the endings of marcher, an -er verb, exactly:

- j'ouvre — JOOVR
- tu ouvres — OOVR
- il ouvre — OOVR
- nous ouvrons — oo-VROHN
- vous ouvrez — oo-VRAY
- ils ouvrent — OOVR

Four identical to the ear, nous and vous audible: the shape of je marche, nous marchons. A small group of -ir verbs does this, and ouvrir is the one you meet most. The spelling promises one thing; listen to what the verb does.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Latin's verb for opening was aperīre, which ouvrir does not look much like — because the word was remodelled on the way into popular Latin operīre. The likeliest cause is the pull of its own opposite, cooperīre, "to cover," which became French couvrir. Opening and covering ended up rhyming and have stayed matched since. The meaning stayed aperīre's; only the shape moved.
English collected both ends:

- from aperīre — an aperture; an aperitif, the drink that opens a meal.

- from Old French ovrir — overt, its past participle "opened," and overture, ouverture.
- from the covering half — curfew, Old French cuevrefeu, "cover-fire," the bell that said to bank the hearth.

Set that beside the hand. Maintenir is manū tenēre, "to hold in the hand" — and ouvrir la main releases that grip.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "ouvrir" — oo-VREER
- "j'ouvre la main" — and hear pain, main
- "je marche, nous marchons" then "j'ouvre, nous ouvrons" — one shape
- "je m'assieds, je me lève, j'ouvre la main"
- "je suis debout et j'ouvre la main"
- "maintenir" then "ouvrir" — holding in the hand, then letting go
- "aperture, aperitif, overt, overture" — every one an opening

Before you move on

Say "I open my hand" and "we open." (J'ouvre la main. Nous ouvrons.) Which endings does ouvrir borrow, despite its spelling? (The -er set — marcher's.) What is an aperitif, literally? (The opener — the drink that opens a meal.) Why does ouvrir not look like Latin aperīre? (It was reshaped to match its own opposite, the verb for covering.)

31.4 fermer — "to close," which in French means "to make firm"

The last of the four, and the opposite of the one before it. French chose an unexpected picture: to close a thing is to make it firm.

You'll want to know: the word

fermer — to close. Said fer-MAY.

Je ferme la main. — I close my hand. Il pleut. Je ferme. — It's raining. I'm closing up.

A regular -er verb: je ferme, tu fermes, il ferme, nous fermons, vous fermez, ils ferment.

Grammar Lens: two opposites, one set of endings

Ouvrir borrowed the -er endings against its own spelling. Fermer owns them outright. So the two opposites conjugate in step, and drill as one pair:

- j'ouvre / je ferme
- nous ouvrons / nous fermons
- ils ouvrent / ils ferment

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fermer ← Latin firmāre, "to make firm," from firmus, "firm." A Roman door was not closed, it was secured. English took the adjective and left the verb: firm, affirm, confirm, infirm and the infirmary, the firmament — the sky as a solid vault.
Probably also farm. Old French ferme meant a fixed rent, from Medieval Latin firma, "a fixed payment," so a farm began as a lease and not a field. Etymologists call this history a confused one, because Old English feorm, "food-rent," sat nearby and may have pulled on it. Likely, not clean.
The best part is the split. One Latin verb, three languages, three jobs:

- French fermer — to close.
- Italian fermare — to stop.
- Spanish firmar — to sign, because a signature makes a paper firm.

And Spanish and Portuguese do not close with this verb at all. Their words come from Latin's bolt. So French shuts a door by making it solid while its neighbours slide a bar across.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "fermer" — fer-MAY
- "j'ouvre la main" then "je ferme la main"
- the chapter's four — "je m'assieds, je me lève, j'ouvre, je ferme"
- "je suis debout et je ferme"
- "il pleut, je ferme"
- "vous fermez, s'il vous plaît" then "tu fermes, s'il te plaît" — formal, then familiar
- "je suis désolé, je ferme" — the apology before the refusal
- "fermer, firm, affirm, confirm" — all a making-firm

Before you move on

Say the chapter's four with je. (Je m'assieds, je me lève, j'ouvre, je ferme.) What did firmāre mean, and what is a French door doing when it closes? (Making firm — being secured, not barred.) One Latin verb, three languages: Italian and Spanish? (Fermare, "to stop"; firmar, "to sign".) Now close politely in both registers, then apologise. (Vous fermez, s'il vous plaît. Tu fermes, s'il te plaît. Je suis désolé.) And the hand? (J'ouvre la main, je ferme la main.)

Chapter 32

Coffee, Tea, Milk, Sugar

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for coffee, tea, milk or sugar in French, and trace each word to the road it travelled to get there — one unbroken, one forked, one never borrowed, one from Sanskrit.
>
> Ask for sugar, trace sucre to Sanskrit śárkarā through Arabic sukkar, and set the chapter's four masculine drink-words beside l'eau's lone feminine exception. Reaches back past the chapter to Chapter 18's si, the answer that contradicts a negative, and to the langue d'oïl / langue d'oc split behind oui itself.

32.1 le café — coffee, one word the whole road agrees on

First, two words from the last chapter, taken apart. Se lever is built on a Latin word for what? (Levis, light — rising unweighs you, as in elevate.) And a Roman door was not closed, it was made what? (Firm — firmāre, the root of confirm.)

You already know how to ask nicely — s'il vous plaît. Now something worth asking for: the first of four everyday words for what's on the table.

You'll want to know: the word

le café — coffee. Masculine.

> Un café, s'il vous plaît. — "A coffee, please."

Café also names the place you drink it, exactly the way English cafe does — one word, two jobs, in both languages at once.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

café comes from Ottoman Turkish kahve, which comes from Arabic qahwa. Arabic lexicographers record qahwa as an older word for wine — it only attached to the coffee bean once the drink spread out of Yemen, in the fifteenth century.
From Ottoman kahve, the word crossed into Europe through Italian caffè — and stopped there. French café, English coffee, German Kaffee, Italian caffè itself: every one of these is the same borrowing, taken at a different stop on a single road out of the Ottoman Empire. Nobody translated it; everybody just repeated it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le café" — masculine
- "un café, s'il vous plaît"
- the road — "qahwa, kahve, caffè, café" — one word, four stops
- the surprise — "qahwa once meant wine"

Before you move on

Say "coffee, please." (Un café, s'il vous plaît. — masculine.) What Arabic word is café from, and what did it mean before coffee existed? (Qahwa — "wine.") Name the road it travelled. (Arabic qahwa → Ottoman kahve → Italian caffè → French café, with English coffee and German Kaffee the same borrowing at other stops.) Is s'il vous plaît the right register here? (Yes — spoken, to someone you don't know well.)

32.2 le thé — tea, the word that took the other road

You just saw café travel Europe as one word, unchanged at every stop. Tea took the opposite kind of trip — it split.

You'll want to know: the word

le thé — tea. Masculine.

Un thé, s'il vous plaît. — "A tea, please."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

China writes "tea" with one character everywhere, but doesn't say it the same way everywhere. In Mandarin it's chá. In the Hokkien of the south-eastern coast — the Amoy dialect — it's tê.
Traders who bought the leaf overland or through Mandarin-speaking ports carried home chá: it travelled into Persian, into Arabic, into Hindi. Dutch traders bought their tea specifically at Amoy, in Hokkien territory, and carried home tê instead — which became Dutch thee, then French thé, English tea, German Tee. French borrowed thé from Dutch.
So café and thé make a matched pair with opposite stories: café is one word repeated unchanged at every stop; thé is the same original word, worn into two different shapes depending which Chinese port a trader happened to deal with.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le thé" — masculine
- "un café, un thé" — both masculine, both borrowed
- the fork — "chá overland, tê by Dutch ship"
- the pair — "café: one road. thé: two."

Before you move on

Say "tea, please." (Un thé, s'il vous plaît. — masculine.) What Chinese dialect gave French thé its shape, and by what route? (Hokkien tê, carried by Dutch ships from the port of Amoy.) What's the overland word that chá-family languages use instead? (Chá, into Persian, Arabic, Hindi.) How is thé's story different from café's? (Café stayed one word everywhere; thé split in two depending on the port.)

32.3 le lait — milk, the word French never had to borrow

Café and thé both crossed an ocean to reach French. This word never left home.

Je m'assieds, tu t'assieds, il s'assied: three forms, one sound.

You'll want to know: the word

le lait — milk. Masculine, like café and thé.

Du lait, s'il vous plaît. — "Some milk, please."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lait comes from Latin lac (stem lact-) — a word Latin-speakers in Gaul simply kept saying, generation after generation, until it wore down into lait. No port, no trade route: this one was inherited, not borrowed, unlike café's single road or thé's forked one.
English shows the same split tête showed for "head": the inherited, everyday English word for this drink is milk — and it has nothing to do with lac. Milk descends from a completely different Proto-Indo-European root, one meaning "to milk a cow." English only meets lac's stem lact- in learned words borrowed straight from written Latin much later: lactic, lactose, lactate. So French lait and English lactic are close cousins; French lait and English milk are not related at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le lait" — masculine
- "un café, un thé, du lait" — three drinks, one gender
- the cousins — "lait, lactic, lactose"
- the non-cousins — "lait and milk share no root at all"

Before you move on

Say "milk, please." (Du lait, s'il vous plaît. — masculine.) Is lait borrowed, like café and thé, or inherited straight from Latin? (Inherited — from lac, stem lact-.) Which English words are close cousins of lait? (Lactic, lactose, lactate — learned borrowings of the same stem.) Is English milk one of those cousins? (No — a completely different, unrelated root.)

32.4 le sucre — sugar, the longest road of the four

Coffee took one road, tea forked into two, milk never left home. Sugar's road is the longest of all — and it ends the chapter with a whole table's worth of masculine drink-words.

You'll want to know: the word

le sucre — sugar. Masculine.

Du sucre, s'il vous plaît. — "Some sugar, please."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sucre ← Old French çucre ← Arabic sukkar ← Persian shakar ← Sanskrit śárkarā, which first meant "grit, gravel" — crystallized sugar looked like gravel to whoever named it first.
Sucre passed through Arabic just like café did, but through a different Arabic word (sukkar, not qahwa): a shared language of transmission, not a shared root. Where lait is inherited straight from Latin, sucre is borrowed — from further back than café or thé, all the way to Sanskrit.

Grammar Lens: a lean, and its one loud exception

Four drink-words, four masculine articles: le café, le thé, le lait, le sucre. Not a rule to trust — a lean: French tends to make plain substances masculine. This lean has a loud exception: l'eau, "water," is feminine. You still learn each word with its article, the promise this book has kept since la main.

Why it's said this way

The si you learned — the "yes" for contradicting a negative — fits this table exactly:

> Vous n'avez pas le sucre ? — Si ! ("You don't have the sugar? — Yes, I do!")

Plain oui here would agree you don't have it; si is what pushes back. That same oui once mattered enough to split a country — langue d'oïl in the north, langue d'oc in the south.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le sucre" — masculine
- all four — "le café, le thé, le lait, le sucre"
- the exception — "l'eau" — feminine, against the lean
- the contradiction — "Vous n'avez pas le sucre ? — Si !"

Before you move on

Say "sugar, please." (Du sucre, s'il vous plaît. — masculine.) Trace sucre back to Sanskrit. (Sukkar ← shakar ← śárkarā, "grit, gravel.") Do café and sucre share a root? (No — a language of transmission, Arabic, not a root; qahwa and sukkar are different words.) What is the lean about French drink-words, and what breaks it? (Masculine by default — broken by l'eau, feminine.) When do you answer si instead of oui? (Contradicting a negative — the same word-pair that once split France into langue d'oïl and langue d'oc.)

Chapter 33

The People You Introduce

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can introduce a friend, name my family, name a child and name any person, using French's four different relationships between grammatical gender and the person meant, and elide le or la to l' before a vowel.
>
> Say la personne, always feminine even naming a man, then line the chapter's four words up by how each one handles gender: l'ami changes, la famille is fixed, l'enfant is one spelling with two articles, la personne is fixed regardless of sex. Reaches back to Chapter 18's non for a sound contrast (personne's double -nn- blocks the nasal non has) and to its ne … pas negation, which personne itself joins as "nobody."

33.1 l'ami, l'amie — the friend, and why the article gives way

> The café chapter handed you le lait and le sucre, and three more things to ask for. Now the people you'd ask them with — starting with the one whose name teaches French's most useful spelling rule.

You'll want to know: the word

un ami — a (male) friend. une amie — a (female) friend. Same sound, ah-MEE; the feminine just adds a silent -e. A regular swap: the article and ending follow who the friend is.

Grammar Lens: why it's l'ami, not le ami

Say le ami out loud: two vowels collide, euh then ah, and French won't stand for it. So le and la both drop their vowel before a word that starts with one, and glue on with an apostrophe: l'ami, l'amie — one form for both genders once the article elides. This is the exact same move as l'eau — French never tolerates le or la sitting next to another vowel sound. It also happens to a pronoun you already use daily: je ai became j'ai by the identical rule.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ami ← Latin amicus, "friend" — built on the verb amāre, "to love." English kept the adjective whole in amicable, amiable, and amity ("friendship" between nations). A French ami is, at the root, someone you love.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "un ami, une amie" — the regular swap
- "l'ami, l'amie" — never le ami
- the family — "l'eau, j'ai, l'ami" — one rule, three words
- "amicable, amiable, amity" — all built on amāre, to love

Before you move on

Give "a friend" for a man and for a woman. (un ami, une amie.) Why do you say l'ami instead of le ami? (Two vowels can't sit together — the article elides, the same rule behind l'eau and j'ai.) What Latin verb is ami built on, and what does it mean? (Amāre, "to love.")

33.2 la famille — the family, feminine no matter who's in it

L'ami changes shape with who it names. This word never does — whoever is in the family, the word itself stays exactly as it is. (And before you had l'ami, you already had le sucre — every one of this book's nouns keeps its article.)

You'll want to know: the word

la famille — the family. Feminine, fixed — no elision here, since famille starts with a consonant: la famille, never l'famille.

The double -ll- after i is not said like an English L: famille is fah-MEE-yuh, the -ille landing as a y-sound, the l itself silent. You'll meet this -ille spelling again.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

famille ← Latin familia, "the household" — built on famulus, "servant, slave." Roman familia named everyone under one roof: parents, children, and the servants who worked there, all together. It broadened to mean "blood relatives" only because relatives usually were the people sharing that roof. Where ami is built on loving someone, famille is built on living with them.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la famille" — feminine, no elision
- the sound — "fa-MI-yuh," not "fa-MILL"
- the contrast — "un ami: loving. la famille: living together."

Before you move on

Say "the family." (La famille — feminine.) Why doesn't it elide to l'famille? (It starts with a consonant — elision only happens before a vowel.) What did Latin familia originally include besides relatives? (The household's servants, from famulus.)

33.3 l'enfant — the child, one word for both

La famille stays fixed no matter who's in it. This member of it does something different again: one spelling, for a boy or a girl alike.

You'll want to know: the word

l'enfant — the child. Starts with a vowel, so the article elides again, exactly like l'ami: un enfant (a boy), une enfant (a girl) — but the word itself never changes. Only un/une tells you which.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enfant ← Latin īnfāns, "not speaking" — in- "not" + fāns, "speaking" (from fārī, "to speak"). Literally, a baby too young to talk. But Romans already stretched īnfāns to cover children well past babyhood long before French existed, and French enfant simply inherited that wider sense — it didn't narrow English infant into something broader. The two words split apart in a different way: English kept the narrow, original "not-yet-speaking" sense for its borrowing, while French's everyday word carried the older, already-widened Latin meaning forward.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "un enfant, une enfant" — one spelling, two articles
- the elision — "l'enfant," never le enfant
- "in- + fari" — not speaking
- the family so far — "l'ami, la famille, l'enfant"

Before you move on

How do you tell a boy child from a girl child in French, if the word itself never changes? (The article — un enfant / une enfant.) What does enfant literally mean, and where does that meaning come from? ("Not speaking" — in- + fārī, "to speak.") Does French narrow Latin's meaning or keep it wide? (Keeps it wide — Latin had already stretched infans past babyhood.)

33.4 la personne — the person, and the mask behind the word

> L'ami changes with its friend; l'enfant doesn't, but its article does. This last one is the strangest of the four: it never changes at all — not even for a man.

You'll want to know: the word

la personne — the person. Always feminine — grammatically, whether you mean a man, a woman, or anyone at all:

> Cet homme est une bonne personne. — "That man is a good person."

Homme is masculine; personne describing him stays feminine regardless. Grammatical gender here has come loose from the person's actual sex entirely — further even than ami, which at least tracks who's meant.

Sounds you'll need

Personne looks like it should rhyme with non's nasal -on — it doesn't. Double -nn- blocks the nasal: non is nasal, said through the nose, but personne ends oral, pehr-SUN, the vowel staying in the mouth. One consonant, doubled, is the difference between a nasal ending and a plain one.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

personne ← Latin persona, a theatrical mask — from Etruscan phersu, most likely from Greek prósōpon, "face." A tidy but doubted story derives it from per- + sonāre, "sound through" (the mask an actor's voice rang through); linguists reject it on the vowel length, so treat it as folk etymology, not fact.
Pair personne with ne and it flips to "nobody" — je ne vois personne = "I see nobody." Behind an empty mask, no one at all.

Grammar Lens: four people, four kinds of gender

The chapter's four words, side by side:

- l'ami / l'amie — changes with who's meant; elides either way.

- la famille — fixed feminine, whoever's in it; no elision.
- l'enfant — one spelling; only un/une shows which; elides.
- la personne — fixed feminine, even naming a man.

Four different relationships between gender and the person named — none of them the "normal" case. Each is its own rule, learned with the word.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la personne" — always feminine
- "cet homme est une bonne personne"
- the contrast — "non" nasal, "personne" not
- the flip — "je ne vois personne" — nobody

Before you move on

Is personne ever masculine, even describing a man? (No — always feminine, grammatically.) Why doesn't personne nasalize like non? (Double -nn- blocks it.) What does ne … personne mean, and what does that use share with ne … pas? ("Nobody" — the same negation frame built around ne.) Is persona really built on "sounding through"? (Probably not — a folk etymology; the real root is likely Etruscan phersu, "mask.")

Chapter 34

Cheese, Butter, Salt, Egg

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask for cheese, butter, salt or an egg in French, and say why un œuf keeps its final f while les œufs drops it.
>
> Ask for an egg, hold un œuf's pronounced f against les œufs' silent one, and place œuf beside English egg as genuine cousins rather than a borrowing. Reaches back past the chapter to le sel, le beurre and le fromage, and to Chapter 29's elision rule, which l'œuf needs exactly as l'ami did.

34.1 le fromage — cheese, named for its mould

> You can name la personne and l'enfant now. The café chapter asked politely for a drink; this chapter asks for what goes with it — starting with a word every other Romance language names completely differently.
>
> What did personne first name in Latin, and what does it become beside ne? (A theatre mask; ne … personne is nobody.)

You'll want to know: the word

le fromage — cheese. Masculine.

> Du fromage, s'il vous plaît. — "Some cheese, please."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fromage ← Medieval Latin formāticum, "a thing made in a mould" — built on forma, "shape, mould." Cheesemakers press curds into a mould to set their shape, and French named the finished cheese for that step.
Classical Latin's actual word for cheese was caseus — and that word is what survives in Spanish queso and Portuguese queijo, as well as English casein and Old English cyse, the ancestor of cheese itself. So French fromage and English cheese are not cousins: French walked away from caseus entirely and named the cheese for its mould instead, while Spanish, Portuguese and English all kept the old word for the curd.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le fromage" — masculine
- "du fromage, s'il vous plaît"
- the mould — "forma → fromage"
- the split — "fromage and cheese are not cousins; queso, queijo and cheese all come from caseus"

Before you move on

Say "cheese, please." (Du fromage, s'il vous plaît. — masculine.) What Latin word is fromage built on, and what did it mean? (Forma, "shape, mould.") Which Romance languages kept the older word for cheese instead, and what is it? (Spanish queso, Portuguese queijo — from Latin caseus, also behind English casein and cheese.)

34.2 le beurre — butter, one loanword twice

Fromage took a French road all its own. This word, French and English took together — the exact same borrowing, not two.

You'll want to know: the word

le beurre — butter. Masculine.

> Du beurre, s'il vous plaît. — "Some butter, please."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

beurre ← Latin būtyrum ← Greek boútūron, usually broken down as boûs "cow" + tyrós "cheese" — "cow-cheese." But butter wasn't a Greek or Roman product; both cultures were oil cultures, and most likely imported both the substance and the word from further east, possibly from Scythian traders. Treat "cow-cheese" as a folk reshaping of a foreign word into familiar Greek pieces, not a certain compound.
Either way, English butter borrows the identical Latin word French beurre does. This isn't two languages separately naming the same thing — it's one loanword, arriving twice.

Why it's said this way

The courtesy words you already have fit right here:

> Désolé, je n'ai pas le beurre. — "Sorry, I don't have the butter."

Désolé — real regret, for letting someone down. If you'd only bumped the butter dish, pardon would do instead; to get someone's attention before asking for it at all, excusez-moi.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le beurre" — masculine
- "du beurre, s'il vous plaît"
- "beurre, butter" — one word, borrowed twice
- "désolé, je n'ai pas le beurre"

Before you move on

Say "butter, please." (Du beurre, s'il vous plaît. — masculine.) Is "cow-cheese" a safe etymology for boútūron? (Not certain — likely a Greek reshaping of a foreign word, since butter wasn't native to Greece or Rome.) Is French beurre related to English butter by common descent or by borrowing? (Borrowing — the same Latin word, taken by both languages.) When would you reach for pardon instead of désolé? (A small, quick slip — not real regret.)

34.3 le sel — salt, a real cousin and a fake legend

Beurre was one word borrowed twice. This one is different again — a genuine family relative of its English counterpart, plus a famous story about it that isn't actually true.

You'll want to know: the word

le sel — salt. Masculine.

Du sel, s'il vous plaît. — "Some salt, please."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sel ← Latin sal, stem sal- — inherited, like lait, not borrowed like café or sucre. English salt is a genuine cousin: both words descend from the same Proto-Indo-European root, sal-, inherited separately down the Latin and Germanic branches. Unlike lait and milk, which share no root at all, sel and salt really are family.
Latin salārium — English salary — is built on this same sal. You may have heard that Roman soldiers were literally paid in salt, which is where "salary" supposedly comes from. That claim appears in no ancient source; no Roman writer says it. Salārium genuinely is built on sal — that part is real — but the vivid soldiers-and-salt story attached to it later, and belongs with folk etymology, not fact.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le sel" — masculine

- "du sel, s'il vous plaît"
- the real cousins — "sel, salt — one PIE root, two branches"
- "beurre, fromage, sel" — three foods, all masculine

Before you move on

Say "salt, please." (Du sel, s'il vous plaît. — masculine.) Is sel related to English salt by common descent or by borrowing? (Common descent — both from PIE sal-*, a genuine cousin pair.) Is the "soldiers paid in salt" story behind salary true? (No — it appears in no ancient source; salārium really is built on sal, but the legend is later.)

34.4 l'œuf — the egg, that loses its consonant only in the plural

Fromage, beurre, sel — three foods, three masculine articles. The fourth starts with a vowel, so this chapter closes the way it began: with the elision rule from l'ami.

You'll want to know: the word

l'œuf — the egg. Masculine, and it elides — never le œuf.

Un œuf, s'il vous plaît. — "An egg, please." Said with a clear final f: un-EUF.

Now the plural: les œufs. Spelled with the same -fs, but the f disappears entirely — lay-ZEU, not lay-ZEUFS. One noun, and its final consonant survives in the singular only to vanish in the plural.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

œuf ← Latin ovum, from a Proto-Indo-European word for "egg," h₂ōwyóm. English egg descends from the same root, by the Germanic road (Old Norse egg, from Proto-Germanic ajja-*) — a real cousin pair, exactly like sel and salt, not a borrowing in either direction. The Latin-only learned family — oval, ovary, ovum itself — are the ones English took straight from written Latin, sitting beside its own native egg.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "l'œuf" — masculine, elided
- "un œuf" — f pronounced
- "les œufs" — f silent
- the cousins — "œuf, egg — same PIE root, two branches"

Before you move on

Say "an egg, please," then "the eggs." (Un œuf, s'il vous plaît — f pronounced; les œufs — f silent.) Why does l'œuf elide? (Vowel-initial — same rule as l'ami.) Is œuf borrowed from Latin ovum, or a genuine cousin of it? (A cousin — both from PIE h₂ōwyóm*, like English egg.) Name the chapter's four foods with their articles. (Le fromage, le beurre, le sel, l'œuf — all masculine.)

Chapter 35

Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Stomach

Modes: voice (4) eyes (1) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the eye and its irregular-looking plural yeux, the nose, the mouth and the stomach in French, extending Chapter 17's head and hand.
>
> Say j'ai mal au ventre, take ventriloquist apart as "belly-speaker," and close the chapter's own four words (l'œil/les yeux, le nez, la bouche, le ventre) beside Chapter 17's head and hand. Reaches back past the chapter to la main's nasal -ain, contrasted with ventre's own different nasal vowel, and further back to le café, l'ami and l'œuf, one word from each of this book's four newest chapters.

35.1 l'œil, les yeux — the eye, and a plural that only looks broken

> You have the head and the hand. This chapter fills in the rest of the body it left for later — starting above the mouth.

You'll want to know: the word

l'œil — the eye. Masculine, and it elides — never le œil. Its plural is completely different in shape: les yeux.

Tête, remember, is feminine even though it never looks like a body part should tell you its gender; œil is masculine, on the same body, right above it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

œil ← Vulgar Latin oclus (from oculus, "eye") — a heavily worn singular. Yeux ← Latin's plural oculōs, and that development is completely regular sound change, the ordinary path oculōs was always going to take.
So les yeux doesn't break the rules — œil does. The singular eroded further and faster than the plural did, and the two paths simply arrived looking unrelated. French has a small family of nouns built this way — le ciel / les cieux ("sky/skies"), le travail / les travaux ("work/works") — an odd-looking plural is often the regular one, standing next to a singular that took the shortcut.

Why it's said this way

You may remember tête itself came from testa, a soldier's joke for "pot" that replaced the real Latin word for head. Œil never had that kind of accident — it's simply the ordinary, expected descendant of oculus, sitting on the very pot the joke was about.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "l'œil" — one eye, masculine
- "les yeux" — both eyes, different shape
- "la tête, l'œil" — feminine pot, masculine eye
- the family — "le ciel/les cieux, œil/yeux" — same pattern

Before you move on

Say "the eye" and "the eyes." (L'œil, les yeux.) Which form is the regular sound outcome of Latin — œil or yeux? (Yeux — from oculōs; œil is the one that eroded further.) What other French noun changes shape the same way between singular and plural? (Le ciel / les cieux, or le travail / les travaux.) What was tête originally a soldier's joke for? (A pot.)

35.2 le nez — the nose, another real cousin

Below the eye, the nose — and a third pair of true cousins, joining sel/salt and œuf/egg.

Comprendre is prendre with a prefix, so it breaks in the same places: je comprends, nous comprenons.

You'll want to know: the word

le nez — the nose. Masculine, final z silent: NAY.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nez ← Latin nāsus, from PIE nas-. English nose descends from the same root, down the Germanic branch — a genuine cousin, exactly the pattern sel/salt and œuf/egg already showed you.
English nasal is a different kind of relative: a learned borrowing of the Latin word itself, sitting beside native nose the same way lactic sits beside native milk. One root, French nez and English nose both inherited; one root, English separately borrowed as nasal.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le nez" — silent z
- "l'œil, le nez" — eye, nose
- the cousins — "nez, nose — same PIE root"
- the borrowing — "nasal," taken later, straight from Latin

Before you move on

Say "the nose." (Le nez — masculine, silent z.) Is nez related to English nose by inheritance or by borrowing? (Inheritance — both from PIE nas-*, a genuine cousin pair.) Where does English nasal fit? (A learned borrowing of the Latin word, alongside native nose — the same relationship as lactic beside milk.)

35.3 la bouche — the mouth, which used to mean "cheek"

Tête wasn't Latin's word for head. This one wasn't Latin's word for mouth, either.

You'll want to know: the word

la bouche — the mouth. Feminine.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Classical Latin's real word for "mouth" was ōs. But Latin's vowel lengths eventually stopped being pronounced, and short os "bone" and long ōs "mouth" collapsed into the same sound. Faced with that collision, speakers reached for a slangy stand-in instead: bucca, which had meant "cheek" — much the way an English speaker might call a mouth a "cheek" in passing. The slang stuck, and bucca became French's ordinary word for mouth: bouche.
English kept bucca's original sense in one narrow technical word, buccal ("of the cheek," used mostly by dentists) — never demoted to "mouth" the way French's everyday word was.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "la bouche" — feminine
- "le nez, la bouche" — nose, mouth
- the collision — "os 'bone', ōs 'mouth' — same sound"
- "bucca" — cheek, the slang that took over

Before you move on

Say "the mouth." (La bouche — feminine.) What did Latin bucca originally mean? ("Cheek.") Why did bucca replace the real Latin word for mouth, ōs? (It collided in sound with os, "bone," once vowel length stopped being pronounced.) Which English word still keeps bucca's original "cheek" sense? (Buccal.)

35.4 le ventre — the stomach, closing four chapters of everyday words

Eye, nose, mouth — three words down. One more, and this book's body vocabulary reaches all the way from the head and the hand to here.

You'll want to know: the word

le ventre — the stomach, the belly. Masculine.

J'ai mal au ventre. — "My stomach hurts."

Say the nasal: ven-. It's a different vowel from la main's -ain, even though both endings are written with a nasal consonant after the vowel — French has several distinct nasal vowels, and main and ventre use two of them.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ventre ← Latin venter, stem ventr-, "belly." English kept two learned words on this stem: ventral ("of the belly," the opposite of dorsal), and ventriloquist — venter + loquī, "to speak" — literally a "belly-speaker," someone whose voice seems to come from the stomach rather than the mouth.

Grammar Lens: five chapters, tied off

Before you close the book on this run, three threads from earlier chapters, tied off here:

- la tête is feminine, was Roman soldiers' slang for a pot, and wears a circumflex that marks a lost *s.
- oui once split a country into langue d'oïl and langue d'oc; its cousin si is the one you use to contradict a negative.
- and among this run's own new words — le sel, la personne — every one still carries the article that names its gender, exactly the promise this book made back at la main.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "le ventre" — masculine
- "j'ai mal au ventre"
- "main, ventre" — two different nasal vowels
- "ventriloquist" — the belly-speaker
- the whole run — "le café, l'ami, l'œuf, le ventre" — four chapters, one thread

Before you move on

Say "my stomach hurts." (J'ai mal au ventre.) What English word literally means "belly-speaker"? (Ventriloquist — venter + loquī.) Is ventre's nasal the same vowel as la main's? (No — a different nasal vowel, despite both being spelled with a nasal consonant.) Name the four body words this chapter added to the head and the hand. (L'œil* (les yeux), le nez, la bouche, *le ventre.)

35.5 The three marks, from cold

The word that closed four chapters of everyday nouns — the stomach. Say it with its article.

You'll want to know: le ventre, and the nasal it shares

le ventre — masculine, and nasal like la main, but reaching that nasal through a different vowel. Two body words, two routes to the same kind of sound, and the gender is not predictable from either.

Script: the three marks, thirty chapters later

ê ç ï

Cover the page and say what each one does before checking. They were taught three pages apart and have not been asked for since, which makes this the first real test of them:

- ê records a letter that is gone. English usually still has it.
- ç keeps a c soft where it would otherwise harden.
- ï splits two vowels that would otherwise be read as one.

One is history, one is sound, one is grouping. Sorting them that way is what stops them blurring into a single topic called accents.

Before you move on

Which mark is a piece of history rather than an instruction? (The circumflex.) Which one changes a consonant? (The cédille.) Which one changes how two letters group? (The tréma.) And what gender is ventre? (Masculine — and nothing about the word says so.)

Chapter 36

Asking a Question — Three Ways, and Which One to Use

Modes: 🚗 voice (9) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 9 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask a question in French three ways — by raising my voice, with est-ce que, and by inversion — choose between them by how formal the moment is, and ask where, when, how, how much and why.
>
> The one question word that agrees with its noun, closing a chapter that began with the question costing no new words at all.

36.1 une question — the question you make with your voice alone

You can say a great deal in French and cannot yet ask anything. This chapter fixes that, and the first way costs you no new words at all.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

French has three ways to ask a question. This is the first, the cheapest, and by far the commonest in speech — and it costs you nothing new at all.

> Tu parles français. — You speak French. Tu parles français ? — You speak French?

The words are identical. The order is identical. The only difference is that the second one rises at the end, and in writing, a question mark.

That is a real question, correct and unremarkable, and it is what a French speaker uses with friends, family, in a shop, all day. Note the space before the question mark — French puts a thin space before `?`, `!`, `:` and `;`, which English does not.
Why start here. Textbooks usually open with the formal inversion, which is the rarest of the three and the hardest to build. You can ask about anything you can already say, right now, by lifting your voice. Everything after this lesson is about register and precision, not about being understood.

Your turn

- Say it: une question
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

How do you turn a French statement into a question with no new words? (Raise your voice at the end.) Is that correct French, or a shortcut? (Correct, and the commonest form in speech.) And what does French put before a question mark? (A space.)

36.2 est-ce que — the phrase that announces a question before it starts

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

Vous m'aidez. An ordinary -er verb: j'aide, nous aidons.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The second way. Put est-ce que in front of a statement and it becomes a question:

Est-ce que tu parles français ?

Nothing else moves. The statement stays exactly as it was; the phrase sits in front of it like a flag.

It is worth taking apart, because it looks like three words and behaves like one. Literally it is est-ce que = "is it that…" — French built a question marker out of a tiny sentence, then wore it down until nobody hears the parts any more. A speaker says it as one word, roughly ESS-kuh.

When you would choose it. It is more neutral than the voice-only question and less formal than the inversion coming next — the safe middle. In writing, where your voice cannot rise, it is the ordinary way to ask.

English has no equivalent and does not need one, because English inverts instead: do you speak…. That English do is doing the same job — a meaningless word inserted to mark a question — so the device is familiar even though the word is not.

Your turn

- Say it: est-ce que
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

What does est-ce que do to a statement? (Turns it into a question, with nothing else moving.) What is it literally? (Is it that…) And which English word does the same job? (Do, as in do you speak.)

36.3 où — where

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

où — where

Où est la gare ? — Where is the station? Tu vas où ? — Where are you going?

Both are correct. The question word can open the sentence or sit at the end where the answer would go, and the second is what you will hear far more in speech.

Now the accent, which is not decoration. French has two words spelled o-u:

- ou — or
- où — where

The grave accent is the only difference in writing, and in speech there is no difference at all: both are oo. This is the one place in French where an accent does nothing to the sound and everything to the meaning, which is why it is never optional. The two were different words in Latin: où ← ubi, "where", and ou ← aut, "or" (EtymDB 2.1). You now hold the first question word, and with it a question you can actually use on the first day in a French city.

Your turn

- Say it: où
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

What does où mean? (Where.) What is the same word without the accent? (Or.) And do they sound different? (No — the accent is meaning only.)

36.4 quand — when

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

Entendre once covered hearing, attending, understanding and intending. Hearing took the word when ouïr wore out.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quand — when

Quand est-ce que tu arrives ? — When do you arrive?

The d is silent. Quand is kahn, nasal, with nothing on the end — until the next word begins with a vowel, and then it comes back as a t:

Quand est-ce que... — kahn-TESS-kuh

That is liaison, and it is one of the things that makes fast French hard to cut into words: the consonants at the ends of words are silent alone and audible in company. Nobody writes it down; every speaker does it. Latin quando is the ancestor, and it is worth spending: Spanish cuándo, Italian quando, Portuguese quando — and the qu- on all of them is the same Latin question-word opening you see in English query, question and quest.

Your turn

- Say it: quand
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

What does quand mean? (When.) Is the d pronounced? (Not alone — but it returns as a t before a vowel.) What is that called? (Liaison.)

36.5 comment — how

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

comment — how

You already say it. Comment allez-vous ? is how are you, and you learned it before you knew it contained a question word.

Comment tu dis ça ? — How do you say that?
Comment ? — on its own: Sorry? / Pardon?

That last one is worth having. Used alone it is how a French speaker asks you to repeat — politer than quoi ?, which is the blunt what? The origin is Latin quomodo, "in what manner", and English took the same idea by a different road: mode, modal and manner are all from modus, the "how" half of it.

Your turn

- Say it: comment
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

What does comment mean? (How.) Which phrase you already knew contains it? (Comment allez-vous — how are you.) And what does Comment ? alone mean? (Sorry? / Pardon?)

36.6 combien — how much and how many

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

combien — how much, how many

C'est combien ? — How much is it? Combien de personnes ? — How many people?

English splits this and French does not. Much for things you measure, many for things you count — French uses combien for both and lets the noun sort it out. One word fewer to choose between, and one of the rare places French is simpler than English. Combien is Old French com + bien, "how well", with bien ← Latin bene (EtymDB 2.1). Note combien de before a noun. The de is not optional and does not change for number: combien de personnes, combien d'argent.
C'est combien ? is the single most useful question in this chapter for a traveller, and it is three words long.

Your turn

- Say it: combien
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

What does combien cover that English splits in two? (How much and how many.) What must follow it before a noun? (de.) And how do you ask a price? (C'est combien ?)

36.7 pourquoi — why

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pourquoi — why

Take it apart:
pour ("for") + quoi ("what") → pourquoi
For what? French built its why out of two words you can still see inside it, and English does the same thing in what for? Both halves are Latin underneath: pour ← Vulgar Latin por, quoi ← quid, "what" (EtymDB 2.1).

Pourquoi ? — Why?

The answer, "because," is built to match — by this that against for what — and it gets a lesson of its own a few chapters on, where it joins two clauses into one sentence.
That gives you the last of the five question words.

Your turn

- Say it: pourquoi
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

What is pourquoi made of? (Two words, "for" and "what" — for what?) What does English build the same way? (What for?)

36.8 parlez-vous — the third way to ask

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The third and last way. Swap the verb and the subject, and join them with a hyphen:

> Tu parles français. → Parles-tu français ? Vous parlez français. → Parlez-vous français ?

This is inversion, and it is the form English used to have — speak you French? — and lost, keeping it only in are you, have you, can you.
Where the three ways differ is register, not meaning:

- Tu parles français ? — friends, family, shops. Commonest by far.
- Est-ce que tu parles français ? — neutral, and the default in writing.
- Parlez-vous français ? — formal, written, or deliberately polite.

A beginner is often taught inversion first and then sounds like a textbook in every conversation. It is the one you need to recognise immediately and can afford to produce last.
One sound rule: if the verb ends in a vowel and the subject begins with one, French inserts a -t- to keep them apart — parle-t-il, a-t-elle. It exists purely so two vowels do not collide.

Your turn

- Say it: parlez-vous
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

What are the three ways to ask a question? (Voice, est-ce que, inversion.) Which is commonest in speech? (Voice.) Which should you learn to recognise first and produce last? (Inversion.) And why the -t- in parle-t-il? (To keep two vowels apart.)

36.9 quel, quelle — which

Recall the previous piece before adding another.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quel — which, what

Every question word so far has been invariable. This one is not: quel is an adjective, and like every French adjective it agrees with the noun it asks about.

Quel jour ? — Which day? (masculine) Quelle heure ? — What time? (feminine) Quels livres ? — Which books? (masculine plural) Quelles questions ? — Which questions? (feminine plural)

All four sound identical. Kell, every time. The agreement is entirely written — which makes it a spelling problem rather than a speaking one, and it is one of the commonest places a French exam takes marks off.
You already use one of these without thinking: Quelle heure est-il ? — what time is it. Heure is feminine, so quelle takes two *l*s and an e. That is the fifth and last way this chapter teaches you to ask. Three structures, five question words, and one adjective that agrees.

Your turn

- Say it: quel, quelle
- Ask: the same question all three ways you know so far

Before you move on

Why does quel change and où does not? (Quel is an adjective and agrees with its noun.) Do the four forms sound different? (No — all kell.) So what kind of problem is it? (A spelling one.)

Chapter 37

Want, Can, Must

Modes: 🚗 voice (4) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 4 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what I want, what I can do and what I must do, put any verb I already know behind vouloir, pouvoir or devoir without changing it, and choose je voudrais over je veux when I am asking rather than stating.
>
> Three verbs that between them open a sentence for every verb the reader already owns – and the point at which correct French used at the wrong moment is named as a harder mistake to hear than a grammatical one.

37.1 vouloir — to want

Put est-ce que in front of a statement and it becomes a question. Hold that; you will need it in a moment.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vouloir — to want. It comes from Latin velle, through Vulgar Latin volēre* (EtymDB 2.1). The singular forms first:
Say it as a chant, three beats:

je veux — tu veux — il veut

I want, you want, he wants. And notice what your ear reports: all three sound identical. veux, veux, veut — the spelling distinguishes them and the mouth does not. That is why French keeps the subject pronoun in front: without je or tu, nothing tells a listener who wants what.

A want needs something wanted:

- Je veux un café. — I want a coffee.
- Tu veux le pain ? — Do you want the bread?

Why it's said this way

Now the part a phrasebook will not tell you, and the reason this word needs a warning where parler did not.
Je veux is blunt in a request. Said to a waiter or a shopkeeper it lands close to English I want, which is to say it lands badly. It is perfectly ordinary elsewhere — je veux dire is "I mean", and je veux bien is a cheerful "gladly" — so the problem is not the word, it is the counter. French has a softened form built for exactly this, and it is the one you should reach for by default:

je voudrais — I would like

Same verb, different shape. Je voudrais un café is what a French speaker actually says across a counter, and it is no harder to say than je veux.
So learn both, and learn when each belongs. Je veux is for a want you are simply stating — to a friend, to a child, about yourself. Je voudrais is for asking anyone for anything. If you are unsure which you are doing, you are asking, and you want voudrais.

Your turn

- Say it: je veux, tu veux, il veut — and hear that all three are the same sound
- Say it: je voudrais un café, as though to a stranger behind a counter
- Ask: est-ce que tu veux un café ?

Before you move on

Give the three singular forms. (Veux, veux, veut — all said the same.) You are ordering coffee from someone you have never met: which form do you use? (Je voudrais, never je veux.)

37.2 pouvoir — can

Say je voudrais un café. That was a want, softened.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pouvoir — to be able, and in practice can. It comes from Old French povoir (EtymDB 2.1), from Vulgar Latin potēre*. The singular: Same chant, three beats:

je peux — tu peux — il peut

I can, you can, he can. The same pattern you just met: all three sound alike, and the pronoun carries the person.
That final t is silent — until you invert. Peut-il ? wakes it, and needs no added -t- the way parle-t-il did, because this verb already has one.
What follows pouvoir is a plain, unchanged verb:

- Je peux parler français. — I can speak French.
- Tu peux aider ? — Can you help?

Nothing happens to parler or aider. They arrive in the dictionary form and stay there, which makes this one of the cheapest structures in French: every plain verb you know can be put behind peux with no change at all.
One group does change, and you already own two of them. A verb that carries se keeps it, and the se matches the person: je peux m'asseoir, tu peux te lever. The verb itself is still untouched; only its little pronoun follows you.

Why it's said this way

The reason pouvoir matters early has little to do with ability.
Asking someone to do something by telling them to do it is abrupt in French, as it is in English. What French reaches for instead is a question about ability — the same move English makes with can you:

Tu peux fermer la porte ? — Can you close the door?

Nobody is really asking whether the other person is capable. The question is the politeness, and it is why pouvoir buys you more than a translation would suggest.

For a stranger, soften it the same way vouloir softened into voudrais — the identical shift, on this verb:

Pourriez-vous fermer la porte ?

Your turn

- Say it: je peux, tu peux, il peut — again, one sound between them
- Say it: je peux parler français
- Ask: tu peux aider ?

Before you move on

What happens to the verb that follows peux? (Nothing — it stays in its dictionary form.) Why does a beginner need pouvoir early? (Because asking whether someone can is how French makes a polite request.)

37.3 devoir — must Say je peux parler français. The second verb did not change.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

devoir — to have to, must. The singular, and by now you can predict the shape of the problem:

je dois — tu dois — il doit

I must, you must, he must. All three sound alike again. Three verbs in a row have done this, which is the point worth carrying away: in the French present singular, the three persons are routinely one sound, and the pronoun is what tells them apart. This is not a quirk of these three words.
The exceptions are the three verbs you learned earliest, and they are exceptions because they are used constantly: suis / es / est, ai / as / a, vais / vas / va. Everywhere else, expect one sound.

A plain verb follows, exactly as after peux:

- Je dois partir. — I must leave.
- Tu dois entendre. — You must hear.

Why it's said this way

devoir comes from Latin dēbēre, to owe — and it never stopped meaning that. The same French verb still does both jobs:

- Je dois partir. — I must leave.
- Je te dois dix euros. — I owe you ten euros.

One word, two obligations — and the order matters. The owing came first: the Latin verb meant to owe, and the sense of must grew out of it, exactly as English ought grew out of owed.
That Latin dēbēre is also where English gets debt, debit and due — so a word you have never seen has been sitting in your own vocabulary all along, spelled differently and meaning the half of devoir that involves money.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- je dois, tu dois, il doit
- je dois partir
- je te dois dix euros — the same verb, the other meaning

Before you move on

What two things does devoir mean? (Must, and to owe.) Which English words share its Latin root? (Debt, debit, due.)

37.4 Practice — want, can, must Say je dois partir.

What you've built

Three verbs, one shape between them. Say each chant in turn:

je veux — tu veux — il veut

je peux — tu peux — il peut

je dois — tu dois — il doit

Every chant is three forms that sound identical, and between the three chants you have wanting, being able, and having to.
And all three do the same structural thing: a plain verb follows, unchanged.

- Je veux partir. — I want to leave.
- Je peux partir. — I can leave.
- Je dois partir. — I must leave.

That is the payoff, and it is larger than three words. Every verb you have learned in this book — parler, aider, fermer, ouvrir, écrire, lire, dormir — can be dropped in behind any of these three with no change of any kind. You have not learned three expressions. You have learned three openings, and you already own everything that goes after them.

Why it's said this way

One caution carried forward, because it is the difference between sounding capable and sounding rude.

- Stating a want to a friend: je veux.
- Asking anyone for anything: je voudrais.
- Asking someone else to act: tu peux…? or vous pouvez…?

The blunt form is not wrong French. It is correct French used at the wrong moment, which is a harder mistake to hear and an easier one to make.

Your turn

- Say it: je veux partir, je peux partir, je dois partir
- Say it: the same three with parler français instead of partir
- Ask: vous pouvez fermer la porte ?

Before you move on

What happens to a verb placed after veux, peux or dois? (Nothing — it stays in its dictionary form.) You want to ask a stranger to close a window: which of the three do you start with? (Vous pouvez…)

Chapter 38

Five Ways to Point

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that something exists, say what it is, hand somebody over, point at a noun, and answer the question where.
>
> Everything the book owns is pointed at five ways: it exists, it is a thing, it is handed over, it is pointed at in front of its noun, and it is somewhere. One Latin word runs under four of the five – ecce, 'behold', which fused into ce, ici, voici and voila and then vanished inside all of them.

38.1 il y a — "there is," built out of "it has there"

Say il a and il est. You have both verbs whole, and you still cannot say that something exists.

- Recall: two chapters back, the three ways to ask a question — voice, est-ce que, inversion

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

il y a — there is, there are.

Said eel-ya, three words run into two syllables.

Il y a du pain. — There is some bread.

Il y a un café. — There is a café.

Word for word it says it has there. The il stands for nobody — the same empty il as in il est trois heures — the a is avoir, and the y is the piece worth stopping on.
That y is Latin ibi, "there," and it survives in French almost nowhere else. Spanish welded the same ibi onto its own ha and got hay; French kept the two apart and writes them still. Two languages, one Latin adverb, one idea — and only French leaves the seam visible.
One shape covers both numbers. Il y a un café and il y a deux cafés use the identical phrase, so there is no there are to learn separately.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- il y a — eel-ya
- with the partitive you already own — "Il y a du pain, du vin, de l'eau."
- with a count — "Il y a un café" and "Il y a deux cafés", the same phrase twice
- the three pieces, slowly — il … y … a
- with the chain from the last chapter, the second verb unchanged — "Je veux du pain" and "Il va y avoir du pain"

Before you move on

What does il y a say word for word? (It has there.) What is the y? (Latin ibi, "there" — the same word inside Spanish hay.) Does it change for plural? (No.) Say "there is some bread."

38.2 c'est — "this is," and the pointing phrase inside it

Il y a says a thing exists. It cannot say what the thing is. Say il est and l'eau, and watch the apostrophe do its usual work.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

c'est — this is, that is. · ce sont — these are, those are.

ce is the pointing word, est is être, and the e of ce falls out in front of a vowel exactly as le becomes l':

C'est du café. — That's coffee. · C'est mon frère. — That's my brother.

For a plural French switches the verb and stops eliding, because sont opens with a consonant:

Ce sont des cafés. — Those are cafés.

ce is Latin ecce hoc — behold this — a whole phrase worn down to two letters over fifteen centuries. The ecce half is still doing work elsewhere in this language, and the next two lessons will show where.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- c'est — one syllable, say
- the table — "C'est du pain. C'est du fromage. C'est du café."
- people — "C'est mon frère. C'est ma sœur."
- the plural — "Ce sont des cafés."
- the pair — "Il y a un café" against "C'est un café"

Before you move on

What two words are inside c'est? (Ce and est.) What happens for a plural? (Ce sont, with no elision.) What Latin phrase is ce? (Ecce hoc — "behold this".) What does il y a do that c'est does not? (Say a thing exists without saying what it is.)

38.3 ici, là, là-bas — three distances

You can ask où ?. You have had no way at all to answer it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ici — here. · là — there. · là-bas — over there, further off.

Où est le café ? — Ici.

ici is Latin ecce hic, "behold here" — the same ecce, "behold," that is buried inside c'est. French said its pointing word so often that it fused into several separate everyday words and then disappeared inside each of them; two more of them arrive in the next lesson.
là-bas is là plus bas, "low" — there below. The picture is of something further down a road, and it marks the far end of a three-step scale English can only manage with two words and a gesture.
The accent on là is doing real work: it separates the adverb from la, the article. Same letter, same sound, and the grave mark is the only difference on the page.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three, near to far — "ici, là, là-bas"
- the question and its answer — "Où est le café ? — Ici."
- "Le pain est là."
- "Il y a un café là-bas."
- the pair the accent separates — "la" the article, "là" the place
- with what it is — "C'est le café. Il est là."

Before you move on

Say the three distances. (Ici, là, là-bas.) What is là-bas made of? (Là plus bas, "low" — there below.) What does the accent on là separate it from? (The article *la.) Answer où est le pain ? three ways.

38.4 voici — "here is," and introducing somebody else

You can give your own name, ask for somebody else's, and shake hands afterwards. Say all three. Then notice that you have never been able to introduce a third person.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

voici — here is, here are. · voilà — there is, there are.

Voici ma mère. — This is my mother.

Voilà mon père. — That's my father.

Both are frozen commands. voici is vois + ci, "see here"; voilà is vois + là, "see there". Nobody hears an order in them any more, and the verb inside has not been conjugated for centuries.
The ci and the là are the two words you took last lesson, and the vois in front of them carries the same Latin ecce, "behold," that is buried inside ce and ici. So French points four ways off one ancient root — ce, ici, voici, voilà — and each of the four froze at a different moment. Between them and c'est, you can now hand somebody over:

Voici ma sœur. — Enchanté.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- voici and voilà
- the household — "Voici ma mère. Voici mon père."
- "Voici mon frère. Voici ma sœur."
- "Voici mon ami." then the reply, "Enchanté."
- the four pointing words in one breath — "ce, ici, voici, voilà"

- your own name, then somebody else's — "Je m'appelle…", "Voici…"

Before you move on

What two words are frozen inside voici? (Vois and ci — "see here".) And inside voilà? (Vois and là.) Introduce your mother, and answer yourself. (Voici ma mère. — Enchanté.)

38.5 ce, cet, cette, ces — pointing at a noun

Say le, la, les. Those say the. Nothing you own says this in front of a noun — c'est and voici both need a whole sentence.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ce, cet, cette, ces — this, that, these, those, standing in front of a noun.

The choice follows the article you already know, one for one:

the noun takes	you say
le	ce pain
le, before a vowel	cet ami
la	cette mère
les	ces cafés

Only the second line is new machinery, and it is machinery you have already met from the other side. Le ami is impossible, so French writes l'ami. Ce ami is impossible for the identical reason — and here French borrows a t instead of eliding, giving cet ami.
The result is a small trap for the ear: cet ami and cette amie are pronounced exactly alike, and only the sentence around them says which was meant.
All four are Latin ecce iste, "behold that one" — the same ecce inside ce, voici and voilà, welded this time to a different second half.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the article first, then the pointer — "le pain, ce pain"

- "la mère, cette mère"
- "les cafés, ces cafés"
- the borrowed t — "l'ami, cet ami"
- the animals — "ce chien, ce chat"
- the two that sound alike — "cet ami", "cette amie"

Before you move on

Which shape goes in front of a le-word? (Ce.) A la-word? (Cette.) A plural? (Ces.) Why does cet exist? (To keep two vowels apart, the same job the apostrophe does in l'ami.) Which two of the four sound identical? (Cet and cette.)

38.6 Voici tout — the chapter, run cold

One Latin word is inside four things you learned this chapter. Name it, then name the four.

Your turn: the table, pointed at five ways

Everything the book has put on a table, pointed at five different ways. Say each line before you read the next.

Say these aloud:

- it exists — "Il y a du pain, du vin, de l'eau."
- what it is — "C'est du fromage. C'est du café. C'est du lait."
- handed over — "Voici le thé. Voici le sel. Voici le sucre."
- pointed at — "ce beurre, cet œuf, cette eau, ces cafés"
- the loan and the inheritance side by side — café and thé came from far away; pain, vin and lait never left

Your turn: the distant band — people, animals, the body

Now reach back. Every person, every animal and every part of the body this book has taught, introduced or pointed at.

Say these aloud:

- the household, handed over — "Voici ma mère, mon père, mon frère, ma sœur"
- the four Latin cousins those keep — mater, pater, frater, soror
- "Voici mon ami. Voici l'enfant. Voici la famille." then "Enchanté."
- the two animals, pointed at — "ce chien, ce chat"
- the body — "cette tête, cette main, ce nez, cet œil, cette bouche, ce ventre"
- the one that needed a borrowed t, and why — "cet œil"

Your turn: where

- Say it: "Où est le café ?" then all three answers — "Ici. Là. Là-bas."
- Say it: "Il y a un café là-bas."
- Ask: the same question the other two ways you know

Before you move on

Which phrase says a thing exists without saying what it is? (Il y a.) Which says what it is? (C'est.) Which hands it to somebody? (Voici.) Which points at it in front of its noun? (Ce, cet, cette, ces.) And what single Latin word is buried in ce, ici, voici and voilà? (Ecce — "behold".)

Chapter 39

Where Two Words Melt Into One

Modes: voice (5) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 3 of 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to, at, of and from, and I know which four combinations of preposition and article melt into a single word.
>
> Every noun the book owns is put in somebody's hands and put somewhere. Two prepositions and four articles make eight combinations, four of which melt – and the rule that decides which is the one du already showed: le and les contract, la and l' do not. The u inside au was an l, which is the same eight-century-old change that made chevaux out of cheval.

39.1 à — one letter, and the accent that saves it

Say il a and il y a. The a in both is the verb. This lesson takes the other one.

- Recall: two chapters back, the three question words you took last — comment, combien, pourquoi

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

à — to, at.

à Paris — to Paris, in Paris. · à trois heures — at three o'clock.

Latin ad gave it, and the d wore off, leaving a single letter. English kept the same ad in a hundred borrowed words — advance, admit, adhere — where it still means toward.

The grave accent has one job and no other: it separates this word from a, the verb. Same letter, same sound, and only the mark on the page says which is meant. French does this three times over — a/à, ou/où, la/là — and you have already met the third.
You have owned the clock since it was taught and had no way to say at a time. Now you have one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the two *a*s — the verb "il a", the preposition "à Paris"
- the clock, at last — "à trois heures", "à midi", "à minuit"
- the three pairs the accent separates — "a/à", "ou/où", "la/là"
- ask for a time, then answer — "Quelle heure est-il ? — À midi."
- the three modals, each pointed at a time — "Je veux partir à midi. Je peux partir à midi. Je dois partir à midi." — and the second verb never moving

Before you move on

What Latin word is à? (Ad.) What is the accent for? (To separate it from a, the verb — nothing else.) Say "at midday" and "at three o'clock."

39.2 de — "of," and the word already hiding in du

Say du pain. You were told two words are inside it. Name them.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

de — of, from.

le café de Paris — the café of Paris. · le frère de

Marie — Marie's brother.

That second line is worth a moment. French owns nothing with an apostrophe: it says the brother of Marie, and it has said so since Latin. English is the odd one here — the possessive 's is a Germanic survival that Latin's daughters never had, so Marie's brother is the outlier and le frère de Marie is the ordinary European shape.
Before a vowel it elides, exactly as le does:

le livre d'Anne — Anne's book.

And you have been saying de since the food chapter without meeting it alone: du pain is de + le, and de l'eau is de with nothing to contract.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- possession, the French way — "le frère de Marie", "la mère de Anne"
- elided — "le café d'Anne"
- the two you already had — "du pain", "de l'eau"
- the pair — "à Paris" and "de Paris"

Before you move on

How does French say "Marie's brother"? (Le frère de Marie — of Marie.) Which language invented the apostrophe possessive? (English, and none of Latin's daughters has one.) What two words are inside du? (De and le.)

39.3 au, aux — where à and le melt together

De plus le gave you du. Predict what à plus le gives before you read on.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

au = à + le. · aux = à + les.

au café — to the café. · aux cafés — to the cafés.

à la maison — no contraction, because la is not le.

Two of the four combinations melt and two do not, and the split is the same one du already showed you: le and les contract, la and l' stay apart.

The u in au was an l. French turned al into au across the whole language, and once you have seen it you find it everywhere:

older shape	modern
bel	beau
cheval	chevaux
journal	journaux

So the x on aux and the x on chevaux are the same story, and a plural that looks irregular is an l that turned into a u eight centuries ago. The x of aux is silent alone and comes back as a z before a vowel — aux amis is oh-ZAH-mee, the liaison you have had since the numbers.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the four — "au café", "aux cafés", "à la maison", "à l'eau"
- the pair that melt the same way — "du café", "au café"
- the liaison — "aux amis", oh-ZAH-mee
- the l that became a u — "bel, beau; cheval, chevaux"

Before you move on

What is au made of? (À plus le.) And aux? (À plus les.) Which two never contract? (La and l'.) What was the u of au before it was a u? (An *l, the same one inside chevaux.)

39.4 de la — the half of the partitive that was missing

Say "some bread" and "some water". Both are yours. Now try "some milk" — le lait is a le-word, but la viande, meat, is not.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

de la — some, in front of a la-word.

du lait — some milk. · de la viande — some meat. · de l'eau — some water.

Three shapes, one rule, and it is a rule you already own from two other places: de plus the article, contracting only where le and les contract. That is worth stating plainly, because it looks like three separate things to memorise and is one:

the noun takes	some...
le	du
la	de la
l'	de l'

The food chapter taught the first and third and stopped, because every noun on its table happened to be a le-word or a vowel-word. The middle line was never missing from the language, only from the table.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the three shapes — "du lait, de la viande, de l'eau"
- the table you already had — "du pain, du vin, du fromage"
- the two drinks — "du café, du thé"
- article first, then the partitive — "le lait → du lait"
- pointed at, then measured — "ce lait", then "du lait"; "cette eau", then "de l'eau"

Before you move on

Which shape goes with a la-word? (De la.) With a le-word? (Du.) Why does de la not contract? (Only le and les ever contract — the same rule behind du and au.)

39.5 des — the plural of un, and the last shape of some

un café is a café. Say the plural. English drops the word entirely — cafés — and French cannot.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

des — some; and the plural of un and une.

un café → des cafés · une amie → des amies

Il y a des cafés. — There are cafés.

des is de + les, contracted exactly as du is de + le. So it completes two systems at once and adds no new machinery to either.
Here English is the language with the hole. English has a and no plural of it, so it says books, cafés, friends with nothing in front. French will not leave the slot empty, and a sentence with a bare plural noun in it sounds unfinished to a French ear. That is the single commonest mistake an English speaker makes in French, and it is a missing word rather than a wrong one.
The s is silent, and it comes back as a z before a vowel: des amies is day-ZAH-mee.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- singular then plural — "un café, des cafés"
- "un chien, des chiens; un chat, des chats"
- the liaison — "des amies", day-ZAH-mee

- existence and identity, in the plural — “Il y a des cafés.” “Ce sont des amis.”
- all four shapes of some — “du, de la, de l’, des”

Before you move on

What two words are inside des? (De and les.) What is the plural of un café? (Des cafés.) What does English put in that slot? (Nothing — it has no plural of a.) Say all four shapes of some.

39.6 Au café — the chapter, run cold

Two prepositions and four articles make eight combinations. Four melt into one word and four do not. Say which four melt, and say the one rule that decides it.

Your turn: the four that melt

Say these aloud:

- à melting — “au café”, “aux cafés”
- de melting — “du pain”, “des amis”
- the four that stay apart — “à la maison”, “à l’eau”, “de la viande”, “de l’eau”
- the two liaisons — “aux amis”, “des amis”

Your turn: the distant band — everything, placed and possessed

Every noun the book owns, put in somebody’s hands and put somewhere. Say these aloud:

- the table, possessed — “le pain de Marie, le vin de Paris, le café d’Anne”
- the table, in the plural — “des œufs, des cafés, du sel, du sucre, du beurre”

- the household, possessed — “la mère de Marie, le frère d’Anne, la sœur de Paul”
- the animals — “le chien de l’enfant, le chat de l’ami”
- the clock, at last with a preposition — “à midi”, “à minuit”, “à trois heures”
- put it all together — “Il y a des cafés là-bas. C’est le café de Marie. Je suis au café.”

Before you move on

Which two articles contract, and which two never do? (Le and les contract; la and l’ do not.) Name the four melted words. (Au, aux, du, des.) How does French say “Marie’s bread”? (Le pain de Marie.) And what does English have that French does not need? (An apostrophe.)

Chapter 40

Two Ideas, One Sentence

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the order a French sentence holds to, and join two thoughts with and, or, but and because.
>
> Every verb the book owns is given a reason. The chapter also names the sentence shape the reader has been building for thirty-odd chapters without being told what it was, and says why French is stricter about word order than Latin ever was: Latin's endings said who did what, French wore them off, and position had to take the job.

40.1 sujet, verbe, objet — the order that carries the meaning

You have been building French sentences for thirty-odd chapters and nobody has said what shape they are. Say je parle français and parlez-vous français ? and notice that only one of the two moves anything.

- Recall: two chapters back, the phrase that says a thing exists — il y a

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The doer comes first, the verb second, and what is done to comes third.

Marie mange le pain. — Marie eats the bread.

Turn those three around and you change who eats whom. French depends on the order, and the dependence has a cause.
Latin did not depend on it. Maria panem edit and panem Maria edit mean the same thing, because panem carries an ending that says this is the thing being eaten wherever it stands. French wore those endings off — panem became pain, and the -em that did the work went with it. Once the endings were gone, something had to say who did what, and position took the job. So French is stricter about word order than its own parent was, and the strictness is the price of the simpler nouns.
Two places already break the order, and you own both: a question by inversion puts the verb first, and voici and voilà have no subject at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the plain order — "Marie mange le pain."
- turn it round and hear the meaning turn — "Le pain mange Marie."
- "Je parle français."
- the doer named by a possessive phrase — "Le frère de Marie mange le pain."
- the two shapes that break the order — "Parlez-vous français ?" and "Voici le café."

Before you move on

What order does a French sentence hold to? (Doer, verb, done-to.) Why is French stricter about it than Latin? (Latin's endings said who did what; French wore them off, so position had to take over.) Name the two shapes you own that break the order.

40.2 et — "and," and the one t that never wakes

You have said et vous ? and et toi ? many times as glue in a conversation. It has never been a word of its own.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

et — and.

du pain et du vin — bread and wine.

Latin et, unchanged in two thousand years, and the same word inside English etcetera.
It hides one genuine oddity. Every other final t in French comes back to life before a vowel — quand est-ce que is kahn-TESS-kuh, and you met that liaison with the numbers. The t of et never does:

du pain et un café — pan … ay … uh café, with a clean break.

Nobody can say why this one word refuses. It is old enough that grammarians record the exception and do not explain it, and it is worth knowing because the liaison you would naturally make there is the one liaison a French ear will notice as wrong.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- et, and the break after it — "du pain et un café"
- the table joined — "du pain et du vin", "du café et du lait"
- the household joined — "mon frère et ma sœur"
- with the plural — "des cafés et des amis"

Before you move on

What Latin word is et? (Et, unchanged.) What does its t do before a vowel? (Nothing — it is the one final t in French that never comes back.) Say "bread and a coffee" with the break in the right place.

40.3 ou — "or," and the accent that is the only difference

You own où, "where." Say it. This lesson takes the word that is spelled the same and means something else entirely.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ou — or. · où — where.

du café ou du thé ? — coffee or tea?

The two have nothing to do with each other. ou is Latin aut, "or"; où is Latin ubi, "where." Two unrelated words wore down until they landed on the same three letters, and French put a grave accent on one of them to keep the page readable.
That is now the third such pair you have seen, and they work the same way every time: a/à, la/là, ou/où. The accent carries no sound at all in any of the three — it is punctuation for the eye.
Spoken French makes no distinction whatever. Où est le café ? and ou est le café are the same noise, and only the sentence settles it.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the choice — "du café ou du thé ?"
- "du pain ou du vin ?", "un chien ou un chat ?"
- the two joiners together — "du pain et du vin", "du pain ou du vin"
- all three accent pairs — "a/à, la/là, ou/où"

Before you move on

Which Latin word is ou? (Aut.) And où? (Ubi.) Do they sound different? (No — the accent is for the eye.) Name the other two pairs the accent keeps apart. (A/à and la/là.)

40.4 mais — "but," and the Latin word for more

Et adds. Ou offers a choice. Neither can say that the second half disagrees with the first.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mais — but.

Ça va bien, mais je suis fatigué. — I'm well, but I'm tired.

Said may: the ai is the e sound you met in lait, and the s is silent. mais is Latin magis, which meant more — and that is worth a moment, because the same word is still doing the older job next door. Spanish inherited magis as más and it still means more; French inherited it and drifted it into but.
The road between the two is short. "He is clever, more he is lazy" is not far from "he is clever, but he is lazy" — a more used to add a second, competing fact turns into a contrast if you use it that way for long enough. One Latin adverb, two daughters, two different parts of speech.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- mais — may, the s silent
- "Ça va bien, mais je suis fatigué."
- "Il y a du café, mais il n'y a pas de thé."
- the three joiners in a row — "et, ou, mais"

Before you move on

What did mais mean in Latin? (More — magis.) Which language still uses that word for more? (Spanish, as más.) Say the three joiners.

40.5 parce que — "because," and the three words inside it

You can ask pourquoi ?. Nothing you own can answer it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

parce que — because.

Pourquoi ? — Parce que je suis fatigué.

Three words are welded in there: par ("by"), ce ("this") and que ("that"). By this that… — a phrase that pointed forward at the reason about to be given, said so often that the first two fused and the third stayed loose. All three are inherited from Latin: par ← per, ce ← ecce hoc, "look, this", and que ← quid, quem or quia (EtymDB 2.1 lists all three).
English built its own the same way. Because is by + cause, and the seam is still faintly visible if you look. Two languages, two prepositions, two pointing words, one job.
Before a vowel the que elides, exactly as le and de do:

parce qu'il est midi — because it's noon.

And the ce inside it is the same ce you took two chapters ago — the fourth place that one small pointing word has turned up.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the question and its answer — "Pourquoi ? — Parce que je suis fatigué."
- elided — "parce qu'il est midi"
- the three pieces, slowly — par … ce … que
- all four joiners — "et, ou, mais, parce que"

Before you move on

What three words are inside parce que? (Par, ce, que — "by this that".) How did English build because? (By plus cause — the same trick.) What happens to que before a vowel? (It elides — parce qu'il.)

40.6 Deux idées — the chapter, run cold

Say the four joiners. Then say what French lost that made its word order compulsory.

Your turn: joined, chosen, contrasted, explained

Say these aloud:

- joined — "du pain et du vin", "du café et du lait"
- chosen — "du café ou du thé ?", "de l'eau ou du vin ?"
- contrasted — "Ça va bien, mais je suis fatigué."
- explained — "Pourquoi ? — Parce que je suis fatigué."
- all four in one breath — "et, ou, mais, parce que"

Your turn: the distant band — every verb, given a reason

Every verb this book owns can now carry a reason. Say the sentence, then say why.

Say these aloud:

- "Je parle français, parce que j'habite à Paris."
- "Je travaille, mais je suis fatigué."
- the verbs of the page — "Je lis et j'écris."
- the verbs of the body — "Je marche ou je cours."
- "J'entends, mais je ne comprends pas."
- with the three modals — "Je veux dormir, parce que je suis fatigué." "Je peux prendre le café." "Je dois travailler."

- “J’aime le café, mais je demande du thé.”

Before you move on

Which joiner was Latin for more? (Mais, from magis.) Which one has three words inside it? (Parce que.) Which one’s t never makes a liaison? (Et.) And which two are kept apart only by an accent? (Ou and où.)

Chapter 41

Three More Ways to Use a Verb

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can give a command, say what is about to happen, run the second regular verb family, drop the ne the way speakers do, and use on.
>
> Every verb the book owns is commanded, put in the near future and refused. The imperative costs almost nothing because voici and voila have been frozen commands since the pointing chapter, and the near future costs nothing at all because it walks into the modal chain the reader already owns – a fourth verb in a slot built for three.

41.1 Parle ! — the command, and the pronoun that goes missing

French insists on a subject pronoun in every sentence — you were told why: the endings are silent, so je, tu and ils carry the person alone. There is one place it lets the pronoun go.

- Recall: two chapters back, the four melted words — au, aux, du, des

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

To tell somebody to do something, take the tu form and drop the tu — and, for an -er verb, drop the -s as well.

tu parles → Parle ! · tu écoutes → Écoute !

vous parlez → Parlez ! — the polite one, unchanged.

The lost -s is a spelling rule and nothing more: it was silent anyway, so the command sounds identical to the form it came from. Only the page changes.
And you have been doing this since the pointing chapter without being told. voici and voilà are vois — the command form of voir, "see" — welded to ci and là. The shape was in your mouth before it had a name.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the form, then the command — "tu parles → Parle !"
- "Écoute !" and the polite "Écoutez !"
- the -er verbs you own — "Travaille ! Habite ! Aime ! Demande ! Marche !"
- the command you have said all along — "Voici", and the vois inside it

Before you move on

How do you build a command? (Take the tu form, drop the pronoun — and the -s on an -er verb.) Does it sound different from tu parles? (No — the s was silent.) Which word you have said for two chapters is a frozen command? (Voici.)

41.2 je vais partir — the future made out of "go"

Aller is yours, and so is the rule that a second verb after vouloir, pouvoir or devoir never changes. Put those two together before you read on.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aller + an unchanged second verb says the thing is about to happen.

Je vais partir. — I'm going to leave.

Je vais travailler. — I'm going to work.

The second verb sits in its dictionary form and stays there, exactly as it does after je veux, je peux and je dois. So this is not a new construction; it is a fourth verb walking into a chain you already own. What makes it worth a lesson is that English does the identical thing and nobody notices. I am going to leave has no walking in it at all — the verb of motion has been emptied out and pointed at time. French emptied its own verb of motion the same way, separately, and the two languages arrived at the same idiom by the same road.
Spoken French uses this far more than the one-word future that grammars teach first. It is the ordinary way to talk about tomorrow.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "Je vais partir." and "Je vais travailler."
- with the verbs of the page — "Je vais lire. Je vais écrire."
- "Je vais dormir. Je vais marcher."
- the chain, four verbs deep — "je veux dormir, je peux dormir, je dois dormir, je vais dormir"

Before you move on

What two pieces make the near future? (Aller* plus a verb in its dictionary form.) What does English use for the same job? (Going to — its own emptied verb of motion.) Say "I'm going to read."

41.3 finir — the second regular family

parler gave you the biggest verb family in French. dormir was irregular and had to be learned as itself. There is a second regular family between them, and it also ends in -ir.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

finir — to finish.

Latin finire, from finis, "end" — the same root inside English final, finish, finite and define.
Said fee-NEER, with the r sounded, which is where it differs from an -er infinitive: parler ends in a clean ay and finir ends in a real r.

Grammar Lens: the plural grows a syllable

In the singular the stem is fini-; in the plural an extra -iss- appears before the ending.

Singular: je finis, tu finis, il finit — all three the same noise, which is the ordinary French silence you have met on parle, parles and parlent.
Plural: nous finissons, vous finissez, ils finissent — an extra syllable in every one, and that syllable is what tells the ear a plural is happening.
The -iss- is a fossil. Latin had a suffix -isc- that meant begin to, and finire picked it up as finiscere, "to begin to end." The starting sense wore away completely; the syllable stayed. So nous finissons is carrying a meaning the verb has not had for fifteen hundred years. Dozens of everyday verbs run this pattern — choisir, grandir, réussir — and every one of them adds the same syllable in the same three places.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the infinitive, with its r sounded — "finir"
- the three singular forms, all one noise — "je finis, tu finis, il finit"
- the plural, hearing the extra syllable — "nous finissons, vous finissez, ils finissent"
- the three infinitive endings side by side — "parler, finir, dormir"
- with the near future — "Je vais finir."

Before you move on

What appears in the plural of finir? (An extra *-iss-.) What did that syllable once mean? (Begin to — Latin's -isc-.) Name the three infinitive endings you now own. (-er, -ir, and the irregular -ir of dormir.)

41.4 je sais pas — the ne that speech leaves out

Say je ne comprends pas. Two words wrap the verb. In ordinary speech one of them is usually gone.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

In speech the ne drops and the pas carries the negative alone.

written: Je ne sais pas. · said: Je sais pas.

This is not slang and it is not careless. It is what most French speakers do most of the time, and a learner who says every ne sounds like a written page read aloud.

The reason it can happen at all is in the history of pas. That word was the noun for a step: je ne marche pas first meant I do not walk a step, with the step there for emphasis, exactly as English says not a bit or not a jot. French did the same with point (a dot) and mie (a crumb). Then the emphasiser took over. Pas spread to every verb, lost its meaning entirely, and ended up carrying the negation by itself — after which the original ne became the optional half. The word that was decoration is now the load bearer, and the word that did the work is the one that falls off.

Written, both. Spoken, one.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- written, then spoken — "Je ne sais pas." / "Je sais pas."
- "Je ne comprends pas." / "Je comprends pas."

- with this chapter's verb — "Je ne finis pas." / "Je finis pas."
- the step that is no longer a step — pas, the noun
- the answer-words you keep — "non" and the one that contradicts a negative, "si"

Before you move on

Which half of the negative does speech drop? (The *ne.) What was pas before it was a negative? (A step — a noun, put in for emphasis.) Which two other nouns did French use the same way? (Point and mie.)

41.5 on — the pronoun that was a word for man

You own six subject pronouns and none of them can say people in general. Say personne, then take the pronoun built out of a word like it.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

on — one, people, they — and in everyday speech, we.

On parle français ici. — French is spoken here. / People speak French here.

On y va. — Let's go. (Literally: one goes there.)

It takes the same ending as il and elle, so nothing new has to be learned to use it: on parle, on finit, on va.
on is Latin homo, "man," worn down to two letters. Two neighbours did the identical thing with their own words: German turned Mann into the pronoun man, and English turned one into the pronoun one — one does not do such things. Three languages, three words for a person, all promoted to mean anybody at all.
What French then did that the others did not is let it take over nous. On y va is what people actually say for let's go, and nous survives mostly in writing. So the pronoun for nobody in particular has quietly become the pronoun for us.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- on — one syllable, nasal
- "On parle français ici."
- the one everybody says — "On y va."
- with this chapter's verbs — "On finit." "On va travailler."
- with the dropped ne — "On sait pas."
- the three cousins — French on, German man, English one

Before you move on

What Latin word is on? (Homo, "man".) Which ending does it take? (The same as *il — on parle.) What does it stand in for in everyday speech? (Nous — "we".) Say "let's go."

41.6 On y va ! — the chapter, run cold

> Three of the five things in this chapter are shapes a verb can take and two are words. Sort them, then say which shape leaves the pronoun out and which word replaces one.

Your turn: every verb, three ways

Every verb the book owns, commanded, put in the near future, and refused. Say these aloud:

- commanded — "Parle ! Travaille ! Écoute ! Marche ! Demande !"
- about to happen — "Je vais lire. Je vais écrire. Je vais dormir. Je vais courir."
- refused, in speech — "Je comprends pas. J'entends pas. Je finis pas."
- the false friend, still false — demander asks, it does not demand
- the one that means both walk and work — marcher

Your turn: the distant band — on, and the whole table

The whole table, with on in front of it and the joiners between.

Say these aloud:

- "On va au café. On prend du pain et du fromage."
- "Il y a du café et du thé, mais il n'y a pas de lait."
- "On finit le pain, parce qu'on a faim."
- the whole table in the plural — "des œufs, du sel, du sucre, du beurre, de l'eau"
- "On parle français ici, mais on parle anglais là-bas."
- the three cousins of on — French on, German man, English one

Before you move on

How do you build a command? (The tu form without its pronoun — and without its -s on an -er verb.) What two pieces make the near future? (Aller* plus a plain verb.) What grows in the plural of finir? (An extra *-iss-.) Which half of the negative does speech drop? (The *ne.) And what was on in Latin? (Homo, "man".)

Chapter 42

What the Ear Cannot Hear

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I know why a written consonant at the end of a French word is silent, what the plural and the feminine do about it, and what happens to some after a negative.
>
> One sound rule and the four spellings that hang off it. The chapter names the thing the reader has been working around since the numbers – a final consonant is silent – and then shows the plural, the feminine, the -x plural and the negative partitive as four consequences of it rather than four separate facts.

42.1 la consonne finale — the rule under half this book

Say quand, et, parlez, des. Four words, four written consonants at the end, and not one of them sounded. Nobody has yet said why.

- Recall: two chapters back, the joiner Latin used for more — mais

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

> A consonant written at the end of a French word is normally not pronounced.

Salut is sa-LU. Deux is deu. Trois is trwah. Nuit is nwee. The letter is on the page and not in the mouth.

Those letters were once sounded. Old French said the t of salut and the s of trois, and over centuries the mouth dropped them while the spelling stayed where it was. Every silent consonant in French is a fossil of a sound the language used to make.
Two things bring them back to life, and you own both:

- Liaison. Before a vowel the consonant wakes up — des amis is day-ZAH-mee, quand est-ce que is kahn-TESS-kuh. You met this on the numbers.
- A following -e. Add an -e and the consonant is no longer final, so it is no longer silent. That is the next lesson.

There are exceptions worth naming, and the shortest way to hold them is the word CaReFuL — c, r, f, l are the four consonants that usually do sound at the end: avec, bonjour, neuf, il.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- silent — "salut, deux, trois, nuit"
- woken by a vowel — "des amis", "quand est-ce que"
- the four that usually sound — "avec, bonjour, neuf, il"
- the one t that never wakes — "et un café"
- a silent letter you have been pointing with — "ces cafés", where the s is heard only before a vowel
- the accent that is not a sound either — "là", "là-bas"

Before you move on

What happens to a consonant written at the end of a French word? (It is normally silent.) What wakes it? (A following vowel — liaison.) Which four usually sound anyway? (C, r, f, l — careful.) And which word refuses to make its liaison at all? (Et.)

42.2 le pluriel en -s — written, and never heard

A final consonant is silent. A plural is written with a final s. Put the two facts together before you read on.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

A French noun takes -s in the plural, and that -s is silent.

le café → les cafés — luh ka-FAY → lay ka-FAY

Say those two aloud and listen. The noun did not change at all. Only the article in front of it did.
That is the whole reason the article system matters so much here. le, la, les, un, une, des are not ornament — they are the only place a French listener can hear that more than one thing is meant. Drop the article, as English does with a bare plural, and a French sentence becomes genuinely ambiguous.
The -s does come back before a vowel, as a z: les amis is lay-ZAH-mee. So the plural is audible exactly when the next word begins with a vowel and inaudible otherwise, which is one more reason liaison is not optional politeness.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair, listening for no difference — "le café, les cafés"
- "le chien, les chiens; le chat, les chats"
- the plural that IS audible — "les amis", lay-ZAH-mee
- with des — "des cafés, des chiens, des œufs"
- the article carrying the whole load — "le" against "les"

Before you move on

Is the plural -s pronounced? (No — it is a final consonant.) Then what tells a listener a plural is meant? (The article — les, des.) When does the -s come back? (Before a vowel, as a z.)

42.3 petit, petite — the ending that wakes the letter before it

Say bon and bonne. You have had both since page one, and the difference between them has never been named.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

The feminine of an adjective adds -e. That -e is itself silent — and it makes the consonant in front of it audible.

petit — puh-TEE. · petite — puh-TEET. ("small") vert — vair. · verte — vairt. ("green")

Nothing is added to the sound at the end. What changes is that the t stops being final, so the rule from two lessons ago no longer silences it. This is worth holding on to, because it makes the feminine easier to hear than to see. A French listener knows petite from petit instantly — one ends in a consonant and one does not — while a reader has to notice a letter that is never said.
The other colours you own behave the same way: blanc and blanche; noir and noire, where the r was already sounding and nothing changes at all.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair, hearing the t arrive — "petit, petite"
- "vert, verte" — the t arrives again
- "blanc, blanche"
- the one that does not change — "noir, noire"
- with a noun behind it — "le vin blanc", "la maison blanche"
- the pair you have had since page one — "bon, bonne"

Before you move on

Is the feminine -e pronounced? (No.) Then what does it do? (It stops the consonant before it being final, so that consonant sounds.) Is the feminine easier to hear or to see? (To hear — the difference is a whole consonant.)

42.4 les bateaux — the plural that is not irregular

You were told that the u in au was once an l. That fact has been waiting two chapters to pay for itself.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Nouns ending in -eau and -eu take -x in the plural instead of -s, and nouns already ending in -s, -x or -z take nothing.

le bateau → les bateaux · le cheveu → les cheveux · le nez → les nez

The x is silent, exactly as the s is, so once again the article carries the whole plural.
Two of the three lines are the same story you already have. Cheval became chevaux because -als turned into -aus, and French wrote that -aus as -aux. That is the change that made au out of à + le — an l softening into a u somewhere around the twelfth century, right across the language.
So chevaux is not an irregular plural at all. It is a perfectly regular plural of a word whose l melted, and the strange-looking x is a spelling convention for a u-s that got there honestly.
The third line is simpler still: a word that already ends in s, x or z has nowhere to put another one, so it does not try. Le nez and les nez share the same three-letter noun.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair — “le bateau, les bateaux”

- "le cheveu, les cheveux"
- the invariable — "le nez, les nez"
- the l that melted — "cheval, chevaux" and "à le, au"
- with the indefinite — "des bateaux, des cheveux"

Before you move on

Which endings take -x? (-eau and -eu.) Which take nothing at all? (Words already ending in s, x or *z.) Why is chevaux not really irregular? (Its l melted into a *u, the same change that made au.)

42.5 pas de pain — where the partitive collapses

Say the four shapes of some: du, de la, de l', des. Now negate one of them and watch all four become the same word.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

After a negative, du, de la, de l' and des all become a bare de.

J'ai du pain. → Je n'ai pas de pain.

Il y a des cafés. → Il n'y a pas de cafés.

Je bois de l'eau. → Je ne bois pas d'eau.

Four shapes, one replacement, and it elides before a vowel like everything else.

The reason is in what the partitive was doing. Du pain means an amount of bread — the article was measuring. A negative says the amount is zero, and there is nothing left to measure, so the measuring article drops out and only the bare de remains.

This does not happen to le, la and les. Je n'aime pas le café keeps its article, because that sentence is about coffee in general rather than a quantity of it. So the collapse is a test: if the article was measuring an amount, it goes.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair — "J'ai du pain." / "Je n'ai pas de pain."
- "Il y a du lait." / "Il n'y a pas de lait."
- elided — "Je ne bois pas d'eau."
- the one that keeps its article — "Je n'aime pas le café."
- with the ne dropped, as speech does — "Y a pas de pain."
- where you are going, and what is not there — "Je vais au café, mais il n'y a pas de café."
- about to happen, and refused — "Je vais prendre du pain." / "Je ne vais pas prendre de pain."

Before you move on

What do du, de la, de l' and des become after a negative? (A bare de.) Why? (The article was measuring an amount, and the negative makes the amount zero.) Which articles do not collapse? (Le, la, les.)

42.6 Ce qu'on n'entend pas — the chapter, run cold

One rule about sound runs under this whole chapter. State it. Then name the two things that bring a silent consonant back.

Your turn: silent, and woken

Say these aloud:

- silent — "salut, deux, trois, nuit"
- woken by a vowel — "des amis", "quand est-ce que", "six ans", "dix ans", "neuf ans"
- the four that sound anyway — "avec, bonjour, neuf, il"
- the one t that refuses — "et un café"

Your turn: the distant band — everything, in the plural and the feminine

Every noun the book owns, made plural — and listen for how little changes.

Say these aloud:

- the table — "les cafés, les pains, les œufs"
- the household and the animals — "les frères, les sœurs, les enfants, les chiens, les chats, les amis"
- the body — "les mains, les têtes, les nez, les bouches" — and the one that goes its own way, "l'œil, les yeux"
- the colours, masculine then feminine — "vert, verte; blanc, blanche; noir, noire; bon, bonne"
- the ones that never change in the feminine — "rouge, bleu, jaune"
- the article doing all the work — "le café" against "les cafés"

Your turn: and none of it

Say these aloud:

- the four shapes, then their one negative — "du, de la, de l', des" → "pas de"
- "Il n'y a pas de pain. Il n'y a pas de lait. Il n'y a pas d'eau."
- as speech says it — "Y a pas de café."

Before you move on

Why is the plural -s silent? (Because every final consonant is.) Why is the feminine -e audible even though it is silent? (It stops the consonant before it being final.) Why is chevaux not irregular? (Its l became a u.) And what do all four partitives become after a negative? (A bare de.)

Chapter 43

Standing Alone

Modes: 🚗 voice (6) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can ask who and what, and use the pronouns that stand on their own instead of leaning on a verb.
>
> Every person and every thing the book owns is asked about and answered. One accident runs under three of the chapter's four pairs: a pronoun that lived unstressed in front of a verb wore down, and the one that stood alone kept its weight – which is why French has que and quoi, je and moi, tu and toi, and only one elle.

43.1 qui — "who," the word Latin barely changed

Five question words are yours — où, quand, comment, combien, pourquoi. Every one of them asks about a circumstance. None of them can ask about a person.

- Recall: two chapters back, the pronoun that was Latin for man — on

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

qui — who.

Qui est-ce ? — Who is it? · Qui est là ? — Who's there?

Latin quis, and almost nothing has happened to it. That is unusual:

most French words are half the length of their Latin parents — aqua to eau, calidus to chaud — and this one lost a single consonant in two thousand years.
The qu- is the same opening that starts quand, quel and combien's cousins, and English carries it in the borrowed words query, question and quest.
One thing to watch: qui never elides. Qui est stays two clean words where que would have become qu'.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- qui — one syllable, kee
- "Qui est-ce ?" and "Qui est là ?"
- ask, then answer with what you own — "Qui est-ce ? — C'est ma mère."
- "Qui est ici ? — Voici mon ami."
- asked about several people, with the plural you cannot hear — "Qui sont les amis ?"
- the six question words together — "qui, où, quand, comment, combien, pourquoi"

Before you move on

What Latin word is qui? (Quis, one letter shorter.) Does it elide before a vowel? (No — qui est, two clean words.) Ask who somebody is and answer with your mother.

43.2 que — "what," and the word that always elides

You have said que twice already without meeting it: inside est-ce que and inside parce que. Say both.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

que — what.

Qu'est-ce que c'est ? — What is it?

qui and que are Latin quis and quid — the who and the what of one pronoun, kept as a pair. French has both halves where English rebuilt its own from a different root.
Unlike qui, que always elides before a vowel, and that is why the commonest question in French looks so alarming on the page.
Qu'est-ce que c'est is four ordinary words: que + est-ce + que + c'est — "what is it that this is." Said aloud it is three syllables, kess-kuh-SAY, and it is the first thing a learner should be able to say without thinking.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the big one, slowly, then fast — "Qu'est-ce que c'est ?" → kess-kuh-SAY
- the four pieces — que, est-ce, que, c'est
- ask and answer — "Qu'est-ce que c'est ? — C'est du pain."
- the pair — "Qui est-ce ?" against "Qu'est-ce que c'est ?"
- ask about an action — "Qu'est-ce que tu finis ?" and the plural that grows a syllable, "Qu'est-ce que vous finissez ?"

Before you move on

Which of the pair elides? (Que.) What four words are inside qu'est-ce que c'est? (Que, est-ce, que, c'est.) Which asks about a person and which about a thing?

43.3 quoi — "what," standing on its own two feet

Say que. Now try to say it alone, as a one-word question. It cannot be done — the word is too light to stand up.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quoi — what, when it has to carry weight.

Quoi ? — What? · De quoi ? — Of what? · À quoi ? — To what?

que and quoi are the same Latin quid, twice. One of them spent centuries unstressed in front of a verb and wore down to a single silent-e syllable; the other spent those centuries alone or after a preposition, where it had to be heard, and kept its weight.
So the split is not a rule somebody invented. It is one word that lived two different lives in two different positions.
The practical test is short: que leans on something and quoi does not. After a preposition — de, à — only quoi will do.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- alone — "Quoi ?"
- after a preposition — "De quoi ?", "À quoi ?"
- the pair — "Qu'est-ce que c'est ?" against "C'est quoi ?"
- all three pronouns — "qui, que, quoi"

Before you move on

Which of the two can stand alone? (Quoi.) Which one follows a preposition? (Quoi.) What single Latin word are both? (Quid — worn two ways by two positions.) Say all three pronouns.

43.4 moi et toi — the pronouns that can stand alone

Je and tu cannot stand alone either — they must lean on a verb. You have seen that happen to que in the last lesson, and the same accident produced the same result here.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

moi — me. · toi — you, informally.

Moi ? — Me? · Et toi ? — And you? · C'est moi. — It's me.

You have said et toi ? and et vous ? for a long time as a fixed piece of conversation. This is the word inside it.
je and moi are one Latin pronoun, tu and toi are another, and each split for the reason que and quoi split: the form that lived unstressed in front of a verb wore down, and the form that stood alone or after a preposition kept its weight. Three pairs, one accident.
The polite twin of toi is vous, which does both jobs and does not split — et vous ? is the same word as the vous in vous parlez.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- alone — "Moi ?" "Toi ?"
- the phrase you already had — "Ça va bien, et toi ?"
- politely — "Et vous ?"
- "C'est moi." "C'est toi."
- the three pairs the same accident made — "je/moi, tu/toi, que/quoi"
- in the order a sentence holds to, doer first — "Moi, je parle français."

Before you move on

Which form of je stands alone? (Moi.) And of tu? (Toi.) Which earlier pair split the same way? (Que and quoi.) What is the polite word that does not split? (Vous.)

43.5 lui et elle — the third pair, and the one that did not split

Je became moi, tu became toi. Predict what il becomes, then predict what elle becomes.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lui — him, standing alone. · elle — her, and also she.

C'est lui. — It's him. · C'est elle. — It's her.

Only half the prediction comes true. il does split, into lui — and elle does not split at all. The same four letters do both jobs: elle parle and c'est elle.
Nothing decided that except which syllables happened to carry stress in Latin. Latin illī gave lui, ille gave il, and illa gave one elle that was heavy enough already. The masculine split and the feminine did not, and the language has lived with the asymmetry ever since.
That same ille family is where le, la and les came from, so the article and the pronoun in front of you are cousins several times over.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "C'est lui." "C'est elle."
- the four that stand alone — "moi, toi, lui, elle"
- the feminine doing both jobs — "elle parle" and "c'est elle"
- ask and answer — "Qui est-ce ? — C'est lui."
- the cousins — "il, elle, le, la", all from one Latin family
- offer a choice between them — "C'est lui ou c'est elle ?"
- the plural that takes an x — "les cheveux de lui", and "les bateaux"

Before you move on

What does il become when it stands alone? (Lui.) And elle? (Elle — it does not change.) Which Latin family gave il, elle, le and la? (Ille, illa, illi — one family.) Say the four standing pronouns.

43.6 Qui est-ce ? — the chapter, run cold

One accident made three of this chapter's pairs. Name the accident, then name the three pairs.

Your turn: asking about people and things

Every person and every thing the book owns, asked about and answered.

Say these aloud:

- about people — "Qui est-ce ? — C'est ma mère. C'est mon père. C'est mon frère. C'est ma sœur."
- "Qui est-ce ? — C'est mon ami. C'est l'enfant."
- about things — "Qu'est-ce que c'est ? — C'est du pain. C'est du café. C'est du fromage."
- the short spoken version — "C'est quoi ?"
- the three ways to ask, all still yours — voice, est-ce que, inversion

Your turn: the distant band — standing alone

The leaning pronouns and the standing ones, side by side.

Say these aloud:

- leaning — "je suis, tu es, il est, nous sommes, vous êtes, ils sont"
- standing — "moi, toi, lui, elle"
- the pairs — "je/moi, tu/toi, il/lui" — and the one that did not split, "elle"
- the same accident on a question word — "que/quoi"
- the phrase you have had all along — "Ça va bien, et toi ?" and politely, "Et vous ?"
- the pronoun that took over from nous — "On y va."
- contrasted — "Moi, oui, mais toi, non."

Before you move on

Which question pronoun never elides? (Qui.) Which one always does? (Que.) Which one stands alone and follows a preposition? (Quoi.) And which of the four standing pronouns is the same word as its leaning twin? (Elle.)

Chapter 44

How Much, and What to Call People

Modes: voice (6) Hands-free start: all 6 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a lot, a little, very and enough, and address somebody the way French expects.
>
> Combien ? has had no possible answer since it was taught, and now it has four. The chapter also finishes the bare-de rule: a quantity word is already measuring, so the measuring article drops – which is the same reason the partitive collapses after a negative, one chapter earlier.

44.1 beaucoup — "a beautiful blow"

You can say some four ways and none one way. You have no way at all to say a lot.

- Recall: two chapters back, the four partitives collapsing after a negative — pas de

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

beaucoup — a lot, much, many.

beaucoup de café — a lot of coffee. · beaucoup d'amis — a lot of friends.

Note what follows it: a bare de, exactly as after a negative. Any word of quantity in French takes de and never du or des, for the same reason — the quantity word is already doing the measuring, so the measuring article drops out.

beaucoup is beau + coup, "a beautiful blow." Coup is Latin colaphus, a punch on the ear, and English borrowed it far more politely as coup d'état and a coup. A word from a fistfight became the ordinary French for a lot — the promotion any word earns by carrying emphasis often enough.
The p is silent, as final consonants are: boh-KOO.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- beaucoup — boh-KOO, the p silent
- "beaucoup de café", "beaucoup de pain", "beaucoup d'amis"
- the three shapes of the same de — "du café", "pas de café", "beaucoup de café"
- the two words inside it — beau and coup
- asked and explained — "Qu'est-ce que c'est ? — Beaucoup de café, parce que j'ai beaucoup d'amis."

Before you move on

What follows beaucoup? (A bare *de — never du or des.) Why? (The quantity word is already measuring, so the article drops.) What two words are inside it? (Beau and coup — a beautiful blow.)

44.2 un peu — the other end of the scale

Beaucoup de café. Say it, and say what has to follow any word of quantity.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

un peu — a little.

un peu de café — a little coffee. · un peu d'eau — a little water.

The same bare de follows it, because the same reasoning applies: the quantity is already stated.
peu is Latin paucus, "few," and English has it twice — in paucity, borrowed from the Latin directly, and buried in poor, which came through French from pauper. So the everyday French word for a little and the English word for scarcity are one Latin adjective that travelled by two roads.
un peu is also the standard modest answer to a question about what you can do:

Vous parlez français ? — Un peu.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the pair, both ends of the scale — "beaucoup de café", "un peu de café"
- "un peu de pain", "un peu d'eau"
- the modest answer — "Vous parlez français ? — Un peu."
- asked short — "C'est quoi ? — Un peu de pain."

Before you move on

What follows un peu? (A bare *de, as after beaucoup.) What Latin word is peu? (Paucus, "few" — English paucity.) Answer vous parlez français ? modestly.

44.3 très — "very," and the line it crosses

Beaucoup and un peu measure a thing and both take de. This one measures a quality, and it takes nothing at all.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

très — very, in front of an adjective or an adverb.

très bien — very well. · très bon — very good.

No de, ever. That is the whole difference: beaucoup and un peu stand in front of a noun and need the bare de; très stands in front of an adjective and needs nothing.
très is Latin trans, "across, beyond" — the trans of transport and translate. To say a thing is très bon is to say it has gone across a line into another category, which is what every intensifier in every language is trying to do.
The s is silent and comes back as a z before a vowel: très intéressant is tray-zan-tay-ress-AHN.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- "très bien", "très bon"
- the feminine — "très bonne"
- the contrast — "beaucoup de café" against "très bon"
- the liaison — "très intéressant"
- the answer everybody gives — "Ça va ? — Très bien, merci."
- as a command — "Parle très bien !" and "Écoute !"
- standing alone — "Moi, très bien. Et toi ?"
- the weather, measured — "Il fait très chaud." "Il pleut", and le temps, which is both the time and the weather
- the colours, measured — "très vert", "très jaune", and the German cousin gelb that jaune is not

Before you move on

What does très stand in front of? (An adjective or an adverb — never a noun.) Does it take de? (No.) What Latin word is it? (Trans, "across".)

44.4 assez — "enough," and "rather"

Three quantity words are yours. Two take de and one does not. Say which is which before you read on.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

assez — enough; and also rather, fairly.

assez de café — enough coffee. · assez bon — rather good.

It does both jobs, and which one it is doing depends on what follows it: before a noun it takes de and means enough; before an adjective it takes nothing and means rather.
So assez behaves like beaucoup in one position and like très in the other, which makes it the word that ties the chapter together.
assez is Latin ad satis, "to enough." That satis is the root inside English satisfy, saturate and satiate — so to be satisfied is literally to have been given enough.
The z is silent, like every final consonant, and unlike très it does not usually come back before a vowel.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- with a noun — "assez de café", "assez de pain"
- with an adjective — "assez bon", "assez bien"
- all four, in order of size — "un peu, assez, beaucoup" and, for a quality, "très"
- the Latin inside it — ad satis, and English satisfy

- about to happen — “Je vais prendre assez de pain.”
- about him — “Lui ? Assez bien.”

Before you move on

When does assez take de? (Before a noun, where it means enough.) And when does it take nothing? (Before an adjective, where it means rather.) What Latin phrase is it? (Ad satis — “to enough”.) Which English words share that root?

44.5 Monsieur, Madame — “my lord” and “my lady”

You have said bonjour since page one and vous since the second chapter. A bare bonjour to a stranger in France is slightly abrupt, and the word that fixes it is one you have never met.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

Monsieur — sir. · Madame — madam. · Mademoiselle — miss.

Bonjour, Monsieur. · Bonjour, Madame.

Two possessives fused into titles. Monsieur is mon sieur, “my lord,” and Madame is ma dame, “my lady” — the same dame inside English dame and damsel, and the sieur is a worn-down seigneur, from Latin senior, “the elder.”
The spelling records a word the mouth stopped saying centuries ago. Monsieur is pronounced muh-SYUH: the n has gone nasal-free, the s is silent, and the ending is the eu vowel. Nothing about the sound follows from the letters, which is why it is worth learning as a noise first and a spelling second.
Where English attaches a surname — good morning, Mr Dubois — French attaches the bare title far more often. Bonjour, Madame to a shopkeeper is ordinary and expected; the surname is not.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the noise, not the spelling — "Monsieur", muh-SYUH
- the greeting, completed — "Bonjour, Monsieur." "Bonjour, Madame."
- at night — "Bonsoir, Madame."
- thanking and leaving — "Merci, Monsieur." "Au revoir, Madame."
- introducing — "Voici Madame Dubois."
- the two possessives inside them — mon sieur, ma dame
- closing a conversation — "Je finis, Monsieur." and "Nous finissons, Madame."
- the courtesy words, each with a title — "S'il vous plaît, Monsieur." "Je suis désolé, Madame." "Oui, Monsieur."
- admitting it politely — "Je ne comprends pas, Monsieur." and the stem it borrows from prendre

Before you move on

What two words are inside Monsieur? (Mon and sieur — "my lord".) And inside Madame? (Ma and dame.) How is Monsieur said? (Muh-SYUH — the s silent.) Greet a shopkeeper properly.

44.6 Combien ? — the chapter, run cold

Four measures. Three take a bare de in at least one position and one never does. Sort them, then say the one rule that decides it.

Your turn: the answers combien was waiting for Combien ? has had no answer since it was taught. Now it has four. Say these aloud:

- the whole table, measured — "beaucoup de café, un peu de lait, assez de pain, pas de vin"
- "beaucoup de fromage, un peu de sucre, assez de sel, pas de beurre"
- with the plural — "beaucoup d'œufs", "pas d'œufs"
- the four shapes of de in one breath — "du café, pas de café, beaucoup de café, un peu de café"

Your turn: the distant band — qualities, measured

Every adjective the book owns, intensified — and no de anywhere.
Say these aloud:

- "très bon, très bien, assez bon"
- the feminine — "très bonne", and the consonant it wakes
- the colours — "très rouge, très blanc, assez noir, très vert"
- with the noun behind — "un vin très rouge", "un pain très blanc"
- the everyday exchange — "Ça va ? — Très bien, merci."

Your turn: and the person you are talking to

Say these aloud:

- the greeting completed — "Bonjour, Monsieur." "Bonsoir, Madame."
- "Merci, Madame." "Au revoir, Monsieur."
- "Qui est-ce ? — C'est Madame Dubois." then "Voici Madame Dubois."
- written, then as speech says it — "Je ne sais pas, Monsieur." / "Je sais pas."

Before you move on

Which of the four measures refuses de? (Très.) Which one takes it before a noun and not before an adjective? (Assez.) Why do quantity words take a bare de at all? (They are already measuring, so the measuring article drops.) And what two words are inside Monsieur?

Chapter 45

Reading — Instructions, a Form, and a First Paragraph

Modes: eyes (3) Hands-free start: none of the 3 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can read a French instruction, a line off a form, and a whole paragraph, without translating word by word.

Sixty-three words of French in a row with no new word in them, including the sentence that admits it did not follow everything and carries on anyway.

45.1 (reading) — six things you would be told

Every line below you have heard and said. Not one is new.

What is new is that nobody says them first.

Read this

Parle ! Écoute ! On y va ! Un peu Beaucoup Merci

Read it: down the list once, without stopping
Read it: the list again, and notice that three of them end in an exclamation mark and three do not French puts a space before it, which English does not.

Why it's said this way

Parle ! and Écoute ! are the same verbs you conjugate, with the ending taken off and nothing put in its place. That is the whole imperative.
An instruction you can only recognise by ear is one somebody has to say to you. On a page it waits, which is why a classroom is the first place a beginner reads rather than listens.
Six lines, and half of them are one word.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many of the six were new? (None.)
What does French put before an exclamation mark? (A space.)

45.2 (reading) — six lines off a form

The last lesson gave you things somebody says. These are things somebody writes down.

Nothing here is new.

Read this

Nom : Marie Âge : vingt ans Lundi : le travail Mardi : un livre Une heure Dix minutes

Read it: the six lines down once, without stopping
Read it: the six lines again, and notice the colon
French puts a space before that too, and the space is the clearest signal on the page that a label has ended.

Why it's said this way

A form is the first thing a beginner can read end to end. It puts the label before the value every time, and it never asks for a verb.

That is why the last two lines are the hardest, not the first four. Une heure and Dix minutes have no label in front of them, so nothing tells you what they are for until you have read them.
Six lines, and four of them do half your work.

Your turn

- Say it: the six lines, once, in order, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

Which two lines have no label? (Une heure and Dix minutes.)
What does French put before a colon? (A space.)

45.3 (reading) — the first paragraph

Six instructions, then six lines off a form. Now a whole paragraph.

Sixty-three words, and not one of them is new.

Read this

Bonjour ! Je m'appelle Marie. J'habite à Paris. J'ai un frère et une sœur. Je bois du café et je mange du pain. Le jour, je vais au travail. Je travaille beaucoup, mais j'aime ça. Le soir, je lis un livre. Le livre est très bon. Je ne comprends pas tout, mais ça va. Demain, je vais parler français. Merci et au revoir.

Read it: the passage once without stopping; do not translate as you go — let the sentences arrive
Read it: the passage again, and notice how little work it took

Why it's said this way

Look at what is holding it together, because it is not vocabulary. Et adds. Mais holds two true things apart, and it does it twice here — once about work and once about understanding. Each of those was a chapter, and none of them is longer than four letters.

Notice the tenth line especially. Je ne comprends pas tout, mais ça va. Somebody has admitted they did not follow everything, and the paragraph carries on. That is the most useful sentence on this page. This is the first whole paragraph the book has asked you to hold at once, and it works because everything in it was paid for.

Your turn

- Say it: the paragraph aloud, once, without stopping

Twice through:

Before you move on

How many words in that paragraph were new? (None.)
Which word appears twice and turns the sentence both times? (Mais.)

Chapter 46

Writing — My Own Line

Modes: ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write one line about myself from a closed supply of known words, with nothing to copy, and put every accent on.
>
> Complete FR-W02-ma-propre-ligne: subject, verb and the rest, chosen rather than copied, with the accents checked before anything else.

46.1 Your own line — the first writing with no model

> Everything you have written so far had something to reach for — a shape, a word, a sound.
>
> This does not. You choose the words, from a supply that is closed: only what this book has taught you.

Writing — controlled composition

Write one line about yourself. Subject, verb, then the rest — the order you already know.

One thing to decide deliberately rather than by accident before you start: the accents are letters, not decoration.

An acute on an e is not a flourish on the same letter; it makes a different sound and, often enough, a different word. A hand that writes French without accents has not written French untidily — it has written something else and hoped the reader would guess.

Write the line. Then read it back and check the accents before you check anything else.

Before you move on

Are French accents decoration? (No — they are part of the letter.) And what did you choose here that the earlier lessons chose for you? (The words.)

Chapter 47

Writing — With A Clock

Modes: ✓ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can complete the DELF A1 writing paper's two parts inside its published thirty minutes, and write past the forty-word floor rather than up to it.
>
> Complete FR-W03-avec-la-montre: ten minutes for the form and twenty for the message, then count the words against a floor that has no ceiling.

47.1 The same writing, with a clock

You wrote your own line with as long as you liked.

A task you can only do untimed is not yet a task you can do.

Writing — timed production

What France Éducation international publishes. The DELF A1 writing paper runs 30 minutes and holds two parts: a form to complete, and a personal message of at least forty words.

Those numbers are read out of `task-shapes/a1.json`, which transcribes the published materials. Note what is not there: the paper publishes a minimum for the message and no maximum. Forty is a floor, not a target.

Ten minutes for the form, starting now. Fill every field.

Now twenty minutes for the message. Forty words is the floor; write past it rather than up to it.

Stop when the time is up, even mid-word.

Before you move on

Count your words. Under forty and the task has not been done — this is the one number on the paper that is a hard floor rather than guidance.

Now the rule worth carrying out of this lesson, because it changes how you should study rather than how you should write today. DELF A1 passes on 50 out of 100 overall — and any single skill below 5 out of 25 is eliminatory. A candidate with 45 across three papers and 4 in the fourth does not pass, whatever the total says.

So the paper that decides your result is the one you are worst at, not the average of four. If that is writing, no amount of reading practice repairs it.

Chapter 48

Writing — Four Lines, And The Joiner That Moves Nothing

Modes: ↙ pen (1) 🚗 Hands-free start: none (1 lesson).

> By the end of this chapter: I can write four connected lines to a named reader, joining with et and mais and giving a reason with parce que, keeping ordinary word order after it.
>
> Complete FR-W04-quatre-lignes: four lines to one reader, at least one joined with et or mais and one with parce que, then check the words after parce que are in ordinary order.

48.1 Four lines, and the joiner that moves nothing

> The last lesson asked for writing finished on time. This one asks for writing that holds together.
>
> Pick one person who will read it.

What to know first

Connected writing is not longer writing. Four short lines can be connected; one long line can fail to be. What makes it connected is that a sentence stops standing on its own.

You hold three joiners. et adds. mais sets against. parce que gives the reason.

And here is the thing to notice, which is easiest to see by contrast. In German, the word for because drags the verb to the end of its clause: the join is visible in the word order. French does nothing of the kind.

After parce que, the words stand in exactly the order they would have stood in on their own — subject, verb, the rest. Nothing moves.

That makes French easier to write and harder to hear. Nothing in the shape of the second clause tells you a reason has started; only the two little words do. Which is why parce que has to be written in full, and why it is two words rather than one.

Writing — connected composition

Write four lines to the person you picked.

At least one must use et or mais. At least one must use parce que — both words, spelled out.

Use only words you already write. This lesson adds no vocabulary; the whole exercise is the joining.

Before you move on

Cover your first line and read the second alone. Does it still make sense without the first? If it does, you wrote a list — which is where you were one lesson ago.
Then find your parce que line and read the words after it. They should be in ordinary order. If you moved something, you were remembering a different language's rule.

Chapter 49

Arm, Leg, Foot, Finger, Tooth

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name an arm, a leg, a foot, a finger, a tooth.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 49: I can name an arm, a leg, a foot, a finger, a tooth.

49.1 le bras — an arm

Before the new one: say the French for enough, then the French for sir.

You'll want to know: le bras

le bras — "an arm".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bras ← Old French bras ← Latin bracchium, "arm" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le bras
- Say it: le bras, once more
- Say it: say le bras
- Recall: say the French for enough, then the French for sir, then say le bras again

Before you move on

What does le bras mean? (“An arm”.) Say it once more.

49.2 la jambe — a leg

Before the new one: say the French for sir, then the French for an arm.

You’ll want to know: la jambe

la jambe — “a leg”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jambe ← Late Latin gamba, “a hoof, a leg” (Lewis & Short) — inherited: Latin g before a softened to the French j. EtymDB 2.1 traces Italian gamba to the same Late Latin word.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la jambe
- Say it: la jambe, once more
- Say it: say la jambe
- Recall: say the French for sir, then the French for an arm, then say la jambe again

Before you move on

What does la jambe mean? (“A leg”.) Say it once more.

49.3 le pied — a foot

Before the new one: say the French for an arm, then the French for a leg.

You’ll want to know: le pied

le pied — “a foot”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pied ← Old French pié ← Latin pes, pedis, “foot” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pied
- Say it: le pied, once more
- Say it: say le pied
- Recall: say the French for an arm, then the French for a leg, then say le pied again

Before you move on

What does le pied mean? (“A foot”.) Say it once more.

49.4 le doigt — a finger

Before the new one: say the French for a leg, then the French for a foot.

You'll want to know: le doigt

le doigt — "a finger".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

doigt ← Old French doit ← Latin digitus, "finger" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The silent g was put back into the spelling later, to recall the Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le doigt
- Say it: le doigt, once more
- Say it: say le doigt
- Recall: say the French for a leg, then the French for a foot, then say le doigt again

Before you move on

What does le doigt mean? ("A finger".) Say it once more.

49.5 la dent — a tooth

Before the new one: say the French for a foot, then the French for a finger.

You'll want to know: la dent

la dent — "a tooth". English dentist shares the root.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dent ← Latin dens, dentis, "tooth" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la dent
- Say it: la dent, once more
- Say it: say la dent
- Recall: say the French for a foot, then the French for a finger, then say la dent again

Before you move on

What does la dent mean? ("A tooth".) Say it once more.

Chapter 50

Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Face, Blood

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the neck, a shoulder, a knee, the face, blood.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 50: I can name the neck, a shoulder, a knee, the face, blood.

50.1 le cou — the neck

Before the new one: say the French for a finger, then the French for a tooth.

You'll want to know: le cou

le cou — "the neck".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cou ← Latin collum, "neck" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) Old French said col; the l later melted into a vowel.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cou
- Say it: le cou, once more
- Say it: say le cou
- Recall: say the French for a finger, then the French for a tooth, then say le cou again

Before you move on

What does le cou mean? ("The neck".) Say it once more.

50.2 l'épaule — a shoulder

Before the new one: say the French for a tooth, then the French for the neck.

You'll want to know: l'épaule

l'épaule — "a shoulder".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

épaule ← Old French espalle ← Late Latin spatula, "a flat piece, a shoulder blade" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The é- stands where an s once was: espaule, then épaule.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'épaule
- Say it: l'épaule, once more
- Say it: say l'épaule
- Recall: say the French for a tooth, then the French for the neck, then say l'épaule again

Before you move on

What does l'épaule mean? ("A shoulder".) Say it once more.

50.3 le genou — a knee

Before the new one: say the French for the neck, then the French for a shoulder.

You'll want to know: le genou

le genou — "a knee".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

genou ← Vulgar Latin genuculum*, "a little knee", from Latin genu, "knee" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1 records both Latin words.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le genou
- Say it: le genou, once more
- Say it: say le genou
- Recall: say the French for the neck, then the French for a shoulder, then say le genou again

Before you move on

What does le genou mean? ("A knee".) Say it once more.

50.4 le visage — the face

Before the new one: say the French for a shoulder, then the French for a knee.

You'll want to know: le visage

le visage — "the face".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

visage — built in Old French from vis, "face", with the ending -age. vis ← Latin visus, "a look, an appearance", from videre, "to see". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le visage
- Say it: le visage, once more
- Say it: say le visage
- Recall: say the French for a shoulder, then the French for a knee, then say le visage again

Before you move on

What does le visage mean? ("The face".) Say it once more.

50.5 le sang — blood

Before the new one: say the French for a knee, then the French for the face.

You'll want to know: le sang

le sang — "blood".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sang ← Old French sanc ← Latin sanguis, "blood", through a Vulgar Latin form sanguem* — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sang
- Say it: le sang, once more
- Say it: say le sang
- Recall: say the French for a knee, then the French for the face, then say le sang again

Before you move on

What does le sang mean? ("Blood".) Say it once more.

Chapter 51

Skin, Nail, Chin, Throat, Cheek

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name skin, a nail (finger or toe), the chin, the throat, a cheek.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 51: I can name skin, a nail (finger or toe), the chin, the throat, a cheek.

51.1 la peau — skin

Before the new one: say the French for the face, then the French for blood.

You'll want to know: la peau

la peau — "skin".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

peau ← Old French pel ← Latin pellis, "skin, hide" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la peau
- Say it: la peau, once more
- Say it: say la peau
- Recall: say the French for the face, then the French for blood, then say la peau again

Before you move on

What does la peau mean? ("Skin".) Say it once more.

51.2 l'ongle — a nail (finger or toe)

Before the new one: say the French for blood, then the French for skin.

You'll want to know: l'ongle

l'ongle — "a nail (finger or toe)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ongle ← Latin ungula, "a claw, a hoof", from unguis, "nail" (Lewis & Short) — inherited. EtymDB 2.1 traces Italian unghia to the same ungula.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ongle
- Say it: l'ongle, once more
- Say it: say l'ongle
- Recall: say the French for blood, then the French for skin, then say l'ongle again

Before you move on

What does l'ongle mean? ("A nail (finger or toe)".) Say it once more.

51.3 le menton — the chin

Before the new one: say the French for skin, then the French for a nail.

You'll want to know: le menton

le menton — "the chin".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

menton ← Vulgar Latin mento*, from Latin mentum, "chin" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le menton
- Say it: le menton, once more
- Say it: say le menton
- Recall: say the French for skin, then the French for a nail, then say le menton again

Before you move on

What does le menton mean? ("The chin".) Say it once more.

51.4 la gorge — the throat

Before the new one: say the French for a nail, then the French for the chin.

You'll want to know: la gorge

la gorge — "the throat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gorge ← Late Latin gurga*, from Latin gurges, "a whirlpool, an abyss" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la gorge
- Say it: la gorge, once more
- Say it: say la gorge
- Recall: say the French for a nail, then the French for the chin, then say la gorge again

Before you move on

What does la gorge mean? ("The throat".) Say it once more.

51.5 la joue — a cheek

Before the new one: say the French for the chin, then the French for the throat.

You'll want to know: la joue

la joue — "a cheek".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

joue ← Old French jode ← Vulgar Latin gauta*, "cheek" — inherited (EtymDB 2.1). Where gauta* came from is uncertain; Gaulish is the usual guess.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la joue
- Say it: la joue, once more
- Say it: say la joue
- Recall: say the French for the chin, then the French for the throat, then say la joue again

Before you move on

What does la joue mean? ("A cheek".) Say it once more.

Chapter 52

Chest, Stomach, Ankle, Elbow, Wrist

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the chest, the stomach, an ankle, an elbow, a wrist.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 52: I can name the chest, the stomach, an ankle, an elbow, a wrist.

52.1 la poitrine — the chest

Before the new one: say the French for the throat, then the French for a cheek.

You'll want to know: la poitrine

la poitrine — "the chest".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poitrine ← Old French peitrine ← Late Latin pectorina*, from Latin pectus, pectoris, "chest" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poitrine
- Say it: la poitrine, once more
- Say it: say la poitrine
- Recall: say the French for the throat, then the French for a cheek, then say la poitrine again

Before you move on

What does la poitrine mean? (“The chest”.) Say it once more.

52.2 l’estomac — the stomach

Before the new one: say the French for a cheek, then the French for the chest.

You’ll want to know: l’estomac

l’estomac — “the stomach”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

estomac ← Old French estomac ← Latin stomachus, from Greek stomachos, built on stoma, “mouth” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’estomac
- Say it: l’estomac, once more
- Say it: say l’estomac
- Recall: say the French for a cheek, then the French for the chest, then say l’estomac again

Before you move on

What does l'estomac mean? ("The stomach".) Say it once more.

52.3 la cheville — an ankle

Before the new one: say the French for the chest, then the French for the stomach.

You'll want to know: la cheville

la cheville — "an ankle".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cheville ← Vulgar Latin cavicula*, from Latin clavicula, "a little key, a peg" — inherited (EtymDB 2.1): the ankle bone was seen as the peg of the leg.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cheville
- Say it: la cheville, once more
- Say it: say la cheville
- Recall: say the French for the chest, then the French for the stomach, then say la cheville again

Before you move on

What does la cheville mean? ("An ankle".) Say it once more.

52.4 le coude — an elbow

Before the new one: say the French for the stomach, then the French for an ankle.

You'll want to know: le coude

le coude — "an elbow".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

coude ← Latin cubitus, "elbow" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word) — inherited: once the i dropped out, cubitu became cobdo*, the b was lost, and Old French had code.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le coude
- Say it: le coude, once more
- Say it: say le coude
- Recall: say the French for the stomach, then the French for an ankle, then say le coude again

Before you move on

What does le coude mean? ("An elbow".) Say it once more.

52.5 le poignet — a wrist

Before the new one: say the French for an ankle, then the French for an elbow.

You'll want to know: le poignet

le poignet — "a wrist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poignet — built from the French word for "fist", which goes back to Latin pugnus, with the small-thing ending -et. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le poignet
- Say it: le poignet, once more
- Say it: say le poignet
- Recall: say the French for an ankle, then the French for an elbow, then say le poignet again

Before you move on

What does le poignet mean? ("A wrist".) Say it once more.

Chapter 53

Pain, Fever, Cough, Medicine, Doctor

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name pain, a fever, a cough, a medicine, a doctor.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 53: I can name pain, a fever, a cough, a medicine, a doctor.

53.1 la douleur — pain

Before the new one: say the French for an elbow, then the French for a wrist.

You'll want to know: la douleur

la douleur — "pain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

douleur ← Old French dolor ← Latin dolor, "pain, grief" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la douleur
- Say it: la douleur, once more
- Say it: say la douleur
- Recall: say the French for an elbow, then the French for a wrist, then say la douleur again

Before you move on

What does la douleur mean? (“Pain”.) Say it once more.

53.2 la fièvre — a fever

Before the new one: say the French for a wrist, then the French for pain.

You’ll want to know: la fièvre

la fièvre — “a fever”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fièvre ← Latin febris, “fever” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the stressed e broke into ie, and b became v.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fièvre
- Say it: la fièvre, once more
- Say it: say la fièvre
- Recall: say the French for a wrist, then the French for pain, then say la fièvre again

Before you move on

What does la fièvre mean? ("A fever".) Say it once more.

53.3 la toux — a cough

Before the new one: say the French for pain, then the French for a fever.

You'll want to know: la toux

la toux — "a cough".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

toux ← Old French tous (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin tussis, "a cough" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la toux
- Say it: la toux, once more
- Say it: say la toux
- Recall: say the French for pain, then the French for a fever, then say la toux again

Before you move on

What does la toux mean? ("A cough".) Say it once more.

53.4 le médicament — a medicine

Before the new one: say the French for a fever, then the French for a cough.

You'll want to know: le médicament

le médicament — "a medicine".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

médicament ← Latin medicamentum, "a remedy", from medicari, "to heal" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le médicament
- Say it: le médicament, once more
- Say it: say le médicament
- Recall: say the French for a fever, then the French for a cough, then say le médicament again

Before you move on

What does le médicament mean? ("A medicine".) Say it once more.

53.5 le médecin — a doctor

Before the new one: say the French for a cough, then the French for a medicine.

You'll want to know: le médecin

le médecin — "a doctor".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

médecin — formed in French from the word for "medicine", which ← Latin medicina, "the art of healing", from medicus, "doctor" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le médecin
- Say it: le médecin, once more
- Say it: say le médecin
- Recall: say the French for a cough, then the French for a medicine, then say le médecin again

Before you move on

What does le médecin mean? ("A doctor".) Say it once more.

Chapter 54

Hospital, Illness, Thirst, Tiredness, Ill

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a hospital, an illness, thirst, tiredness, ill.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 54: I can name a hospital, an illness, thirst, tiredness, ill.

54.1 l'hôpital — a hospital

Before the new one: say the French for a medicine, then the French for a doctor.

You'll want to know: l'hôpital

l'hôpital — "a hospital".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hôpital ← Old French hospital ← Medieval Latin hospitale, "a guest house", from Latin hospes, "guest" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1) The circumflex marks the s that French later stopped writing. The same Latin word, worn down in everyday speech, also gave French its word for "hotel".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'hôpital
- Say it: l'hôpital, once more
- Say it: say l'hôpital
- Recall: say the French for a medicine, then the French for a doctor, then say l'hôpital again

Before you move on

What does l'hôpital mean? ("A hospital".) Say it once more.

54.2 la maladie — an illness

Before the new one: say the French for a doctor, then the French for a hospital.

You'll want to know: la maladie

la maladie — "an illness".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

maladie — built in Old French from the adjective for "sick", with the ending -ie. That adjective goes back to Latin male habitus, "in poor condition". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la maladie
- Say it: la maladie, once more

- Say it: say la maladie
- Recall: say the French for a doctor, then the French for a hospital, then say la maladie again

Before you move on

What does la maladie mean? ("An illness".) Say it once more.

54.3 la soif — thirst

Before the new one: say the French for a hospital, then the French for an illness.

You'll want to know: la soif

la soif — "thirst". j'ai soif: I am thirsty, with avoir.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soif ← Old French soif ← Latin sitis, "thirst" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la soif
- Say it: la soif, once more
- Say it: say la soif
- Recall: say the French for a hospital, then the French for an illness, then say la soif again

Before you move on

What does la soif mean? ("Thirst".) Say it once more.

54.4 la fatigue — tiredness

Before the new one: say the French for an illness, then the French for thirst.

You'll want to know: la fatigue

la fatigue — "tiredness".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fatigue — formed from the verb for "to tire", a learned borrowing of Latin fatigare, "to weary". (EtymDB 2.1) The kept g shows the book word: in everyday speech it would have dropped out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fatigue
- Say it: la fatigue, once more
- Say it: say la fatigue
- Recall: say the French for an illness, then the French for thirst, then say la fatigue again

Before you move on

What does la fatigue mean? ("Tiredness".) Say it once more.

54.5 malade — ill, sick

Before the new one: say the French for thirst, then the French for tiredness.

You'll want to know: malade

malade — "ill, sick".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

malade ← Old French malade ← Latin male habitus, "in poor condition" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: malade
- Say it: malade, once more
- Say it: say malade
- Recall: say the French for thirst, then the French for tiredness, then say malade again

Before you move on

What does malade mean? ("Ill, sick".) Say it once more.

Chapter 55

Joy, Fear, Anger, Sadness, Happy

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name joy, fear, anger, sadness, happy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 55: I can name joy, fear, anger, sadness, happy.

55.1 la joie — joy

Before the new one: say the French for tiredness, then the French for ill.

You'll want to know: la joie

la joie — "joy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

joie ← Latin gaudia, "joys", the plural of gaudium (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the g became j, as in jambe.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la joie
- Say it: la joie, once more
- Say it: say la joie
- Recall: say the French for tiredness, then the French for ill, then say la joie again

Before you move on

What does la joie mean? ("Joy".) Say it once more.

55.2 la peur — fear

Before the new one: say the French for ill, then the French for joy.

You'll want to know: la peur

la peur — "fear". j'ai peur: I am afraid.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

peur ← Old French peor ← Latin pavor, "fear, fright" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited; the v between vowels dropped out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la peur
- Say it: la peur, once more
- Say it: say la peur
- Recall: say the French for ill, then the French for joy, then say la peur again

Before you move on

What does la peur mean? (“Fear”.) Say it once more.

55.3 la colère — anger

Before the new one: say the French for joy, then the French for fear.

You’ll want to know: la colère

la colère — “anger”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

colère ← Latin cholera, “a bilious illness”, from Greek kholera, built on khole, “bile” — a learned borrowing: anger was blamed on bile. (EtymDB 2.1 traces Italian collera to the same Latin word.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la colère
- Say it: la colère, once more
- Say it: say la colère
- Recall: say the French for joy, then the French for fear, then say la colère again

Before you move on

What does la colère mean? (“Anger”.) Say it once more.

55.4 la tristesse — sadness

Before the new one: say the French for fear, then the French for anger.

You'll want to know: la tristesse

la tristesse — "sadness".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tristesse ← Latin tristitia, "sadness", from tristis, "sad" — inherited; Latin -itia became French -esse. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la tristesse
- Say it: la tristesse, once more
- Say it: say la tristesse
- Recall: say the French for fear, then the French for anger, then say la tristesse again

Before you move on

What does la tristesse mean? ("Sadness".) Say it once more.

55.5 heureux — happy

Before the new one: say the French for anger, then the French for sadness.

You'll want to know: heureux

heureux — "happy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

heureux — built from Old French eur, "luck", with -eux, "full of": lucky, then happy. eur ← Latin augurium, "an omen". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: heureux
- Say it: heureux, once more
- Say it: say heureux
- Recall: say the French for anger, then the French for sadness, then say heureux again

Before you move on

What does heureux mean? ("Happy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 56

Sad, Pleased, Daughter, Grandfather, Grandmother

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name sad, pleased, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 56: I can name sad, pleased, a daughter, a grandfather, a grandmother.

56.1 triste — sad

Before the new one: say the French for sadness, then the French for happy.

You'll want to know: triste

triste — "sad". The adjective beside la tristesse.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

triste ← Latin tristis, "sad, gloomy" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: triste
- Say it: triste, once more
- Say it: say triste
- Recall: say the French for sadness, then the French for happy, then say triste again

Before you move on

What does triste mean? ("Sad".) Say it once more.

56.2 content — pleased, glad

Before the new one: say the French for happy, then the French for sad.

You'll want to know: content

content — "pleased, glad".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

content ← Latin contentus, "satisfied", the past participle of continere, "to hold together" (Lewis & Short) — taken from written Latin; Old French already had it (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: content
- Say it: content, once more
- Say it: say content
- Recall: say the French for happy, then the French for sad, then say content again

Before you move on

What does content mean? ("Pleased, glad".) Say it once more.

56.3 la fille — a daughter; a girl

Before the new one: say the French for sad, then the French for pleased.

You'll want to know: la fille

la fille — "a daughter; a girl".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fille ← Latin filia, "daughter" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1 traces Italian figlia to the same word.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fille
- Say it: la fille, once more
- Say it: say la fille
- Recall: say the French for sad, then the French for pleased, then say la fille again

Before you move on

What does la fille mean? ("A daughter; a girl".) Say it once more.

56.4 le grand-père — a grandfather

Before the new one: say the French for pleased, then the French for a daughter; a girl.

You'll want to know: le grand-père

le grand-père — "a grandfather".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

grand-père — built from the French word for "big, great", from Latin grandis (EtymDB 2.1), and père, "father". English grandfather copied the French pattern.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le grand-père
- Say it: le grand-père, once more
- Say it: say le grand-père
- Recall: say the French for pleased, then the French for a daughter; a girl, then say le grand-père again

Before you move on

What does le grand-père mean? ("A grandfather".) Say it once more.

56.5 la grand-mère — a grandmother

Before the new one: say the French for a daughter; a girl, then the French for a grandfather.

You'll want to know: la grand-mère

la grand-mère — "a grandmother".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

grand-mère — built from the French word for "big, great", from Latin grandis (EtymDB 2.1), and mère, "mother". English grandmother copied the French pattern.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la grand-mère
- Say it: la grand-mère, once more
- Say it: say la grand-mère
- Recall: say the French for a daughter; a girl, then the French for a grandfather, then say la grand-mère again

Before you move on

What does la grand-mère mean? ("A grandmother".) Say it once more.

Chapter 57

Husband, Woman, Uncle, Aunt, Cousin

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a husband, a woman, an uncle, an aunt, a cousin (female).

Complete the last lesson of chapter 57: I can name a husband, a woman, an uncle, an aunt, a cousin (female).

57.1 le mari — a husband

Before the new one: say the French for a grandfather, then the French for a grandmother.

You'll want to know: le mari

le mari — "a husband".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mari ← Latin maritus, "husband" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le mari
- Say it: le mari, once more
- Say it: say le mari
- Recall: say the French for a grandfather, then the French for a grandmother, then say le mari again

Before you move on

What does le mari mean? ("A husband".) Say it once more.

57.2 la femme — a woman; a wife

Before the new one: say the French for a grandmother, then the French for a husband.

You'll want to know: la femme

la femme — "a woman; a wife".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

femme ← Latin femina, "woman" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la femme
- Say it: la femme, once more
- Say it: say la femme
- Recall: say the French for a grandmother, then the French for a husband, then say la femme again

Before you move on

What does la femme mean? (“A woman; a wife”.) Say it once more.

57.3 l’oncle — an uncle

Before the new one: say the French for a husband, then the French for a woman; a wife.

You’ll want to know: l’oncle

l’oncle — “an uncle”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

oncle ← Vulgar Latin aunculus* ← Latin avunculus, “mother’s brother” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’oncle
- Say it: l’oncle, once more
- Say it: say l’oncle
- Recall: say the French for a husband, then the French for a woman; a wife, then say l’oncle again

Before you move on

What does l’oncle mean? (“An uncle”.) Say it once more.

57.4 la tante — an aunt

Before the new one: say the French for a woman; a wife, then the French for an uncle.

You'll want to know: la tante

la tante — "an aunt".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tante ← Old French ante ← Latin amita, "father's sister" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The t- at the front is usually explained as a child's way of saying "your aunt".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la tante
- Say it: la tante, once more
- Say it: say la tante
- Recall: say the French for a woman; a wife, then the French for an uncle, then say la tante again

Before you move on

What does la tante mean? ("An aunt".) Say it once more.

57.5 la cousine — a cousin (female)

Before the new one: say the French for an uncle, then the French for an aunt.

You'll want to know: la cousine

la cousine — "a cousin (female)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cousine ← Latin consobrina, "a cousin on the mother's side" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cousine
- Say it: la cousine, once more
- Say it: say la cousine
- Recall: say the French for an uncle, then the French for an aunt, then say la cousine again

Before you move on

What does la cousine mean? ("A cousin (female)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 58

Neighbour, Guest, Baby, Grandson, Granddaughter

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a neighbour, a guest, a baby, a grandson, a granddaughter.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 58: I can name a neighbour, a guest, a baby, a grandson, a granddaughter.

58.1 le voisin — a neighbour

Before the new one: say the French for an aunt, then the French for a cousin.

You'll want to know: le voisin

le voisin — "a neighbour".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

voisin ← Latin vicinus, "neighbour", from vicus, "a village" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le voisin
- Say it: le voisin, once more
- Say it: say le voisin
- Recall: say the French for an aunt, then the French for a cousin, then say le voisin again

Before you move on

What does le voisin mean? ("A neighbour".) Say it once more.

58.2 l'invité — a guest

Before the new one: say the French for a cousin, then the French for a neighbour.

You'll want to know: l'invité

l'invité — "a guest".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

invité is the past participle of the French verb for "to invite", used as a noun: one who is invited. The verb ← Latin invitare — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'invité
- Say it: l'invité, once more
- Say it: say l'invité
- Recall: say the French for a cousin, then the French for a neighbour, then say l'invité again

Before you move on

What does l'invité mean? ("A guest".) Say it once more.

58.3 le bébé — a baby

Before the new one: say the French for a neighbour, then the French for a guest.

You'll want to know: le bébé

le bébé — "a baby".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bébé ← English baby — borrowed in the 19th century.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le bébé
- Say it: le bébé, once more
- Say it: say le bébé
- Recall: say the French for a neighbour, then the French for a guest, then say le bébé again

Before you move on

What does le bébé mean? ("A baby".) Say it once more.

58.4 le petit-fils — a grandson

Before the new one: say the French for a guest, then the French for a baby.

You'll want to know: le petit-fils

le petit-fils — "a grandson".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

petit-fils — built from the French words for "little" and "son": a grandson. The "little" word ← Vulgar Latin pittitus*, and the "son" word ← Latin filius. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le petit-fils
- Say it: le petit-fils, once more
- Say it: say le petit-fils
- Recall: say the French for a guest, then the French for a baby, then say le petit-fils again

Before you move on

What does le petit-fils mean? ("A grandson".) Say it once more.

58.5 la petite-fille — a granddaughter

Before the new one: say the French for a baby, then the French for a grandson.

You'll want to know: la petite-fille

la petite-fille — "a granddaughter".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

petite-fille — built from the French for "little", in its feminine form, and fille, "daughter": a granddaughter. The "little" word ← Vulgar Latin pittitus*. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la petite-fille
- Say it: la petite-fille, once more
- Say it: say la petite-fille
- Recall: say the French for a baby, then the French for a grandson, then say la petite-fille again

Before you move on

What does la petite-fille mean? ("A granddaughter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 59

Nephew, Niece, Pupil, Teacher, Laugh

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a nephew, a niece, a pupil, a teacher, to laugh.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 59: I can name a nephew, a niece, a pupil, a teacher, to laugh.

59.1 le neveu — a nephew

Before the new one: say the French for a grandson, then the French for a granddaughter.

You'll want to know: le neveu

le neveu — "a nephew".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

neveu ← Latin nepos, nepotis, "grandson, nephew" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le neveu
- Say it: le neveu, once more
- Say it: say le neveu
- Recall: say the French for a grandson, then the French for a granddaughter, then say le neveu again

Before you move on

What does le neveu mean? ("A nephew".) Say it once more.

59.2 la nièce — a niece

Before the new one: say the French for a granddaughter, then the French for a nephew.

You'll want to know: la nièce

la nièce — "a niece".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nièce ← Vulgar Latin neptia*, from Latin neptis, "granddaughter" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la nièce
- Say it: la nièce, once more
- Say it: say la nièce
- Recall: say the French for a granddaughter, then the French for a nephew, then say la nièce again

Before you move on

What does la nièce mean? (“A niece”.) Say it once more.

59.3 l’élève — a pupil

Before the new one: say the French for a nephew, then the French for a niece.

You’ll want to know: l’élève

l’élève — “a pupil”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

élève — formed from the verb for “to raise, to bring up” (EtymDB 2.1), on the model of Italian allievo, “pupil”. The verb is built on Latin levare, “to lift”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’élève
- Say it: l’élève, once more
- Say it: say l’élève
- Recall: say the French for a nephew, then the French for a niece, then say l’élève again

Before you move on

What does l’élève mean? (“A pupil”.) Say it once more.

59.4 le professeur — a teacher

Before the new one: say the French for a niece, then the French for a pupil.

You'll want to know: le professeur

le professeur — "a teacher".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

professeur ← Latin professor, "a public teacher", from profiteri, "to declare in public" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le professeur
- Say it: le professeur, once more
- Say it: say le professeur
- Recall: say the French for a niece, then the French for a pupil, then say le professeur again

Before you move on

What does le professeur mean? ("A teacher".) Say it once more.

59.5 rire — to laugh

Before the new one: say the French for a pupil, then the French for a teacher.

You'll want to know: rire

rire — "to laugh".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rire ← Latin ridere, "to laugh" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rire
- Say it: rire, once more
- Say it: say rire
- Recall: say the French for a pupil, then the French for a teacher, then say rire again

Before you move on

What does rire mean? (“To laugh”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 60

Cry, Wash, Cook, Play, Learn

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to cry, to wash, to cook, to play, to learn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 60: I can say to cry, to wash, to cook, to play, to learn.

60.1 pleurer — to cry

Before the new one: say the French for a teacher, then the French for to laugh.

You'll want to know: pleurer

pleurer — "to cry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pleurer ← Old French plorer ← Latin plorare, "to wail, to weep aloud" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pleurer
- Say it: pleurer, once more
- Say it: say pleurer
- Recall: say the French for a teacher, then the French for to laugh, then say pleurer again

Before you move on

What does pleurer mean? ("To cry".) Say it once more.

60.2 laver — to wash

Before the new one: say the French for to laugh, then the French for to cry.

You'll want to know: laver

laver — "to wash".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

laver ← Latin lavare, "to wash" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laver
- Say it: laver, once more
- Say it: say laver
- Recall: say the French for to laugh, then the French for to cry, then say laver again

Before you move on

What does laver mean? ("To wash".) Say it once more.

60.3 cuisiner — to cook

Before the new one: say the French for to cry, then the French for to wash.

You'll want to know: cuisiner

cuisiner — "to cook".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cuisiner — built from the French word for "kitchen, cooking", which ← Vulgar Latin cocina* ← Latin coquina, "kitchen", from coquere, "to cook". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cuisiner
- Say it: cuisiner, once more
- Say it: say cuisiner
- Recall: say the French for to cry, then the French for to wash, then say cuisiner again

Before you move on

What does cuisiner mean? ("To cook".) Say it once more.

60.4 jouer — to play

Before the new one: say the French for to wash, then the French for to cook.

You'll want to know: jouer

jouer — "to play".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jouer ← Old French joer ← Latin iocari, "to jest, to joke" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jouer
- Say it: jouer, once more
- Say it: say jouer
- Recall: say the French for to wash, then the French for to cook, then say jouer again

Before you move on

What does jouer mean? ("To play".) Say it once more.

60.5 apprendre — to learn

Before the new one: say the French for to cook, then the French for to play.

You'll want to know: apprendre

apprendre — "to learn".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

apprendre ← Old French aprendre ← Latin apprehendere, "to seize, to grasp" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: to learn is to grasp. It is prendre, "to take", with a- in front.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: apprendre
- Say it: apprendre, once more
- Say it: say apprendre
- Recall: say the French for to cook, then the French for to play, then say apprendre again

Before you move on

What does apprendre mean? ("To learn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 61

Teach, Drink, Eat, Give, Live

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to teach, to drink, to eat, to give, to live.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 61: I can say to teach, to drink, to eat, to give, to live.

61.1 enseigner — to teach

Before the new one: say the French for to play, then the French for to learn.

You'll want to know: enseigner

enseigner — "to teach".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enseigner ← Old French enseignier ← Vulgar Latin insignare*, "to mark, to point out", from Latin signum, "a mark, a sign" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: enseigner
- Say it: enseigner, once more
- Say it: say enseigner
- Recall: say the French for to play, then the French for to learn, then say enseigner again

Before you move on

What does enseigner mean? ("To teach".) Say it once more.

61.2 boire — to drink

Before the new one: say the French for to learn, then the French for to teach.

You'll want to know: boire

boire — "to drink".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boire ← Old French boivre ← Latin bibere, "to drink" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: boire
- Say it: boire, once more
- Say it: say boire
- Recall: say the French for to learn, then the French for to teach, then say boire again

Before you move on

What does boire mean? (“To drink”.) Say it once more.

61.3 manger — to eat

Before the new one: say the French for to teach, then the French for to drink.

You’ll want to know: manger

manger — “to eat”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

manger ← Old French mengier ← Latin manducare, “to chew” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) It replaced the older Latin verb for “to eat” in everyday speech.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: manger
- Say it: manger, once more
- Say it: say manger
- Recall: say the French for to teach, then the French for to drink, then say manger again

Before you move on

What does manger mean? (“To eat”.) Say it once more.

61.4 donner — to give

Before the new one: say the French for to drink, then the French for to eat.

You'll want to know: donner

donner — "to give".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

donner ← Latin donare, "to give as a gift", from donum, "a gift" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: donner
- Say it: donner, once more
- Say it: say donner
- Recall: say the French for to drink, then the French for to eat, then say donner again

Before you move on

What does donner mean? ("To give".) Say it once more.

61.5 vivre — to live

Before the new one: say the French for to eat, then the French for to give.

You'll want to know: vivre

vivre — "to live".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vivre ← Latin vivere, "to live" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vivre
- Say it: vivre, once more
- Say it: say vivre
- Recall: say the French for to eat, then the French for to give, then say vivre again

Before you move on

What does vivre mean? (“To live”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 62

Come back, Study, Pay, Use, Show

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to come back, to study, to pay, to use, to show.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 62: I can say to come back, to study, to pay, to use, to show.

62.1 revenir — to come back

Before the new one: say the French for to give, then the French for to live.

You'll want to know: revenir

revenir — "to come back".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

revenir ← Latin revenire, "to come back", from re-, "back", and venire, "to come" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: revenir
- Say it: revenir, once more
- Say it: say revenir
- Recall: say the French for to give, then the French for to live, then say revenir again

Before you move on

What does revenir mean? ("To come back".) Say it once more.

62.2 étudier — to study

Before the new one: say the French for to live, then the French for to come back.

You'll want to know: étudier

étudier — "to study".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étudier ← Old French estudier, a medieval scholars' word built on Latin studium, "eagerness, study", from studere, "to be eager" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin verb.) The é- stands where an s once was.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: étudier
- Say it: étudier, once more
- Say it: say étudier

- Recall: say the French for to live, then the French for to come back, then say étudier again

Before you move on

What does étudier mean? (“To study”.) Say it once more.

62.3 payer — to pay

Before the new one: say the French for to come back, then the French for to study.

You’ll want to know: payer

payer — “to pay”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

payer ← Old French paiier ← Latin pacare, “to calm, to satisfy”, from pax, “peace” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: to pay was to settle with someone.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: payer
- Say it: payer, once more
- Say it: say payer
- Recall: say the French for to come back, then the French for to study, then say payer again

Before you move on

What does payer mean? (“To pay”.) Say it once more.

62.4 utiliser — to use

Before the new one: say the French for to study, then the French for to pay.

You'll want to know: utiliser

utiliser — "to use".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

utiliser — formed in French in the 18th century from the word for "useful", a borrowing of Latin utilis, "useful", from uti, "to use" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: utiliser
- Say it: utiliser, once more
- Say it: say utiliser
- Recall: say the French for to study, then the French for to pay, then say utiliser again

Before you move on

What does utiliser mean? ("To use".) Say it once more.

62.5 montrer — to show

Before the new one: say the French for to pay, then the French for to use.

You'll want to know: montrer

montrer — "to show".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

montrer ← Old French monstrer ← Latin monstrare, "to show", from monere, "to warn, to remind" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: montrer
- Say it: montrer, once more
- Say it: say montrer
- Recall: say the French for to pay, then the French for to use, then say montrer again

Before you move on

What does montrer mean? ("To show".) Say it once more.

Chapter 63

Clean, Cut, Forget, Look for, Lose

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to clean, to cut, to forget, to look for, to lose.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 63: I can say to clean, to cut, to forget, to look for, to lose.

63.1 nettoyer — to clean

Before the new one: say the French for to use, then the French for to show.

You'll want to know: nettoyer

nettoyer — "to clean".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nettoyer ← Old French nettoier, built on the adjective for "clean, neat", which goes back to Latin nitidus, "shining". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nettoyer
- Say it: nettoyer, once more
- Say it: say nettoyer
- Recall: say the French for to use, then the French for to show, then say nettoyer again

Before you move on

What does nettoyer mean? (“To clean”.) Say it once more.

63.2 couper — to cut

Before the new one: say the French for to show, then the French for to clean.

You’ll want to know: couper

couper — “to cut”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

couper — built on the French word for “a blow”, which ← Late Latin colpus, from Latin colaphus, “a punch”, from Greek kolaphos: to cut was first to strike. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: couper
- Say it: couper, once more
- Say it: say couper
- Recall: say the French for to show, then the French for to clean, then say couper again

Before you move on

What does couper mean? (“To cut”.) Say it once more.

63.3 oublier — to forget

Before the new one: say the French for to clean, then the French for to cut.

You’ll want to know: oublier

oublier — “to forget”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

oublier ← Old French oblier ← Vulgar Latin oblitare*, from Latin oblitus, “forgotten”, the past participle of oblivisci, “to forget” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: oublier
- Say it: oublier, once more
- Say it: say oublier
- Recall: say the French for to clean, then the French for to cut, then say oublier again

Before you move on

What does oublier mean? (“To forget”.) Say it once more.

63.4 chercher — to look for

Before the new one: say the French for to cut, then the French for to forget.

You'll want to know: chercher

chercher — "to look for".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chercher ← Old French cerchier ← Late Latin circare, "to go around", from circus, "a ring" (Lewis & Short) — inherited. English search came from the same Old French verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chercher
- Say it: chercher, once more
- Say it: say chercher
- Recall: say the French for to cut, then the French for to forget, then say chercher again

Before you move on

What does chercher mean? ("To look for".) Say it once more.

63.5 perdre — to lose

Before the new one: say the French for to forget, then the French for to look for.

You'll want to know: perdre

perdre — "to lose".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

perdre ← Latin perdere, "to destroy, to lose" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: perdre
- Say it: perdre, once more
- Say it: say perdre
- Recall: say the French for to forget, then the French for to look for, then say perdre again

Before you move on

What does perdre mean? ("To lose".) Say it once more.

Chapter 64

Look at, Listen to, Wait for, Buy, Know

Modes: voice (3) eyes (2) Hands-free start: the first of 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to look at, to listen to, to wait for, to buy, to know (a fact).
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 64: I can say to look at, to listen to, to wait for, to buy, to know (a fact).

64.1 regarder — "to look at, to watch"

> Before the new one: say the French for to look for, then the French for to lose.

You'll want to know: regarder

regarder — "to look at, to watch".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

regarder — built from re- and the French verb for "to keep, to watch over", which ← Frankish wardon*, "to watch". EtymDB 2.1 traces Italian guardare to the same Frankish verb.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: regarder
- Say it: regarder, once more
- Say it: say regarder
- Recall: say the French for to look for, then the French for to lose, then say regarder again

Before you move on

What does regarder mean? ("To look at, to watch".) Say it once more.

64.2 écouter — to listen to

Before the new one: say the French for to lose, then the French for to look at.

You'll want to know: écouter

écouter — "to listen to".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

écouter ← Old French escouter ← Latin auscultare, "to listen" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: écouter
- Say it: écouter, once more
- Say it: say écouter
- Recall: say the French for to lose, then the French for to look at, then say écouter again

Before you move on

What does écouter mean? (“To listen to”.) Say it once more.

64.3 attendre — to wait for

Before the new one: say the French for to look at, then the French for to listen to.

You’ll want to know: attendre

attendre — “to wait for”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

attendre ← Latin attendere, “to stretch toward, to pay heed” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: attendre
- Say it: attendre, once more
- Say it: say attendre
- Recall: say the French for to look at, then the French for to listen to, then say attendre again

Before you move on

What does attendre mean? (“To wait for”.) Say it once more.

64.4 acheter — to buy

Before the new one: say the French for to listen to, then the French for to wait for.

You'll want to know: acheter

acheter — "to buy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

acheter ← Old French acheter (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin accaptare*, from Latin captare, "to try to catch" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: Latin ca- became French che-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: acheter
- Say it: acheter, once more
- Say it: say acheter
- Recall: say the French for to listen to, then the French for to wait for, then say acheter again

Before you move on

What does acheter mean? ("To buy".) Say it once more.

64.5 savoir — to know (a fact)

Before the new one: say the French for to wait for, then the French for to buy.

You'll want to know: savoir

savoir — "to know (a fact)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

savoir ← Latin sapere, "to taste, to be wise" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited, through a Vulgar Latin sapere* stressed on its middle syllable.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: savoir
- Say it: savoir, once more
- Say it: say savoir
- Recall: say the French for to wait for, then the French for to buy, then say savoir again

Before you move on

What does savoir mean? ("To know (a fact)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 65

Leave, Carry, Send, Receive, Feel

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to leave (something), to carry, to send, to receive, to feel.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 65: I can say to leave (something), to carry, to send, to receive, to feel.

65.1 laisser — to leave (something); to let

> Before the new one: say the French for to buy, then the French for to know.

You'll want to know: laisser

laisser — "to leave (something); to let".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

laisser ← Old French laissier ← Latin laxare, "to loosen", from laxus, "slack" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: laisser
- Say it: laisser, once more
- Say it: say laisser
- Recall: say the French for to buy, then the French for to know, then say laisser again

Before you move on

What does laisser mean? ("To leave (something); to let".) Say it once more.

65.2 porter — to carry; to wear

Before the new one: say the French for to know, then the French for to leave.

You'll want to know: porter

porter — "to carry; to wear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

porter ← Latin portare, "to carry" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: porter
- Say it: porter, once more
- Say it: say porter
- Recall: say the French for to know, then the French for to leave, then say porter again

Before you move on

What does porter mean? (“To carry; to wear”.) Say it once more.

65.3 envoyer — to send

Before the new one: say the French for to leave, then the French for to carry; to wear.

You’ll want to know: envoyer

envoyer — “to send”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

envoyer ← Old French envoier ← Late Latin inviare, “to put on the way”, from via, “a road” (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: envoyer
- Say it: envoyer, once more
- Say it: say envoyer
- Recall: say the French for to leave, then the French for to carry; to wear, then say envoyer again

Before you move on

What does envoyer mean? (“To send”.) Say it once more.

65.4 recevoir — to receive

Before the new one: say the French for to carry; to wear, then the French for to send.

You'll want to know: recevoir

recevoir — "to receive".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

recevoir ← Latin recipere, "to take back, to receive" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited, through a Vulgar Latin form recipere* stressed on its middle syllable.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recevoir
- Say it: recevoir, once more
- Say it: say recevoir
- Recall: say the French for to carry; to wear, then the French for to send, then say recevoir again

Before you move on

What does recevoir mean? ("To receive".) Say it once more.

65.5 sentir — to feel; to smell

Before the new one: say the French for to send, then the French for to receive.

You'll want to know: sentir

sentir — "to feel; to smell".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sentir ← Latin sentire, "to feel, to perceive" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sentir
- Say it: sentir, once more
- Say it: say sentir
- Recall: say the French for to send, then the French for to receive, then say sentir again

Before you move on

What does sentir mean? ("To feel; to smell".) Say it once more.

Chapter 66

Draw, Paint, Count, Win, Hide

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to draw, to paint, to count, to win, to hide.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 66: I can say to draw, to paint, to count, to win, to hide.

66.1 dessiner — to draw

Before the new one: say the French for to receive, then the French for to feel; to smell.

You'll want to know: dessiner

dessiner — "to draw".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dessiner ← Middle French desseigner, from Italian disegnare, "to draw", ← Latin designare, "to mark out" — borrowed from Italian. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Middle French and Latin forms.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dessiner
- Say it: dessiner, once more
- Say it: say dessiner
- Recall: say the French for to receive, then the French for to feel; to smell, then say dessiner again

Before you move on

What does dessiner mean? ("To draw".) Say it once more.

66.2 peindre — to paint

Before the new one: say the French for to feel; to smell, then the French for to draw.

You'll want to know: peindre

peindre — "to paint".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

peindre ← Old French peindre ← Latin pingere, "to paint" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peindre
- Say it: peindre, once more
- Say it: say peindre
- Recall: say the French for to feel; to smell, then the French for to draw, then say peindre again

Before you move on

What does peindre mean? (“To paint”.) Say it once more.

66.3 compter — to count

Before the new one: say the French for to draw, then the French for to paint.

You’ll want to know: compter

compter — “to count”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

compter ← Latin computare, “to reckon” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) Old French wrote it conter; the mp was put back later to recall the Latin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: compter
- Say it: compter, once more
- Say it: say compter
- Recall: say the French for to draw, then the French for to paint, then say compter again

Before you move on

What does compter mean? (“To count”.) Say it once more.

66.4 gagner — to win; to earn

Before the new one: say the French for to paint, then the French for to count.

You'll want to know: gagner

gagner — "to win; to earn".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gagner ← Old French gaaignier ← Frankish waidanjan*, "to hunt for food, to graze" — borrowed from the Franks. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gagner
- Say it: gagner, once more
- Say it: say gagner
- Recall: say the French for to paint, then the French for to count, then say gagner again

Before you move on

What does gagner mean? ("To win; to earn".) Say it once more.

66.5 cacher — to hide

Before the new one: say the French for to count, then the French for to win; to earn.

You'll want to know: cacher

cacher — "to hide".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cacher ← Old French cachier ← Vulgar Latin coacticare*, "to press together" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cacher
- Say it: cacher, once more
- Say it: say cacher
- Recall: say the French for to count, then the French for to win; to earn, then say cacher again

Before you move on

What does cacher mean? ("To hide".) Say it once more.

Chapter 67

Find, Fish, Chicken, Fruit, Apple

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name to find, fish, chicken, a fruit, an apple.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 67: I can name to find, fish, chicken, a fruit, an apple.

67.1 trouver — to find

Before the new one: say the French for to win; to earn, then the French for to hide.

You'll want to know: trouver

trouver — "to find".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

trouver ← Old French trover, probably from Vulgar Latin tropare*, "to compose a poem", from Latin tropus, "a figure of speech", from Greek tropos, "a turn" — inherited (EtymDB 2.1). This is the usual account; it is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trouver
- Say it: trouver, once more
- Say it: say trouver
- Recall: say the French for to win; to earn, then the French for to hide, then say trouver again

Before you move on

What does trouver mean? ("To find".) Say it once more.

67.2 le poisson — fish

Before the new one: say the French for to hide, then the French for to find.

You'll want to know: le poisson

le poisson — "fish".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poisson ← Latin piscis, "fish", through a Vulgar Latin form piscio* — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le poisson
- Say it: le poisson, once more
- Say it: say le poisson
- Recall: say the French for to hide, then the French for to find, then say le poisson again

Before you move on

What does le poisson mean? ("Fish".) Say it once more.

67.3 le poulet — chicken

Before the new one: say the French for to find, then the French for fish.

You'll want to know: le poulet

le poulet — "chicken".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poulet — built from the French word for "hen", with -et, "little". The hen word ← Latin pulla, the feminine of pullus, "a young animal" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le poulet
- Say it: le poulet, once more
- Say it: say le poulet
- Recall: say the French for to find, then the French for fish, then say le poulet again

Before you move on

What does le poulet mean? ("Chicken".) Say it once more.

67.4 le fruit — a fruit

Before the new one: say the French for fish, then the French for chicken.

You'll want to know: le fruit

le fruit — "a fruit".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fruit ← Old French fruit ← Latin fructus, "enjoyment, produce" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le fruit
- Say it: le fruit, once more
- Say it: say le fruit
- Recall: say the French for fish, then the French for chicken, then say le fruit again

Before you move on

What does le fruit mean? ("A fruit".) Say it once more.

67.5 la pomme — an apple

Before the new one: say the French for chicken, then the French for a fruit.

You'll want to know: la pomme

la pomme — "an apple".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pomme ← Latin poma, "fruits", the plural of pomum — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) In Latin pomum was any fruit; French narrowed it to the apple.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pomme
- Say it: la pomme, once more
- Say it: say la pomme
- Recall: say the French for chicken, then the French for a fruit, then say la pomme again

Before you move on

What does la pomme mean? ("An apple".) Say it once more.

Chapter 68

Banana, Orange, Potato, Tomato, Onion

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a banana, an orange, a potato, a tomato, an onion.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 68: I can name a banana, an orange, a potato, a tomato, an onion.

68.1 la banane — a banana

> Before the new one: say the French for a fruit, then the French for an apple.

You'll want to know: la banane

la banane — "a banana".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

banane ← Portuguese banana (EtymDB 2.1), from a West African language, perhaps Wolof — borrowed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la banane
- Say it: la banane, once more
- Say it: say la banane
- Recall: say the French for a fruit, then the French for an apple, then say la banane again

Before you move on

What does la banane mean? ("A banana".) Say it once more.

68.2 l'orange — an orange

Before the new one: say the French for an apple, then the French for a banana.

You'll want to know: l'orange

l'orange — "an orange".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

orange ← Old French pome orenge, "orange apple" (EtymDB 2.1), which came through Italian from Arabic naranj and Persian narang — borrowed. The n- fell away on the journey.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'orange
- Say it: l'orange, once more
- Say it: say l'orange
- Recall: say the French for an apple, then the French for a banana, then say l'orange again

Before you move on

What does l'orange mean? ("An orange".) Say it once more.

68.3 la pomme de terre — a potato

Before the new one: say the French for a banana, then the French for an orange.

You'll want to know: la pomme de terre la pomme de terre — "a potato". Literally "apple of the earth".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pomme de terre — "apple of the earth": pomme, "apple", de, "of", and terre, "earth", ← Latin terra. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pomme de terre
- Say it: la pomme de terre, once more
- Say it: say la pomme de terre
- Recall: say the French for a banana, then the French for an orange, then say la pomme de terre again

Before you move on

What does la pomme de terre mean? ("A potato".) Say it once more.

68.4 la tomate — a tomato

Before the new one: say the French for an orange, then the French for a potato.

You'll want to know: la tomate

la tomate — "a tomato".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tomate ← Spanish tomate ← Nahuatl tomatl — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la tomate
- Say it: la tomate, once more
- Say it: say la tomate
- Recall: say the French for an orange, then the French for a potato, then say la tomate again

Before you move on

What does la tomate mean? ("A tomato".) Say it once more.

68.5 l'oignon — an onion

Before the new one: say the French for a potato, then the French for a tomato.

You'll want to know: l'oignon

l'oignon — "an onion".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

oignon ← Old French oingnon ← Latin unio, unionis, a kind of onion that grows as a single bulb — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) unio is built on unus, "one" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'oignon
- Say it: l'oignon, once more
- Say it: say l'oignon
- Recall: say the French for a potato, then the French for a tomato, then say l'oignon again

Before you move on

What does l'oignon mean? ("An onion".) Say it once more.

Chapter 69

Carrot, Cake, Soup, Honey, Oil

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a carrot, a cake, a soup, honey, oil.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 69: I can name a carrot, a cake, a soup, honey, oil.

69.1 la carotte — a carrot

Before the new one: say the French for a tomato, then the French for an onion.

You'll want to know: la carotte

la carotte — "a carrot".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

carotte ← Latin carota ← Greek karoton — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la carotte
- Say it: la carotte, once more
- Say it: say la carotte
- Recall: say the French for a tomato, then the French for an onion, then say la carotte again

Before you move on

What does la carotte mean? ("A carrot".) Say it once more.

69.2 le gâteau — a cake

Before the new one: say the French for an onion, then the French for a carrot.

You'll want to know: le gâteau

le gâteau — "a cake".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gâteau ← Old French gastel ← Frankish wastil*, "food" — borrowed from the Franks. (EtymDB 2.1) The circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le gâteau
- Say it: le gâteau, once more
- Say it: say le gâteau
- Recall: say the French for an onion, then the French for a carrot, then say le gâteau again

Before you move on

What does le gâteau mean? ("A cake".) Say it once more.

69.3 la soupe — a soup

Before the new one: say the French for a carrot, then the French for a cake.

You'll want to know: la soupe

la soupe — "a soup".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soupe ← Old French sope ← Late Latin suppa, "bread soaked in broth" — inherited (EtymDB 2.1); Late Latin had taken suppa from a Germanic language.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la soupe
- Say it: la soupe, once more
- Say it: say la soupe
- Recall: say the French for a carrot, then the French for a cake, then say la soupe again

Before you move on

What does la soupe mean? ("A soup".) Say it once more.

69.4 le miel — honey

Before the new one: say the French for a cake, then the French for a soup.

You'll want to know: le miel

le miel — "honey".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

miel ← Latin mel, "honey" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the stressed e broke into ie.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le miel
- Say it: le miel, once more
- Say it: say le miel
- Recall: say the French for a cake, then the French for a soup, then say le miel again

Before you move on

What does le miel mean? ("Honey".) Say it once more.

69.5 l'huile — oil

Before the new one: say the French for a soup, then the French for honey.

You'll want to know: l'huile

l'huile — "oil".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

huile ← Old French oile ← Latin oleum, "olive oil", from Greek elaion — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The h was added to the spelling only.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'huile
- Say it: l'huile, once more
- Say it: say l'huile
- Recall: say the French for a soup, then the French for honey, then say l'huile again

Before you move on

What does l'huile mean? ("Oil".) Say it once more.

Chapter 70

Lunch, Dinner, Breakfast, Rice, Pear

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name lunch, dinner, breakfast, rice, a pear.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 70: I can name lunch, dinner, breakfast, rice, a pear.

70.1 le déjeuner — lunch

Before the new one: say the French for honey, then the French for oil.

You'll want to know: le déjeuner

le déjeuner — "lunch".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

déjeuner ← Vulgar Latin disieiunare*, "to break the fast" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin verb.) The French word for "dinner" comes from the same verb by another path.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le déjeuner
- Say it: le déjeuner, once more
- Say it: say le déjeuner
- Recall: say the French for honey, then the French for oil, then say le déjeuner again

Before you move on

What does le déjeuner mean? (“Lunch”.) Say it once more.

70.2 le dîner — dinner

Before the new one: say the French for oil, then the French for lunch.

You’ll want to know: le dîner

le dîner — “dinner”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dîner ← Old French disner ← Vulgar Latin disiunare*, from disieiunare, “to break the fast” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) It is the same verb as déjeuner, worn down differently.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dîner
- Say it: le dîner, once more
- Say it: say le dîner
- Recall: say the French for oil, then the French for lunch, then say le dîner again

Before you move on

What does le dîner mean? ("Dinner".) Say it once more.

70.3 le petit-déjeuner — breakfast

Before the new one: say the French for lunch, then the French for dinner.

You'll want to know: le petit-déjeuner

le petit-déjeuner — "breakfast". Literally "little lunch".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

petit-déjeuner — built from the French word for "little" and déjeuner: the small first breaking of the fast, as English breakfast is.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le petit-déjeuner
- Say it: le petit-déjeuner, once more
- Say it: say le petit-déjeuner
- Recall: say the French for lunch, then the French for dinner, then say le petit-déjeuner again

Before you move on

What does le petit-déjeuner mean? ("Breakfast".) Say it once more.

70.4 le riz — rice

Before the new one: say the French for dinner, then the French for breakfast.

You'll want to know: le riz

le riz — "rice".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

riz ← Old French ris ← Italian riso ← Latin oryza, from Greek oryza — borrowed from Italian. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le riz
- Say it: le riz, once more
- Say it: say le riz
- Recall: say the French for dinner, then the French for breakfast, then say le riz again

Before you move on

What does le riz mean? ("Rice".) Say it once more.

70.5 la poire — a pear

Before the new one: say the French for breakfast, then the French for rice.

You'll want to know: la poire

la poire — "a pear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poire ← Old French peire ← Vulgar Latin pira*, from Latin pirum, "pear" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poire
- Say it: la poire, once more
- Say it: say la poire
- Recall: say the French for breakfast, then the French for rice, then say la poire again

Before you move on

What does la poire mean? ("A pear".) Say it once more.

Chapter 71

Lemon, Grapes, Jam, Yoghurt, Ham

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a lemon, grapes, jam, a yoghurt, ham.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 71: I can name a lemon, grapes, jam, a yoghurt, ham.

71.1 le citron — a lemon

> Before the new one: say the French for rice, then the French for a pear.

You'll want to know: le citron

le citron — "a lemon".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

citron — formed from Latin citrus, "the citron tree" (EtymDB 2.1), with the ending -on.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le citron
- Say it: le citron, once more
- Say it: say le citron
- Recall: say the French for rice, then the French for a pear, then say le citron again

Before you move on

What does le citron mean? ("A lemon".) Say it once more.

71.2 le raisin — grapes

Before the new one: say the French for a pear, then the French for a lemon.

You'll want to know: le raisin

le raisin — "grapes".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

raisin ← Vulgar Latin racimus* ← Latin racemus, "a cluster of grapes" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le raisin
- Say it: le raisin, once more
- Say it: say le raisin
- Recall: say the French for a pear, then the French for a lemon, then say le raisin again

Before you move on

What does le raisin mean? (“Grapes”.) Say it once more.

71.3 la confiture — jam

Before the new one: say the French for a lemon, then the French for grapes.

You’ll want to know: la confiture

la confiture — “jam”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

confiture — built on Old French confire, “to preserve”, ← Latin conficere, “to prepare”. (EtymDB 2.1 links it to Latin confectura, “a preparing”.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la confiture
- Say it: la confiture, once more
- Say it: say la confiture
- Recall: say the French for a lemon, then the French for grapes, then say la confiture again

Before you move on

What does la confiture mean? (“Jam”.) Say it once more.

71.4 le yaourt — a yoghurt

Before the new one: say the French for grapes, then the French for jam.

You'll want to know: le yaourt

le yaourt — "a yoghurt".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

yaourt ← Turkish yogurt — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le yaourt
- Say it: le yaourt, once more
- Say it: say le yaourt
- Recall: say the French for grapes, then the French for jam, then say le yaourt again

Before you move on

What does le yaourt mean? ("A yoghurt".) Say it once more.

71.5 le jambon — ham

Before the new one: say the French for jam, then the French for a yoghurt.

You'll want to know: le jambon

le jambon — "ham".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jambon — built from jambe, "leg", with -on: the leg of the pig. jambe ← Late Latin gamba.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le jambon
- Say it: le jambon, once more
- Say it: say le jambon
- Recall: say the French for jam, then the French for a yoghurt, then say le jambon again

Before you move on

What does le jambon mean? (“Ham”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 72

Salad, Pasta, Cream, Pepper, Walnut

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a salad, pasta, cream, pepper, a walnut.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 72: I can name a salad, pasta, cream, pepper, a walnut.

72.1 la salade — a salad; lettuce

> Before the new one: say the French for a yoghurt, then the French for ham.

You'll want to know: la salade

la salade — "a salad; lettuce".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salade ← Italian salata, "salted", that is, salted greens (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed; behind it is Latin sal, "salt".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la salade
- Say it: la salade, once more
- Say it: say la salade
- Recall: say the French for a yoghurt, then the French for ham, then say la salade again

Before you move on

What does la salade mean? ("A salad; lettuce".) Say it once more.

72.2 les pâtes — pasta

Before the new one: say the French for ham, then the French for a salad; lettuce.

You'll want to know: les pâtes

les pâtes — "pasta".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pâtes is the plural of the French word for "dough, paste", which ← Old French paste ← Late Latin pasta, "dough", from Greek pasta, "barley porridge" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les pâtes
- Say it: les pâtes, once more
- Say it: say les pâtes
- Recall: say the French for ham, then the French for a salad; lettuce, then say les pâtes again

Before you move on

What does les pâtes mean? ("Pasta".) Say it once more.

72.3 la crème — cream

Before the new one: say the French for a salad; lettuce, then the French for pasta.

You'll want to know: la crème

la crème — "cream".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

crème ← Old French cresme ← Late Latin crama, "cream", probably a Gaulish word (EtymDB 2.1); its spelling was later pulled toward Church Latin chrisma, "anointing oil".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la crème
- Say it: la crème, once more
- Say it: say la crème
- Recall: say the French for a salad; lettuce, then the French for pasta, then say la crème again

Before you move on

What does la crème mean? ("Cream".) Say it once more.

72.4 le poivre — pepper

Before the new one: say the French for pasta, then the French for cream.

You'll want to know: le poivre

le poivre — "pepper".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poivre ← Old French peivre ← Latin piper, from Greek peperi — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The word travelled with the spice from India: Sanskrit has pippali, "long pepper".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le poivre
- Say it: le poivre, once more
- Say it: say le poivre
- Recall: say the French for pasta, then the French for cream, then say le poivre again

Before you move on

What does le poivre mean? ("Pepper".) Say it once more.

72.5 la noix — a walnut, a nut

Before the new one: say the French for cream, then the French for pepper.

You'll want to know: la noix

la noix — "a walnut, a nut".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

noix ← Old French nois ← Latin nux, nucis, "nut" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la noix
- Say it: la noix, once more
- Say it: say la noix
- Recall: say the French for cream, then the French for pepper, then say la noix again

Before you move on

What does la noix mean? ("A walnut, a nut".) Say it once more.

Chapter 73

Kitchen, Window, Chair, Key, Wall

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a kitchen, a window, a chair, a key, a wall.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 73: I can name a kitchen, a window, a chair, a key, a wall.

73.1 la cuisine — a kitchen; cooking

Before the new one: say the French for pepper, then the French for a walnut.

You'll want to know: la cuisine

la cuisine — "a kitchen; cooking". The noun behind cuisiner.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cuisine ← Vulgar Latin cocina* ← Latin coquina, "kitchen", from coquere, "to cook" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cuisine
- Say it: la cuisine, once more
- Say it: say la cuisine
- Recall: say the French for pepper, then the French for a walnut, then say la cuisine again

Before you move on

What does la cuisine mean? ("A kitchen; cooking".) Say it once more.

73.2 la fenêtre — a window

Before the new one: say the French for a walnut, then the French for a kitchen; cooking.

You'll want to know: la fenêtre

la fenêtre — "a window".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fenêtre ← Old French fenestre ← Latin fenestra, "window" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fenêtre
- Say it: la fenêtre, once more
- Say it: say la fenêtre
- Recall: say the French for a walnut, then the French for a kitchen; cooking, then say la fenêtre again

Before you move on

What does la fenêtre mean? (“A window”.) Say it once more.

73.3 la chaise — a chair

Before the new one: say the French for a kitchen; cooking, then the French for a window.

You’ll want to know: la chaise

la chaise — “a chair”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chaise ← Latin cathedra, “a seat”, from Greek kathedra (Lewis & Short) — inherited. Old French said chaiere, which EtymDB 2.1 traces to cathedra; Paris speech turned its r into a z. The older form lives on in the French word for a pulpit.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la chaise
- Say it: la chaise, once more
- Say it: say la chaise
- Recall: say the French for a kitchen; cooking, then the French for a window, then say la chaise again

Before you move on

What does la chaise mean? (“A chair”.) Say it once more.

73.4 la clé — a key

Before the new one: say the French for a window, then the French for a chair.

You'll want to know: la clé

la clé — "a key".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

clé ← Old French clef ← Latin clavis, "key" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la clé
- Say it: la clé, once more
- Say it: say la clé
- Recall: say the French for a window, then the French for a chair, then say la clé again

Before you move on

What does la clé mean? ("A key".) Say it once more.

73.5 le mur — a wall

Before the new one: say the French for a chair, then the French for a key.

You'll want to know: le mur

le mur — "a wall".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mur ← Latin murus, "wall" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le mur
- Say it: le mur, once more
- Say it: say le mur
- Recall: say the French for a chair, then the French for a key, then say le mur again

Before you move on

What does le mur mean? ("A wall".) Say it once more.

Chapter 74

Roof, Garden, Lamp, Bathroom, Bedroom

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a roof, a garden, a lamp, a bathroom, a bedroom.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 74: I can name a roof, a garden, a lamp, a bathroom, a bedroom.

74.1 le toit — a roof

Before the new one: say the French for a key, then the French for a wall.

You'll want to know: le toit

le toit — "a roof".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

toit ← Latin tectum, "roof", from tegere, "to cover" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word) — inherited: Latin -ct- became French -it, as in lait from Latin lac, lactis, through Vulgar Latin lacte*.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le toit
- Say it: le toit, once more
- Say it: say le toit
- Recall: say the French for a key, then the French for a wall, then say le toit again

Before you move on

What does le toit mean? (“A roof”.) Say it once more.

74.2 le jardin — a garden

Before the new one: say the French for a wall, then the French for a roof.

You’ll want to know: le jardin

le jardin — “a garden”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jardin ← Old French jardin (EtymDB 2.1), from Frankish gardo*, “an enclosure” — borrowed from the Franks.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le jardin
- Say it: le jardin, once more
- Say it: say le jardin
- Recall: say the French for a wall, then the French for a roof, then say le jardin again

Before you move on

What does le jardin mean? (“A garden”.) Say it once more.

74.3 la lampe — a lamp

Before the new one: say the French for a roof, then the French for a garden.

You’ll want to know: la lampe

la lampe — “a lamp”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lampe ← Late Latin lampada ← Latin lampas, “a torch”, from Greek lampas — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la lampe
- Say it: la lampe, once more
- Say it: say la lampe
- Recall: say the French for a roof, then the French for a garden, then say la lampe again

Before you move on

What does la lampe mean? (“A lamp”.) Say it once more.

74.4 la salle de bain — a bathroom

Before the new one: say the French for a garden, then the French for a lamp.

You'll want to know: la salle de bain

la salle de bain — "a bathroom".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salle de bain — "room of bath": salle, "a room", ← Frankish sal*, "a hall" (EtymDB 2.1); de, "of"; bain, "bath", ← Latin balneum (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la salle de bain
- Say it: la salle de bain, once more
- Say it: say la salle de bain
- Recall: say the French for a garden, then the French for a lamp, then say la salle de bain again

Before you move on

What does la salle de bain mean? ("A bathroom".) Say it once more.

74.5 la chambre — a bedroom

Before the new one: say the French for a lamp, then the French for a bathroom.

You'll want to know: la chambre

la chambre — "a bedroom".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chambre ← Latin camera, "a vaulted room", from Greek kamara (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: Latin ca- became French cha-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la chambre
- Say it: la chambre, once more
- Say it: say la chambre
- Recall: say the French for a lamp, then the French for a bathroom, then say la chambre again

Before you move on

What does la chambre mean? ("A bedroom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 75

Floor, Stairs, Mirror, Living room, Sofa

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name the floor, the stairs, a mirror, a living room, a sofa.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 75: I can name the floor, the stairs, a mirror, a living room, a sofa.

75.1 le sol — the floor, the ground

Before the new one: say the French for a bathroom, then the French for a bedroom.

You'll want to know: le sol

le sol — "the floor, the ground".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sol ← Latin solum, "ground, floor" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sol
- Say it: le sol, once more
- Say it: say le sol
- Recall: say the French for a bathroom, then the French for a bedroom, then say le sol again

Before you move on

What does le sol mean? ("The floor, the ground".) Say it once more.

75.2 l'escalier — the stairs

Before the new one: say the French for a bedroom, then the French for the floor.

You'll want to know: l'escalier

l'escalier — "the stairs".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

escalier ← Occitan escalier ← Latin scalaria, "steps", from scala, "a ladder" — borrowed from the south in the 1500s. (EtymDB 2.1 has the Middle French form.) The word French inherited from scala is the one for "ladder".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'escalier
- Say it: l'escalier, once more
- Say it: say l'escalier

- Recall: say the French for a bedroom, then the French for the floor, then say l'escalier again

Before you move on

What does l'escalier mean? ("The stairs".) Say it once more.

75.3 le miroir — a mirror

Before the new one: say the French for the floor, then the French for the stairs.

You'll want to know: le miroir

le miroir — "a mirror".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

miroir — built in Old French from the verb mirer, "to look at", ← Latin mirari, "to wonder at". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le miroir
- Say it: le miroir, once more
- Say it: say le miroir
- Recall: say the French for the floor, then the French for the stairs, then say le miroir again

Before you move on

What does le miroir mean? ("A mirror".) Say it once more.

75.4 le salon — a living room

Before the new one: say the French for the stairs, then the French for a mirror.

You'll want to know: le salon

le salon — "a living room".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salon ← Italian salone, "a large hall", from sala, "a hall", a Germanic word — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le salon
- Say it: le salon, once more
- Say it: say le salon
- Recall: say the French for the stairs, then the French for a mirror, then say le salon again

Before you move on

What does le salon mean? ("A living room".) Say it once more.

75.5 le canapé — a sofa

Before the new one: say the French for a mirror, then the French for a living room.

You'll want to know: le canapé

le canapé — "a sofa".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

canapé ← Medieval Latin canapeum ← Latin conopeum, "a bed with a mosquito net", from Greek konopeion, built on konops, "mosquito" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le canapé
- Say it: le canapé, once more
- Say it: say le canapé
- Recall: say the French for a mirror, then the French for a living room, then say le canapé again

Before you move on

What does le canapé mean? ("A sofa".) Say it once more.

Chapter 76

Cupboard, Ceiling, Corridor, Glass, Plate

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a cupboard, a ceiling, a corridor, a glass, a plate.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 76: I can name a cupboard, a ceiling, a corridor, a glass, a plate.

76.1 le placard — a cupboard

> Before the new one: say the French for a living room, then the French for a sofa.

You'll want to know: le placard

le placard — "a cupboard".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

placard — built from the verb for "to stick on, to plate", with -ard; the verb comes from Middle Dutch placken, "to patch". A placard was first a notice stuck on a wall, then a cupboard set into one.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le placard
- Say it: le placard, once more
- Say it: say le placard
- Recall: say the French for a living room, then the French for a sofa, then say le placard again

Before you move on

What does le placard mean? (“A cupboard”.) Say it once more.

76.2 le plafond — a ceiling

Before the new one: say the French for a sofa, then the French for a cupboard.

You’ll want to know: le plafond

le plafond — “a ceiling”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plafond — built from the French words for “flat” and “bottom”: the flat underside of the floor above. The second ← Latin fundus, “bottom”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le plafond
- Say it: le plafond, once more
- Say it: say le plafond
- Recall: say the French for a sofa, then the French for a cupboard, then say le plafond again

Before you move on

What does le plafond mean? ("A ceiling".) Say it once more.

76.3 le couloir — a corridor

Before the new one: say the French for a cupboard, then the French for a ceiling.

You'll want to know: le couloir

le couloir — "a corridor".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

couloir — built from the verb for "to flow", with -oir, "a place for": a passage things flow along. The verb ← Latin colare, "to strain, to filter" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le couloir
- Say it: le couloir, once more
- Say it: say le couloir
- Recall: say the French for a cupboard, then the French for a ceiling, then say le couloir again

Before you move on

What does le couloir mean? ("A corridor".) Say it once more.

76.4 le verre — a glass

Before the new one: say the French for a ceiling, then the French for a corridor.

You'll want to know: le verre

le verre — "a glass".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

verre ← Latin vitrum, "glass" — inherited; the t between vowels dropped out. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le verre
- Say it: le verre, once more
- Say it: say le verre
- Recall: say the French for a ceiling, then the French for a corridor, then say le verre again

Before you move on

What does le verre mean? ("A glass".) Say it once more.

76.5 l'assiette — a plate

Before the new one: say the French for a corridor, then the French for a glass.

You'll want to know: l'assiette

l'assiette — "a plate".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

assiette ← Vulgar Latin assedita*, "a seating", from Latin assidere, "to sit beside" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: first a place at table, then the plate set there.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'assiette
- Say it: l'assiette, once more
- Say it: say l'assiette
- Recall: say the French for a corridor, then the French for a glass, then say l'assiette again

Before you move on

What does l'assiette mean? ("A plate".) Say it once more.

Chapter 77

Spoon, Knife, Fork, Bottle, Cup

Modes: voice (6) eyes (1) Hands-free start: the first 6 of 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a spoon, a knife, a fork, a bottle, a cup.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 77: I can name a spoon, a knife, a fork, a bottle, a cup.

77.1 la cuillère — a spoon

Before the new one: say the French for a glass, then the French for a plate.

You'll want to know: la cuillère

la cuillère — "a spoon".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cuillère ← Latin cochlearium, "a spoon", from cochlear, a pointed spoon for getting snails out of their shells, and cochlea, "a snail", from Greek kokhlias (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cuillère
- Say it: la cuillère, once more
- Say it: say la cuillère
- Recall: say the French for a glass, then the French for a plate, then say la cuillère again

Before you move on

What does la cuillère mean? ("A spoon".) Say it once more.

77.2 le couteau — a knife

Before the new one: say the French for a plate, then the French for a spoon.

You'll want to know: le couteau

le couteau — "a knife".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

couteau ← Old French coutel ← Latin cultellus, "a little knife", from culter, "knife" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le couteau
- Say it: le couteau, once more
- Say it: say le couteau
- Recall: say the French for a plate, then the French for a spoon, then say le couteau again

Before you move on

What does le couteau mean? (“A knife”.) Say it once more.

77.3 la fourchette — a fork

Before the new one: say the French for a spoon, then the French for a knife.

You’ll want to know: la fourchette

la fourchette — “a fork”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins fourchette — built from the French word for “pitchfork”, with -ette, “little”. The pitchfork word ← Old French furche (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin furca, “a two-pronged fork” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fourchette
- Say it: la fourchette, once more
- Say it: say la fourchette
- Recall: say the French for a spoon, then the French for a knife, then say la fourchette again

Before you move on

What does la fourchette mean? (“A fork”.) Say it once more.

77.4 la bouteille — a bottle

Before the new one: say the French for a knife, then the French for a fork.

You'll want to know: la bouteille

la bouteille — "a bottle".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bouteille ← Medieval Latin butticula, from Late Latin buttis, "a cask" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la bouteille
- Say it: la bouteille, once more
- Say it: say la bouteille
- Recall: say the French for a knife, then the French for a fork, then say la bouteille again

Before you move on

What does la bouteille mean? ("A bottle".) Say it once more.

77.5 la tasse — a cup

Before the new one: say the French for a fork, then the French for a bottle.

You'll want to know: la tasse

la tasse — "a cup".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tasse ← Arabic tas, "a bowl, a cup", itself from Persian — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la tasse
- Say it: la tasse, once more
- Say it: say la tasse
- Recall: say the French for a fork, then the French for a bottle, then say la tasse again

Before you move on

What does la tasse mean? ("A cup".) Say it once more.

77.6 The body, family, doing and food — a first pass

Say the words for a bottle and a cup.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an arm, a leg, a foot, a finger, a tooth
- the neck, a shoulder, a knee, the face, blood
- skin, a nail, the chin, the throat, a cheek
- the chest, the stomach, an ankle, an elbow, a wrist
- pain, a fever, a cough, a medicine, a doctor
- a hospital, an illness, thirst, tiredness, ill
- joy, fear, anger, sadness, happy
- sad, pleased, a daughter; a girl, a grandfather, a grandmother

- a husband, a woman; a wife, an uncle, an aunt, a cousin
- a neighbour, a guest, a baby, a grandson, a granddaughter
- a nephew, a niece, a pupil, a teacher, to laugh
- to cry, to wash, to cook, to play, to learn
- to teach, to drink, to eat, to give, to live
- to come back, to study, to pay, to use, to show

Before you move on

An arm? (le bras.) A leg? (la jambe.) A foot? (le pied.) A finger? (le doigt.) A tooth? (la dent.) The neck? (le cou.) A shoulder? (l'épaule.) A knee? (le genou.) The face? (le visage.) Blood? (le sang.) Skin? (la peau.) A nail? (l'ongle.) The chin? (le menton.) The throat? (la gorge.) A cheek? (la joue.) The chest? (la poitrine.) The stomach? (l'estomac.) An ankle? (la cheville.) An elbow? (le coude.) A wrist? (le poignet.) Pain? (la douleur.) A fever? (la fièvre.) A cough? (la toux.) A medicine? (le médicament.) A doctor? (le médecin.) A hospital? (l'hôpital.) An illness? (la maladie.) Thirst? (la soif.) Tiredness? (la fatigue.) Ill? (malade.) Joy? (la joie.) Fear? (la peur.) Anger? (la colère.) Sadness? (la tristesse.) Happy? (heureux.) Sad? (triste.) Pleased? (content.) A daughter; a girl? (la fille.) A grandfather? (le grand-père.) A grandmother? (la grand-mère.) A husband? (le mari.) A woman; a wife? (la femme.) An uncle? (l'oncle.) An aunt? (la tante.) A cousin? (la cousine.) A neighbour? (le voisin.) A guest? (l'invité.) A baby? (le bébé.) A grandson? (le petit-fils.) A granddaughter? (la petite-fille.) A nephew? (le neveu.) A niece? (la nièce.) A pupil? (l'élève.) A teacher? (le professeur.) To laugh? (rire.) To cry? (pleurer.) To wash? (laver.) To cook? (cuisiner.) To play? (jouer.) To learn? (apprendre.) To teach? (enseigner.) To drink? (boire.) To eat? (manger.) To give? (donner.) To live? (vivre.) To come back? (revenir.) To study? (étudier.) To pay? (payer.) To use? (utiliser.) To show? (montrer.)

77.7 The house, the table and things — a second pass

Say the words for to clean and to cut.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to clean, to cut, to forget, to look for, to lose
- to look at, to listen to, to wait for, to buy, to know
- to leave, to carry; to wear, to send, to receive, to feel; to smell
- to draw, to paint, to count, to win; to earn, to hide
- to find, fish, chicken, a fruit, an apple
- a banana, an orange, a potato, a tomato, an onion
- a carrot, a cake, a soup, honey, oil
- lunch, dinner, breakfast, rice, a pear
- a lemon, grapes, jam, a yoghurt, ham
- a salad; lettuce, pasta, cream, pepper, a walnut
- a kitchen; cooking, a window, a chair, a key, a wall
- a roof, a garden, a lamp, a bathroom, a bedroom
- the floor, the stairs, a mirror, a living room, a sofa
- a cupboard, a ceiling, a corridor, a glass, a plate
- a spoon, a knife, a fork, a bottle, a cup

Before you move on

To clean? (nettoyer.) To cut? (couper.) To forget? (oublier.) To look for? (chercher.) To lose? (perdre.) To look at? (regarder.) To listen to? (écouter.) To wait for? (attendre.) To buy? (acheter.) To know? (savoir.) To leave? (laisser.) To carry; to wear? (porter.) To send? (envoyer.) To receive? (recevoir.) To feel; to smell? (sentir.) To draw? (dessiner.) To paint? (peindre.) To count? (compter.) To win; to earn? (gagner.) To hide? (cacher.) To find? (trouver.) Fish? (le poisson.) Chicken? (le poulet.) A fruit? (le fruit.) An apple? (la pomme.) A banana? (la banane.) An orange? (l'orange.) A potato? (la pomme de terre.) A tomato? (la tomate.) An onion? (l'oignon.) A carrot? (la carotte.) A cake? (le gâteau.) A soup? (la soupe.) Honey? (le miel.) Oil? (l'huile.) Lunch? (le déjeuner.) Dinner? (le dîner.) Breakfast? (le petit-déjeuner.) Rice? (le riz.) A pear? (la poire.) A lemon? (le citron.) Grapes? (le raisin.) Jam? (la confiture.) A yoghurt? (le yaourt.) Ham? (le jambon.) A salad; lettuce? (la salade.) Pasta? (les pâtes.) Cream? (la crème.) Pepper? (le poivre.) A walnut? (la noix.) A kitchen; cooking? (la cuisine.) A window? (la fenêtre.) A chair? (la chaise.) A key? (la clé.) A wall? (le mur.) A roof? (le toit.) A garden? (le jardin.) A lamp? (la lampe.) A bathroom? (la salle de bain.) A bedroom? (la chambre.) The floor? (le sol.) The stairs? (l'escalier.) A mirror? (le miroir.) A living room? (le salon.) A sofa? (le canapé.) A cupboard? (le placard.) A ceiling? (le plafond.) A corridor? (le couloir.) A glass? (le verre.) A plate? (l'assiette.) A spoon? (la cuillère.) A knife? (le couteau.) A fork? (la fourchette.) A bottle? (la bouteille.) A cup? (la tasse.)

Chapter 78

Pen, Paper, Notebook, Pencil, Bag

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a pen, paper, a notebook, a pencil, a bag.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 78: I can name a pen, paper, a notebook, a pencil, a bag.

78.1 le stylo — a pen

Before the new one: say the French for a bottle, then the French for a cup.

You'll want to know: le stylo

le stylo — "a pen".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

stylo — short for stylographe, a 19th-century name for a fountain pen, built from Latin stilus, "a writing stick" (EtymDB 2.1), and Greek graphein, "to write".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le stylo
- Say it: le stylo, once more
- Say it: say le stylo
- Recall: say the French for a bottle, then the French for a cup, then say le stylo again

Before you move on

What does le stylo mean? (“A pen”.) Say it once more.

78.2 le papier — paper

Before the new one: say the French for a cup, then the French for a pen.

You’ll want to know: le papier

le papier — “paper”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

papier ← Latin papyrus, from Greek papyros, “papyrus” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le papier
- Say it: le papier, once more
- Say it: say le papier
- Recall: say the French for a cup, then the French for a pen, then say le papier again

Before you move on

What does le papier mean? (“Paper”.) Say it once more.

78.3 le cahier — a notebook

Before the new one: say the French for a pen, then the French for paper.

You’ll want to know: le cahier

le cahier — “a notebook”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cahier ← Old French quaer ← Vulgar Latin quaternum*, from Latin quaterni, “four at a time” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: a booklet made of four folded sheets.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cahier
- Say it: le cahier, once more
- Say it: say le cahier
- Recall: say the French for a pen, then the French for paper, then say le cahier again

Before you move on

What does le cahier mean? (“A notebook”.) Say it once more.

78.4 le crayon — a pencil

Before the new one: say the French for paper, then the French for a notebook.

You'll want to know: le crayon

le crayon — "a pencil".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

crayon — built from the French word for "chalk", with -on. The chalk word ← Latin creta, "chalk, clay". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le crayon
- Say it: le crayon, once more
- Say it: say le crayon
- Recall: say the French for paper, then the French for a notebook, then say le crayon again

Before you move on

What does le crayon mean? ("A pencil".) Say it once more.

78.5 le sac — a bag

Before the new one: say the French for a notebook, then the French for a pencil.

You'll want to know: le sac

le sac — "a bag".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sac ← Latin saccus, from Greek sakkos, "a coarse bag" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sac
- Say it: le sac, once more
- Say it: say le sac
- Recall: say the French for a notebook, then the French for a pencil, then say le sac again

Before you move on

What does le sac mean? ("A bag".) Say it once more.

Chapter 79

Phone, Umbrella, Money, Present, Glasses

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a phone, an umbrella, money, a present, glasses.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 79: I can name a phone, an umbrella, money, a present, glasses.

79.1 le téléphone — a phone

Before the new one: say the French for a pencil, then the French for a bag.

You'll want to know: le téléphone

le téléphone — "a phone".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

téléphone — a 19th-century coinage from Greek tele, "far off", and phone, "voice, sound" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le téléphone
- Say it: le téléphone, once more
- Say it: say le téléphone
- Recall: say the French for a pencil, then the French for a bag, then say le téléphone again

Before you move on

What does le téléphone mean? ("A phone".) Say it once more.

79.2 le parapluie — an umbrella

Before the new one: say the French for a bag, then the French for a phone.

You'll want to know: le parapluie

le parapluie — "an umbrella". Literally "guard-rain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

parapluie — built from para-, "guarding against", and the French word for "rain". para- came from Italian parare, "to shield", ← Latin parare, "to prepare". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le parapluie
- Say it: le parapluie, once more
- Say it: say le parapluie
- Recall: say the French for a bag, then the French for a phone, then say le parapluie again

Before you move on

What does le parapluie mean? (“An umbrella”.) Say it once more.

79.3 l’argent — money; silver

Before the new one: say the French for a phone, then the French for an umbrella.

You’ll want to know: l’argent

l’argent — “money; silver”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

argent ← Latin argentum, “silver” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) Coins were silver, so the word came to mean money.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’argent
- Say it: l’argent, once more
- Say it: say l’argent
- Recall: say the French for a phone, then the French for an umbrella, then say l’argent again

Before you move on

What does l’argent mean? (“Money; silver”.) Say it once more.

79.4 le cadeau — a present, a gift

Before the new one: say the French for an umbrella, then the French for money; silver.

You'll want to know: le cadeau

le cadeau — "a present, a gift".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cadeau ← Old Provençal capdel, "a chief; a capital letter", ← Latin capitellum, "a little head" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1) It meant a flourished capital letter, then a flourish, a treat, and finally a gift.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cadeau
- Say it: le cadeau, once more
- Say it: say le cadeau
- Recall: say the French for an umbrella, then the French for money; silver, then say le cadeau again

Before you move on

What does le cadeau mean? ("A present, a gift".) Say it once more.

79.5 les lunettes — glasses

Before the new one: say the French for money; silver, then the French for a present.

You'll want to know: les lunettes

les lunettes — "glasses".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lunettes — built from lune, "moon", with -ette, "little": the round lenses were little moons. lune ← Latin luna. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les lunettes
- Say it: les lunettes, once more
- Say it: say les lunettes
- Recall: say the French for money; silver, then the French for a present, then say les lunettes again

Before you move on

What does les lunettes mean? ("Glasses".) Say it once more.

Chapter 80

Box, Suitcase, Ticket, Map, Photo

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a box, a suitcase, a ticket, a map, a photo.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 80: I can name a box, a suitcase, a ticket, a map, a photo.

80.1 la boîte — a box

Before the new one: say the French for a present, then the French for glasses.

You'll want to know: la boîte

la boîte — "a box".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boîte ← Old French boiste ← Vulgar Latin buxita*, from Late Latin buxis, "a box" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la boîte
- Say it: la boîte, once more
- Say it: say la boîte
- Recall: say the French for a present, then the French for glasses, then say la boîte again

Before you move on

What does la boîte mean? ("A box".) Say it once more.

80.2 la valise — a suitcase

Before the new one: say the French for glasses, then the French for a box.

You'll want to know: la valise

la valise — "a suitcase".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

valise ← Italian valigia — borrowed in the 1500s. Where the Italian word came from is uncertain. (EtymDB 2.1 records Medieval Latin valisia.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la valise
- Say it: la valise, once more
- Say it: say la valise
- Recall: say the French for glasses, then the French for a box, then say la valise again

Before you move on

What does la valise mean? (“A suitcase”.) Say it once more.

80.3 le billet — a ticket; a banknote

Before the new one: say the French for a box, then the French for a suitcase.

You’ll want to know: le billet

le billet — “a ticket; a banknote”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

billet ← Old French billette, a little form of bille, “a written note”, from Medieval Latin bulla, “a seal, a sealed document”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le billet
- Say it: le billet, once more
- Say it: say le billet
- Recall: say the French for a box, then the French for a suitcase, then say le billet again

Before you move on

What does le billet mean? (“A ticket; a banknote”.) Say it once more.

80.4 la carte — a map; a card

Before the new one: say the French for a suitcase, then the French for a ticket; a banknote.

You'll want to know: la carte

la carte — "a map; a card".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

carte ← Latin charta, "a sheet of paper", from Greek chartes (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing: an inherited form would begin with ch-. The worn-down form gave French its word for a charter.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la carte
- Say it: la carte, once more
- Say it: say la carte
- Recall: say the French for a suitcase, then the French for a ticket; a banknote, then say la carte again

Before you move on

What does la carte mean? ("A map; a card".) Say it once more.

80.5 la photo — a photo

Before the new one: say the French for a ticket; a banknote, then the French for a map; a card.

You'll want to know: la photo

la photo — "a photo".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

photo — short for photographie (EtymDB 2.1), a 19th-century coinage from Greek phos, photos, "light", and graphein, "to write".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la photo
- Say it: la photo, once more
- Say it: say la photo
- Recall: say the French for a ticket; a banknote, then the French for a map; a card, then say la photo again

Before you move on

What does la photo mean? ("A photo".) Say it once more.

Chapter 81

Tree, Flower, Leaf, Mountain, River

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a tree, a flower, a leaf, a mountain, a river.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 81: I can name a tree, a flower, a leaf, a mountain, a river.

81.1 l'arbre — a tree

> Before the new one: say the French for a map; a card, then the French for a photo.

You'll want to know: l'arbre

l'arbre — "a tree".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

arbre ← Latin arbor, "tree" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'arbre
- Say it: l'arbre, once more
- Say it: say l'arbre
- Recall: say the French for a map; a card, then the French for a photo, then say l'arbre again

Before you move on

What does l'arbre mean? ("A tree".) Say it once more.

81.2 la fleur — a flower

Before the new one: say the French for a photo, then the French for a tree.

You'll want to know: la fleur

la fleur — "a flower".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fleur ← Old French flur ← Latin flos, floris, "flower" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fleur
- Say it: la fleur, once more
- Say it: say la fleur
- Recall: say the French for a photo, then the French for a tree, then say la fleur again

Before you move on

What does la fleur mean? (“A flower”.) Say it once more.

81.3 la feuille — a leaf; a sheet of paper

Before the new one: say the French for a tree, then the French for a flower.

You’ll want to know: la feuille

la feuille — “a leaf; a sheet of paper”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

feuille ← Late Latin folia, “leaves”, the plural of folium, used as a singular — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la feuille
- Say it: la feuille, once more
- Say it: say la feuille
- Recall: say the French for a tree, then the French for a flower, then say la feuille again

Before you move on

What does la feuille mean? (“A leaf; a sheet of paper”.) Say it once more.

81.4 la montagne — a mountain

Before the new one: say the French for a flower, then the French for a leaf; a sheet of paper.

You'll want to know: la montagne

la montagne — "a mountain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

montagne ← Vulgar Latin montanea*, from Latin mons, montis, "mountain" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la montagne
- Say it: la montagne, once more
- Say it: say la montagne
- Recall: say the French for a flower, then the French for a leaf; a sheet of paper, then say la montagne again

Before you move on

What does la montagne mean? ("A mountain".) Say it once more.

81.5 la rivière — a river

Before the new one: say the French for a leaf; a sheet of paper, then the French for a mountain.

You'll want to know: la rivière

la rivière — "a river".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rivière ← Vulgar Latin riparia*, "a riverbank", from Latin ripa, "bank" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la rivière
- Say it: la rivière, once more
- Say it: say la rivière
- Recall: say the French for a leaf; a sheet of paper, then the French for a mountain, then say la rivière again

Before you move on

What does la rivière mean? ("A river".) Say it once more.

Chapter 82

Sea, Stone, Sand, Beach, Island

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the sea, a stone, sand, a beach, an island.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 82: I can name the sea, a stone, sand, a beach, an island.

82.1 la mer — the sea

> Before the new one: say the French for a mountain, then the French for a river.

You'll want to know: la mer

la mer — "the sea".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mer ← Latin mare, "sea" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: Latin's stressed a became e.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la mer

- Say it: la mer, once more
- Say it: say la mer
- Recall: say the French for a mountain, then the French for a river, then say la mer again

Before you move on

What does la mer mean? ("The sea".) Say it once more.

82.2 la pierre — a stone

Before the new one: say the French for a river, then the French for the sea.

You'll want to know: la pierre

la pierre — "a stone".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pierre ← Latin petra, "rock", from Greek petra — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pierre
- Say it: la pierre, once more
- Say it: say la pierre
- Recall: say the French for a river, then the French for the sea, then say la pierre again

Before you move on

What does la pierre mean? ("A stone".) Say it once more.

82.3 le sable — sand

Before the new one: say the French for the sea, then the French for a stone.

You'll want to know: le sable

le sable — "sand".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sable ← Latin sabulum, "coarse sand" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sable
- Say it: le sable, once more
- Say it: say le sable
- Recall: say the French for the sea, then the French for a stone, then say le sable again

Before you move on

What does le sable mean? ("Sand".) Say it once more.

82.4 la plage — a beach

Before the new one: say the French for a stone, then the French for sand.

You'll want to know: la plage

la plage — "a beach".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plage ← Italian piaggia, "a sloping shore" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la plage
- Say it: la plage, once more
- Say it: say la plage
- Recall: say the French for a stone, then the French for sand, then say la plage again

Before you move on

What does la plage mean? ("A beach".) Say it once more.

82.5 l'île — an island

Before the new one: say the French for sand, then the French for a beach.

You'll want to know: l'île

l'île — "an island".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

île ← Old French isle ← Latin insula, "island" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word) — inherited. The circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'île
- Say it: l'île, once more
- Say it: say l'île
- Recall: say the French for sand, then the French for a beach, then say l'île again

Before you move on

What does l'île mean? ("An island".) Say it once more.

Chapter 83

Sun, Star, Cloud, Rain, Snow

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the sun, a star, a cloud, rain, snow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 83: I can name the sun, a star, a cloud, rain, snow.

83.1 le soleil — the sun

> Before the new one: say the French for a beach, then the French for an island.

You'll want to know: le soleil

le soleil — "the sun".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soleil ← Vulgar Latin soliculus*, "a little sun", from Latin sol, "sun" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le soleil
- Say it: le soleil, once more
- Say it: say le soleil
- Recall: say the French for a beach, then the French for an island, then say le soleil again

Before you move on

What does le soleil mean? ("The sun".) Say it once more.

83.2 l'étoile — a star

Before the new one: say the French for an island, then the French for the sun.

You'll want to know: l'étoile

l'étoile — "a star".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étoile ← Old French estoile ← Latin stella, "star" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The é- stands where an s once was.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'étoile
- Say it: l'étoile, once more
- Say it: say l'étoile
- Recall: say the French for an island, then the French for the sun, then say l'étoile again

Before you move on

What does l'étoile mean? ("A star".) Say it once more.

83.3 le nuage — a cloud

Before the new one: say the French for the sun, then the French for a star.

You'll want to know: le nuage

le nuage — "a cloud".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nuage — built from Old French nue, "a cloud", with -age; nue ← Vulgar Latin nuba* ← Latin nubes, "cloud". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le nuage
- Say it: le nuage, once more
- Say it: say le nuage
- Recall: say the French for the sun, then the French for a star, then say le nuage again

Before you move on

What does le nuage mean? ("A cloud".) Say it once more.

83.4 la pluie — rain

Before the new one: say the French for a star, then the French for a cloud.

You'll want to know: la pluie

la pluie — "rain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pluie ← Vulgar Latin ploia* ← Latin pluvia, "rain" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the same root as il pleut.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pluie
- Say it: la pluie, once more
- Say it: say la pluie
- Recall: say the French for a star, then the French for a cloud, then say la pluie again

Before you move on

What does la pluie mean? ("Rain".) Say it once more.

83.5 la neige — snow

Before the new one: say the French for a cloud, then the French for rain.

You'll want to know: la neige

la neige — "snow".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

neige — formed from the verb for "to snow", which ← Vulgar Latin nivicare*, from Latin nix, nivis, "snow" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la neige
- Say it: la neige, once more
- Say it: say la neige
- Recall: say the French for a cloud, then the French for rain, then say la neige again

Before you move on

What does la neige mean? ("Snow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 84

Wind, Fire, Hill, Desert, Wave

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the wind, fire, a hill, a desert, a wave.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 84: I can name the wind, fire, a hill, a desert, a wave.

84.1 le vent — the wind

> Before the new one: say the French for rain, then the French for snow.

You'll want to know: le vent

le vent — "the wind".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vent ← Latin ventus, "wind" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le vent

- Say it: le vent, once more
- Say it: say le vent
- Recall: say the French for rain, then the French for snow, then say le vent again

Before you move on

What does le vent mean? (“The wind”.) Say it once more.

84.2 le feu — fire

Before the new one: say the French for snow, then the French for the wind.

You’ll want to know: le feu

le feu — “fire”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

feu ← Old French fu ← Latin focus, “a hearth” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le feu
- Say it: le feu, once more
- Say it: say le feu
- Recall: say the French for snow, then the French for the wind, then say le feu again

Before you move on

What does le feu mean? (“Fire”.) Say it once more.

84.3 la colline — a hill

Before the new one: say the French for the wind, then the French for fire.

You'll want to know: la colline

la colline — "a hill".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

colline ← Italian collina, from Latin collis, "hill" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la colline
- Say it: la colline, once more
- Say it: say la colline
- Recall: say the French for the wind, then the French for fire, then say la colline again

Before you move on

What does la colline mean? ("A hill".) Say it once more.

84.4 le désert — a desert

Before the new one: say the French for fire, then the French for a hill.

You'll want to know: le désert

le désert — "a desert".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

désert ← Latin desertum, "a wasteland", from desertus, "abandoned" — taken from Church Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le désert
- Say it: le désert, once more
- Say it: say le désert
- Recall: say the French for fire, then the French for a hill, then say le désert again

Before you move on

What does le désert mean? ("A desert".) Say it once more.

84.5 la vague — a wave

Before the new one: say the French for a hill, then the French for a desert.

You'll want to know: la vague

la vague — "a wave".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vague ← Old French wague, from Old Norse vagr, "sea, wave" (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed from the Norse settlers.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la vague
- Say it: la vague, once more
- Say it: say la vague
- Recall: say the French for a hill, then the French for a desert, then say la vague again

Before you move on

What does la vague mean? (“A wave”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 85

Cow, Pig, Bird, Mouse, Wolf

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a cow, a pig, a bird, a mouse, a wolf.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 85: I can name a cow, a pig, a bird, a mouse, a wolf.

85.1 la vache — a cow

Before the new one: say the French for a desert, then the French for a wave.

You'll want to know: la vache

la vache — "a cow". It gives le lait.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vache ← Latin vacca, "cow" — inherited: Latin ca became French che. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la vache
- Say it: la vache, once more
- Say it: say la vache
- Recall: say the French for a desert, then the French for a wave, then say la vache again

Before you move on

What does la vache mean? ("A cow".) Say it once more.

85.2 le cochon — a pig

Before the new one: say the French for a wave, then the French for a cow.

You'll want to know: le cochon

le cochon — "a pig".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cochon — its origin is uncertain; the usual account is that it grew from a call used to summon pigs.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cochon
- Say it: le cochon, once more
- Say it: say le cochon
- Recall: say the French for a wave, then the French for a cow, then say le cochon again

Before you move on

What does le cochon mean? (“A pig”.) Say it once more.

85.3 l’oiseau — a bird

Before the new one: say the French for a cow, then the French for a pig.

You’ll want to know: l’oiseau

l’oiseau — “a bird”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

oiseau ← Old French oisel ← Vulgar Latin aucellus*, “a little bird”, from Latin avis, “bird” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin words.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’oiseau
- Say it: l’oiseau, once more
- Say it: say l’oiseau
- Recall: say the French for a cow, then the French for a pig, then say l’oiseau again

Before you move on

What does l’oiseau mean? (“A bird”.) Say it once more.

85.4 la souris — a mouse

Before the new one: say the French for a pig, then the French for a bird.

You'll want to know: la souris

la souris — "a mouse".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

souris ← Latin sorex, soricis, "a shrew", through Vulgar Latin soricem — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la souris
- Say it: la souris, once more
- Say it: say la souris
- Recall: say the French for a pig, then the French for a bird, then say la souris again

Before you move on

What does la souris mean? ("A mouse".) Say it once more.

85.5 le loup — a wolf

Before the new one: say the French for a bird, then the French for a mouse.

You'll want to know: le loup

le loup — "a wolf".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

loup ← Latin lupus, "wolf" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le loup
- Say it: le loup, once more
- Say it: say le loup
- Recall: say the French for a bird, then the French for a mouse, then say le loup again

Before you move on

What does le loup mean? (“A wolf”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 86

Bear, Fox, Snake, Hen, Duck

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a bear, a fox, a snake, a hen, a duck.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 86: I can name a bear, a fox, a snake, a hen, a duck.

86.1 l'ours — a bear

> Before the new one: say the French for a mouse, then the French for a wolf.

You'll want to know: l'ours

l'ours — "a bear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ours ← Old French urs ← Latin ursus, "bear" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ours
- Say it: l'ours, once more
- Say it: say l'ours
- Recall: say the French for a mouse, then the French for a wolf, then say l'ours again

Before you move on

What does l'ours mean? ("A bear".) Say it once more.

86.2 le renard — a fox

Before the new one: say the French for a wolf, then the French for a bear.

You'll want to know: le renard

le renard — "a fox".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

renard — named after Renart, the cunning fox of the medieval Roman de Renart; his name is the Germanic personal name Reginhard. It replaced the Old French word goupil, from Latin vulpecula, "little fox".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le renard
- Say it: le renard, once more
- Say it: say le renard
- Recall: say the French for a wolf, then the French for a bear, then say le renard again

Before you move on

What does le renard mean? ("A fox".) Say it once more.

86.3 le serpent — a snake

Before the new one: say the French for a bear, then the French for a fox.

You'll want to know: le serpent

le serpent — "a snake".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

serpent ← Latin serpens, serpentis, "snake", from serpere, "to creep" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le serpent
- Say it: le serpent, once more
- Say it: say le serpent
- Recall: say the French for a bear, then the French for a fox, then say le serpent again

Before you move on

What does le serpent mean? ("A snake".) Say it once more.

86.4 la poule — a hen

Before the new one: say the French for a fox, then the French for a snake.

You'll want to know: la poule

la poule — "a hen".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poule ← Latin pulla, the feminine of pullus, "a young animal" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poule
- Say it: la poule, once more
- Say it: say la poule
- Recall: say the French for a fox, then the French for a snake, then say la poule again

Before you move on

What does la poule mean? ("A hen".) Say it once more.

86.5 le canard — a duck

Before the new one: say the French for a snake, then the French for a hen.

You'll want to know: le canard

le canard — "a duck".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

canard — built from Old French cane, "a duck", with -ard (EtymDB 2.1). Where cane itself came from is uncertain; it is usually taken to imitate the bird's cackle.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le canard
- Say it: le canard, once more
- Say it: say le canard
- Recall: say the French for a snake, then the French for a hen, then say le canard again

Before you move on

What does le canard mean? ("A duck".) Say it once more.

Chapter 87

Sheep, Goat, Lion, Monkey, Bee

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a sheep, a goat, a lion, a monkey, a bee.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 87: I can name a sheep, a goat, a lion, a monkey, a bee.

87.1 le mouton — a sheep

> Before the new one: say the French for a hen, then the French for a duck.

You'll want to know: le mouton

le mouton — "a sheep".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mouton ← Old French mouton ← Medieval Latin multo*, from Gaulish multon-*, "sheep" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited, a Celtic word that came into French through Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le mouton
- Say it: le mouton, once more
- Say it: say le mouton
- Recall: say the French for a hen, then the French for a duck, then say le mouton again

Before you move on

What does le mouton mean? (“A sheep”.) Say it once more.

87.2 la chèvre — a goat

Before the new one: say the French for a duck, then the French for a sheep.

You’ll want to know: la chèvre

la chèvre — “a goat”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chèvre ← Old French chievre ← Latin capra, “she-goat” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: ca- became che-, and p became v.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la chèvre
- Say it: la chèvre, once more
- Say it: say la chèvre
- Recall: say the French for a duck, then the French for a sheep, then say la chèvre again

Before you move on

What does la chèvre mean? (“A goat”.) Say it once more.

87.3 le lion — a lion

Before the new one: say the French for a sheep, then the French for a goat.

You’ll want to know: le lion

le lion — “a lion”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lion ← Latin leo, leonis, from Greek leon — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le lion
- Say it: le lion, once more
- Say it: say le lion
- Recall: say the French for a sheep, then the French for a goat, then say le lion again

Before you move on

What does le lion mean? (“A lion”.) Say it once more.

87.4 le singe — a monkey

Before the new one: say the French for a goat, then the French for a lion.

You'll want to know: le singe

le singe — "a monkey".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

singe ← Latin simius, "an ape", a form of simia, built on simus, "snub-nosed" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le singe
- Say it: le singe, once more
- Say it: say le singe
- Recall: say the French for a goat, then the French for a lion, then say le singe again

Before you move on

What does le singe mean? ("A monkey".) Say it once more.

87.5 l'abeille — a bee

Before the new one: say the French for a lion, then the French for a monkey.

You'll want to know: l'abeille

l'abeille — "a bee". It makes le miel.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

abeille ← Old Provençal abelha ← Latin apicula, "a little bee", from apis, "bee" — borrowed from the south. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'abeille
- Say it: l'abeille, once more
- Say it: say l'abeille
- Recall: say the French for a lion, then the French for a monkey, then say l'abeille again

Before you move on

What does l'abeille mean? ("A bee".) Say it once more.

Chapter 88

Ant, Elephant, Rabbit, Frog, Tiger

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name an ant, an elephant, a rabbit, a frog, a tiger.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 88: I can name an ant, an elephant, a rabbit, a frog, a tiger.

88.1 la fourmi — an ant

Before the new one: say the French for a monkey, then the French for a bee.

You'll want to know: la fourmi

la fourmi — "an ant".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fourmi ← Old French furmi ← Vulgar Latin formicus* ← Latin formica, "ant" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fourmi
- Say it: la fourmi, once more
- Say it: say la fourmi
- Recall: say the French for a monkey, then the French for a bee, then say la fourmi again

Before you move on

What does la fourmi mean? ("An ant".) Say it once more.

88.2 l'éléphant — an elephant

Before the new one: say the French for a bee, then the French for an ant.

You'll want to know: l'éléphant

l'éléphant — "an elephant".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

éléphant ← Latin elephantus, from Greek elephas, "elephant, ivory" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'éléphant
- Say it: l'éléphant, once more
- Say it: say l'éléphant
- Recall: say the French for a bee, then the French for an ant, then say l'éléphant again

Before you move on

What does l'éléphant mean? ("An elephant".) Say it once more.

88.3 le lapin — a rabbit

Before the new one: say the French for an ant, then the French for an elephant.

You'll want to know: le lapin

le lapin — "a rabbit".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lapin — its origin is uncertain. The usual account ties it to Middle French laperiau, "a young rabbit" (EtymDB 2.1), from a pre-Latin root of Spain and southern France.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le lapin
- Say it: le lapin, once more
- Say it: say le lapin
- Recall: say the French for an ant, then the French for an elephant, then say le lapin again

Before you move on

What does le lapin mean? ("A rabbit".) Say it once more.

88.4 la grenouille — a frog

Before the new one: say the French for an elephant, then the French for a rabbit.

You'll want to know: la grenouille

la grenouille — "a frog".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

grenouille ← Old French grenoille (EtymDB 2.1), from Vulgar Latin ranucula*, "a little frog", from Latin rana, "frog" (Lewis & Short) — inherited; the g- in front is usually put down to imitation of the croak.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la grenouille
- Say it: la grenouille, once more
- Say it: say la grenouille
- Recall: say the French for an elephant, then the French for a rabbit, then say la grenouille again

Before you move on

What does la grenouille mean? ("A frog".) Say it once more.

88.5 le tigre — a tiger

Before the new one: say the French for a rabbit, then the French for a frog.

You'll want to know: le tigre

le tigre — "a tiger".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tigre ← Latin tigris, from Greek tigris (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tigre
- Say it: le tigre, once more
- Say it: say le tigre
- Recall: say the French for a rabbit, then the French for a frog, then say le tigre again

Before you move on

What does le tigre mean? ("A tiger".) Say it once more.

Chapter 89

Tortoise, New, Old, Fast, Easy

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a tortoise, new, old, fast, easy.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 89: I can name a tortoise, new, old, fast, easy.

89.1 la tortue — a tortoise

Before the new one: say the French for a frog, then the French for a tiger.

You'll want to know: la tortue

la tortue — "a tortoise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tortue ← Old Provençal tortuga — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1) The usual account takes it to Late Latin tartaruchus, "of the underworld", a name for a creature thought demonic.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la tortue
- Say it: la tortue, once more
- Say it: say la tortue
- Recall: say the French for a frog, then the French for a tiger, then say la tortue again

Before you move on

What does la tortue mean? (“A tortoise”.) Say it once more.

89.2 nouveau — new

Before the new one: say the French for a tiger, then the French for a tortoise.

You’ll want to know: nouveau

nouveau — “new”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nouveau ← Old French novel ← Latin novellus, “new, young”, from novus, “new” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nouveau
- Say it: nouveau, once more
- Say it: say nouveau
- Recall: say the French for a tiger, then the French for a tortoise, then say nouveau again

Before you move on

What does nouveau mean? (“New”.) Say it once more.

89.3 vieux — old

Before the new one: say the French for a tortoise, then the French for new.

You’ll want to know: vieux

vieux — “old”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vieux ← Old French viel ← Vulgar Latin veclus* ← Latin vetulus, “oldish”, from vetus, “old” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vieux
- Say it: vieux, once more
- Say it: say vieux
- Recall: say the French for a tortoise, then the French for new, then say vieux again

Before you move on

What does vieux mean? (“Old”.) Say it once more.

89.4 rapide — fast

Before the new one: say the French for new, then the French for old.

You'll want to know: rapide

rapide — "fast".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rapide ← Latin rapidus, "swift, snatching", from rapere, "to seize" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rapide
- Say it: rapide, once more
- Say it: say rapide
- Recall: say the French for new, then the French for old, then say rapide again

Before you move on

What does rapide mean? ("Fast".) Say it once more.

89.5 facile — easy

Before the new one: say the French for old, then the French for fast.

You'll want to know: facile

facile — "easy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

facile ← Latin facilis, "easy to do", from facere, "to do, to make" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: facile
- Say it: facile, once more
- Say it: say facile
- Recall: say the French for old, then the French for fast, then say facile again

Before you move on

What does facile mean? ("Easy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 90

Difficult, Dear, High, Full, Empty

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name difficult, dear, high, full, empty.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 90: I can name difficult, dear, high, full, empty.

90.1 difficile — difficult

Before the new one: say the French for fast, then the French for easy.

You'll want to know: difficile

difficile — "difficult".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

difficile ← Latin difficilis, "hard to do": facile with dis-, "not", in front — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: difficile
- Say it: difficile, once more
- Say it: say difficile
- Recall: say the French for fast, then the French for easy, then say difficile again

Before you move on

What does difficile mean? ("Difficult".) Say it once more.

90.2 cher — dear; expensive

Before the new one: say the French for easy, then the French for difficult.

You'll want to know: cher

cher — "dear; expensive".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cher ← Latin carus, "dear, beloved, costly" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: Latin ca- became che-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cher
- Say it: cher, once more
- Say it: say cher
- Recall: say the French for easy, then the French for difficult, then say cher again

Before you move on

What does cher mean? (“Dear; expensive”.) Say it once more.

90.3 haut — high, tall

Before the new one: say the French for difficult, then the French for dear; expensive.

You’ll want to know: haut

haut — “high, tall”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

haut ← Latin altus, “high”, blended with Frankish hauh*, “high”, which gave it its h (EtymDB 2.1 gives the Frankish side) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: haut
- Say it: haut, once more
- Say it: say haut
- Recall: say the French for difficult, then the French for dear; expensive, then say haut again

Before you move on

What does haut mean? (“High, tall”.) Say it once more.

90.4 plein — full

Before the new one: say the French for dear; expensive, then the French for high.

You'll want to know: plein

plein — "full".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plein ← Latin plenus, "full" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plein
- Say it: plein, once more
- Say it: say plein
- Recall: say the French for dear; expensive, then the French for high, then say plein again

Before you move on

What does plein mean? ("Full".) Say it once more.

90.5 vide — empty

Before the new one: say the French for high, then the French for full.

You'll want to know: vide

vide — "empty".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vide ← Old French vuit ← Vulgar Latin vocitus*, "empty" (EtymDB 2.1), related to Latin vacuus, "empty" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vide
- Say it: vide, once more
- Say it: say vide
- Recall: say the French for high, then the French for full, then say vide again

Before you move on

What does vide mean? (“Empty”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 91

Strong, Weak, Rich, Poor, Grey

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name strong, weak, rich, poor, grey.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 91: I can name strong, weak, rich, poor, grey.

91.1 fort — strong

Before the new one: say the French for full, then the French for empty.

You'll want to know: fort

fort — "strong".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fort ← Latin fortis, "strong" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fort

- Say it: fort, once more
- Say it: say fort
- Recall: say the French for full, then the French for empty, then say fort again

Before you move on

What does fort mean? (“Strong”.) Say it once more.

91.2 faible — weak

Before the new one: say the French for empty, then the French for strong.

You’ll want to know: faible

faible — “weak”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

faible ← Old French feble ← Latin flebilis, “to be wept over, pitiable” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faible
- Say it: faible, once more
- Say it: say faible
- Recall: say the French for empty, then the French for strong, then say faible again

Before you move on

What does faible mean? (“Weak”.) Say it once more.

91.3 riche — rich

Before the new one: say the French for strong, then the French for weak.

You'll want to know: riche

riche — "rich".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

riche ← Frankish riki*, "powerful" — borrowed from the Franks. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: riche
- Say it: riche, once more
- Say it: say riche
- Recall: say the French for strong, then the French for weak, then say riche again

Before you move on

What does riche mean? ("Rich".) Say it once more.

91.4 pauvre — poor

Before the new one: say the French for weak, then the French for rich.

You'll want to know: pauvre

pauvre — "poor".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pauvre ← Old French povre ← Latin pauper, "poor" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pauvre
- Say it: pauvre, once more
- Say it: say pauvre
- Recall: say the French for weak, then the French for rich, then say pauvre again

Before you move on

What does pauvre mean? ("Poor".) Say it once more.

91.5 gris — grey

Before the new one: say the French for rich, then the French for poor.

You'll want to know: gris

gris — "grey".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gris ← Old French gris, which EtymDB 2.1 traces to Vulgar Latin grisus*; behind it is Frankish gris*, "grey" — borrowed from the Franks.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gris
- Say it: gris, once more
- Say it: say gris
- Recall: say the French for rich, then the French for poor, then say gris again

Before you move on

What does gris mean? (“Grey”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 92

Soft, Dirty, Young, Kind, Narrow

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name soft, dirty, young, kind, narrow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 92: I can name soft, dirty, young, kind, narrow.

92.1 doux — soft; mild; sweet

Before the new one: say the French for poor, then the French for grey.

You'll want to know: doux

doux — "soft; mild; sweet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

doux ← Old French dous ← Latin dulcis, "sweet" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: doux
- Say it: doux, once more
- Say it: say doux
- Recall: say the French for poor, then the French for grey, then say doux again

Before you move on

What does doux mean? ("Soft; mild; sweet".) Say it once more.

92.2 sale — dirty

Before the new one: say the French for grey, then the French for soft; mild; sweet.

You'll want to know: sale

sale — "dirty".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sale ← Frankish salo*, "dull, dirty grey" — borrowed from the Franks. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sale
- Say it: sale, once more
- Say it: say sale
- Recall: say the French for grey, then the French for soft; mild; sweet, then say sale again

Before you move on

What does sale mean? ("Dirty".) Say it once more.

92.3 jeune — young

Before the new one: say the French for soft; mild; sweet, then the French for dirty.

You'll want to know: jeune

jeune — "young".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jeune ← Latin iuvenis, "young" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jeune
- Say it: jeune, once more
- Say it: say jeune
- Recall: say the French for soft; mild; sweet, then the French for dirty, then say jeune again

Before you move on

What does jeune mean? ("Young".) Say it once more.

92.4 gentil — kind, nice

Before the new one: say the French for dirty, then the French for young.

You'll want to know: gentil

gentil — "kind, nice".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gentil ← Latin gentilis, "of the same clan", from gens, "a clan" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) In Old French it meant "high-born, noble".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gentil
- Say it: gentil, once more
- Say it: say gentil
- Recall: say the French for dirty, then the French for young, then say gentil again

Before you move on

What does gentil mean? ("Kind, nice".) Say it once more.

92.5 étroit — narrow

Before the new one: say the French for young, then the French for kind.

You'll want to know: étroit

étroit — "narrow".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étroit ← Old French estroit ← Latin strictus, "drawn tight" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: -ct- became -it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: étroit
- Say it: étroit, once more
- Say it: say étroit
- Recall: say the French for young, then the French for kind, then say étroit again

Before you move on

What does étroit mean? ("Narrow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 93

Thin, Big, Heavy, Light, Sweet

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name thin, big, heavy, light (not heavy), sweet (with sugar).
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 93: I can name thin, big, heavy, light (not heavy), sweet (with sugar).

93.1 mince — thin, slim

Before the new one: say the French for kind, then the French for narrow.

You'll want to know: mince

mince — "thin, slim".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mince — formed from the Old French verb mincier, "to cut fine", from Vulgar Latin minutiare*, built on Latin minutus, "small" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mince
- Say it: mince, once more
- Say it: say mince
- Recall: say the French for kind, then the French for narrow, then say mince again

Before you move on

What does mince mean? ("Thin, slim".) Say it once more.

93.2 gros — big, fat

Before the new one: say the French for narrow, then the French for thin.

You'll want to know: gros

gros — "big, fat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gros ← Late Latin grossus, "thick, coarse" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gros
- Say it: gros, once more
- Say it: say gros
- Recall: say the French for narrow, then the French for thin, then say gros again

Before you move on

What does gros mean? (“Big, fat”.) Say it once more.

93.3 lourd — heavy

Before the new one: say the French for thin, then the French for big.

You’ll want to know: lourd

lourd — “heavy”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lourd ← Old French lourt, “dull, stupid”, usually traced to Latin luridus, “sallow, ghastly” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The sense moved from dull to heavy.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lourd
- Say it: lourd, once more
- Say it: say lourd
- Recall: say the French for thin, then the French for big, then say lourd again

Before you move on

What does lourd mean? (“Heavy”.) Say it once more.

93.4 léger — light (not heavy)

Before the new one: say the French for big, then the French for heavy.

You'll want to know: léger

léger — "light (not heavy)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

léger ← Vulgar Latin leviarius*, from Latin levis, "light" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: léger
- Say it: léger, once more
- Say it: say léger
- Recall: say the French for big, then the French for heavy, then say léger again

Before you move on

What does léger mean? ("Light (not heavy)".) Say it once more.

93.5 sucré — sweet (with sugar)

Before the new one: say the French for heavy, then the French for light.

You'll want to know: sucré

sucré — "sweet (with sugar)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sucré is the past participle of the verb for "to sugar", made from sucre, "sugar": sugared.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sucré
- Say it: sucré, once more
- Say it: say sucré
- Recall: say the French for heavy, then the French for light, then say sucré again

Before you move on

What does sucré mean? ("Sweet (with sugar)".) Say it once more.

Chapter 94

Salty, Bitter, Round, Square, Dry

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name salty, bitter, round, square, dry.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 94: I can name salty, bitter, round, square, dry.

94.1 salé — salty

Before the new one: say the French for light, then the French for sweet.

You'll want to know: salé

salé — "salty".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salé is the past participle of the verb for "to salt", made from sel, "salt", ← Latin sal: salted.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: salé
- Say it: salé, once more
- Say it: say salé
- Recall: say the French for light, then the French for sweet, then say salé again

Before you move on

What does salé mean? ("Salty".) Say it once more.

94.2 amer — bitter

Before the new one: say the French for sweet, then the French for salty.

You'll want to know: amer

amer — "bitter".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

amer ← Latin amarus, "bitter" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amer
- Say it: amer, once more
- Say it: say amer
- Recall: say the French for sweet, then the French for salty, then say amer again

Before you move on

What does amer mean? (“Bitter”.) Say it once more.

94.3 rond — round

Before the new one: say the French for salty, then the French for bitter.

You’ll want to know: rond

rond — “round”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rond ← Old French reont ← Vulgar Latin retundus* ← Latin rotundus, “round”, from rota, “a wheel” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rond
- Say it: rond, once more
- Say it: say rond
- Recall: say the French for salty, then the French for bitter, then say rond again

Before you move on

What does rond mean? (“Round”.) Say it once more.

94.4 carré — square

Before the new one: say the French for bitter, then the French for round.

You'll want to know: carré

carré — "square".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

carré ← Old French quarré ← Latin quadratus, "squared" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: carré
- Say it: carré, once more
- Say it: say carré
- Recall: say the French for bitter, then the French for round, then say carré again

Before you move on

What does carré mean? ("Square".) Say it once more.

94.5 sec — dry

Before the new one: say the French for round, then the French for square.

You'll want to know: sec

sec — "dry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sec ← Latin siccus, "dry" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sec
- Say it: sec, once more
- Say it: say sec
- Recall: say the French for round, then the French for square, then say sec again

Before you move on

What does sec mean? (“Dry”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 95

Wet, Week, Month, Morning, Always

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name wet, a week, a month, the morning, always.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 95: I can name wet, a week, a month, the morning, always.

95.1 mouillé — wet

Before the new one: say the French for square, then the French for dry.

You'll want to know: mouillé

mouillé — "wet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mouillé is the past participle of the verb for "to wet", from Vulgar Latin molliare*, "to soften", built on Latin mollis, "soft" (Lewis & Short): bread was softened by soaking.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mouillé
- Say it: mouillé, once more
- Say it: say mouillé
- Recall: say the French for square, then the French for dry, then say mouillé again

Before you move on

What does mouillé mean? ("Wet".) Say it once more.

95.2 la semaine — a week

Before the new one: say the French for dry, then the French for wet.

You'll want to know: la semaine

la semaine — "a week".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

semaine ← Latin septimana, "a set of seven", from septimus, "seventh", and septem, "seven" — inherited. sept is the same Latin number. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la semaine
- Say it: la semaine, once more
- Say it: say la semaine
- Recall: say the French for dry, then the French for wet, then say la semaine again

Before you move on

What does la semaine mean? (“A week”.) Say it once more.

95.3 le mois — a month

Before the new one: say the French for wet, then the French for a week.

You’ll want to know: le mois

le mois — “a month”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mois ← Old French mois (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin mensis, “month” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le mois
- Say it: le mois, once more
- Say it: say le mois
- Recall: say the French for wet, then the French for a week, then say le mois again

Before you move on

What does le mois mean? (“A month”.) Say it once more.

95.4 le matin — the morning

Before the new one: say the French for a week, then the French for a month.

You'll want to know: le matin

le matin — "the morning".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

matin ← Latin matutinum, "the early part of the day", from matutinus, "of the morning" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le matin
- Say it: le matin, once more
- Say it: say le matin
- Recall: say the French for a week, then the French for a month, then say le matin again

Before you move on

What does le matin mean? ("The morning".) Say it once more.

95.5 toujours — always; still

Before the new one: say the French for a month, then the French for the morning.

You'll want to know: toujours

toujours — "always; still".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

toujours ← Old French toz jorz, "all days": the word for "all" with jours, "days". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: toujours
- Say it: toujours, once more
- Say it: say toujours
- Recall: say the French for a month, then the French for the morning, then say toujours again

Before you move on

What does toujours mean? ("Always; still".) Say it once more.

Chapter 96

Never, Now, Then, Far, Near

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name never, now, then, far, near.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 96: I can name never, now, then, far, near.

96.1 jamais — never; ever

> Before the new one: say the French for the morning, then the French for always; still.

You'll want to know: jamais

jamais — "never; ever".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jamais ← Old French ja mais, "ever more" (EtymDB 2.1), from Latin iam, "already", and magis, "more" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jamais
- Say it: jamais, once more
- Say it: say jamais
- Recall: say the French for the morning, then the French for always; still, then say jamais again

Before you move on

What does jamais mean? (“Never; ever”.) Say it once more.

96.2 maintenant — now

Before the new one: say the French for always; still, then the French for never; ever.

You’ll want to know: maintenant

maintenant — “now”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

maintenant is the present participle of the verb “to maintain”, from Latin manu tenere, “to hold in the hand”: the moment at hand. The main- is main, “hand”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maintenant
- Say it: maintenant, once more
- Say it: say maintenant
- Recall: say the French for always; still, then the French for never; ever, then say maintenant again

Before you move on

What does maintenant mean? (“Now”.) Say it once more.

96.3 puis — then

Before the new one: say the French for never; ever, then the French for now.

You’ll want to know: puis

puis — “then”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

puis ← Vulgar Latin postius*, from Latin post, “after” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: puis
- Say it: puis, once more
- Say it: say puis
- Recall: say the French for never; ever, then the French for now, then say puis again

Before you move on

What does puis mean? (“Then”.) Say it once more.

96.4 loin — far

Before the new one: say the French for now, then the French for then.

You'll want to know: loin

loin — "far".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

loin ← Latin longe, "far off", from longus, "long" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: loin
- Say it: loin, once more
- Say it: say loin
- Recall: say the French for now, then the French for then, then say loin again

Before you move on

What does loin mean? ("Far".) Say it once more.

96.5 près — near

Before the new one: say the French for then, then the French for far.

You'll want to know: près

près — "near".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

près ← Old French pres ← Latin presse, "closely", from pressus, "pressed" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: près
- Say it: près, once more
- Say it: say près
- Recall: say the French for then, then the French for far, then say près again

Before you move on

What does près mean? ("Near".) Say it once more.

Chapter 97

On top, Underneath, Inside, Outside, Today

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name on top, underneath, inside, outside, today.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 97: I can name on top, underneath, inside, outside, today.

97.1 dessus — on top

> Before the new one: say the French for far, then the French for near.

You'll want to know: dessus

dessus — "on top".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dessus — built from de, "of, from", and Old French sus, "up, above", ← Latin sursum, "upward". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dessus
- Say it: dessus, once more
- Say it: say dessus
- Recall: say the French for far, then the French for near, then say dessus again

Before you move on

What does dessus mean? (“On top”.) Say it once more.

97.2 dessous — underneath

Before the new one: say the French for near, then the French for on top.

You’ll want to know: dessous

dessous — “underneath”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dessous — built from de, “of, from”, and the word for “under”, from Latin de and subtus, “below”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dessous
- Say it: dessous, once more
- Say it: say dessous
- Recall: say the French for near, then the French for on top, then say dessous again

Before you move on

What does dessous mean? (“Underneath”.) Say it once more.

97.3 dedans — inside

Before the new one: say the French for on top, then the French for underneath.

You’ll want to know: dedans

dedans — “inside”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dedans — built from de, “of, from”, and Old French denz, “within”, ← Latin de intus, “from inside” (Lewis & Short for intus).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dedans
- Say it: dedans, once more
- Say it: say dedans
- Recall: say the French for on top, then the French for underneath, then say dedans again

Before you move on

What does dedans mean? (“Inside”.) Say it once more.

97.4 dehors — outside

Before the new one: say the French for underneath, then the French for inside.

You'll want to know: dehors

dehors — "outside".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dehors ← Old French defors ← Late Latin deforis, "from outside", from foris, "outside" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dehors
- Say it: dehors, once more
- Say it: say dehors
- Recall: say the French for underneath, then the French for inside, then say dehors again

Before you move on

What does dehors mean? ("Outside".) Say it once more.

97.5 aujourd'hui — today

Before the new one: say the French for inside, then the French for outside.

You'll want to know: aujourd'hui

aujourd'hui — "today".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins aujourd'hui — "on the day of today": au, jour, and Old French hui, "today", ← Latin hodie, "today" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word). The word holds "today" two times over.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aujourd'hui
- Say it: aujourd'hui, once more
- Say it: say aujourd'hui
- Recall: say the French for inside, then the French for outside, then say aujourd'hui again

Before you move on

What does aujourd'hui mean? ("Today".) Say it once more.

Chapter 98

Yesterday, Often, Sometimes, Town, Street

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name yesterday, often, sometimes, a town, a street.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 98: I can name yesterday, often, sometimes, a town, a street.

98.1 hier — yesterday

Before the new one: say the French for outside, then the French for today.

You'll want to know: hier

hier — "yesterday".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hier ← Old French ier ← Latin heri, "yesterday" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hier
- Say it: hier, once more
- Say it: say hier
- Recall: say the French for outside, then the French for today, then say hier again

Before you move on

What does hier mean? ("Yesterday".) Say it once more.

98.2 souvent — often

Before the new one: say the French for today, then the French for yesterday.

You'll want to know: souvent

souvent — "often".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

souvent ← Old French suvent (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin subinde, "soon after, time after time" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: souvent
- Say it: souvent, once more
- Say it: say souvent
- Recall: say the French for today, then the French for yesterday, then say souvent again

Before you move on

What does souvent mean? (“Often”.) Say it once more.

98.3 parfois — sometimes

Before the new one: say the French for yesterday, then the French for often.

You’ll want to know: parfois

parfois — “sometimes”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

parfois — built from the word for “by” and the word for “a time, an occasion”, ← Latin vices, “turns” (Lewis & Short): by times.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: parfois
- Say it: parfois, once more
- Say it: say parfois
- Recall: say the French for yesterday, then the French for often, then say parfois again

Before you move on

What does parfois mean? (“Sometimes”.) Say it once more.

98.4 la ville — a town, a city

Before the new one: say the French for often, then the French for sometimes.

You'll want to know: la ville

la ville — "a town, a city".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ville ← Latin villa, "a country house, a farm" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la ville
- Say it: la ville, once more
- Say it: say la ville
- Recall: say the French for often, then the French for sometimes, then say la ville again

Before you move on

What does la ville mean? ("A town, a city".) Say it once more.

98.5 la rue — a street

Before the new one: say the French for sometimes, then the French for a town.

You'll want to know: la rue

la rue — "a street".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rue ← Latin ruga, "a wrinkle, a furrow" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: a street was a furrow between houses.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la rue
- Say it: la rue, once more
- Say it: say la rue
- Recall: say the French for sometimes, then the French for a town, then say la rue again

Before you move on

What does la rue mean? ("A street".) Say it once more.

Chapter 99

Shop, School, Bank, Train, Aeroplane

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a shop, a school, a bank, a train, an aeroplane.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 99: I can name a shop, a school, a bank, a train, an aeroplane.

99.1 le magasin — a shop

Before the new one: say the French for a town, then the French for a street.

You'll want to know: le magasin

le magasin — "a shop".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

magasin ← Italian magazzino, "a storehouse", from Arabic makhazin, "storehouses" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le magasin
- Say it: le magasin, once more
- Say it: say le magasin
- Recall: say the French for a town, then the French for a street, then say le magasin again

Before you move on

What does le magasin mean? ("A shop".) Say it once more.

99.2 l'école — a school

Before the new one: say the French for a street, then the French for a shop.

You'll want to know: l'école

l'école — "a school".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

école ← Old French escole ← Latin schola, from Greek schole, "leisure, a place for talk" (EtymDB 2.1) — semi-learned: a fully inherited form would have broken the o into ue. The é- stands where an s once was.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'école
- Say it: l'école, once more
- Say it: say l'école
- Recall: say the French for a street, then the French for a shop, then say l'école again

Before you move on

What does l'école mean? ("A school".) Say it once more.

99.3 la banque — a bank

Before the new one: say the French for a shop, then the French for a school.

You'll want to know: la banque

la banque — "a bank".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

banque ← Italian banca, "a bench", the money-changer's table — borrowed. The Italian word is Germanic, from Lombardic bank*, "bench". (EtymDB 2.1 records the Lombardic step, through Italian banco.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la banque
- Say it: la banque, once more
- Say it: say la banque
- Recall: say the French for a shop, then the French for a school, then say la banque again

Before you move on

What does la banque mean? ("A bank".) Say it once more.

99.4 le train — a train

Before the new one: say the French for a school, then the French for a bank.

You'll want to know: le train

le train — "a train".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

train — formed from the verb for "to drag, to pull along", which ← Vulgar Latin traginare*, from Latin trahere, "to draw" (Lewis & Short): a train is a line of things pulled along.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le train
- Say it: le train, once more
- Say it: say le train
- Recall: say the French for a school, then the French for a bank, then say le train again

Before you move on

What does le train mean? ("A train".) Say it once more.

99.5 l'avion — an aeroplane

Before the new one: say the French for a bank, then the French for a train.

You'll want to know: l'avion

l'avion — "an aeroplane".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avion — coined in the 1890s by the engineer Clément Ader from Latin avis, "bird" (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'avion
- Say it: l'avion, once more
- Say it: say l'avion
- Recall: say the French for a bank, then the French for a train, then say l'avion again

Before you move on

What does l'avion mean? ("An aeroplane".) Say it once more.

Chapter 100

Car, Bridge, Park, Church, Museum

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a car, a bridge, a park, a church, a museum.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 100: I can name a car, a bridge, a park, a church, a museum.

100.1 la voiture — a car

> Before the new one: say the French for a train, then the French for an aeroplane.

You'll want to know: la voiture

la voiture — "a car".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

voiture ← Old French veiture ← Latin vectura, "a carrying, transport", from vehere, "to carry" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: -ct- became -it-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la voiture
- Say it: la voiture, once more
- Say it: say la voiture
- Recall: say the French for a train, then the French for an aeroplane, then say la voiture again

Before you move on

What does la voiture mean? ("A car".) Say it once more.

100.2 le pont — a bridge

Before the new one: say the French for an aeroplane, then the French for a car.

You'll want to know: le pont

le pont — "a bridge".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pont ← Latin pons, pontis, "bridge" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pont
- Say it: le pont, once more
- Say it: say le pont
- Recall: say the French for an aeroplane, then the French for a car, then say le pont again

Before you move on

What does le pont mean? (“A bridge”.) Say it once more.

100.3 le parc — a park

Before the new one: say the French for a car, then the French for a bridge.

You’ll want to know: le parc

le parc — “a park”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

parc ← Old French parc, “a pen for animals” ← Medieval Latin parricus, “an enclosure”, probably from Frankish parrik* — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le parc
- Say it: le parc, once more
- Say it: say le parc
- Recall: say the French for a car, then the French for a bridge, then say le parc again

Before you move on

What does le parc mean? (“A park”.) Say it once more.

100.4 l’église — a church

Before the new one: say the French for a bridge, then the French for a park.

You'll want to know: l'église

l'église — "a church".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

église ← Latin ecclesia, from Greek ekklesia, "an assembly" (EtymDB 2.1) — semi-learned, a Church word: a fully inherited form would show -oi-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'église
- Say it: l'église, once more
- Say it: say l'église
- Recall: say the French for a bridge, then the French for a park, then say l'église again

Before you move on

What does l'église mean? ("A church".) Say it once more.

100.5 le musée — a museum

Before the new one: say the French for a park, then the French for a church.

You'll want to know: le musée

le musée — "a museum".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

musée ← Latin museum, from Greek mouseion, "a shrine of the Muses" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le musée
- Say it: le musée, once more
- Say it: say le musée
- Recall: say the French for a park, then the French for a church, then say le musée again

Before you move on

What does le musée mean? ("A museum".) Say it once more.

Chapter 101

Restaurant, Hotel, Pharmacy, Village, Post office

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a restaurant, a hotel, a pharmacy, a village, the post office.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 101: I can name a restaurant, a hotel, a pharmacy, a village, the post office.

101.1 le restaurant — a restaurant

Before the new one: say the French for a church, then the French for a museum.

You'll want to know: le restaurant

le restaurant — "a restaurant".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

restaurant is the present participle of the verb for "to restore", a learned borrowing of Latin restaurare (EtymDB 2.1): first a restoring broth, then the place that served it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le restaurant
- Say it: le restaurant, once more
- Say it: say le restaurant
- Recall: say the French for a church, then the French for a museum, then say le restaurant again

Before you move on

What does le restaurant mean? ("A restaurant".) Say it once more.

101.2 l'hôtel — a hotel

Before the new one: say the French for a museum, then the French for a restaurant.

You'll want to know: l'hôtel

l'hôtel — "a hotel".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hôtel ← Old French hostel ← Late Latin hospitale, "a guest house", from hospes, "guest" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) hôpital is the same Latin word taken in by scholars; hôtel is the one worn down in speech.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'hôtel
- Say it: l'hôtel, once more
- Say it: say l'hôtel
- Recall: say the French for a museum, then the French for a restaurant, then say l'hôtel again

Before you move on

What does l'hôtel mean? ("A hotel".) Say it once more.

101.3 la pharmacie — a pharmacy

Before the new one: say the French for a restaurant, then the French for a hotel.

You'll want to know: la pharmacie

la pharmacie — "a pharmacy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pharmacie ← Medieval Latin pharmacia, from Greek pharmakeia, "the use of drugs", built on pharmakon, "a drug" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pharmacie
- Say it: la pharmacie, once more
- Say it: say la pharmacie
- Recall: say the French for a restaurant, then the French for a hotel, then say la pharmacie again

Before you move on

What does la pharmacie mean? ("A pharmacy".) Say it once more.

101.4 le village — a village

Before the new one: say the French for a hotel, then the French for a pharmacy.

You'll want to know: le village

le village — "a village".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins village — built from ville, which then meant "a farm, an estate", with -age: the cluster of houses around it. (EtymDB 2.1 traces it to Latin villa.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le village
- Say it: le village, once more
- Say it: say le village
- Recall: say the French for a hotel, then the French for a pharmacy, then say le village again

Before you move on

What does le village mean? ("A village".) Say it once more.

101.5 la poste — the post office

Before the new one: say the French for a pharmacy, then the French for a village.

You'll want to know: la poste

la poste — "the post office".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poste ← Italian posta, "a relay station", from Latin posita, "placed", the past participle of ponere, "to put" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poste
- Say it: la poste, once more
- Say it: say la poste
- Recall: say the French for a pharmacy, then the French for a village, then say la poste again

Before you move on

What does la poste mean? ("The post office".) Say it once more.

Chapter 102

Police, Theatre, Library, Bakery, Town hall

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name the police, a theatre, a library, a bakery, the town hall.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 102: I can name the police, a theatre, a library, a bakery, the town hall.

102.1 la police — the police

> Before the new one: say the French for a village, then the French for the post office.

You'll want to know: la police

la police — "the police".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

police ← Latin politia, "government, citizenship", from Greek politeia, built on polis, "a city" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la police
- Say it: la police, once more
- Say it: say la police
- Recall: say the French for a village, then the French for the post office, then say la police again

Before you move on

What does la police mean? ("The police".) Say it once more.

102.2 le théâtre — a theatre

Before the new one: say the French for the post office, then the French for the police.

You'll want to know: le théâtre

le théâtre — "a theatre".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

théâtre ← Latin theatrum, from Greek theatron, "a place for viewing" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le théâtre
- Say it: le théâtre, once more
- Say it: say le théâtre
- Recall: say the French for the post office, then the French for the police, then say le théâtre again

Before you move on

What does le théâtre mean? (“A theatre”.) Say it once more.

102.3 la bibliothèque — a library

Before the new one: say the French for the police, then the French for a theatre.

You’ll want to know: la bibliothèque

la bibliothèque — “a library”. A false friend: a bookshop is la librairie.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bibliothèque ← Latin bibliotheca, from Greek bibliotheke, “a case for books”, built on biblion, “a book” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la bibliothèque
- Say it: la bibliothèque, once more
- Say it: say la bibliothèque
- Recall: say the French for the police, then the French for a theatre, then say la bibliothèque again

Before you move on

What does la bibliothèque mean? (“A library”.) Say it once more.

102.4 la boulangerie — a bakery

Before the new one: say the French for a theatre, then the French for a library.

You'll want to know: la boulangerie

la boulangerie — "a bakery".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boulangerie — built from the word for "baker", with -erie, "a place for". The baker word came from Picard boulenc, probably from Middle Dutch bolle, "a round loaf".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la boulangerie
- Say it: la boulangerie, once more
- Say it: say la boulangerie
- Recall: say the French for a theatre, then the French for a library, then say la boulangerie again

Before you move on

What does la boulangerie mean? ("A bakery".) Say it once more.

102.5 la mairie — the town hall

Before the new one: say the French for a library, then the French for a bakery.

You'll want to know: la mairie

la mairie — "the town hall".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mairie — built from the word for "mayor", with -ie: the mayor's house. The mayor word ← Latin maior, "greater" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la mairie
- Say it: la mairie, once more
- Say it: say la mairie
- Recall: say the French for a library, then the French for a bakery, then say la mairie again

Before you move on

What does la mairie mean? ("The town hall".) Say it once more.

Chapter 103

District, Airport, Clothes, Shirt, Dress

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a district, an airport, clothes, a shirt, a dress.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 103: I can name a district, an airport, clothes, a shirt, a dress.

103.1 le quartier — a district, a neighbourhood

> Before the new one: say the French for a bakery, then the French for the town hall.

You'll want to know: le quartier

le quartier — "a district, a neighbourhood".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quartier ← Latin quartarius, "a fourth part", from quartus, "fourth" — first a quarter of something, then a part of a town. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le quartier
- Say it: le quartier, once more
- Say it: say le quartier
- Recall: say the French for a bakery, then the French for the town hall, then say le quartier again

Before you move on

What does le quartier mean? ("A district, a neighbourhood".) Say it once more.

103.2 l'aéroport — an airport

Before the new one: say the French for the town hall, then the French for a district.

You'll want to know: l'aéroport

l'aéroport — "an airport".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aéroport — a 20th-century coinage from aéro-, "air", from Greek aer, and Old French port, "harbour", ← Latin portus (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'aéroport
- Say it: l'aéroport, once more
- Say it: say l'aéroport
- Recall: say the French for the town hall, then the French for a district, then say l'aéroport again

Before you move on

What does l'aéroport mean? ("An airport".) Say it once more.

103.3 les vêtements — clothes

Before the new one: say the French for a district, then the French for an airport.

You'll want to know: les vêtements

les vêtements — "clothes".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vêtements is the plural of the word for "a garment" ← Old French vestement ← Latin vestimentum, "clothing", from vestire, "to clothe" (Lewis & Short) — inherited. The circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les vêtements
- Say it: les vêtements, once more
- Say it: say les vêtements
- Recall: say the French for a district, then the French for an airport, then say les vêtements again

Before you move on

What does les vêtements mean? ("Clothes".) Say it once more.

103.4 la chemise — a shirt

Before the new one: say the French for an airport, then the French for clothes.

You'll want to know: la chemise

la chemise — "a shirt".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chemise ← Late Latin camisia, "a shirt", probably a Gaulish word (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: ca- became che-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la chemise
- Say it: la chemise, once more
- Say it: say la chemise
- Recall: say the French for an airport, then the French for clothes, then say la chemise again

Before you move on

What does la chemise mean? ("A shirt".) Say it once more.

103.5 la robe — a dress

Before the new one: say the French for clothes, then the French for a shirt.

You'll want to know: la robe

la robe — "a dress".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

robe ← Old French robe, "booty, a garment", from Frankish rauba*, "plunder" (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed: clothes were the first spoils of a raid.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la robe
- Say it: la robe, once more
- Say it: say la robe
- Recall: say the French for clothes, then the French for a shirt, then say la robe again

Before you move on

What does la robe mean? ("A dress".) Say it once more.

Chapter 104

Trousers, Shoes, Hat, Coat, Skirt

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name trousers, shoes, a hat, a coat, a skirt.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 104: I can name trousers, shoes, a hat, a coat, a skirt.

104.1 le pantalon — trousers

Before the new one: say the French for a shirt, then the French for a dress.

You'll want to know: le pantalon

le pantalon — "trousers".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pantalon — named after Pantalone (EtymDB 2.1), the old Venetian of Italian comedy, who wore long trousers.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pantalon
- Say it: le pantalon, once more
- Say it: say le pantalon
- Recall: say the French for a shirt, then the French for a dress, then say le pantalon again

Before you move on

What does le pantalon mean? ("Trousers".) Say it once more.

104.2 les chaussures — shoes

Before the new one: say the French for a dress, then the French for trousers.

You'll want to know: les chaussures

les chaussures — "shoes".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chaussures is the plural of the word for "footwear", built from the verb for "to put on shoes", which ← Latin calceare, from calceus, "a shoe" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les chaussures
- Say it: les chaussures, once more
- Say it: say les chaussures
- Recall: say the French for a dress, then the French for trousers, then say les chaussures again

Before you move on

What does les chaussures mean? (“Shoes”.) Say it once more.

104.3 le chapeau — a hat

Before the new one: say the French for trousers, then the French for shoes.

You’ll want to know: le chapeau

le chapeau — “a hat”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chapeau ← Old French chapel ← Vulgar Latin cappellus*, from Late Latin cappa, “a hooded cloak” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: ca- became cha-.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le chapeau
- Say it: le chapeau, once more
- Say it: say le chapeau
- Recall: say the French for trousers, then the French for shoes, then say le chapeau again

Before you move on

What does le chapeau mean? (“A hat”.) Say it once more.

104.4 le manteau — a coat

Before the new one: say the French for shoes, then the French for a hat.

You'll want to know: le manteau

le manteau — "a coat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

manteau ← Old French mantel ← Latin mantellum, "a cloak" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le manteau
- Say it: le manteau, once more
- Say it: say le manteau
- Recall: say the French for shoes, then the French for a hat, then say le manteau again

Before you move on

What does le manteau mean? ("A coat".) Say it once more.

104.5 la jupe — a skirt

Before the new one: say the French for a hat, then the French for a coat.

You'll want to know: la jupe

la jupe — "a skirt".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jupe ← Italian giubba, from Arabic jubba, "a long garment" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la jupe
- Say it: la jupe, once more
- Say it: say la jupe
- Recall: say the French for a hat, then the French for a coat, then say la jupe again

Before you move on

What does la jupe mean? ("A skirt".) Say it once more.

Chapter 105

Socks, Thirty, Forty, Fifty, Hundred

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name socks, thirty, forty, fifty, a hundred.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 105: I can name socks, thirty, forty, fifty, a hundred.

105.1 les chaussettes — socks

Before the new one: say the French for a coat, then the French for a skirt.

You'll want to know: les chaussettes

les chaussettes — "socks".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chaussettes is the plural of a little form of Old French chauce, "hose", ← Latin calceus, "a shoe" (Lewis & Short), with -ette, "little".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les chaussettes
- Say it: les chaussettes, once more
- Say it: say les chaussettes
- Recall: say the French for a coat, then the French for a skirt, then say les chaussettes again

Before you move on

What does les chaussettes mean? (“Socks”.) Say it once more.

105.2 trente — thirty

Before the new one: say the French for a skirt, then the French for socks.

You’ll want to know: trente

trente — “thirty”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

trente ← Latin triginta, “thirty” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trente
- Say it: trente, once more
- Say it: say trente
- Recall: say the French for a skirt, then the French for socks, then say trente again

Before you move on

What does trente mean? (“Thirty”.) Say it once more.

105.3 quarante — forty

Before the new one: say the French for socks, then the French for thirty.

You’ll want to know: quarante

quarante — “forty”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quarante ← Latin quadraginta, “forty” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quarante
- Say it: quarante, once more
- Say it: say quarante
- Recall: say the French for socks, then the French for thirty, then say quarante again

Before you move on

What does quarante mean? (“Forty”.) Say it once more.

105.4 cinquante — fifty

Before the new one: say the French for thirty, then the French for forty.

You'll want to know: cinquante

cinquante — "fifty".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cinquante ← Vulgar Latin cinquaginta* ← Latin quinquaginta, "fifty" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cinquante
- Say it: cinquante, once more
- Say it: say cinquante
- Recall: say the French for thirty, then the French for forty, then say cinquante again

Before you move on

What does cinquante mean? ("Fifty".) Say it once more.

105.5 cent — a hundred

Before the new one: say the French for forty, then the French for fifty.

You'll want to know: cent

cent — "a hundred".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cent ← Latin centum, "a hundred" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cent
- Say it: cent, once more
- Say it: say cent
- Recall: say the French for forty, then the French for fifty, then say cent again

Before you move on

What does cent mean? ("A hundred".) Say it once more.

105.6 Nature, animals and describing words — a first pass

Say the words for fifty and a hundred.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a pen, paper, a notebook, a pencil, a bag
- a phone, an umbrella, money; silver, a present, glasses
- a box, a suitcase, a ticket; a banknote, a map; a card, a photo
- a tree, a flower, a leaf; a sheet of paper, a mountain, a river
- the sea, a stone, sand, a beach, an island
- the sun, a star, a cloud, rain, snow
- the wind, fire, a hill, a desert, a wave
- a cow, a pig, a bird, a mouse, a wolf
- a bear, a fox, a snake, a hen, a duck
- a sheep, a goat, a lion, a monkey, a bee
- an ant, an elephant, a rabbit, a frog, a tiger

- a tortoise, new, old, fast, easy
- difficult, dear; expensive, high, full, empty
- strong, weak, rich, poor, grey

Before you move on

A pen? (le stylo.) Paper? (le papier.) A notebook? (le cahier.) A pencil? (le crayon.) A bag? (le sac.) A phone? (le téléphone.) An umbrella? (le parapluie.) Money; silver? (l'argent.) A present? (le cadeau.) Glasses? (les lunettes.) A box? (la boîte.) A suitcase? (la valise.) A ticket; a banknote? (le billet.) A map; a card? (la carte.) A photo? (la photo.) A tree? (l'arbre.) A flower? (la fleur.) A leaf; a sheet of paper? (la feuille.) A mountain? (la montagne.) A river? (la rivière.) The sea? (la mer.) A stone? (la pierre.) Sand? (le sable.) A beach? (la plage.) An island? (l'île.) The sun? (le soleil.) A star? (l'étoile.) A cloud? (le nuage.) Rain? (la pluie.) Snow? (la neige.) The wind? (le vent.) Fire? (le feu.) A hill? (la colline.) A desert? (le désert.) A wave? (la vague.) A cow? (la vache.) A pig? (le cochon.) A bird? (l'oiseau.) A mouse? (la souris.) A wolf? (le loup.) A bear? (l'ours.) A fox? (le renard.) A snake? (le serpent.) A hen? (la poule.) A duck? (le canard.) A sheep? (le mouton.) A goat? (la chèvre.) A lion? (le lion.) A monkey? (le singe.) A bee? (l'abeille.) An ant? (la fourmi.) An elephant? (l'éléphant.) A rabbit? (le lapin.) A frog? (la grenouille.) A tiger? (le tigre.) A tortoise? (la tortue.) New? (nouveau.) Old? (vieux.) Fast? (rapide.) Easy? (facile.) Difficult? (difficile.) Dear; expensive? (cher.) High? (haut.) Full? (plein.) Empty? (vide.) Strong? (fort.) Weak? (faible.) Rich? (riche.) Poor? (pauvre.) Grey? (gris.)

105.7 Time, the town, clothes and numbers — a second pass

Say the words for soft; mild; sweet and dirty.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- soft; mild; sweet, dirty, young, kind, narrow
- thin, big, heavy, light, sweet
- salty, bitter, round, square, dry
- wet, a week, a month, the morning, always; still
- never; ever, now, then, far, near
- on top, underneath, inside, outside, today
- yesterday, often, sometimes, a town, a street
- a shop, a school, a bank, a train, an aeroplane
- a car, a bridge, a park, a church, a museum
- a restaurant, a hotel, a pharmacy, a village, the post office
- the police, a theatre, a library, a bakery, the town hall
- a district, an airport, clothes, a shirt, a dress
- trousers, shoes, a hat, a coat, a skirt
- socks, thirty, forty, fifty, a hundred

Before you move on

Soft; mild; sweet? (doux.) Dirty? (sale.) Young? (jeune.) Kind? (gentil.) Narrow? (étroit.) Thin? (mince.) Big? (gros.) Heavy? (lourd.) Light? (léger.) Sweet? (sucré.) Salty? (salé.) Bitter? (amer.) Round? (rond.) Square? (carré.) Dry? (sec.) Wet? (mouillé.) A week? (la semaine.) A month? (le mois.) The morning? (le matin.) Always; still? (toujours.) Never; ever? (jamais.) Now? (maintenant.) Then? (puis.) Far? (loin.) Near? (près.) On top? (dessus.) Underneath? (dessous.) Inside? (dedans.) Outside? (dehors.) Today? (aujourd'hui.) Yesterday? (hier.) Often? (souvent.) Sometimes? (parfois.) A town? (la ville.) A street? (la rue.) A shop? (le magasin.) A school?

(l'école.) A bank? (la banque.) A train? (le train.) An aeroplane? (l'avion.) A car? (la voiture.) A bridge? (le pont.) A park? (le parc.) A church? (l'église.) A museum? (le musée.) A restaurant? (le restaurant.) A hotel? (l'hôtel.) A pharmacy? (la pharmacie.) A village? (le village.) The post office? (la poste.) The police? (la police.) A theatre? (le théâtre.) A library? (la bibliothèque.) A bakery? (la boulangerie.) The town hall? (la mairie.) A district? (le quartier.) An airport? (l'aéroport.) Clothes? (les vêtements.) A shirt? (la chemise.) A dress? (la robe.) Trousers? (le pantalon.) Shoes? (les chaussures.) A hat? (le chapeau.) A coat? (le manteau.) A skirt? (la jupe.) Socks? (les chaussettes.) Thirty? (trente.) Forty? (quarante.) Fifty? (cinquante.) A hundred? (cent.)

Chapter 106

Bicycle, Underground, Taxi, Car park, Lift

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a bicycle, the underground, a taxi, a car park, a lift.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 106: I can name a bicycle, the underground, a taxi, a car park, a lift.

106.1 le vélo — a bicycle

Before the new one: say the French for fifty, then the French for a hundred.

You'll want to know: le vélo

le vélo — "a bicycle".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vélo — short for vélocipède, a 19th-century coinage from Latin velox, "swift", and pes, pedis, "foot" (EtymDB 2.1 gives the two Latin parts).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le vélo
- Say it: le vélo, once more
- Say it: say le vélo
- Recall: say the French for fifty, then the French for a hundred, then say le vélo again

Before you move on

What does le vélo mean? (“A bicycle”.) Say it once more.

106.2 le métro — the underground, the metro

Before the new one: say the French for a hundred, then the French for a bicycle.

You’ll want to know: le métro

le métro — “the underground, the metro”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

métro — short for métropolitain, the city railway, from Greek metropolis, “a mother city”, built from meter, “mother”, and polis, “city”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le métro
- Say it: le métro, once more
- Say it: say le métro
- Recall: say the French for a hundred, then the French for a bicycle, then say le métro again

Before you move on

What does le métro mean? (“The underground, the metro”.) Say it once more.

106.3 le taxi — a taxi

Before the new one: say the French for a bicycle, then the French for the underground.

Ask for a taxi: je demande un taxi. Demander is to ask, never to demand.

You’ll want to know: le taxi

le taxi — “a taxi”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

taxi — short for taximètre, the fare meter, built from Medieval Latin taxa, “a charge”, and Greek metron, “measure”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le taxi
- Say it: le taxi, once more
- Say it: say le taxi
- Recall: say the French for a bicycle, then the French for the underground, then say le taxi again

Before you move on

What does le taxi mean? (“A taxi”.) Say it once more.

106.4 le parking — a car park

Before the new one: say the French for the underground, then the French for a taxi.

You'll want to know: le parking

le parking — "a car park".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

parking ← English parking — borrowed in the 20th century; English itself says car park.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le parking
- Say it: le parking, once more
- Say it: say le parking
- Recall: say the French for the underground, then the French for a taxi, then say le parking again

Before you move on

What does le parking mean? ("A car park".) Say it once more.

106.5 l'ascenseur — a lift, an elevator

Before the new one: say the French for a taxi, then the French for a car park.

You'll want to know: l'ascenseur

l'ascenseur — "a lift, an elevator".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ascenseur ← Latin ascensor, "one who climbs", from ascendere, "to climb up" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ascenseur
- Say it: l'ascenseur, once more
- Say it: say l'ascenseur
- Recall: say the French for a taxi, then the French for a car park, then say l'ascenseur again

Before you move on

What does l'ascenseur mean? ("A lift, an elevator".) Say it once more.

Chapter 107

Supermarket, Cinema, Stadium, Swimming pool, Grocer's shop

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a supermarket, a cinema, a stadium, a swimming pool, a grocer's shop.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 107: I can name a supermarket, a cinema, a stadium, a swimming pool, a grocer's shop.

107.1 le supermarché — a supermarket

Before the new one: say the French for a car park, then the French for a lift.

You'll want to know: le supermarché

le supermarché — "a supermarket".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

supermarché — built from super-, Latin for "above", and the French word for "market", which ← Latin mercatus, "trade" (Lewis & Short); modelled on English supermarket.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le supermarché
- Say it: le supermarché, once more
- Say it: say le supermarché
- Recall: say the French for a car park, then the French for a lift, then say le supermarché again

Before you move on

What does le supermarché mean? ("A supermarket".) Say it once more.

107.2 le cinéma — a cinema

Before the new one: say the French for a lift, then the French for a supermarket.

You'll want to know: le cinéma

le cinéma — "a cinema".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cinéma — short for cinématographe, a coinage of the 1890s from Greek kinema, "movement" (EtymDB 2.1), and graphein, "to write".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cinéma
- Say it: le cinéma, once more
- Say it: say le cinéma
- Recall: say the French for a lift, then the French for a supermarket, then say le cinéma again

Before you move on

What does le cinéma mean? (“A cinema”.) Say it once more.

107.3 le stade — a stadium

Before the new one: say the French for a supermarket, then the French for a cinema.

You’ll want to know: le stade

le stade — “a stadium”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

stade ← Latin stadium, from Greek stadion, a measure of length and the racecourse of that length — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le stade
- Say it: le stade, once more
- Say it: say le stade
- Recall: say the French for a supermarket, then the French for a cinema, then say le stade again

Before you move on

What does le stade mean? (“A stadium”.) Say it once more.

107.4 la piscine — a swimming pool

Before the new one: say the French for a cinema, then the French for a stadium.

You'll want to know: la piscine

la piscine — "a swimming pool".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

piscine ← Latin piscina, "a fishpond", from piscis, "fish" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing: the same Latin fish as poisson.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la piscine
- Say it: la piscine, once more
- Say it: say la piscine
- Recall: say the French for a cinema, then the French for a stadium, then say la piscine again

Before you move on

What does la piscine mean? ("A swimming pool".) Say it once more.

107.5 l'épicerie — a grocer's shop

Before the new one: say the French for a stadium, then the French for a swimming pool.

You'll want to know: l'épicerie

l'épicerie — "a grocer's shop".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

épicerie — built from the French word for "spice", with -erie, "a shop for". The spice word ← Latin species, "a kind; wares" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'épicerie
- Say it: l'épicerie, once more
- Say it: say l'épicerie
- Recall: say the French for a stadium, then the French for a swimming pool, then say l'épicerie again

Before you move on

What does l'épicerie mean? ("A grocer's shop".) Say it once more.

Chapter 108

Office, Factory, Pavement, Crossroads, Red light

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name an office, a factory, a pavement, a crossroads, a red light.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 108: I can name an office, a factory, a pavement, a crossroads, a red light.

108.1 le bureau — an office; a desk

Before the new one: say the French for a swimming pool, then the French for a grocer's shop.

You'll want to know: le bureau

le bureau — "an office; a desk".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bureau ← Old French burel, "coarse woollen cloth", from Old French bure, ← Latin burra, "shaggy cloth" (EtymDB 2.1): the cloth on a desk, then the desk, then the room.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le bureau
- Say it: le bureau, once more
- Say it: say le bureau
- Recall: say the French for a swimming pool, then the French for a grocer's shop, then say le bureau again

Before you move on

What does le bureau mean? ("An office; a desk".) Say it once more.

108.2 l'usine — a factory

Before the new one: say the French for a grocer's shop, then the French for an office; a desk.

You'll want to know: l'usine

l'usine — "a factory".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

usine ← northern dialect wisine, from Latin officina, "a workshop" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'usine
- Say it: l'usine, once more
- Say it: say l'usine
- Recall: say the French for a grocer's shop, then the French for an office; a desk, then say l'usine again

Before you move on

What does l'usine mean? ("A factory".) Say it once more.

108.3 le trottoir — a pavement

Before the new one: say the French for an office; a desk, then the French for a factory.

You'll want to know: le trottoir

le trottoir — "a pavement".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

trottoir — built from the verb for "to trot", from Frankish trotton*, "to run" (EtymDB 2.1), with -oir, "a place for": a place to walk.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le trottoir
- Say it: le trottoir, once more
- Say it: say le trottoir
- Recall: say the French for an office; a desk, then the French for a factory, then say le trottoir again

Before you move on

What does le trottoir mean? ("A pavement".) Say it once more.

108.4 le carrefour — a crossroads

Before the new one: say the French for a factory, then the French for a pavement.

You'll want to know: le carrefour

le carrefour — "a crossroads".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

carrefour ← Old French quarrefourc ← Late Latin quadrifurcum, "a place with four forks", from quattuor, "four", and furca, "a fork" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le carrefour
- Say it: le carrefour, once more
- Say it: say le carrefour
- Recall: say the French for a factory, then the French for a pavement, then say le carrefour again

Before you move on

What does le carrefour mean? ("A crossroads".) Say it once more.

108.5 le feu rouge — a red light

Before the new one: say the French for a pavement, then the French for a crossroads.

You'll want to know: le feu rouge

le feu rouge — "a red light". le feu is a fire; at a crossing it is the traffic light.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

feu rouge — "red fire": feu, "fire", ← Latin focus, and rouge, "red", ← Latin rubeus. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le feu rouge
- Say it: le feu rouge, once more
- Say it: say le feu rouge
- Recall: say the French for a pavement, then the French for a crossroads, then say le feu rouge again

Before you move on

What does le feu rouge mean? ("A red light".) Say it once more.

Chapter 109

Border, North, South, West, Letterbox

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a border, the north, the south, the west, a letterbox.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 109: I can name a border, the north, the south, the west, a letterbox.

109.1 la frontière — a border

Before the new one: say the French for a crossroads, then the French for a red light.

You'll want to know: la frontière

la frontière — "a border".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

frontière — built from Old French front, "forehead, the front line", ← Latin frons, frontis (Lewis & Short), with -ière: the line an army faced.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la frontière
- Say it: la frontière, once more
- Say it: say la frontière
- Recall: say the French for a crossroads, then the French for a red light, then say la frontière again

Before you move on

What does la frontière mean? (“A border”.) Say it once more.

109.2 le nord — the north

Before the new one: say the French for a red light, then the French for a border.

You’ll want to know: le nord

le nord — “the north”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nord ← Old English north — borrowed in the Middle Ages, like the other compass points. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le nord
- Say it: le nord, once more
- Say it: say le nord
- Recall: say the French for a red light, then the French for a border, then say le nord again

Before you move on

What does le nord mean? ("The north".) Say it once more.

109.3 le sud — the south

Before the new one: say the French for a border, then the French for the north.

You'll want to know: le sud

le sud — "the south".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sud ← Old French su ← Old English suth, "south" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sud
- Say it: le sud, once more
- Say it: say le sud
- Recall: say the French for a border, then the French for the north, then say le sud again

Before you move on

What does le sud mean? ("The south".) Say it once more.

109.4 l'ouest — the west

Before the new one: say the French for the north, then the French for the south.

You'll want to know: l'ouest

l'ouest — "the west".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ouest ← Old French west ← Old English west — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ouest
- Say it: l'ouest, once more
- Say it: say l'ouest
- Recall: say the French for the north, then the French for the south, then say l'ouest again

Before you move on

What does l'ouest mean? ("The west".) Say it once more.

109.5 la boîte aux lettres — a letterbox, a postbox

Before the new one: say the French for the south, then the French for the west.

You'll want to know: la boîte aux lettres

la boîte aux lettres — "a letterbox, a postbox".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boîte aux lettres — "box for the letters": boîte, "box", with aux, "to the", and the word for "letters", ← Latin littera, "a letter of the alphabet" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la boîte aux lettres
- Say it: la boîte aux lettres, once more
- Say it: say la boîte aux lettres
- Recall: say the French for the south, then the French for the west, then say la boîte aux lettres again

Before you move on

What does la boîte aux lettres mean? ("A letterbox, a postbox".) Say it once more.

Chapter 110

Right, Left, World, Journey, Holidays

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name the right, the left, the world, a journey, holidays.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 110: I can name the right, the left, the world, a journey, holidays.

110.1 la droite — the right

Before the new one: say the French for the west, then the French for a letterbox.

You'll want to know: la droite

la droite — "the right".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

droite is the feminine of the word for "right, straight", ← Latin directus, "straight" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: -ct- became -it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la droite
- Say it: la droite, once more
- Say it: say la droite
- Recall: say the French for the west, then the French for a letterbox, then say la droite again

Before you move on

What does la droite mean? ("The right".) Say it once more.

110.2 la gauche — the left

Before the new one: say the French for a letterbox, then the French for the right.

You'll want to know: la gauche

la gauche — "the left".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gauche — formed from the Old French verb gauchir, "to veer, to warp" (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to Frankish walkan*, "to trample". The left was the clumsy hand.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la gauche
- Say it: la gauche, once more
- Say it: say la gauche
- Recall: say the French for a letterbox, then the French for the right, then say la gauche again

Before you move on

What does la gauche mean? (“The left”.) Say it once more.

110.3 le monde — the world

Before the new one: say the French for the right, then the French for the left.

You’ll want to know: le monde

le monde — “the world”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

monde ← Latin mundus, “the world” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le monde
- Say it: le monde, once more
- Say it: say le monde
- Recall: say the French for the right, then the French for the left, then say le monde again

Before you move on

What does le monde mean? (“The world”.) Say it once more.

110.4 le voyage — a journey, a trip

Before the new one: say the French for the left, then the French for the world.

You'll want to know: le voyage

le voyage — "a journey, a trip".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

voyage ← Old French voiage ← Latin viaticum, "money and food for a journey", from via, "a road" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le voyage
- Say it: le voyage, once more
- Say it: say le voyage
- Recall: say the French for the left, then the French for the world, then say le voyage again

Before you move on

What does le voyage mean? ("A journey, a trip".) Say it once more.

110.5 les vacances — holidays

Before the new one: say the French for the world, then the French for a journey.

The holiday month: say en août.

You'll want to know: les vacances

les vacances — "holidays". Always plural in this sense.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vacances ← Latin vacantia, "empty, free times", from vacare, "to be empty, to be free" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les vacances
- Say it: les vacances, once more
- Say it: say les vacances
- Recall: say the French for the world, then the French for a journey, then say les vacances again

Before you move on

What does les vacances mean? ("Holidays".) Say it once more.

Chapter 111

Rug, Television, Computer, Fridge, Radio

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a rug, a television, a computer, a fridge, a radio.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 111: I can name a rug, a television, a computer, a fridge, a radio.

111.1 le tapis — a rug, a carpet

Before the new one: say the French for a journey, then the French for holidays.

You'll want to know: le tapis

le tapis — "a rug, a carpet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tapis ← Old French tapiz ← Byzantine Greek tapetion, from Greek tapes, "a carpet" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tapis
- Say it: le tapis, once more
- Say it: say le tapis
- Recall: say the French for a journey, then the French for holidays, then say le tapis again

Before you move on

What does le tapis mean? ("A rug, a carpet".) Say it once more.

111.2 la télévision — a television

Before the new one: say the French for holidays, then the French for a rug.

You'll want to know: la télévision

la télévision — "a television".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

télévision — a 20th-century coinage from Greek tele, "far off", and vision, ← Latin visio, "seeing" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la télévision
- Say it: la télévision, once more
- Say it: say la télévision
- Recall: say the French for holidays, then the French for a rug, then say la télévision again

Before you move on

What does la télévision mean? ("A television".) Say it once more.

111.3 l'ordinateur — a computer

Before the new one: say the French for a rug, then the French for a television.

You'll want to know: l'ordinateur

l'ordinateur — "a computer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ordinateur ← Latin ordinator, "one who sets in order" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing, chosen in 1955 as the French name for the computer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ordinateur
- Say it: l'ordinateur, once more
- Say it: say l'ordinateur
- Recall: say the French for a rug, then the French for a television, then say l'ordinateur again

Before you move on

What does l'ordinateur mean? ("A computer".) Say it once more.

111.4 le réfrigérateur — a fridge

Before the new one: say the French for a television, then the French for a computer.

You'll want to know: le réfrigérateur

le réfrigérateur — "a fridge".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réfrigérateur — formed from the verb for "to chill", a learned borrowing of Latin refrigerare, "to make cool", from frigus, "cold" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le réfrigérateur
- Say it: le réfrigérateur, once more
- Say it: say le réfrigérateur
- Recall: say the French for a television, then the French for a computer, then say le réfrigérateur again

Before you move on

What does le réfrigérateur mean? ("A fridge".) Say it once more.

111.5 la radio — a radio

Before the new one: say the French for a computer, then the French for a fridge.

You'll want to know: la radio

la radio — "a radio".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

radio — short for radiotélégraphie, built on Latin radius, "a rod, a ray" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la radio
- Say it: la radio, once more
- Say it: say la radio
- Recall: say the French for a computer, then the French for a fridge, then say la radio again

Before you move on

What does la radio mean? ("A radio".) Say it once more.

Chapter 112

Shower, Bathtub, Wardrobe, Shelf, Curtain

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a shower, a bathtub, a wardrobe, a shelf, a curtain.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 112: I can name a shower, a bathtub, a wardrobe, a shelf, a curtain.

112.1 la douche — a shower

Before the new one: say the French for a fridge, then the French for a radio.

You'll want to know: la douche

la douche — "a shower".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

douche ← Italian doccia, "a water pipe", from Latin ductus, "a leading, a conduit", from ducere, "to lead" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la douche
- Say it: la douche, once more
- Say it: say la douche
- Recall: say the French for a fridge, then the French for a radio, then say la douche again

Before you move on

What does la douche mean? ("A shower".) Say it once more.

112.2 la baignoire — a bathtub

Before the new one: say the French for a radio, then the French for a shower.

You'll want to know: la baignoire

la baignoire — "a bathtub".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

baignoire — built from the verb for "to bathe", with -oire, "a thing for". The verb ← Latin balneare, from balneum, "a bath" (EtymDB 2.1 records balneum).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la baignoire
- Say it: la baignoire, once more
- Say it: say la baignoire
- Recall: say the French for a radio, then the French for a shower, then say la baignoire again

Before you move on

What does la baignoire mean? (“A bathtub”.) Say it once more.

112.3 l’armoire — a wardrobe

Before the new one: say the French for a shower, then the French for a bathtub.

You’ll want to know: l’armoire

l’armoire — “a wardrobe”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

armoire ← Old French armaire (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin armarium, “a cupboard, a chest”, from arma, “tools, arms” (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’armoire
- Say it: l’armoire, once more
- Say it: say l’armoire
- Recall: say the French for a shower, then the French for a bathtub, then say l’armoire again

Before you move on

What does l’armoire mean? (“A wardrobe”.) Say it once more.

112.4 l’étagère — a shelf

Before the new one: say the French for a bathtub, then the French for a wardrobe.

You'll want to know: l'étagère

l'étagère — "a shelf".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étagère — built from the word for "a level, a storey", with -ère (EtymDB 2.1). That word goes back to Latin stare, "to stand".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'étagère
- Say it: l'étagère, once more
- Say it: say l'étagère
- Recall: say the French for a bathtub, then the French for a wardrobe, then say l'étagère again

Before you move on

What does l'étagère mean? ("A shelf".) Say it once more.

112.5 le rideau — a curtain

Before the new one: say the French for a wardrobe, then the French for a shelf.

You'll want to know: le rideau

le rideau — "a curtain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rideau ← Old French ridel, "a pleated cloth", from rider, "to pleat, to wrinkle". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le rideau
- Say it: le rideau, once more
- Say it: say le rideau
- Recall: say the French for a wardrobe, then the French for a shelf, then say le rideau again

Before you move on

What does le rideau mean? ("A curtain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 113

Pillow, Blanket, Towel, Soap, Toothbrush

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a pillow, a blanket, a towel, soap, a toothbrush.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 113: I can name a pillow, a blanket, a towel, soap, a toothbrush.

113.1 l'oreiller — a pillow

Before the new one: say the French for a shelf, then the French for a curtain.

You'll want to know: l'oreiller

l'oreiller — "a pillow".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

oreiller ← Old French orillier (EtymDB 2.1), built from the word for "ear", ← Latin auricula, "a little ear", with -ier: the thing for the ear.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'oreiller
- Say it: l'oreiller, once more
- Say it: say l'oreiller
- Recall: say the French for a shelf, then the French for a curtain, then say l'oreiller again

Before you move on

What does l'oreiller mean? ("A pillow".) Say it once more.

113.2 la couverture — a blanket

Before the new one: say the French for a curtain, then the French for a pillow.

You'll want to know: la couverture

la couverture — "a blanket".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

couverture ← Late Latin coopertura, "a covering", from coopertus, "covered", the past participle of cooperire — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la couverture
- Say it: la couverture, once more
- Say it: say la couverture
- Recall: say the French for a curtain, then the French for a pillow, then say la couverture again

Before you move on

What does la couverture mean? (“A blanket”.) Say it once more.

113.3 la serviette — a towel; a napkin

Before the new one: say the French for a pillow, then the French for a blanket.

You’ll want to know: la serviette

la serviette — “a towel; a napkin”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

serviette — built from the verb for “to serve”, with -ette: a little thing for serving. The verb ← Latin servire, “to be a servant”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la serviette
- Say it: la serviette, once more
- Say it: say la serviette
- Recall: say the French for a pillow, then the French for a blanket, then say la serviette again

Before you move on

What does la serviette mean? (“A towel; a napkin”.) Say it once more.

113.4 le savon — soap

Before the new one: say the French for a blanket, then the French for a towel; a napkin.

You'll want to know: le savon

le savon — "soap".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

savon ← Old French savon (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin sapo, saponis, "soap", a Germanic word in Latin (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le savon
- Say it: le savon, once more
- Say it: say le savon
- Recall: say the French for a blanket, then the French for a towel; a napkin, then say le savon again

Before you move on

What does le savon mean? ("Soap".) Say it once more.

113.5 la brosse à dents — a toothbrush

Before the new one: say the French for a towel; a napkin, then the French for soap.

You'll want to know: la brosse à dents

la brosse à dents — "a toothbrush".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

brosse à dents — "brush for teeth": brosse, "brush", first "brushwood" in Old French (EtymDB 2.1), of uncertain origin; à, "for"; and dents, "teeth", ← Latin dens, dentis.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la brosse à dents
- Say it: la brosse à dents, once more
- Say it: say la brosse à dents
- Recall: say the French for a towel; a napkin, then the French for soap, then say la brosse à dents again

Before you move on

What does la brosse à dents mean? ("A toothbrush".) Say it once more.

Chapter 114

Toothpaste, Shampoo, Comb, Bin, Broom

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name toothpaste, shampoo, a comb, a bin, a broom.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 114: I can name toothpaste, shampoo, a comb, a bin, a broom.

114.1 le dentifrice — toothpaste

Before the new one: say the French for soap, then the French for a toothbrush.

You'll want to know: le dentifrice

le dentifrice — "toothpaste".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dentifrice ← Latin dentifricium, "tooth powder", from dens, "tooth", and fricare, "to rub" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dentifrice
- Say it: le dentifrice, once more
- Say it: say le dentifrice
- Recall: say the French for soap, then the French for a toothbrush, then say le dentifrice again

Before you move on

What does le dentifrice mean? ("Toothpaste".) Say it once more.

114.2 le shampooing — shampoo

Before the new one: say the French for a toothbrush, then the French for toothpaste.

You'll want to know: le shampooing

le shampooing — "shampoo".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

shampooing ← English shampooing, from Hindi champo, "press! knead!" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le shampooing
- Say it: le shampooing, once more
- Say it: say le shampooing
- Recall: say the French for a toothbrush, then the French for toothpaste, then say le shampooing again

Before you move on

What does le shampooing mean? ("Shampoo".) Say it once more.

114.3 le peigne — a comb

Before the new one: say the French for toothpaste, then the French for shampoo.

You'll want to know: le peigne

le peigne — "a comb".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

peigne ← Old French peigne ← Latin pecten, pectinis, "a comb" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le peigne
- Say it: le peigne, once more
- Say it: say le peigne
- Recall: say the French for toothpaste, then the French for shampoo, then say le peigne again

Before you move on

What does le peigne mean? ("A comb".) Say it once more.

114.4 la poubelle — a bin

Before the new one: say the French for shampoo, then the French for a comb.

You'll want to know: la poubelle

la poubelle — "a bin".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poubelle comes from the name of Eugène Poubelle, the prefect of Paris who made lidded bins compulsory in 1884.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poubelle
- Say it: la poubelle, once more
- Say it: say la poubelle
- Recall: say the French for shampoo, then the French for a comb, then say la poubelle again

Before you move on

What does la poubelle mean? ("A bin".) Say it once more.

114.5 le balai — a broom

Before the new one: say the French for a comb, then the French for a bin.

You'll want to know: le balai

le balai — "a broom".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

balai ← Old French balain, from Breton balan, "broom", the shrub that brooms were made of — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le balai
- Say it: le balai, once more
- Say it: say le balai
- Recall: say the French for a comb, then the French for a bin, then say le balai again

Before you move on

What does le balai mean? ("A broom".) Say it once more.

Chapter 115

Vacuum, Laundry, Washing powder, Iron, Pocket

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a vacuum cleaner, laundry, washing powder, iron, a pocket.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 115: I can name a vacuum cleaner, laundry, washing powder, iron, a pocket.

115.1 l'aspirateur — a vacuum cleaner

> Before the new one: say the French for a bin, then the French for a broom.

You'll want to know: l'aspirateur

l'aspirateur — "a vacuum cleaner".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aspirateur — built from the verb for "to breathe in, to suck in", with -ateur, "a thing that does". The verb ← Latin aspirare, "to breathe upon", from spirare, "to breathe" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'aspirateur
- Say it: l'aspirateur, once more
- Say it: say l'aspirateur
- Recall: say the French for a bin, then the French for a broom, then say l'aspirateur again

Before you move on

What does l'aspirateur mean? ("A vacuum cleaner".) Say it once more.

115.2 le linge — laundry, linen

Before the new one: say the French for a broom, then the French for a vacuum cleaner.

You'll want to know: le linge

le linge — "laundry, linen".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

linge ← Latin lineus, "made of flax", from linum, "flax" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le linge
- Say it: le linge, once more
- Say it: say le linge
- Recall: say the French for a broom, then the French for a vacuum cleaner, then say le linge again

Before you move on

What does le linge mean? ("Laundry, linen".) Say it once more.

115.3 la lessive — washing powder; the washing

Before the new one: say the French for a vacuum cleaner, then the French for laundry.

You'll want to know: la lessive

la lessive — "washing powder; the washing".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lessive ← Old French lissive (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin lixivus, "made into lye", from lix, "ashes, lye" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: clothes were washed in lye.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la lessive
- Say it: la lessive, once more
- Say it: say la lessive
- Recall: say the French for a vacuum cleaner, then the French for laundry, then say la lessive again

Before you move on

What does la lessive mean? ("Washing powder; the washing".) Say it once more.

115.4 le fer — iron; an iron (for clothes)

Before the new one: say the French for laundry, then the French for washing powder; the washing.

You'll want to know: le fer

le fer — "iron; an iron (for clothes)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fer ← Latin ferrum, "iron" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le fer
- Say it: le fer, once more
- Say it: say le fer
- Recall: say the French for laundry, then the French for washing powder; the washing, then say le fer again

Before you move on

What does le fer mean? ("Iron; an iron (for clothes)".) Say it once more.

115.5 la poche — a pocket

Before the new one: say the French for washing powder; the washing, then the French for iron; an iron.

You'll want to know: la poche

la poche — "a pocket".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poche ← Frankish pokka*, "a bag" — borrowed from the Franks. (EtymDB 2.1 has Old French poche, "a bag".)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poche
- Say it: la poche, once more
- Say it: say la poche
- Recall: say the French for washing powder; the washing, then the French for iron; an iron, then say la poche again

Before you move on

What does la poche mean? ("A pocket".) Say it once more.

Chapter 116

Jacket, Tie, Belt, Gloves, Scarf

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a jacket, a tie, a belt, gloves, a scarf.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 116: I can name a jacket, a tie, a belt, gloves, a scarf.

116.1 la veste — a jacket

Before the new one: say the French for iron; an iron, then the French for a pocket.

You'll want to know: la veste

la veste — "a jacket".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

veste ← Italian veste, "a garment", from Latin vestis, "clothing" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la veste
- Say it: la veste, once more
- Say it: say la veste
- Recall: say the French for iron; an iron, then the French for a pocket, then say la veste again

Before you move on

What does la veste mean? ("A jacket".) Say it once more.

116.2 la cravate — a tie

Before the new one: say the French for a pocket, then the French for a jacket.

You'll want to know: la cravate

la cravate — "a tie".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cravate — an old French form of the word for "a Croat" (EtymDB 2.1): Croatian soldiers in 17th-century France wore knotted neck scarves, and the fashion took their name.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cravate
- Say it: la cravate, once more
- Say it: say la cravate
- Recall: say the French for a pocket, then the French for a jacket, then say la cravate again

Before you move on

What does la cravate mean? (“A tie”.) Say it once more.

116.3 la ceinture — a belt

Before the new one: say the French for a jacket, then the French for a tie.

You’ll want to know: la ceinture

la ceinture — “a belt”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ceinture ← Latin cinctura, “a girdle”, from cingere, “to gird” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: -nct- became -int-.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la ceinture
- Say it: la ceinture, once more
- Say it: say la ceinture
- Recall: say the French for a jacket, then the French for a tie, then say la ceinture again

Before you move on

What does la ceinture mean? (“A belt”.) Say it once more.

116.4 les gants — gloves

Before the new one: say the French for a tie, then the French for a belt.

You'll want to know: les gants

les gants — "gloves".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gants is the plural of the word for "glove" ← Old French guant ← Frankish want*, "glove" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les gants
- Say it: les gants, once more
- Say it: say les gants
- Recall: say the French for a tie, then the French for a belt, then say les gants again

Before you move on

What does les gants mean? ("Gloves".) Say it once more.

116.5 l'écharpe — a scarf

Before the new one: say the French for a belt, then the French for gloves.

You'll want to know: l'écharpe

l'écharpe — "a scarf".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

écharpe ← Old French escharpe, a pilgrim's bag on a strap, from Frankish skirpja*, "a bag of rushes" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'écharpe
- Say it: l'écharpe, once more
- Say it: say l'écharpe
- Recall: say the French for a belt, then the French for gloves, then say l'écharpe again

Before you move on

What does l'écharpe mean? ("A scarf".) Say it once more.

116.6 Getting around and the town — a first pass

Say the words for gloves and a scarf.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a bicycle, the underground, a taxi, a car park, a lift
- a supermarket, a cinema, a stadium, a swimming pool, a grocer's shop
- an office; a desk, a factory, a pavement, a crossroads, a red light
- a border, the north, the south, the west, a letterbox
- the right, the left, the world, a journey, holidays

Before you move on

A bicycle? (le vélo.) The underground? (le métro.) A taxi? (le taxi.) A car park? (le parking.) A lift? (l'ascenseur.) A supermarket? (le supermarché.) A cinema? (le cinéma.) A stadium? (le stade.) A swimming pool? (la piscine.) A grocer's shop? (l'épicerie.) An office; a desk? (le bureau.) A factory? (l'usine.) A pavement? (le trottoir.) A crossroads? (le carrefour.) A red light? (le feu rouge.) A border? (la frontière.) The north? (le nord.) The south? (le sud.) The west? (l'ouest.) A letterbox? (la boîte aux lettres.) The right? (la droite.) The left? (la gauche.) The world? (le monde.) A journey? (le voyage.) Holidays? (les vacances.)

116.7 The house — a second pass

Say the words for a rug and a television.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a rug, a television, a computer, a fridge, a radio
- a shower, a bathtub, a wardrobe, a shelf, a curtain
- a pillow, a blanket, a towel; a napkin, soap, a toothbrush
- toothpaste, shampoo, a comb, a bin, a broom
- a vacuum cleaner, laundry, washing powder; the washing, iron; an iron, a pocket
- a jacket, a tie, a belt, gloves, a scarf

Before you move on

A rug? (le tapis.) A television? (la télévision.) A computer? (l'ordinateur.) A fridge? (le réfrigérateur.) A radio? (la radio.) A shower? (la douche.) A bathtub? (la baignoire.) A wardrobe? (l'armoire.) A shelf? (l'étagère.) A curtain? (le rideau.) A pillow? (l'oreiller.) A blanket? (la couverture.) A towel; a napkin? (la serviette.) Soap? (le savon.) A toothbrush? (la brosse à dents.) Toothpaste? (le dentifrice.) Shampoo? (le shampooing.) A comb? (le peigne.) A bin? (la poubelle.) A broom? (le balai.) A vacuum cleaner? (l'aspirateur.) Laundry?

(le linge.) Washing powder; the washing? (la lessive.) Iron; an iron? (le fer.) A pocket? (la poche.) A jacket? (la veste.) A tie? (la cravate.) A belt? (la ceinture.) Gloves? (les gants.) A scarf? (l'écharpe.)

Chapter 117

Boots, Cap, Swimsuit, Size, Wallet

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name boots, a cap, a swimsuit, size, a wallet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 117: I can name boots, a cap, a swimsuit, size, a wallet.

117.1 les bottes — boots

Before the new one: say the French for gloves, then the French for a scarf.

You'll want to know: les bottes

les bottes — "boots".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bottes is the plural of the word for "boot", whose origin is uncertain. EtymDB 2.1 records Old French bote, "a high, thick shoe", and offers a Frankish source that is not secure.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les bottes
- Say it: les bottes, once more
- Say it: say les bottes
- Recall: say the French for gloves, then the French for a scarf, then say les bottes again

Before you move on

What does les bottes mean? ("Boots".) Say it once more.

117.2 la casquette — a cap

Before the new one: say the French for a scarf, then the French for boots.

You'll want to know: la casquette

la casquette — "a cap".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

casquette — a little form of the French word for "helmet", with -ette. That word came from Spanish casco, "skull, helmet" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la casquette
- Say it: la casquette, once more
- Say it: say la casquette
- Recall: say the French for a scarf, then the French for boots, then say la casquette again

Before you move on

What does la casquette mean? (“A cap”.) Say it once more.

117.3 le maillot — a swimsuit; a sports shirt

Before the new one: say the French for boots, then the French for a cap.

You’ll want to know: le maillot

le maillot — “a swimsuit; a sports shirt”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

maillot ← Old French mailloel, a swaddling band, from maille, “a stitch, a mesh”, ← Latin macula, “a spot, a mesh”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le maillot
- Say it: le maillot, once more
- Say it: say le maillot
- Recall: say the French for boots, then the French for a cap, then say le maillot again

Before you move on

What does le maillot mean? (“A swimsuit; a sports shirt”.) Say it once more.

117.4 la taille — size; the waist

Before the new one: say the French for a cap, then the French for a swimsuit; a sports shirt.

You'll want to know: la taille

la taille — "size; the waist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

taille — formed from the verb for "to cut", ← Late Latin taliare, from talea, "a cutting, a twig" (EtymDB 2.1): the cut of a garment, then its size.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la taille
- Say it: la taille, once more
- Say it: say la taille
- Recall: say the French for a cap, then the French for a swimsuit; a sports shirt, then say la taille again

Before you move on

What does la taille mean? ("Size; the waist".) Say it once more.

117.5 le portefeuille — a wallet

Before the new one: say the French for a swimsuit; a sports shirt, then the French for size; the waist.

You'll want to know: le portefeuille

le portefeuille — "a wallet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

portefeuille — "carry-leaves": porte, from porter, "to carry", and feuille, "a leaf, a sheet": a case for carrying papers.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le portefeuille
- Say it: le portefeuille, once more
- Say it: say le portefeuille
- Recall: say the French for a swimsuit; a sports shirt, then the French for size; the waist, then say le portefeuille again

Before you move on

What does le portefeuille mean? ("A wallet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 118

Jewel, Ring, Necklace, Perfume, Letter

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a jewel, a ring, a necklace, perfume, a letter.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 118: I can name a jewel, a ring, a necklace, perfume, a letter.

118.1 le bijou — a jewel, a piece of jewellery

> Before the new one: say the French for size; the waist, then the French for a wallet.

You'll want to know: le bijou

le bijou — "a jewel, a piece of jewellery". Plural les bijoux, with an x.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins bijou ← Breton bizou, "a ring", from biz, "finger" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le bijou
- Say it: le bijou, once more
- Say it: say le bijou
- Recall: say the French for size; the waist, then the French for a wallet, then say le bijou again

Before you move on

What does le bijou mean? (“A jewel, a piece of jewellery”.) Say it once more.

118.2 la bague — a ring

Before the new one: say the French for a wallet, then the French for a jewel.

You’ll want to know: la bague

la bague — “a ring”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bague — its origin is uncertain; Middle Dutch bagge, “a ring”, is the usual guess. (EtymDB 2.1 has its Middle French form.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la bague
- Say it: la bague, once more
- Say it: say la bague
- Recall: say the French for a wallet, then the French for a jewel, then say la bague again

Before you move on

What does la bague mean? (“A ring”.) Say it once more.

118.3 le collier — a necklace

Before the new one: say the French for a jewel, then the French for a ring.

You’ll want to know: le collier

le collier — “a necklace”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

collier ← Late Latin collare, “a band for the neck”, from collum, “neck” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the same collum as cou.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le collier
- Say it: le collier, once more
- Say it: say le collier
- Recall: say the French for a jewel, then the French for a ring, then say le collier again

Before you move on

What does le collier mean? (“A necklace”.) Say it once more.

118.4 le parfum — perfume

Before the new one: say the French for a ring, then the French for a necklace.

You'll want to know: le parfum

le parfum — "perfume".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

parfum — formed from the verb for "to scent", which came from Italian perfumare, "to smoke through", from Latin per, "through", and fumare, "to smoke". (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin parts.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le parfum
- Say it: le parfum, once more
- Say it: say le parfum
- Recall: say the French for a ring, then the French for a necklace, then say le parfum again

Before you move on

What does le parfum mean? ("Perfume".) Say it once more.

118.5 la lettre — a letter

Before the new one: say the French for a necklace, then the French for perfume.

You'll want to know: la lettre

la lettre — "a letter".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lettre ← Old French letre ← Latin littera, "a letter of the alphabet" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la lettre
- Say it: la lettre, once more
- Say it: say la lettre
- Recall: say the French for a necklace, then the French for perfume, then say la lettre again

Before you move on

What does la lettre mean? ("A letter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 119

Beef, Vegetables, Mushroom, Beans, Cucumber

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name beef, vegetables, a mushroom, beans, a cucumber.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 119: I can name beef, vegetables, a mushroom, beans, a cucumber.

119.1 le bœuf — beef; an ox

Before the new one: say the French for perfume, then the French for a letter.

Le bœuf is written with œ, the joined o and e. Write it: bœuf once

You'll want to know: le bœuf

le bœuf — "beef; an ox".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bœuf ← Latin bos, bovis, "ox" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the stressed o became œu.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le bœuf
- Say it: le bœuf, once more
- Say it: say le bœuf
- Recall: say the French for perfume, then the French for a letter, then say le bœuf again

Before you move on

What does le bœuf mean? ("Beef; an ox".) Say it once more.

119.2 les légumes — vegetables

Before the new one: say the French for a letter, then the French for beef; an ox.

You'll want to know: les légumes

les légumes — "vegetables".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

légumes is the plural of the word for "a vegetable", ← Latin legumen, "a pulse, a bean" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les légumes
- Say it: les légumes, once more
- Say it: say les légumes
- Recall: say the French for a letter, then the French for beef; an ox, then say les légumes again

Before you move on

What does les légumes mean? ("Vegetables".) Say it once more.

119.3 le champignon — a mushroom

Before the new one: say the French for beef; an ox, then the French for vegetables.

You'll want to know: le champignon

le champignon — "a mushroom".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

champignon ← Vulgar Latin campaniolus*, "growing in the fields", from Latin campania, "level country", and campus, "a field" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: ca- became cha-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le champignon
- Say it: le champignon, once more
- Say it: say le champignon
- Recall: say the French for beef; an ox, then the French for vegetables, then say le champignon again

Before you move on

What does le champignon mean? ("A mushroom".) Say it once more.

119.4 les haricots — beans

Before the new one: say the French for vegetables, then the French for a mushroom.

You'll want to know: les haricots

les haricots — "beans".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

haricots is the plural of the word for "bean", whose origin is uncertain. It first named a meat stew, from an Old French verb meaning "to chop up"; the bean sense may owe something to Nahuatl ayacotli, "bean".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les haricots
- Say it: les haricots, once more
- Say it: say les haricots
- Recall: say the French for vegetables, then the French for a mushroom, then say les haricots again

Before you move on

What does les haricots mean? ("Beans".) Say it once more.

119.5 le concombre — a cucumber

Before the new one: say the French for a mushroom, then the French for beans.

You'll want to know: le concombre

le concombre — "a cucumber".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

concombre ← Old Provençal cocombre ← Latin cucumis, cucumeris, "cucumber" — borrowed from the south. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le concombre
- Say it: le concombre, once more
- Say it: say le concombre
- Recall: say the French for a mushroom, then the French for beans, then say le concombre again

Before you move on

What does le concombre mean? ("A cucumber".) Say it once more.

Chapter 120

Strawberry, Cherry, Melon, Garlic, Flour

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a strawberry, a cherry, a melon, garlic, flour.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 120: I can name a strawberry, a cherry, a melon, garlic, flour.

120.1 la fraise — a strawberry

Before the new one: say the French for beans, then the French for a cucumber.

You'll want to know: la fraise

la fraise — "a strawberry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fraise ← Latin fraga, "strawberries" (Lewis & Short) — inherited. The -s- is unexplained; it may come from the French word for "raspberry".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fraise
- Say it: la fraise, once more
- Say it: say la fraise
- Recall: say the French for beans, then the French for a cucumber, then say la fraise again

Before you move on

What does la fraise mean? ("A strawberry".) Say it once more.

120.2 la cerise — a cherry

Before the new one: say the French for a cucumber, then the French for a strawberry.

You'll want to know: la cerise

la cerise — "a cherry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cerise ← Vulgar Latin ceresia* ← Latin cerasium, from Greek kerasion, "cherry" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cerise
- Say it: la cerise, once more
- Say it: say la cerise
- Recall: say the French for a cucumber, then the French for a strawberry, then say la cerise again

Before you move on

What does la cerise mean? ("A cherry".) Say it once more.

120.3 le melon — a melon

Before the new one: say the French for a strawberry, then the French for a cherry.

You'll want to know: le melon

le melon — "a melon".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

melon ← Late Latin melo, melonis, short for melopepo, from Greek melopepon, "apple-gourd" — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le melon
- Say it: le melon, once more
- Say it: say le melon
- Recall: say the French for a strawberry, then the French for a cherry, then say le melon again

Before you move on

What does le melon mean? ("A melon".) Say it once more.

120.4 l'ail — garlic

Before the new one: say the French for a cherry, then the French for a melon.

You'll want to know: l'ail

l'ail — "garlic".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ail ← Latin allium, "garlic" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ail
- Say it: l'ail, once more
- Say it: say l'ail
- Recall: say the French for a cherry, then the French for a melon, then say l'ail again

Before you move on

What does l'ail mean? ("Garlic".) Say it once more.

120.5 la farine — flour

Before the new one: say the French for a melon, then the French for garlic.

You'll want to know: la farine

la farine — "flour".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

farine ← Latin farina, "flour, meal", from far, "spelt" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la farine
- Say it: la farine, once more
- Say it: say la farine
- Recall: say the French for a melon, then the French for garlic, then say la farine again

Before you move on

What does la farine mean? (“Flour”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 121

Beer, Juice, Ice cream, Chocolate, Biscuit

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name beer, juice, ice cream, chocolate, a biscuit.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 121: I can name beer, juice, ice cream, chocolate, a biscuit.

121.1 la bière — beer

Before the new one: say the French for garlic, then the French for flour.

You'll want to know: la bière

la bière — "beer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bière ← Middle Dutch bier (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed in the 1400s, with hopped beer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la bière
- Say it: la bière, once more
- Say it: say la bière
- Recall: say the French for garlic, then the French for flour, then say la bière again

Before you move on

What does la bière mean? (“Beer”.) Say it once more.

121.2 le jus — juice

Before the new one: say the French for flour, then the French for beer.

You’ll want to know: le jus

le jus — “juice”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jus ← Latin ius, “broth, sauce” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: Latin i- before a vowel regularly became French j-.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le jus
- Say it: le jus, once more
- Say it: say le jus
- Recall: say the French for flour, then the French for beer, then say le jus again

Before you move on

What does le jus mean? (“Juice”.) Say it once more.

121.3 la glace — ice cream; ice; a mirror

Before the new one: say the French for beer, then the French for juice.

You’ll want to know: la glace

la glace — “ice cream; ice; a mirror”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

glace ← Vulgar Latin glacia* ← Latin glacies, “ice” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la glace
- Say it: la glace, once more
- Say it: say la glace
- Recall: say the French for beer, then the French for juice, then say la glace again

Before you move on

What does la glace mean? (“Ice cream; ice; a mirror”.) Say it once more.

121.4 le chocolat — chocolate

Before the new one: say the French for juice, then the French for ice cream; ice; a mirror.

You'll want to know: le chocolat

le chocolat — "chocolate".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chocolat ← Spanish chocolate, from Nahuatl, often given as xocolatl (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed; the Nahuatl form is debated.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le chocolat
- Say it: le chocolat, once more
- Say it: say le chocolat
- Recall: say the French for juice, then the French for ice cream; ice; a mirror, then say le chocolat again

Before you move on

What does le chocolat mean? ("Chocolate".) Say it once more.

121.5 le biscuit — a biscuit

Before the new one: say the French for ice cream; ice; a mirror, then the French for chocolate.

You'll want to know: le biscuit

le biscuit — "a biscuit".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

biscuit ← Old French bescuit, "cooked two times": bes-, "two times", ← Latin bis, and the word for "cooked", ← Latin coctus. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le biscuit
- Say it: le biscuit, once more
- Say it: say le biscuit
- Recall: say the French for ice cream; ice; a mirror, then the French for chocolate, then say le biscuit again

Before you move on

What does le biscuit mean? ("A biscuit".) Say it once more.

Chapter 122

Sandwich, Sauce, Vinegar, Dessert, Meal

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a sandwich, a sauce, vinegar, a dessert, a meal.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 122: I can name a sandwich, a sauce, vinegar, a dessert, a meal.

122.1 le sandwich — a sandwich

> Before the new one: say the French for chocolate, then the French for a biscuit.

You'll want to know: le sandwich

le sandwich — "a sandwich".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sandwich ← English sandwich, named after the Earl of Sandwich — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sandwich
- Say it: le sandwich, once more
- Say it: say le sandwich
- Recall: say the French for chocolate, then the French for a biscuit, then say le sandwich again

Before you move on

What does le sandwich mean? ("A sandwich".) Say it once more.

122.2 la sauce — a sauce

Before the new one: say the French for a biscuit, then the French for a sandwich.

You'll want to know: la sauce

la sauce — "a sauce".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sauce ← Vulgar Latin salsa*, "salted", from Latin salsus, from sal, "salt" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la sauce
- Say it: la sauce, once more
- Say it: say la sauce
- Recall: say the French for a biscuit, then the French for a sandwich, then say la sauce again

Before you move on

What does la sauce mean? ("A sauce".) Say it once more.

122.3 le vinaigre — vinegar

Before the new one: say the French for a sandwich, then the French for a sauce.

You'll want to know: le vinaigre

le vinaigre — "vinegar".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vinaigre — "sour wine": vin, "wine", and Old French aigre, "sour", ← Latin acer, "sharp". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le vinaigre
- Say it: le vinaigre, once more
- Say it: say le vinaigre
- Recall: say the French for a sandwich, then the French for a sauce, then say le vinaigre again

Before you move on

What does le vinaigre mean? ("Vinegar".) Say it once more.

122.4 le dessert — a dessert

Before the new one: say the French for a sauce, then the French for vinegar.

You'll want to know: le dessert

le dessert — "a dessert".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dessert — formed from the verb for "to clear the table", built from des- and the verb for "to serve" (EtymDB 2.1): what comes once the table is cleared.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dessert
- Say it: le dessert, once more
- Say it: say le dessert
- Recall: say the French for a sauce, then the French for vinegar, then say le dessert again

Before you move on

What does le dessert mean? ("A dessert".) Say it once more.

122.5 le repas — a meal

Before the new one: say the French for vinegar, then the French for a dessert.

You'll want to know: le repas

le repas — "a meal".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

repas ← Old French repast, from Late Latin repascere, "to feed", built on Latin pascere, "to feed, to graze" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le repas
- Say it: le repas, once more
- Say it: say le repas
- Recall: say the French for vinegar, then the French for a dessert, then say le repas again

Before you move on

What does le repas mean? ("A meal".) Say it once more.

Chapter 123

Nurse, Cook, Police officer, Shop assistant, Farmer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a nurse, a cook, a police officer, a shop assistant, a farmer.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 123: I can name a nurse, a cook, a police officer, a shop assistant, a farmer.

123.1 l'infirmière — a nurse

Before the new one: say the French for a dessert, then the French for a meal.

You'll want to know: l'infirmière

l'infirmière — "a nurse".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

infirmière — built from the old word for "a sick ward", with -ière; behind it is Latin infirmus, "weak, sick", from firmus, "strong" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'infirmière
- Say it: l'infirmière, once more
- Say it: say l'infirmière
- Recall: say the French for a dessert, then the French for a meal, then say l'infirmière again

Before you move on

What does l'infirmière mean? ("A nurse".) Say it once more.

123.2 le cuisinier — a cook

Before the new one: say the French for a meal, then the French for a nurse.

You'll want to know: le cuisinier

le cuisinier — "a cook".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cuisinier — built from cuisine, "kitchen", with -ier, "one who works at".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cuisinier
- Say it: le cuisinier, once more
- Say it: say le cuisinier
- Recall: say the French for a meal, then the French for a nurse, then say le cuisinier again

Before you move on

What does le cuisinier mean? (“A cook”.) Say it once more.

123.3 le policier — a police officer

Before the new one: say the French for a nurse, then the French for a cook.

You’ll want to know: le policier

le policier — “a police officer”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

policier — built from police with -ier, “one who works at”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le policier
- Say it: le policier, once more
- Say it: say le policier
- Recall: say the French for a nurse, then the French for a cook, then say le policier again

Before you move on

What does le policier mean? (“A police officer”.) Say it once more.

123.4 le vendeur — a shop assistant

Before the new one: say the French for a cook, then the French for a police officer.

You'll want to know: le vendeur

le vendeur — "a shop assistant".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vendeur — built from the verb for "to sell", with -eur, "one who". The verb ← Latin vendere, "to sell" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le vendeur
- Say it: le vendeur, once more
- Say it: say le vendeur
- Recall: say the French for a cook, then the French for a police officer, then say le vendeur again

Before you move on

What does le vendeur mean? ("A shop assistant".) Say it once more.

123.5 l'agriculteur — a farmer

Before the new one: say the French for a police officer, then the French for a shop assistant.

You'll want to know: l'agriculteur

l'agriculteur — "a farmer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

agriculteur ← Latin agricultor, "a farmer", from ager, "a field", and cultor, "a tiller" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'agriculteur
- Say it: l'agriculteur, once more
- Say it: say l'agriculteur
- Recall: say the French for a police officer, then the French for a shop assistant, then say l'agriculteur again

Before you move on

What does l'agriculteur mean? ("A farmer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 124

Baker, Student, Driver, Lawyer, Engineer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a baker, a student, a driver, a lawyer, an engineer.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 124: I can name a baker, a student, a driver, a lawyer, an engineer.

124.1 le boulanger — a baker

> Before the new one: say the French for a shop assistant, then the French for a farmer.

You'll want to know: le boulanger

le boulanger — "a baker". The person behind la boulangerie.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boulanger ← Picard boulenc, probably from Middle Dutch bolle, "a round loaf": a maker of round loaves. (EtymDB 2.1 has its Old French form.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le boulanger
- Say it: le boulanger, once more
- Say it: say le boulanger
- Recall: say the French for a shop assistant, then the French for a farmer, then say le boulanger again

Before you move on

What does le boulanger mean? (“A baker”.) Say it once more.

124.2 l’étudiant — a student

Before the new one: say the French for a farmer, then the French for a baker.

You’ll want to know: l’étudiant

l’étudiant — “a student”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étudiant is the present participle of étudier, “to study”, used as a noun: one who is studying. Étudier ← Old French estudier, from the Latin family of studium, “eagerness, study” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’étudiant
- Say it: l’étudiant, once more
- Say it: say l’étudiant
- Recall: say the French for a farmer, then the French for a baker, then say l’étudiant again

Before you move on

What does l'étudiant mean? ("A student".) Say it once more.

124.3 le chauffeur — a driver

Before the new one: say the French for a baker, then the French for a student.

You'll want to know: le chauffeur

le chauffeur — "a driver".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chauffeur — built from the verb for "to heat", with -eur: first the stoker of a steam engine, then the driver. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le chauffeur
- Say it: le chauffeur, once more
- Say it: say le chauffeur
- Recall: say the French for a baker, then the French for a student, then say le chauffeur again

Before you move on

What does le chauffeur mean? ("A driver".) Say it once more.

124.4 l'avocat — a lawyer; an avocado

Before the new one: say the French for a student, then the French for a driver.

You'll want to know: l'avocat

l'avocat — "a lawyer; an avocado".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avocat — two words in one. The lawyer ← Latin advocatus, "one called in to help" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing. The fruit ← Spanish aguacate, from Nahuatl ahuacatl (EtymDB 2.1), reshaped to look like the lawyer word.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'avocat
- Say it: l'avocat, once more
- Say it: say l'avocat
- Recall: say the French for a student, then the French for a driver, then say l'avocat again

Before you move on

What does l'avocat mean? ("A lawyer; an avocado".) Say it once more.

124.5 l'ingénieur — an engineer

Before the new one: say the French for a driver, then the French for a lawyer; an avocado.

You'll want to know: l'ingénieur

l'ingénieur — "an engineer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ingénieur — built from Old French engin, "a clever device, a war machine", ← Latin ingenium, "talent" (EtymDB 2.1), with -eur, later respelt after the Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ingénieur
- Say it: l'ingénieur, once more
- Say it: say l'ingénieur
- Recall: say the French for a driver, then the French for a lawyer; an avocado, then say l'ingénieur again

Before you move on

What does l'ingénieur mean? ("An engineer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 125

Firefighter, Postman, Waiter, Customer, Till

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a firefighter, a postman, a waiter, a customer, a till.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 125: I can name a firefighter, a postman, a waiter, a customer, a till.

125.1 le pompier — a firefighter

Before the new one: say the French for a lawyer; an avocado, then the French for an engineer.

You'll want to know: le pompier

le pompier — "a firefighter".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pompier — built from the word for "a pump", with -ier: the one who works the pump.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pompier
- Say it: le pompier, once more
- Say it: say le pompier
- Recall: say the French for a lawyer; an avocado, then the French for an engineer, then say le pompier again

Before you move on

What does le pompier mean? ("A firefighter".) Say it once more.

125.2 le facteur — a postman, a postwoman

Before the new one: say the French for an engineer, then the French for a firefighter.

You'll want to know: le facteur

le facteur — "a postman, a postwoman".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

facteur ← Latin factor, "a maker, a doer", from facere, "to make, to do" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing; the agent who delivers became the postman.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le facteur
- Say it: le facteur, once more
- Say it: say le facteur
- Recall: say the French for an engineer, then the French for a firefighter, then say le facteur again

Before you move on

What does le facteur mean? (“A postman, a postwoman”.) Say it once more.

125.3 le serveur — a waiter

Before the new one: say the French for a firefighter, then the French for a postman.

You’ll want to know: le serveur

le serveur — “a waiter”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

serveur — built from the verb for “to serve”, ← Latin servire, with -eur, “one who”. (EtymDB 2.1 records the verb.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le serveur
- Say it: le serveur, once more
- Say it: say le serveur
- Recall: say the French for a firefighter, then the French for a postman, then say le serveur again

Before you move on

What does le serveur mean? (“A waiter”.) Say it once more.

125.4 le client — a customer

Before the new one: say the French for a postman, then the French for a waiter.

You'll want to know: le client

le client — "a customer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

client ← Latin cliens, clientis, "a dependant, a follower" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le client
- Say it: le client, once more
- Say it: say le client
- Recall: say the French for a postman, then the French for a waiter, then say le client again

Before you move on

What does le client mean? ("A customer".) Say it once more.

125.5 la caisse — a till, a checkout

Before the new one: say the French for a waiter, then the French for a customer.

You'll want to know: la caisse

la caisse — "a till, a checkout".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

caisse ← Old Provençal caissa ← Latin capsa, "a box" — borrowed from the south: an inherited form would begin with ch-. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin word.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la caisse
- Say it: la caisse, once more
- Say it: say la caisse
- Recall: say the French for a waiter, then the French for a customer, then say la caisse again

Before you move on

What does la caisse mean? ("A till, a checkout".) Say it once more.

Chapter 126

Class, Lesson, Exam, Word, Board

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a class, a lesson, an exam, a word, a board.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 126: I can name a class, a lesson, an exam, a word, a board.

126.1 la classe — a class; a classroom

> Before the new one: say the French for a customer, then the French for a till.

You'll want to know: la classe

la classe — "a class; a classroom".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

classe ← Latin classis, "a division of the people, a class" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la classe
- Say it: la classe, once more
- Say it: say la classe
- Recall: say the French for a customer, then the French for a till, then say la classe again

Before you move on

What does la classe mean? (“A class; a classroom”.) Say it once more.

126.2 la leçon — a lesson

Before the new one: say the French for a till, then the French for a class; a classroom.

Read it: the instruction and do it — Dites « la classe ».

Read it: le stylo, le cahier, le crayon aloud as one line, without stopping between the words

You’ll want to know: la leçon

la leçon — “a lesson”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

leçon ← Latin lectio, “a reading”, from legere, “to read” (EtymDB 2.1) — semi-learned: the -ct- did not become -it-, as it did in the word for “bed” from lectum.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la leçon
- Say it: la leçon, once more

- Say it: say la leçon
- Recall: say the French for a till, then the French for a class; a classroom, then say la leçon again

Before you move on

What does la leçon mean? ("A lesson".) Say it once more.

126.3 l'examen — an exam

Before the new one: say the French for a class; a classroom, then the French for a lesson.

You'll want to know: l'examen

l'examen — "an exam".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

examen ← Latin examen, "the tongue of a balance, a weighing" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'examen
- Say it: l'examen, once more
- Say it: say l'examen
- Recall: say the French for a class; a classroom, then the French for a lesson, then say l'examen again

Before you move on

What does l'examen mean? ("An exam".) Say it once more.

126.4 le mot — a word

Before the new one: say the French for a lesson, then the French for an exam.

You'll want to know: le mot

le mot — "a word".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mot ← Late Latin muttum, "a grunt, a sound", from muttire, "to mutter" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le mot
- Say it: le mot, once more
- Say it: say le mot
- Recall: say the French for a lesson, then the French for an exam, then say le mot again

Before you move on

What does le mot mean? ("A word".) Say it once more.

126.5 le tableau — a board; a painting

Before the new one: say the French for an exam, then the French for a word.

You'll want to know: le tableau

le tableau — "a board; a painting".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tableau ← Old French tablel, a little form of the word for "table", ← Latin tabula, "a board, a plank". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tableau
- Say it: le tableau, once more
- Say it: say le tableau
- Recall: say the French for an exam, then the French for a word, then say le tableau again

Before you move on

What does le tableau mean? ("A board; a painting".) Say it once more.

Chapter 127

Rubber, Homework, Answer, Idea, Problem

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a rubber, homework, an answer, an idea, a problem.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 127: I can name a rubber, homework, an answer, an idea, a problem.

127.1 la gomme — a rubber, an eraser

Before the new one: say the French for a word, then the French for a board; a painting.

You'll want to know: la gomme

la gomme — "a rubber, an eraser".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gomme ← Late Latin gumma ← Latin gummi, from Greek kommi, a word from Egyptian — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la gomme
- Say it: la gomme, once more
- Say it: say la gomme
- Recall: say the French for a word, then the French for a board; a painting, then say la gomme again

Before you move on

What does la gomme mean? ("A rubber, an eraser".) Say it once more.

127.2 les devoirs — homework

Before the new one: say the French for a board; a painting, then the French for a rubber.

You'll want to know: les devoirs

les devoirs — "homework".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

devoirs is the plural of devoir, "to have to", used as a noun: duties, the work one owes. The verb ← Latin debere, "to owe" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les devoirs
- Say it: les devoirs, once more
- Say it: say les devoirs

- Recall: say the French for a board; a painting, then the French for a rubber, then say les devoirs again

Before you move on

What does les devoirs mean? ("Homework".) Say it once more.

127.3 la réponse — an answer

Before the new one: say the French for a rubber, then the French for homework.

Read it: La leçon est à neuf heures, dans la classe douze aloud as one line

Then answer from it: at what time is the lesson? (À neuf heures.)

You'll want to know: la réponse

la réponse — "an answer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réponse ← Old French response, from Latin responsa, "answers", from respondere, "to answer" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la réponse
- Say it: la réponse, once more
- Say it: say la réponse
- Recall: say the French for a rubber, then the French for homework, then say la réponse again

Before you move on

What does la réponse mean? ("An answer".) Say it once more.

127.4 l'idée — an idea

Before the new one: say the French for homework, then the French for an answer.

You'll want to know: l'idée

l'idée — "an idea".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

idée ← Latin idea, from Greek idea, "a form, a pattern", from idein, "to see" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'idée
- Say it: l'idée, once more
- Say it: say l'idée
- Recall: say the French for homework, then the French for an answer, then say l'idée again

Before you move on

What does l'idée mean? ("An idea".) Say it once more.

127.5 le problème — a problem

Before the new one: say the French for an answer, then the French for an idea.

You'll want to know: le problème

le problème — "a problem".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

problème ← Latin problema, from Greek problema, "a thing put forward", from proballein, "to throw forward" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le problème
- Say it: le problème, once more
- Say it: say le problème
- Recall: say the French for an answer, then the French for an idea, then say le problème again

Before you move on

What does le problème mean? ("A problem".) Say it once more.

127.6 Clothes and things you carry — a first pass

Say the words for an idea and a problem.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- boots, a cap, a swimsuit; a sports shirt, size; the waist, a wallet
- a jewel, a ring, a necklace, perfume, a letter
- beef; an ox, vegetables, a mushroom, beans, a cucumber
- a strawberry, a cherry, a melon, garlic, flour

- beer, juice, ice cream; ice; a mirror, chocolate, a biscuit

Before you move on

Boots? (les bottes.) A cap? (la casquette.) A swimsuit; a sports shirt? (le maillot.) Size; the waist? (la taille.) A wallet? (le portefeuille.) A jewel? (le bijou.) A ring? (la bague.) A necklace? (le collier.) Perfume? (le parfum.) A letter? (la lettre.) Beef; an ox? (le bœuf.) Vegetables? (les légumes.) A mushroom? (le champignon.) Beans? (les haricots.) A cucumber? (le concombre.) A strawberry? (la fraise.) A cherry? (la cerise.) A melon? (le melon.) Garlic? (l'ail.) Flour? (la farine.) Beer? (la bière.) Juice? (le jus.) Ice cream; ice; a mirror? (la glace.) Chocolate? (le chocolat.) A biscuit? (le biscuit.)

127.7 Food and work — a second pass

Say the words for a sandwich and a sauce.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a sandwich, a sauce, vinegar, a dessert, a meal
- a nurse, a cook, a police officer, a shop assistant, a farmer
- a baker, a student, a driver, a lawyer; an avocado, an engineer
- a firefighter, a postman, a waiter, a customer, a till
- a class; a classroom, a lesson, an exam, a word, a board; a painting
- a rubber, homework, an answer, an idea, a problem

Before you move on

A sandwich? (le sandwich.) A sauce? (la sauce.) Vinegar? (le vinaigre.) A dessert? (le dessert.) A meal? (le repas.) A nurse? (l'infirmière.) A cook? (le cuisinier.) A police officer? (le policier.) A shop assistant? (le vendeur.) A farmer?

(l'agriculteur.) A baker? (le boulanger.) A student? (l'étudiant.) A driver? (le chauffeur.) A lawyer; an avocado? (l'avocat.) An engineer? (l'ingénieur.) A firefighter? (le pompier.) A postman? (le facteur.) A waiter? (le serveur.) A customer? (le client.) A till? (la caisse.) A class; a classroom? (la classe.) A lesson? (la leçon.) An exam? (l'examen.) A word? (le mot.) A board; a painting? (le tableau.) A rubber? (la gomme.) Homework? (les devoirs.) An answer? (la réponse.) An idea? (l'idée.) A problem? (le problème.)

Chapter 128

Music, Sport, Game, Film, Song

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name music, sport, a game, a film, a song.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 128: I can name music, sport, a game, a film, a song.

128.1 la musique — music

Before the new one: say the French for an idea, then the French for a problem.

Say j'aime bien la musique. Aimer bien is to like, softer than aimer.

You'll want to know: la musique

la musique — "music".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

musique ← Latin musica, from Greek mousike, "the art of the Muses" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la musique
- Say it: la musique, once more
- Say it: say la musique
- Recall: say the French for an idea, then the French for a problem, then say la musique again

Before you move on

What does la musique mean? ("Music".) Say it once more.

128.2 le sport — sport

Before the new one: say the French for a problem, then the French for music.

Sport on a Sunday: say dimanche.

You'll want to know: le sport

le sport — "sport".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sport ← English sport (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed in the 19th century. English had shortened it from Old French desport, "a pastime".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sport
- Say it: le sport, once more
- Say it: say le sport
- Recall: say the French for a problem, then the French for music, then say le sport again

Before you move on

What does le sport mean? ("Sport".) Say it once more.

128.3 le jeu — a game

Before the new one: say the French for music, then the French for sport.

You'll want to know: le jeu

le jeu — "a game". Plural les jeux, with an x.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jeu ← Old French geu ← Latin iocus, "a joke, a jest" — inherited. It is the noun beside jouer. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le jeu
- Say it: le jeu, once more
- Say it: say le jeu
- Recall: say the French for music, then the French for sport, then say le jeu again

Before you move on

What does le jeu mean? ("A game".) Say it once more.

128.4 le film — a film

Before the new one: say the French for sport, then the French for a game.

You'll want to know: le film

le film — "a film".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

film ← English film, "a thin skin, a membrane", then the coated strip a camera uses — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le film
- Say it: le film, once more
- Say it: say le film
- Recall: say the French for sport, then the French for a game, then say le film again

Before you move on

What does le film mean? ("A film".) Say it once more.

128.5 la chanson — a song

Before the new one: say the French for a game, then the French for a film.

You'll want to know: la chanson

la chanson — "a song".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chanson ← Old French chançon ← Latin cantio, cantionis, "a song", from canere, "to sing" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: ca- became cha-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la chanson
- Say it: la chanson, once more
- Say it: say la chanson
- Recall: say the French for a game, then the French for a film, then say la chanson again

Before you move on

What does la chanson mean? ("A song".) Say it once more.

Chapter 129

Drawing, Life, Time, Colour, Price

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name a drawing, life, a time, a colour, a price.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 129: I can name a drawing, life, a time, a colour, a price.

129.1 le dessin — a drawing

Before the new one: say the French for a film, then the French for a song.

You'll want to know: le dessin

le dessin — "a drawing".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dessin — formed from dessiner, "to draw": a drawing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dessin

- Say it: le dessin, once more
- Say it: say le dessin
- Recall: say the French for a film, then the French for a song, then say le dessin again

Before you move on

What does le dessin mean? ("A drawing".) Say it once more.

129.2 la vie — life

Before the new one: say the French for a song, then the French for a drawing.

You'll want to know: la vie

la vie — "life".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vie ← Latin vita, "life" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the t between vowels dropped out. It shares its root with vivre.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la vie
- Say it: la vie, once more
- Say it: say la vie
- Recall: say the French for a song, then the French for a drawing, then say la vie again

Before you move on

What does la vie mean? ("Life".) Say it once more.

129.3 la fois — a time, an occasion

Before the new one: say the French for a drawing, then the French for life.

You'll want to know: la fois

la fois — "a time, an occasion". une fois: once; deux fois: twice.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fois ← Old French foiz (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin vices, "turns, changes" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fois
- Say it: la fois, once more
- Say it: say la fois
- Recall: say the French for a drawing, then the French for life, then say la fois again

Before you move on

What does la fois mean? ("A time, an occasion".) Say it once more.

129.4 la couleur — a colour

Before the new one: say the French for life, then the French for a time.

Ask for the colour: Quelle couleur ? Quel takes an -le before a feminine noun.

You'll want to know: la couleur

la couleur — "a colour".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

couleur ← Latin color, coloris, "colour" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la couleur
- Say it: la couleur, once more
- Say it: say la couleur
- Recall: say the French for life, then the French for a time, then say la couleur again

Before you move on

What does la couleur mean? ("A colour".) Say it once more.

129.5 le prix — a price; a prize

Before the new one: say the French for a time, then the French for a colour.

You'll want to know: le prix

le prix — "a price; a prize".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prix ← Old French pris ← Latin pretium, "worth, price, reward" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le prix
- Say it: le prix, once more
- Say it: say le prix
- Recall: say the French for a time, then the French for a colour, then say le prix again

Before you move on

What does le prix mean? (“A price; a prize”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 130

Pink, Purple, Brown (chestnut), Brown (of hair, Pretty

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name pink, purple, brown (chestnut), brown (of hair, pretty.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 130: I can name pink, purple, brown (chestnut), brown (of hair, pretty.

130.1 rose — pink

Before the new one: say the French for a colour, then the French for a price; a prize.

Before the new colours, one from before: jaune, which sits beside German gelb. Say jaune.

You'll want to know: rose

rose — "pink".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rose — the colour named after the flower, rose, ← Latin rosa. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rose
- Say it: rose, once more
- Say it: say rose
- Recall: say the French for a colour, then the French for a price; a prize, then say rose again

Before you move on

What does rose mean? ("Pink".) Say it once more.

130.2 violet — purple

Before the new one: say the French for a price; a prize, then the French for pink.

You'll want to know: violet

violet — "purple".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

violet — the colour named after the flower, the violet, a little form of Old French viole, ← Latin viola, "a violet" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: violet
- Say it: violet, once more
- Say it: say violet
- Recall: say the French for a price; a prize, then the French for pink, then say violet again

Before you move on

What does violet mean? ("Purple".) Say it once more.

130.3 marron — brown (chestnut)

Before the new one: say the French for pink, then the French for purple.

You'll want to know: marron

marron — "brown (chestnut)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

marron ← Italian marrone, "a large chestnut" (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed; the colour is named after the nut. The Italian word's own origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marron
- Say it: marron, once more
- Say it: say marron
- Recall: say the French for pink, then the French for purple, then say marron again

Before you move on

What does marron mean? ("Brown (chestnut)".) Say it once more.

130.4 brun — brown (of hair, skin)

Before the new one: say the French for purple, then the French for brown.

You'll want to know: brun

brun — "brown (of hair, skin)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

brun ← Old French brun, "brown, shiny" ← Frankish brun*, "brown" — borrowed from the Franks. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brun
- Say it: brun, once more
- Say it: say brun
- Recall: say the French for purple, then the French for brown, then say brun again

Before you move on

What does brun mean? ("Brown (of hair, skin)".) Say it once more.

130.5 joli — pretty

Before the new one: say the French for brown, then the French for brown.

You'll want to know: joli

joli — "pretty".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

joli ← Old French jolif, "merry, festive" (EtymDB 2.1), of uncertain origin; the usual guess is Old Norse jol, the midwinter feast.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: joli
- Say it: joli, once more
- Say it: say joli
- Recall: say the French for brown, then the French for brown, then say joli again

Before you move on

What does joli mean? ("Pretty".) Say it once more.

Chapter 131

Busy, Free, Open, Closed, Calm

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name busy, free, open, closed, calm.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 131: I can name busy, free, open, closed, calm.

131.1 occupé — busy

Before the new one: say the French for brown, then the French for pretty.

You'll want to know: occupé

occupé — "busy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

occupé is the past participle of the verb for "to occupy", a learned borrowing of Latin occupare, "to seize", from ob and capere, "to take" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: occupé
- Say it: occupé, once more
- Say it: say occupé
- Recall: say the French for brown, then the French for pretty, then say occupé again

Before you move on

What does occupé mean? (“Busy”.) Say it once more.

131.2 libre — free

Before the new one: say the French for pretty, then the French for busy.

You’ll want to know: libre

libre — “free”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

libre ← Latin liber, “free” (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: libre
- Say it: libre, once more
- Say it: say libre
- Recall: say the French for pretty, then the French for busy, then say libre again

Before you move on

What does libre mean? (“Free”.) Say it once more.

131.3 ouvert — open

Before the new one: say the French for busy, then the French for free.

Ouvert belongs to ouvrir, to open, which takes the endings of a verb in -er: j’ouvre. Say j’ouvre, then its opposite, je ferme.

You’ll want to know: ouvert

ouvert — “open”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ouvert is the past participle of ouvrir, “to open”: opened. It goes back to Vulgar Latin opertus*, from Latin apertus, “open”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ouvert
- Say it: ouvert, once more
- Say it: say ouvert
- Recall: say the French for busy, then the French for free, then say ouvert again

Before you move on

What does ouvert mean? (“Open”.) Say it once more.

131.4 fermé — closed

Before the new one: say the French for free, then the French for open.

Fermé is the closed form of fermer, to close. Say fermer, then fermé.

You'll want to know: fermé

fermé — "closed".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fermé is the past participle of fermer, "to close": closed. The verb ← Latin firmare, "to make firm, to fasten" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fermé
- Say it: fermé, once more
- Say it: say fermé
- Recall: say the French for free, then the French for open, then say fermé again

Before you move on

What does fermé mean? ("Closed".) Say it once more.

131.5 calme — calm, quiet

Before the new one: say the French for open, then the French for closed.

You'll want to know: calme

calme — "calm, quiet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

calme ← Italian calma ← Late Latin cauma, "the heat of midday", from Greek kauma, "burning heat" (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed: the still hour when the sun was hottest.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calme
- Say it: calme, once more
- Say it: say calme
- Recall: say the French for open, then the French for closed, then say calme again

Before you move on

What does calme mean? ("Calm, quiet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 132

Noisy, Last, Next, Famous, Funny

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name noisy, last, next, famous, funny.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 132: I can name noisy, last, next, famous, funny.

132.1 bruyant — noisy

> Before the new one: say the French for closed, then the French for calm.

You'll want to know: bruyant

bruyant — "noisy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bruyant is the present participle of the Old French verb bruire, "to roar, to rustle", usually traced to Latin rugire, "to roar" (Lewis & Short), with a changed start.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bruyant
- Say it: bruyant, once more
- Say it: say bruyant
- Recall: say the French for closed, then the French for calm, then say bruyant again

Before you move on

What does bruyant mean? ("Noisy".) Say it once more.

132.2 dernier — last

Before the new one: say the French for calm, then the French for noisy.

You'll want to know: dernier

dernier — "last".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dernier — built in Old French on derrain, "last", from Vulgar Latin deretranus*, built on Latin retro, "behind" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dernier
- Say it: dernier, once more
- Say it: say dernier
- Recall: say the French for calm, then the French for noisy, then say dernier again

Before you move on

What does dernier mean? (“Last”.) Say it once more.

132.3 prochain — next

Before the new one: say the French for noisy, then the French for last.

You’ll want to know: prochain

prochain — “next”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prochain ← Vulgar Latin propeanus*, from Latin prope, “near” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prochain
- Say it: prochain, once more
- Say it: say prochain
- Recall: say the French for noisy, then the French for last, then say prochain again

Before you move on

What does prochain mean? (“Next”.) Say it once more.

132.4 célèbre — famous

Before the new one: say the French for last, then the French for next.

You'll want to know: célèbre

célèbre — "famous".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

célèbre ← Latin celeber, "crowded, much spoken of" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: célèbre
- Say it: célèbre, once more
- Say it: say célèbre
- Recall: say the French for last, then the French for next, then say célèbre again

Before you move on

What does célèbre mean? ("Famous".) Say it once more.

132.5 drôle — funny

Before the new one: say the French for next, then the French for famous.

You'll want to know: drôle

drôle — "funny".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

drôle ← Middle Dutch drol, "a little fellow, a goblin" — borrowed; it first meant "a rascal", then "a comic".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: drôle
- Say it: drôle, once more
- Say it: say drôle
- Recall: say the French for next, then the French for famous, then say drôle again

Before you move on

What does drôle mean? ("Funny".) Say it once more.

Chapter 133

Nice, Nasty, Heat, Storm, Fog

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can name nice, nasty, heat, a storm, fog.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 133: I can name nice, nasty, heat, a storm, fog.

133.1 sympathique — nice, friendly

> Before the new one: say the French for famous, then the French for funny.

You'll want to know: sympathique sympathique — "nice, friendly". Often shortened to sympa.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sympathique — built from the word for "sympathy", ← Latin sympathia, from Greek sympatheia, "fellow feeling". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sympathique
- Say it: sympathique, once more
- Say it: say sympathique
- Recall: say the French for famous, then the French for funny, then say sympathique again

Before you move on

What does sympathique mean? ("Nice, friendly".) Say it once more.

133.2 méchant — nasty, mean

Before the new one: say the French for funny, then the French for nice.

You'll want to know: méchant

méchant — "nasty, mean".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

méchant is the present participle of Old French mescheoir, "to turn out badly": mes-, "badly", and cheoir, "to fall", ← Latin cadere (Lewis & Short). Ill-fated, then wicked.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: méchant
- Say it: méchant, once more
- Say it: say méchant
- Recall: say the French for funny, then the French for nice, then say méchant again

Before you move on

What does méchant mean? (“Nasty, mean”.) Say it once more.

133.3 la chaleur — heat

Before the new one: say the French for nice, then the French for nasty.

Heat belongs to a season: say en été, then au printemps.

You’ll want to know: la chaleur

la chaleur — “heat”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chaleur ← Old French chalor ← Latin calor, “heat” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: ca- became cha-.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la chaleur
- Say it: la chaleur, once more
- Say it: say la chaleur
- Recall: say the French for nice, then the French for nasty, then say la chaleur again

Before you move on

What does la chaleur mean? (“Heat”.) Say it once more.

133.4 l’orage — a storm

Before the new one: say the French for nasty, then the French for heat.

You'll want to know: l'orage

l'orage — "a storm".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

orage — built from Old French ore, "a wind", ← Latin aura, "a breeze", from Greek aura, with -age. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'orage
- Say it: l'orage, once more
- Say it: say l'orage
- Recall: say the French for nasty, then the French for heat, then say l'orage again

Before you move on

What does l'orage mean? ("A storm".) Say it once more.

133.5 le brouillard — fog

Before the new one: say the French for heat, then the French for a storm.

You'll want to know: le brouillard

le brouillard — "fog".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

brouillard — built from Old French broillas, "fog", from the verb for "to blur, to mix up", ← Vulgar Latin brodiculare*, "to jumble together" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ard.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le brouillard
- Say it: le brouillard, once more
- Say it: say le brouillard
- Recall: say the French for heat, then the French for a storm, then say le brouillard again

Before you move on

What does le brouillard mean? ("Fog".) Say it once more.

Chapter 134

Grass, Ear, Lip, Number (on a door, Address

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name grass, an ear, a lip, a number (on a door, an address.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 134: I can name grass, an ear, a lip, a number (on a door, an address.

134.1 l'herbe — grass

Before the new one: say the French for a storm, then the French for fog.

You'll want to know: l'herbe

l'herbe — "grass".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

herbe ← Old French erbe ← Latin herba, "grass, a plant" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The h was put back later, from Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'herbe
- Say it: l'herbe, once more
- Say it: say l'herbe
- Recall: say the French for a storm, then the French for fog, then say l'herbe again

Before you move on

What does l'herbe mean? ("Grass".) Say it once more.

134.2 l'oreille — an ear

Before the new one: say the French for fog, then the French for grass.

You'll want to know: l'oreille

l'oreille — "an ear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

oreille ← Vulgar Latin oricla* ← Latin auricula, "a little ear", from auris, "ear" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'oreille
- Say it: l'oreille, once more
- Say it: say l'oreille
- Recall: say the French for fog, then the French for grass, then say l'oreille again

Before you move on

What does l'oreille mean? ("An ear".) Say it once more.

134.3 la lèvre — a lip

Before the new one: say the French for grass, then the French for an ear.

You'll want to know: la lèvre

la lèvre — "a lip".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lèvre ← Latin labra, "lips", the plural of labrum (Lewis & Short) — inherited: stressed a became e, and b became v.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la lèvre
- Say it: la lèvre, once more
- Say it: say la lèvre
- Recall: say the French for grass, then the French for an ear, then say la lèvre again

Before you move on

What does la lèvre mean? ("A lip".) Say it once more.

134.4 le numéro — a number (on a door, a phone)

Before the new one: say the French for an ear, then the French for a lip.

You'll want to know: le numéro

le numéro — "a number (on a door, a phone)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

numéro ← Italian numero ← Latin numerus, "a number" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le numéro
- Say it: le numéro, once more
- Say it: say le numéro
- Recall: say the French for an ear, then the French for a lip, then say le numéro again

Before you move on

What does le numéro mean? ("A number (on a door, a phone)".) Say it once more.

134.5 l'adresse — an address

Before the new one: say the French for a lip, then the French for a number.

You'll want to know: l'adresse

l'adresse — "an address".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

adresse — formed from the verb for "to direct, to send", ← Vulgar Latin addirectiare*, built on Latin directus, "straight" (Lewis & Short): where a letter is sent.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'adresse
- Say it: l'adresse, once more
- Say it: say l'adresse
- Recall: say the French for a lip, then the French for a number, then say l'adresse again

Before you move on

What does l'adresse mean? ("An address".) Say it once more.

Chapter 135

Second, Change (coins), Date, Century, Email

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name a second, change (coins), a date, a century, an email.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 135: I can name a second, change (coins), a date, a century, an email.

135.1 la seconde — a second

Before the new one: say the French for a number, then the French for an address.

A time from before: say deux heures moins le quart.

You'll want to know: la seconde

la seconde — "a second".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

seconde ← Medieval Latin secunda, short for secunda minuta, "the second small part" of an hour — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la seconde
- Say it: la seconde, once more
- Say it: say la seconde
- Recall: say the French for a number, then the French for an address, then say la seconde again

Before you move on

What does la seconde mean? ("A second".) Say it once more.

135.2 la monnaie — change (coins); currency

Before the new one: say the French for an address, then the French for a second.

You'll want to know: la monnaie

la monnaie — "change (coins); currency".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

monnaie ← Old French moneie ← Latin moneta, "a mint, coin", from Juno Moneta, in whose temple Rome struck its coins — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la monnaie
- Say it: la monnaie, once more
- Say it: say la monnaie
- Recall: say the French for an address, then the French for a second, then say la monnaie again

Before you move on

What does la monnaie mean? (“Change (coins); currency”.) Say it once more.

135.3 la date — a date

Before the new one: say the French for a second, then the French for change.

You’ll want to know: la date

la date — “a date”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

date ← Late Latin data, “given”, the first word of a dated letter: “given at Rome on…” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la date
- Say it: la date, once more
- Say it: say la date
- Recall: say the French for a second, then the French for change, then say la date again

Before you move on

What does la date mean? (“A date”.) Say it once more.

135.4 le siècle — a century

Before the new one: say the French for change, then the French for a date.

You'll want to know: le siècle

le siècle — "a century".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

siècle ← Church Latin saeculum, "a generation, an age" (Lewis & Short) — taken from Latin in a half-learned form.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le siècle
- Say it: le siècle, once more
- Say it: say le siècle
- Recall: say the French for change, then the French for a date, then say le siècle again

Before you move on

What does le siècle mean? ("A century".) Say it once more.

135.5 le courriel — an email

Before the new one: say the French for a date, then the French for a century.

You'll want to know: le courriel

le courriel — "an email".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

courriel — coined from courrier électronique, "electronic mail", in Quebec in the 1990s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le courriel
- Say it: le courriel, once more
- Say it: say le courriel
- Recall: say the French for a date, then the French for a century, then say le courriel again

Before you move on

What does le courriel mean? ("An email".) Say it once more.

Chapter 136

Zero, Sixty, Seventy, Ninety, Thousand

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can name zero, sixty, seventy, ninety, a thousand.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 136: I can name zero, sixty, seventy, ninety, a thousand.

136.1 zéro — zero

Before the new one: say the French for a century, then the French for an email.

You'll want to know: zéro

zéro — "zero".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

zéro ← Italian zero ← Medieval Latin zephirum, from Arabic sifr, "empty" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: zéro
- Say it: zéro, once more
- Say it: say zéro
- Recall: say the French for a century, then the French for an email, then say zéro again

Before you move on

What does zéro mean? ("Zero".) Say it once more.

136.2 soixante — sixty

Before the new one: say the French for an email, then the French for zero.

You'll want to know: soixante

soixante — "sixty".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soixante ← Old French soissante ← Latin sexaginta, "sixty" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: soixante
- Say it: soixante, once more
- Say it: say soixante
- Recall: say the French for an email, then the French for zero, then say soixante again

Before you move on

What does soixante mean? (“Sixty”.) Say it once more.

136.3 soixante-dix — seventy

Before the new one: say the French for zero, then the French for sixty.

You’ll want to know: soixante-dix soixante-dix — “seventy”. Literally “sixty-ten”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soixante-dix — “sixty-ten”: soixante, “sixty”, and dix, “ten”. France counts the seventies on from sixty. Soixante ← Latin sexāgintā and dix ← decem, both inherited (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: soixante-dix
- Say it: soixante-dix, once more
- Say it: say soixante-dix
- Recall: say the French for zero, then the French for sixty, then say soixante-dix again

Before you move on

What does soixante-dix mean? (“Seventy”.) Say it once more.

136.4 quatre-vingt-dix — ninety

Before the new one: say the French for sixty, then the French for seventy.

You'll want to know: quatre-vingt-dix quatre-vingt-dix — "ninety". Literally "four-twenties-ten".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quatre-vingt-dix — "four-twenties-ten": quatre, vingt and dix. Old French often counted in twenties. Quatre ← Latin quattuor, vingt ← vīgintī, dix ← decem, all inherited (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: quatre-vingt-dix
- Say it: quatre-vingt-dix, once more
- Say it: say quatre-vingt-dix
- Recall: say the French for sixty, then the French for seventy, then say quatre-vingt-dix again

Before you move on

What does quatre-vingt-dix mean? ("Ninety".) Say it once more.

136.5 mille — a thousand

Before the new one: say the French for seventy, then the French for ninety.

You'll want to know: mille

mille — "a thousand".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mille ← Latin mille, "a thousand" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mille
- Say it: mille, once more
- Say it: say mille
- Recall: say the French for seventy, then the French for ninety, then say mille again

Before you move on

What does mille mean? ("A thousand".) Say it once more.

Chapter 137

To begin, To visit (a place), To answer, To put, To believe

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to begin, to visit (a place), to answer, to put, to believe.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 137: I can say to begin, to visit (a place), to answer, to put, to believe.

137.1 commencer — to begin

Before the new one: say the French for ninety, then the French for a thousand.

You'll want to know: commencer

commencer — "to begin".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

commencer ← Old French comencier ← Vulgar Latin cominitiare*, from com- and Latin initiare, "to begin" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commencer
- Say it: commencer, once more
- Say it: say commencer
- Recall: say the French for ninety, then the French for a thousand, then say commencer again

Before you move on

What does commencer mean? ("To begin".) Say it once more.

137.2 visiter — to visit (a place)

Before the new one: say the French for a thousand, then the French for to begin.

You'll want to know: visiter

visiter — "to visit (a place)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

visiter ← Latin visitare, "to go to see", from videre, "to see" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: visiter
- Say it: visiter, once more
- Say it: say visiter
- Recall: say the French for a thousand, then the French for to begin, then say visiter again

Before you move on

What does visiter mean? (“To visit (a place)”.) Say it once more.

137.3 répondre — to answer

Before the new one: say the French for to begin, then the French for to visit.

You’ll want to know: répondre

répondre — “to answer”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

répondre ← Old French respondre ← Latin respondere, “to answer, to pledge back” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: répondre
- Say it: répondre, once more
- Say it: say répondre
- Recall: say the French for to begin, then the French for to visit, then say répondre again

Before you move on

What does répondre mean? (“To answer”.) Say it once more.

137.4 mettre — to put; to put on

Before the new one: say the French for to visit, then the French for to answer.

You'll want to know: mettre

mettre — "to put; to put on".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mettre ← Old French metre ← Latin mittere, "to send, to let go" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mettre
- Say it: mettre, once more
- Say it: say mettre
- Recall: say the French for to visit, then the French for to answer, then say mettre again

Before you move on

What does mettre mean? ("To put; to put on".) Say it once more.

137.5 croire — to believe

Before the new one: say the French for to answer, then the French for to put; to put on.

You'll want to know: croire

croire — "to believe".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

croire ← Old French creire (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin credere, "to believe" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: croire
- Say it: croire, once more
- Say it: say croire
- Recall: say the French for to answer, then the French for to put; to put on, then say croire again

Before you move on

What does croire mean? ("To believe".) Say it once more.

Chapter 138

To know (a person, a place), To prefer, To hope, To drive, To get dressed

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to know (a person, to prefer, to hope, to drive, to get dressed.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 138: I can say to know (a person, to prefer, to hope, to drive, to get dressed.

138.1 connaître — to know (a person, a place)

> Before the new one: say the French for to put; to put on, then the French for to believe.

You'll want to know: connaître

connaître — "to know (a person, a place)". savoir knows a fact; connaître knows a person or a place.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

connaître ← Old French conoistre ← Latin cognoscere, "to get to know" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) The circumflex marks a lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: connaître
- Say it: connaître, once more
- Say it: say connaître
- Recall: say the French for to put; to put on, then the French for to believe, then say connaître again

Before you move on

What does connaître mean? ("To know (a person, a place)".) Say it once more.

138.2 préférer — to prefer

Before the new one: say the French for to believe, then the French for to know.

You'll want to know: préférer

préférer — "to prefer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

préférer ← Latin praeferre, "to carry before, to put first" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: préférer
- Say it: préférer, once more

- Say it: say préférer
- Recall: say the French for to believe, then the French for to know, then say préférer again

Before you move on

What does préférer mean? ("To prefer".) Say it once more.

138.3 espérer — to hope

Before the new one: say the French for to know, then the French for to prefer.

You'll want to know: espérer

espérer — "to hope".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

espérer ← Latin sperare, "to hope" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited, with an e- added in front of sp-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: espérer
- Say it: espérer, once more
- Say it: say espérer
- Recall: say the French for to know, then the French for to prefer, then say espérer again

Before you move on

What does espérer mean? ("To hope".) Say it once more.

138.4 conduire — to drive

Before the new one: say the French for to prefer, then the French for to hope.

You'll want to know: conduire

conduire — "to drive".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

conduire ← Old French conduire ← Latin conducere, "to lead together" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: conduire
- Say it: conduire, once more
- Say it: say conduire
- Recall: say the French for to prefer, then the French for to hope, then say conduire again

Before you move on

What does conduire mean? ("To drive".) Say it once more.

138.5 s'habiller — to get dressed

Before the new one: say the French for to hope, then the French for to drive.

You'll want to know: s'habiller

s'habiller — "to get dressed".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'habiller ← Old French abiller, "to prepare, to trim" (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to the word for "a log"; its h and its sense of dressing came from the word for a garment, ← Latin habitus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: s'habiller
- Say it: s'habiller, once more
- Say it: say s'habiller
- Recall: say the French for to hope, then the French for to drive, then say s'habiller again

Before you move on

What does s'habiller mean? ("To get dressed".) Say it once more.

138.6 School and free time — a first pass

Say the words for to drive and to get dressed.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- music, sport, a game, a film, a song
- a drawing, life, a time, a colour, a price; a prize
- pink, purple, brown, brown, pretty
- busy, free, open, closed, calm
- noisy, last, next, famous, funny

Before you move on

Music? (la musique.) Sport? (le sport.) A game? (le jeu.) A film? (le film.) A song? (la chanson.) A drawing? (le dessin.) Life? (la vie.) A time? (la fois.) A colour? (la couleur.) A price; a prize? (le prix.) Pink? (rose.) Purple? (violet.) Brown? (marron.) Brown? (brun.) Pretty? (joli.) Busy? (occupé.) Free? (libre.) Open? (ouvert.) Closed? (fermé.) Calm? (calme.) Noisy? (bruyant.) Last? (dernier.) Next? (prochain.) Famous? (célèbre.) Funny? (drôle.)

138.7 Describing words, time, numbers and verbs — a second pass

Say the words for nice and nasty.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nice, nasty, heat, a storm, fog
- grass, an ear, a lip, a number, an address
- a second, change, a date, a century, an email
- zero, sixty, seventy, ninety, a thousand
- to begin, to visit, to answer, to put; to put on, to believe
- to know, to prefer, to hope, to drive, to get dressed

Before you move on

Nice? (sympathique.) Nasty? (méchant.) Heat? (la chaleur.) A storm? (l'orage.) Fog? (le brouillard.) Grass? (l'herbe.) An ear? (l'oreille.) A lip? (la lèvre.) A number? (le numéro.) An address? (l'adresse.) A second? (la seconde.) Change? (la monnaie.) A date? (la date.) A century? (le siècle.) An email? (le courriel.) Zero? (zéro.) Sixty? (soixante.) Seventy? (soixante-dix.) Ninety? (quatre-vingt-dix.) A thousand?

(mille.) To begin? (commencer.) To visit? (visiter.) To answer? (répondre.) To put; to put on? (mettre.) To believe? (croire.) To know? (connaître.) To prefer? (préférer.) To hope? (espérer.) To drive? (conduire.) To get dressed? (s'habiller.)

Chapter 139

Nothing, None, Neither, Which One, Anything at All

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say that there is nothing and none, ask which one, and answer "me neither".
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 139: I can say that there is nothing and none, ask which one, and answer "me neither".

139.1 rien — nothing

Before the new one: say the French for to drive, then the French for to get dressed.

You'll want to know: rien

rien — "nothing". With a verb it takes ne in front: Je ne comprends rien. — "I understand nothing." On its own it answers a question: Rien.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rien ← Latin rem, "a thing", the accusative of res (Lewis & Short) — inherited: "a thing" became "anything", then, in negative sentences, "nothing".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rien
- Say it: rien, once more
- Say it: say rien
- Recall: say the French for to drive, then the French for to get dressed, then say rien again

Before you move on

What does rien mean? ("Nothing".) Say it once more.

139.2 aucun / aucune — none, not a single

Before the new one: say the French for to get dressed, then the French for nothing.

You'll want to know: aucun / aucune

aucun / aucune — "none, not a single". It agrees with its noun and also takes ne: Il n'y a aucun train lundi. — "There is no train at all on Monday."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aucun ← Old French alcun (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin alicunus*, from Latin aliquis, "someone", and unus, "one" — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aucun / aucune
- Say it: aucun / aucune, once more
- Say it: say aucun / aucune

- Recall: say the French for to get dressed, then the French for nothing, then say aucun / aucune again

Before you move on

What does aucun / aucune mean? (“None, not a single”.) Say it once more.

139.3 non plus — neither, not either

Before the new one: say the French for nothing, then the French for none.

You’ll want to know: non plus non plus — “neither, not either”. The answer to a negative: Je ne travaille pas samedi. — Moi non plus. — “Me neither.” After a yes, French says moi aussi instead.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

non plus — non, “no, not”, and plus, “more”, ← Latin plus (EtymDB 2.1): “not more”, that is, not either.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: non plus
- Say it: non plus, once more
- Say it: say non plus
- Recall: say the French for nothing, then the French for none, then say non plus again

Before you move on

What does non plus mean? (“Neither, not either”.) Say it once more.

139.4 lequel / laquelle — which one

Before the new one: say the French for none, then the French for neither.

You’ll want to know: lequel / laquelle

lequel / laquelle — “which one”. A question that picks from a set, and it agrees with what is picked: Lequel ? for a train, Laquelle ? for a chambre.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lequel — le and quel, “which”, ← Latin qualis, “of what kind” (Lewis & Short): “the which”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lequel / laquelle
- Say it: lequel / laquelle, once more
- Say it: say lequel / laquelle
- Recall: say the French for none, then the French for neither, then say lequel / laquelle again

Before you move on

What does lequel / laquelle mean? (“Which one”.) Say it once more.

139.5 n'importe quoi — anything at all

Before the new one: say the French for neither, then the French for which one.

You'll want to know: n'importe quoi

n'importe quoi — "anything at all". Je lis n'importe quoi. — "I read anything at all." Said of what someone claims, it means "nonsense".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

n'importe quoi — "it does not matter what": n', "not", the verb for "to matter", ← Italian importare, and quoi, "what".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: n'importe quoi
- Say it: n'importe quoi, once more
- Say it: say n'importe quoi
- Recall: say the French for neither, then the French for which one, then say n'importe quoi again

Before you move on

What does n'importe quoi mean? ("Anything at all".) Say it once more.

Chapter 140

Already, Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Formerly, To Happen

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say what happened, and when: already, recently, the day before yesterday.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 140: I can say what happened, and when: already, recently, the day before yesterday.

140.1 déjà — already

Before the new one: say the French for which one, then the French for anything at all.

You'll want to know: déjà déjà — "already". It sits between avoir and the participle: J'ai déjà parlé. — "I have already spoken."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

déjà ← Middle French desja, from des, "from", and Old French ja, "now, already", ← Latin iam — the ja of jamais. (EtymDB 2.1 has the Middle French form.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: déjà
- Say it: déjà, once more
- Say it: say déjà
- Recall: say the French for which one, then the French for anything at all, then say déjà again

Before you move on

What does déjà mean? ("Already".) Say it once more.

140.2 récemment — recently

Before the new one: say the French for anything at all, then the French for already.

You'll want to know: récemment récemment — "recently". Récemment, j'ai beaucoup lu. — "Recently I have read a lot." The ending -ment makes an adverb, the way English uses -ly.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

récemment — built from the word for "recent", ← Latin recens, recentis (Lewis & Short), with the adverb ending -ment.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: récemment
- Say it: récemment, once more
- Say it: say récemment

- Recall: say the French for anything at all, then the French for already, then say récemment again

Before you move on

What does récemment mean? (“Recently”.) Say it once more.

140.3 avant-hier — the day before yesterday

Before the new one: say the French for already, then the French for recently.

You’ll want to know: avant-hier avant-hier — “the day before yesterday”. One day further back than hier: Avant-hier, j’ai écrit une lettre. — “The day before yesterday I wrote a letter.”

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avant-hier — avant, “before”, ← Late Latin abante, and hier, “yesterday”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avant-hier
- Say it: avant-hier, once more
- Say it: say avant-hier
- Recall: say the French for already, then the French for recently, then say avant-hier again

Before you move on

What does avant-hier mean? (“The day before yesterday”.) Say it once more.

140.4 autrefois — formerly, in the old days

Before the new one: say the French for recently, then the French for the day before yesterday.

You'll want to know: autrefois

autrefois — "formerly, in the old days". It points to a time long past rather than a single day: Autrefois, le magasin était ici. — "In the old days the shop was here."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

autrefois — "another time": the word for "other", ← Latin alter, and fois, "a time". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: autrefois
- Say it: autrefois, once more
- Say it: say autrefois
- Recall: say the French for recently, then the French for the day before yesterday, then say autrefois again

Before you move on

What does autrefois mean? ("Formerly, in the old days".) Say it once more.

140.5 se produire — to happen, to occur

Before the new one: say the French for the day before yesterday, then the French for formerly.

You'll want to know: se produire se produire — "to happen, to occur". Its past takes être, like aller: Qu'est-ce qui s'est produit ? — "What happened?"

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se produire — "to produce itself": produire ← Latin producere, "to lead forward" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se produire
- Say it: se produire, once more
- Say it: say se produire
- Recall: say the French for the day before yesterday, then the French for formerly, then say se produire again

Before you move on

What does se produire mean? ("To happen, to occur".) Say it once more.

Chapter 141

The Future, This Evening, a Plan, To Foresee, To Organise

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say what will happen, and when: this evening, next week, in a year.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 141: I can say what will happen, and when: this evening, next week, in a year.

141.1 l'avenir — the future

Before the new one: say the French for formerly, then the French for to happen.

You'll want to know: l'avenir

l'avenir — "the future". French builds the future on the infinitive: parler becomes je parlerai — "I will speak" — then tu parleras, il parlera.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avenir is the old verb avenir, "to come about", used as a noun: what is to come. It ← Latin advenire, "to come to", from venire, "to come". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'avenir
- Say it: l'avenir, once more
- Say it: say l'avenir
- Recall: say the French for formerly, then the French for to happen, then say l'avenir again

Before you move on

What does l'avenir mean? ("The future".) Say it once more.

141.2 ce soir — this evening

Before the new one: say the French for to happen, then the French for the future.

You'll want to know: ce soir

ce soir — "this evening". The time word can stand first: Ce soir, je travaillerai. — "This evening I will work." Dans a length of time gives "in": dans deux jours — "in two days".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ce soir — ce, "this", ← Latin ecce hoc, "look, this" (Lewis & Short for ecce), and soir, "evening".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ce soir
- Say it: ce soir, once more
- Say it: say ce soir

- Recall: say the French for to happen, then the French for the future, then say ce soir again

Before you move on

What does ce soir mean? ("This evening".) Say it once more.

141.3 le projet — a plan, a project

Before the new one: say the French for the future, then the French for this evening.

You'll want to know: le projet

le projet — "a plan, a project". Quels sont tes projets pour le week-end ? — "What are your plans for the weekend?"

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

projet — formed from the verb for "to throw forward", reshaped after Latin proiectus, "thrown forward" (EtymDB 2.1): a plan cast ahead.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le projet
- Say it: le projet, once more
- Say it: say le projet
- Recall: say the French for the future, then the French for this evening, then say le projet again

Before you move on

What does le projet mean? ("A plan, a project".) Say it once more.

141.4 prévoir — to foresee, to plan for

Before the new one: say the French for this evening, then the French for a plan.

You'll want to know: prévoir prévoir — "to foresee, to plan for". voir with pré-, "before": seeing a thing before it comes. The future of être is irregular: je serai, tu seras, il sera.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prévoir ← Old French preveoir, modelled on Latin praevidere, "to see beforehand", from videre, "to see". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prévoir
- Say it: prévoir, once more
- Say it: say prévoir
- Recall: say the French for this evening, then the French for a plan, then say prévoir again

Before you move on

What does prévoir mean? ("To foresee, to plan for".) Say it once more.

141.5 organiser — to organise

Before the new one: say the French for a plan, then the French for to foresee.

You'll want to know: organiser organiser — "to organise". A regular -er verb, so the future follows parler: J'organiserai tout. — "I will organise everything."

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

organiser ← Medieval Latin organizare, from organum, "an instrument", from Greek organon, "a tool" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: organiser
- Say it: organiser, once more
- Say it: say organiser
- Recall: say the French for a plan, then the French for to foresee, then say organiser again

Before you move on

What does organiser mean? ("To organise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 142

Opening Hours, a Notice, the Rent, an Advert, a Bill

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can read opening hours, a notice, an advert and a bill, and act on what they say.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 142: I can read opening hours, a notice, an advert and a bill, and act on what they say.

142.1 l'horaire — opening hours, a timetable

> Before the new one: say the French for to foresee, then the French for to organise.

You'll want to know: l'horaire

l'horaire — "opening hours, a timetable".

Read it: the door

The door says Horaire : lundi – vendredi, 9 h – 18 h. Open on weekdays from nine to six: not on samedi.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

horaire ← Latin horarius, "of the hours", from hora, "hour", the Latin of heure — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1 records hora.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'horaire
- Say it: l'horaire, once more
- Say it: say l'horaire
- Recall: say the French for to foresee, then the French for to organise, then say l'horaire again

Before you move on

What does l'horaire mean? ("Opening hours, a timetable".) Say it once more.

142.2 l'avis — a notice, an opinion

Before the new one: say the French for to organise, then the French for opening hours.

You'll want to know: l'avis

l'avis — "a notice, an opinion".

Read it: the notice

The notice says Avis : le magasin est fermé aujourd'hui. The shop is closed today, so come back another day.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avis ← Old French avis, built on vis, "a view", ← Latin visus, "a look" (EtymDB 2.1): how a matter looks to you.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'avis
- Say it: l'avis, once more
- Say it: say l'avis
- Recall: say the French for to organise, then the French for opening hours, then say l'avis again

Before you move on

What does l'avis mean? ("A notice, an opinion".) Say it once more.

142.3 le loyer — the rent

Before the new one: say the French for opening hours, then the French for a notice.

You'll want to know: le loyer

le loyer — "the rent". The money for a chambre, paid every mois: Le loyer est de 400 euros par mois.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

loyer ← Old French loier ← Latin locarium, "rent for a place", from locus, "a place" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le loyer
- Say it: le loyer, once more
- Say it: say le loyer
- Recall: say the French for opening hours, then the French for a notice, then say le loyer again

Before you move on

What does le loyer mean? ("The rent".) Say it once more.

142.4 l'annonce — an advert, an announcement

Before the new one: say the French for a notice, then the French for the rent.

You'll want to know: l'annonce

l'annonce — "an advert, an announcement".

Read it: the advert

The advert says Chambre libre. Loyer : 400 euros. A room is free, at 400 a month.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

annonce — formed from the verb for "to announce", ← Latin annuntiare, "to make known", from nuntius, "a messenger" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'annonce
- Say it: l'annonce, once more
- Say it: say l'annonce
- Recall: say the French for a notice, then the French for the rent, then say l'annonce again

Before you move on

What does l'annonce mean? ("An advert, an announcement".) Say it once more.

142.5 la facture — a bill, an invoice

Before the new one: say the French for the rent, then the French for an advert.

You'll want to know: la facture

la facture — "a bill, an invoice".

Read it: the bill

The bill says Facture : loyer, 400 euros. À payer avant lundi. Pay it before Monday.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

facture ← Latin factura, "a making" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing; the bill is the account of work made.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la facture
- Say it: la facture, once more
- Say it: say la facture
- Recall: say the French for the rent, then the French for an advert, then say la facture again

Before you move on

What does la facture mean? ("A bill, an invoice".) Say it once more.

142.6 Saying no and looking back — a first pass

Say the words for an advert and a bill.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- nothing, none, neither, which one, anything at all
- already, recently, the day before yesterday, formerly, to happen

Before you move on

Nothing? (rien.) None? (aucun / aucune.) Neither? (non plus.) Which one? (lequel / laquelle.) Anything at all? (n'importe quoi.) Already? (déjà.) Recently? (récemment.) The day before yesterday? (avant-hier.) Formerly? (autrefois.) To happen? (se produire.)

142.7 Looking ahead and reading notices — a second pass

Say the words for the future and this evening.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- the future, this evening, a plan, to foresee, to organise
- opening hours, a notice, the rent, an advert, a bill

Before you move on

The future? (l'avenir.) This evening? (ce soir.) A plan? (le projet.) To foresee? (prévoir.) To organise? (organiser.) Opening hours? (l'horaire.) A notice? (l'avis.) The rent? (le loyer.) An advert? (l'annonce.) A bill? (la facture.)

Chapter 143

To switch on, To switch off, To jump, To smile, To shout

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to switch on, to switch off, to jump, to smile and to shout.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 143: I can say to switch on, to switch off, to jump, to smile and to shout.

143.1 allumer — to switch on, to light

Before the new one: say the French for an advert, an announcement, then the French for a bill, an invoice.

You'll want to know: allumer

allumer — "to switch on, to light".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

allumer ← Old French allumer (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin alluminare*, from Latin lumen, "light" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: allumer
- Say it: allumer, once more
- Say it: say allumer
- Recall: say the French for an advert, an announcement, then the French for a bill, an invoice, then say allumer again

Before you move on

What does allumer mean? ("To switch on, to light".) Say it once more.

143.2 éteindre — to switch off, to put out

Before the new one: say the French for a bill, an invoice, then the French for to switch on.

You'll want to know: éteindre

éteindre — "to switch off, to put out".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

éteindre ← Old French esteindre ← Latin exstinguere, "to put out" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: éteindre
- Say it: éteindre, once more
- Say it: say éteindre
- Recall: say the French for a bill, an invoice, then the French for to switch on, then say éteindre again

Before you move on

What does éteindre mean? ("To switch off, to put out".) Say it once more.

143.3 sauter — to jump

Before the new one: say the French for to switch on, then the French for to switch off.

You'll want to know: sauter

sauter — "to jump".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sauter ← Latin saltare, "to dance, to leap" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: the l melted into a vowel.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sauter
- Say it: sauter, once more
- Say it: say sauter
- Recall: say the French for to switch on, then the French for to switch off, then say sauter again

Before you move on

What does sauter mean? ("To jump".) Say it once more.

143.4 sourire — to smile

Before the new one: say the French for to switch off, then the French for to jump.

You'll want to know: sourire

sourire — "to smile".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sourire ← Latin subridere, "to smile": rire with sou-, "under", in front (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sourire
- Say it: sourire, once more
- Say it: say sourire
- Recall: say the French for to switch off, then the French for to jump, then say sourire again

Before you move on

What does sourire mean? ("To smile".) Say it once more.

143.5 crier — to shout

Before the new one: say the French for to jump, then the French for to smile.

You'll want to know: crier

crier — "to shout".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

crier ← Old French crier (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to Latin quiritare, "to call for help" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: crier
- Say it: crier, once more
- Say it: say crier
- Recall: say the French for to jump, then the French for to smile, then say crier again

Before you move on

What does crier mean? ("To shout".) Say it once more.

Chapter 144

To explain, To translate, To decide, To try, To continue

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to explain, to translate, to decide, to try and to continue.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 144: I can say to explain, to translate, to decide, to try and to continue.

144.1 expliquer — to explain

> Before the new one: say the French for to smile, then the French for to shout.

You'll want to know: expliquer

expliquer — "to explain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

expliquer ← Latin explicare, "to unfold" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: expliquer
- Say it: expliquer, once more
- Say it: say expliquer
- Recall: say the French for to smile, then the French for to shout, then say expliquer again

Before you move on

What does expliquer mean? (“To explain”.) Say it once more.

144.2 traduire — to translate

Before the new one: say the French for to shout, then the French for to explain.

You’ll want to know: traduire

traduire — “to translate”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

traduire ← Latin traducere, “to lead across” (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing of the 1500s.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: traduire
- Say it: traduire, once more
- Say it: say traduire
- Recall: say the French for to shout, then the French for to explain, then say traduire again

Before you move on

What does traduire mean? (“To translate”.) Say it once more.

144.3 décider — to decide

Before the new one: say the French for to explain, then the French for to translate.

You’ll want to know: décider

décider — “to decide”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

décider ← Latin decidere, “to cut off, to settle” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: décider
- Say it: décider, once more
- Say it: say décider
- Recall: say the French for to explain, then the French for to translate, then say décider again

Before you move on

What does décider mean? (“To decide”.) Say it once more.

144.4 essayer — to try

Before the new one: say the French for to translate, then the French for to decide.

You'll want to know: essayer

essayer — "to try".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

essayer ← Vulgar Latin exagiare*, from Late Latin exagium, "a weighing" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: to try was to weigh up.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: essayer
- Say it: essayer, once more
- Say it: say essayer
- Recall: say the French for to translate, then the French for to decide, then say essayer again

Before you move on

What does essayer mean? ("To try".) Say it once more.

144.5 continuer — to continue

Before the new one: say the French for to decide, then the French for to try.

You'll want to know: continuer

continuer — "to continue".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

continuer ← Latin continuare, "to join together" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: continuer
- Say it: continuer, once more
- Say it: say continuer
- Recall: say the French for to decide, then the French for to try, then say continuer again

Before you move on

What does continuer mean? ("To continue".) Say it once more.

Chapter 145

To sign, To fill in a form, To phone, To discuss, To quarrel

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to sign, to fill in a form, to phone, to discuss and to quarrel.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 145: I can say to sign, to fill in a form, to phone, to discuss and to quarrel.

145.1 signer — to sign

> Before the new one: say the French for to try, then the French for to continue.

You'll want to know: signer

signer — "to sign".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

signer ← Latin signare, "to mark", from signum, "a sign" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: signer
- Say it: signer, once more
- Say it: say signer
- Recall: say the French for to try, then the French for to continue, then say signer again

Before you move on

What does signer mean? ("To sign".) Say it once more.

145.2 remplir un formulaire — to fill in a form

Before the new one: say the French for to continue, then the French for to sign.

You'll want to know: remplir un formulaire

remplir un formulaire — "to fill in a form".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

remplir un formulaire — remplir, "to fill", is re- and Old French emplir, ← Latin implere (EtymDB 2.1); un, "a"; formulaire, "a form", ← Latin formularium (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: remplir un formulaire
- Say it: remplir un formulaire, once more
- Say it: say remplir un formulaire
- Recall: say the French for to continue, then the French for to sign, then say remplir un formulaire again

Before you move on

What does remplir un formulaire mean? ("To fill in a form".) Say it once more.

145.3 téléphoner — to phone

Before the new one: say the French for to sign, then the French for to fill in a form.

You'll want to know: téléphoner

téléphoner — "to phone".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

téléphoner — formed from téléphone with the verb ending -er.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: téléphoner
- Say it: téléphoner, once more
- Say it: say téléphoner
- Recall: say the French for to sign, then the French for to fill in a form, then say téléphoner again

Before you move on

What does téléphoner mean? ("To phone".) Say it once more.

145.4 discuter — to discuss

Before the new one: say the French for to fill in a form, then the French for to phone.

You'll want to know: discuter

discuter — "to discuss".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

discuter ← Latin discutere, "to shake apart" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing: to examine by taking apart.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: discuter
- Say it: discuter, once more
- Say it: say discuter
- Recall: say the French for to fill in a form, then the French for to phone, then say discuter again

Before you move on

What does discuter mean? ("To discuss".) Say it once more.

145.5 se disputer — to quarrel

Before the new one: say the French for to phone, then the French for to discuss.

You'll want to know: se disputer

se disputer — "to quarrel".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se disputer ← Latin disputare, "to weigh up, to argue" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se disputer
- Say it: se disputer, once more
- Say it: say se disputer
- Recall: say the French for to phone, then the French for to discuss, then say se disputer again

Before you move on

What does se disputer mean? ("To quarrel".) Say it once more.

Chapter 146

To be bored, To have fun, To get angry, To worry, To smoke

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to be bored, to have fun, to get angry, to worry and to smoke.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 146: I can say to be bored, to have fun, to get angry, to worry and to smoke.

146.1 s'ennuyer — to be bored

> Before the new one: say the French for to discuss, then the French for to quarrel.

You'll want to know: s'ennuyer

s'ennuyer — "to be bored".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'ennuyer ← Vulgar Latin inodiare*, from Latin in odio, "in hatred" (Lewis & Short for odium) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: s'ennuyer
- Say it: s'ennuyer, once more
- Say it: say s'ennuyer
- Recall: say the French for to discuss, then the French for to quarrel, then say s'ennuyer again

Before you move on

What does s'ennuyer mean? ("To be bored".) Say it once more.

146.2 s'amuser — to have fun

Before the new one: say the French for to quarrel, then the French for to be bored.

You'll want to know: s'amuser

s'amuser — "to have fun".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'amuser ← Old French amuser, "to keep idle", built from a- and muser, "to gape, to dawdle". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: s'amuser
- Say it: s'amuser, once more
- Say it: say s'amuser
- Recall: say the French for to quarrel, then the French for to be bored, then say s'amuser again

Before you move on

What does s'amuser mean? ("To have fun".) Say it once more.

146.3 se fâcher — to get angry

Before the new one: say the French for to be bored, then the French for to have fun.

You'll want to know: se fâcher

se fâcher — "to get angry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se fâcher — its origin is uncertain; the usual account derives it from Vulgar Latin fasticare*, built on Latin fastidium, "disgust".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se fâcher
- Say it: se fâcher, once more
- Say it: say se fâcher
- Recall: say the French for to be bored, then the French for to have fun, then say se fâcher again

Before you move on

What does se fâcher mean? ("To get angry".) Say it once more.

146.4 s'inquiéter — to worry

Before the new one: say the French for to have fun, then the French for to get angry.

You'll want to know: s'inquiéter

s'inquiéter — "to worry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'inquiéter ← Latin inquietare, "to disturb", from inquietus, "restless" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: s'inquiéter
- Say it: s'inquiéter, once more
- Say it: say s'inquiéter
- Recall: say the French for to have fun, then the French for to get angry, then say s'inquiéter again

Before you move on

What does s'inquiéter mean? ("To worry".) Say it once more.

146.5 fumer — to smoke

Before the new one: say the French for to get angry, then the French for to worry.

You'll want to know: fumer

fumer — "to smoke".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fumer ← Latin fumare, "to smoke" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fumer
- Say it: fumer, once more
- Say it: say fumer
- Recall: say the French for to get angry, then the French for to worry, then say fumer again

Before you move on

What does fumer mean? (“To smoke”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 147

To compare, To advise, To convince, To criticise, To prove

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to compare, to advise, to convince, to criticise and to prove.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 147: I can say to compare, to advise, to convince, to criticise and to prove.

147.1 comparer — to compare

> Before the new one: say the French for to worry, then the French for to smoke.

You'll want to know: comparer

comparer — "to compare".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

comparer ← Latin comparare, "to pair together", from par, "equal" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: comparer
- Say it: comparer, once more
- Say it: say comparer
- Recall: say the French for to worry, then the French for to smoke, then say comparer again

Before you move on

What does comparer mean? ("To compare".) Say it once more.

147.2 conseiller — to advise

Before the new one: say the French for to smoke, then the French for to compare.

You'll want to know: conseiller

conseiller — "to advise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

conseiller ← Old French consellier (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin consiliari, "to take counsel", from consilium, "advice" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: conseiller
- Say it: conseiller, once more
- Say it: say conseiller
- Recall: say the French for to smoke, then the French for to compare, then say conseiller again

Before you move on

What does conseiller mean? ("To advise".) Say it once more.

147.3 convaincre — to convince

Before the new one: say the French for to compare, then the French for to advise.

You'll want to know: convaincre

convaincre — "to convince".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

convaincre ← Latin convincere, "to overcome, to prove wrong", from vincere, "to conquer" (Lewis & Short) — taken from Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: convaincre
- Say it: convaincre, once more
- Say it: say convaincre
- Recall: say the French for to compare, then the French for to advise, then say convaincre again

Before you move on

What does convaincre mean? ("To convince".) Say it once more.

147.4 critiquer — to criticise

Before the new one: say the French for to advise, then the French for to convince.

You'll want to know: critiquer

critiquer — "to criticise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

critiquer — formed from the word for "criticism", ← Latin criticus, from Greek kritikos, "able to judge". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: critiquer
- Say it: critiquer, once more
- Say it: say critiquer
- Recall: say the French for to advise, then the French for to convince, then say critiquer again

Before you move on

What does critiquer mean? ("To criticise".) Say it once more.

147.5 démontrer — to prove

Before the new one: say the French for to convince, then the French for to criticise.

You'll want to know: démontrer

démontrer — "to prove".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

démontrer ← Old French demonstrer ← Latin demonstrare, "to point out" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: montrer with dé-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: démontrer
- Say it: démontrer, once more
- Say it: say démontrer
- Recall: say the French for to convince, then the French for to criticise, then say démontrer again

Before you move on

What does démontrer mean? ("To prove".) Say it once more.

Chapter 148

To observe, To take part, To go for a walk, To fold, To own

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to observe, to take part, to go for a walk, to fold and to own.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 148: I can say to observe, to take part, to go for a walk, to fold and to own.

148.1 observer — to observe

> Before the new one: say the French for to criticise, then the French for to prove.

You'll want to know: observer

observer — "to observe".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

observer ← Latin observare, "to watch, to heed" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: observer
- Say it: observer, once more
- Say it: say observer
- Recall: say the French for to criticise, then the French for to prove, then say observer again

Before you move on

What does observer mean? ("To observe".) Say it once more.

148.2 participer — to take part

Before the new one: say the French for to prove, then the French for to observe.

You'll want to know: participer

participer — "to take part".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

participer ← Latin participare, "to share in", from pars, "a part", and capere, "to take" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: participer
- Say it: participer, once more
- Say it: say participer
- Recall: say the French for to prove, then the French for to observe, then say participer again

Before you move on

What does participer mean? (“To take part”.) Say it once more.

148.3 se promener — to go for a walk

Before the new one: say the French for to observe, then the French for to take part.

You’ll want to know: se promener

se promener — “to go for a walk”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se promener ← Old French pormener, “to lead around”, built on mener, “to lead”, ← Latin minare, “to drive cattle” (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se promener
- Say it: se promener, once more
- Say it: say se promener
- Recall: say the French for to observe, then the French for to take part, then say se promener again

Before you move on

What does se promener mean? (“To go for a walk”.) Say it once more.

148.4 plier — to fold

Before the new one: say the French for to take part, then the French for to go for a walk.

You'll want to know: plier

plier — "to fold".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plier ← Latin plicare, "to fold" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plier
- Say it: plier, once more
- Say it: say plier
- Recall: say the French for to take part, then the French for to go for a walk, then say plier again

Before you move on

What does plier mean? ("To fold".) Say it once more.

148.5 posséder — to own

Before the new one: say the French for to go for a walk, then the French for to fold.

You'll want to know: posséder

posséder — "to own".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

posséder ← Latin possidere, "to hold, to own" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: posséder
- Say it: posséder, once more
- Say it: say posséder
- Recall: say the French for to go for a walk, then the French for to fold, then say posséder again

Before you move on

What does posséder mean? (“To own”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 149

To discover, To seem, To serve, To suffer, To dream

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to discover, to seem, to serve, to suffer and to dream.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 149: I can say to discover, to seem, to serve, to suffer and to dream.

149.1 découvrir — to discover

Before the new one: say the French for to fold, then the French for to own.

You'll want to know: découvrir

découvrir — "to discover".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

découvrir ← Old French descovrir, "to uncover", from des- and the verb for "to cover", ← Latin cooperire. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: découvrir
- Say it: découvrir, once more
- Say it: say découvrir
- Recall: say the French for to fold, then the French for to own, then say découvrir again

Before you move on

What does découvrir mean? (“To discover”.) Say it once more.

149.2 sembler — to seem

Before the new one: say the French for to own, then the French for to discover.

You’ll want to know: sembler

sembler — “to seem”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sembler ← Late Latin similare, “to be like”, from similis, “like” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sembler
- Say it: sembler, once more
- Say it: say sembler
- Recall: say the French for to own, then the French for to discover, then say sembler again

Before you move on

What does sembler mean? (“To seem”.) Say it once more.

149.3 servir — to serve

Before the new one: say the French for to discover, then the French for to seem.

You’ll want to know: servir

servir — “to serve”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

servir ← Latin servire, “to be a servant”, from servus, “a slave” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: servir
- Say it: servir, once more
- Say it: say servir
- Recall: say the French for to discover, then the French for to seem, then say servir again

Before you move on

What does servir mean? (“To serve”.) Say it once more.

149.4 souffrir — to suffer

Before the new one: say the French for to seem, then the French for to serve.

You'll want to know: souffrir

souffrir — "to suffer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

souffrir ← Vulgar Latin sufferire* ← Latin sufferre, "to bear up under" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: souffrir
- Say it: souffrir, once more
- Say it: say souffrir
- Recall: say the French for to seem, then the French for to serve, then say souffrir again

Before you move on

What does souffrir mean? ("To suffer".) Say it once more.

149.5 rêver — to dream

Before the new one: say the French for to serve, then the French for to suffer.

You'll want to know: rêver

rêver — "to dream".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rêver ← Old French resver, "to wander, to be delirious" (EtymDB 2.1), whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rêver
- Say it: rêver, once more
- Say it: say rêver
- Recall: say the French for to serve, then the French for to suffer, then say rêver again

Before you move on

What does rêver mean? ("To dream".) Say it once more.

Chapter 150

To move away, To come near, To chat, To plug in, To deliver

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to move away, to come near, to chat, to plug in and to deliver.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 150: I can say to move away, to come near, to chat, to plug in and to deliver.

150.1 s'éloigner — to move away

> Before the new one: say the French for to suffer, then the French for to dream.

You'll want to know: s'éloigner

s'éloigner — "to move away".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'éloigner ← Old French esloignier, built on loing, "far", the old spelling of loin (EtymDB 2.1): to put far off.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: s'éloigner
- Say it: s'éloigner, once more
- Say it: say s'éloigner
- Recall: say the French for to suffer, then the French for to dream, then say s'éloigner again

Before you move on

What does s'éloigner mean? ("To move away".) Say it once more.

150.2 s'approcher — to come near

Before the new one: say the French for to dream, then the French for to move away.

You'll want to know: s'approcher

s'approcher — "to come near".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'approcher ← Late Latin appropiare, "to draw near", from prope, "near", the Latin of prochain — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: s'approcher
- Say it: s'approcher, once more
- Say it: say s'approcher
- Recall: say the French for to dream, then the French for to move away, then say s'approcher again

Before you move on

What does s'approcher mean? ("To come near".) Say it once more.

150.3 bavarder — to chat

Before the new one: say the French for to move away, then the French for to come near.

You'll want to know: bavarder

bavarder — "to chat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bavarder — built from the word for "chatty", which comes from the word for "drool", probably imitative: to chatter is to slobber words.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bavarder
- Say it: bavarder, once more
- Say it: say bavarder
- Recall: say the French for to move away, then the French for to come near, then say bavarder again

Before you move on

What does bavarder mean? ("To chat".) Say it once more.

150.4 brancher — to plug in

Before the new one: say the French for to come near, then the French for to chat.

You'll want to know: brancher

brancher — "to plug in".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

brancher — built from the word for "a branch", ← Late Latin branca, "a paw" (EtymDB 2.1): to join on like a branch.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brancher
- Say it: brancher, once more
- Say it: say brancher
- Recall: say the French for to come near, then the French for to chat, then say brancher again

Before you move on

What does brancher mean? ("To plug in".) Say it once more.

150.5 livrer — to deliver

Before the new one: say the French for to chat, then the French for to plug in.

You'll want to know: livrer

livrer — "to deliver".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

livrer ← Latin liberare, "to set free", the Latin of libre (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: to hand over was to release.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: livrer
- Say it: livrer, once more
- Say it: say livrer
- Recall: say the French for to chat, then the French for to plug in, then say livrer again

Before you move on

What does livrer mean? ("To deliver".) Say it once more.

Chapter 151

To put up, To pray, To recommend, To slow down, To breathe

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to put up, to pray, to recommend, to slow down and to breathe.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 151: I can say to put up, to pray, to recommend, to slow down and to breathe.

151.1 héberger — to put up (a guest)

Before the new one: say the French for to plug in, then the French for to deliver.

You'll want to know: héberger

héberger — "to put up (a guest)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

héberger ← Old French herbergier, "to shelter", a Germanic word: Old High German has heribergan, from heri, "army", and bergan, "to shelter" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: héberger
- Say it: héberger, once more
- Say it: say héberger
- Recall: say the French for to plug in, then the French for to deliver, then say héberger again

Before you move on

What does héberger mean? ("To put up (a guest)".) Say it once more.

151.2 prier — to pray

Before the new one: say the French for to deliver, then the French for to put up.

You'll want to know: prier

prier — "to pray".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prier ← Old French preier ← Latin precari, "to pray, to beg" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prier
- Say it: prier, once more

- Say it: say prier
- Recall: say the French for to deliver, then the French for to put up, then say prier again

Before you move on

What does prier mean? (“To pray”.) Say it once more.

151.3 recommander — to recommend

Before the new one: say the French for to put up, then the French for to pray.

You’ll want to know: recommander

recommander — “to recommend”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

recommander — built from re- and the verb for “to order, to entrust”, ← Vulgar Latin commandare* ← Latin commendare. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: recommander
- Say it: recommander, once more
- Say it: say recommander
- Recall: say the French for to put up, then the French for to pray, then say recommander again

Before you move on

What does recommander mean? (“To recommend”.) Say it once more.

151.4 ralentir — to slow down

Before the new one: say the French for to pray, then the French for to recommend.

You'll want to know: ralentir

ralentir — "to slow down".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ralentir — built from re-, a- and the word for "slow", ← Latin lentus, "pliant, slow" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ralentir
- Say it: ralentir, once more
- Say it: say ralentir
- Recall: say the French for to pray, then the French for to recommend, then say ralentir again

Before you move on

What does ralentir mean? ("To slow down".) Say it once more.

151.5 respirer — to breathe

Before the new one: say the French for to recommend, then the French for to slow down.

You'll want to know: respirer

respirer — "to breathe".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

respirer ← Latin respirare, "to breathe back, to breathe" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: respirer
- Say it: respirer, once more
- Say it: say respirer
- Recall: say the French for to recommend, then the French for to slow down, then say respirer again

Before you move on

What does respirer mean? ("To breathe".) Say it once more.

151.6 Words from chapters 143-146 — a first pass

Say the words for to slow down and to breathe.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to switch on, to switch off, to jump, to smile, to shout
- to explain, to translate, to decide, to try, to continue
- to sign, to fill in a form, to phone, to discuss, to quarrel
- to be bored, to have fun, to get angry, to worry, to smoke

Before you move on

To switch on? (allumer.) To switch off? (éteindre.) To jump? (sauter.) To smile? (sourire.) To shout? (crier.) To explain? (expliquer.) To translate? (traduire.) To decide? (décider.) To try? (essayer.) To continue? (continuer.) To sign? (signer.) To fill in a form? (remplir un formulaire.) To phone? (téléphoner.) To discuss? (discuter.) To quarrel? (se disputer.) To be bored? (s'ennuyer.) To have fun? (s'amuser.) To get angry? (se fâcher.) To worry? (s'inquiéter.) To smoke? (fumer.)

151.7 Words from chapters 147-151 — a second pass

Say the words for to compare and to advise.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to compare, to advise, to convince, to criticise, to prove
- to observe, to take part, to go for a walk, to fold, to own
- to discover, to seem, to serve, to suffer, to dream
- to move away, to come near, to chat, to plug in, to deliver
- to put up, to pray, to recommend, to slow down, to breathe

Before you move on

To compare? (comparer.) To advise? (conseiller.) To convince? (convaincre.) To criticise? (critiquer.) To prove? (démontrer.) To observe? (observer.) To take part? (participer.) To go for a walk? (se promener.) To fold? (plier.) To own? (posséder.) To discover? (découvrir.) To seem? (sembler.) To serve? (servir.) To suffer? (souffrir.) To dream? (rêver.) To move away? (s'éloigner.) To come near? (s'approcher.) To chat? (bavarder.) To plug in? (brancher.) To deliver? (livrer.) To put up? (héberger.) To pray? (prier.) To recommend? (recommander.)

To slow down? (ralentir.) To breathe? (respirer.)

Chapter 152

To admire, To act, To move forward, To move back, To lower

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to admire, to act, to move forward, to move back and to lower.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 152: I can say to admire, to act, to move forward, to move back and to lower.

152.1 admirer — to admire

> Before the new one: say the French for to slow down, then the French for to breathe.

You'll want to know: admirer

admirer — "to admire".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

admirer ← Latin admirari, "to wonder at" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: admirer
- Say it: admirer, once more
- Say it: say admirer
- Recall: say the French for to slow down, then the French for to breathe, then say admirer again

Before you move on

What does admirer mean? ("To admire".) Say it once more.

152.2 agir — to act

Before the new one: say the French for to breathe, then the French for to admire.

You'll want to know: agir

agir — "to act".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

agir ← Latin agere, "to do, to drive" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: agir
- Say it: agir, once more
- Say it: say agir
- Recall: say the French for to breathe, then the French for to admire, then say agir again

Before you move on

What does agir mean? (“To act”.) Say it once more.

152.3 avancer — to move forward

Before the new one: say the French for to admire, then the French for to act.

You’ll want to know: avancer

avancer — “to move forward”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

avancer ← Old French avancer ← Late Latin abante, “in front”, from ab and ante, “before” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: avancer
- Say it: avancer, once more
- Say it: say avancer
- Recall: say the French for to admire, then the French for to act, then say avancer again

Before you move on

What does avancer mean? (“To move forward”.) Say it once more.

152.4 reculer — to move back

Before the new one: say the French for to act, then the French for to move forward.

You'll want to know: reculer

reculer — "to move back".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

reculer — built from re-, "back", and the word for "backside", ← Latin culus (Lewis & Short): to go back rear first.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reculer
- Say it: reculer, once more
- Say it: say reculer
- Recall: say the French for to act, then the French for to move forward, then say reculer again

Before you move on

What does reculer mean? ("To move back".) Say it once more.

152.5 baisser — to lower

Before the new one: say the French for to move forward, then the French for to move back.

You'll want to know: baisser

baisser — "to lower".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

baisser ← Vulgar Latin bassiare*, from Late Latin bassus, "low" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: baisser
- Say it: baisser, once more
- Say it: say baisser
- Recall: say the French for to move forward, then the French for to move back, then say baisser again

Before you move on

What does baisser mean? ("To lower".) Say it once more.

Chapter 153

To notice, To replace, To meet, To blush, To bleed

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to notice, to replace, to meet, to blush and to bleed.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 153: I can say to notice, to replace, to meet, to blush and to bleed.

153.1 remarquer — to notice

Before the new one: say the French for to move back, then the French for to lower.

You'll want to know: remarquer

remarquer — "to notice".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

remarquer — built from re- and the verb for "to mark", whose noun came from a Germanic word for "a sign".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: remarquer
- Say it: remarquer, once more
- Say it: say remarquer
- Recall: say the French for to move back, then the French for to lower, then say remarquer again

Before you move on

What does remarquer mean? (“To notice”.) Say it once more.

153.2 remplacer — to replace

Before the new one: say the French for to lower, then the French for to notice.

You’ll want to know: remplacer

remplacer — “to replace”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

remplacer — built from re-, en- and the word for “a place”, ← Latin platea, “a broad street” (Lewis & Short).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: remplacer
- Say it: remplacer, once more
- Say it: say remplacer
- Recall: say the French for to lower, then the French for to notice, then say remplacer again

Before you move on

What does remplacer mean? ("To replace".) Say it once more.

153.3 rencontrer — to meet

Before the new one: say the French for to notice, then the French for to replace.

You'll want to know: rencontrer

rencontrer — "to meet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rencontrer — built from re- and Old French encontrer, "to meet", from encontre, "against", ← Latin in contra (Lewis & Short for contra).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rencontrer
- Say it: rencontrer, once more
- Say it: say rencontrer
- Recall: say the French for to notice, then the French for to replace, then say rencontrer again

Before you move on

What does rencontrer mean? ("To meet".) Say it once more.

153.4 rougir — to blush

Before the new one: say the French for to replace, then the French for to meet.

You'll want to know: rougir

rougir — "to blush".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rougir — built from rouge, "red", with the verb ending -ir: to go red. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rougir
- Say it: rougir, once more
- Say it: say rougir
- Recall: say the French for to replace, then the French for to meet, then say rougir again

Before you move on

What does rougir mean? ("To blush".) Say it once more.

153.5 saigner — to bleed

Before the new one: say the French for to meet, then the French for to blush.

You'll want to know: saigner

saigner — "to bleed".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

saigner ← Latin sanguinare, "to bleed", from sanguis, the Latin of sang (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saigner
- Say it: saigner, once more
- Say it: say saigner
- Recall: say the French for to meet, then the French for to blush, then say saigner again

Before you move on

What does saigner mean? ("To bleed".) Say it once more.

Chapter 154

Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say health, the brain, a lung, the liver and a kidney.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 154: I can say health, the brain, a lung, the liver and a kidney.

154.1 la santé — health

Before the new one: say the French for to blush, then the French for to bleed.

You'll want to know: la santé

la santé — "health".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

santé ← Old French santé (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin sanitas, sanitatis, "soundness of body", from sanus, "healthy" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la santé
- Say it: la santé, once more
- Say it: say la santé
- Recall: say the French for to blush, then the French for to bleed, then say la santé again

Before you move on

What does la santé mean? (“Health”.) Say it once more.

154.2 le cerveau — the brain

Before the new one: say the French for to bleed, then the French for health.

You’ll want to know: le cerveau

le cerveau — “the brain”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cerveau ← Old French cervel ← Latin cerebellum, “a little brain”, from cerebrum, “brain” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cerveau
- Say it: le cerveau, once more
- Say it: say le cerveau
- Recall: say the French for to bleed, then the French for health, then say le cerveau again

Before you move on

What does le cerveau mean? ("The brain".) Say it once more.

154.3 le poumon — a lung

Before the new one: say the French for health, then the French for the brain.

You'll want to know: le poumon

le poumon — "a lung".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poumon ← Latin pulmo, pulmonis, "lung" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le poumon
- Say it: le poumon, once more
- Say it: say le poumon
- Recall: say the French for health, then the French for the brain, then say le poumon again

Before you move on

What does le poumon mean? ("A lung".) Say it once more.

154.4 le foie — the liver

Before the new one: say the French for the brain, then the French for a lung.

You'll want to know: le foie

le foie — "the liver".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

foie ← Late Latin ficatum, short for iecur ficatum, "liver fattened on figs", from ficus, "fig" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le foie
- Say it: le foie, once more
- Say it: say le foie
- Recall: say the French for the brain, then the French for a lung, then say le foie again

Before you move on

What does le foie mean? ("The liver".) Say it once more.

154.5 le rein — a kidney

Before the new one: say the French for a lung, then the French for the liver.

You'll want to know: le rein

le rein — "a kidney".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rein ← Old French rein (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin renes, "the kidneys" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le rein
- Say it: le rein, once more
- Say it: say le rein
- Recall: say the French for a lung, then the French for the liver, then say le rein again

Before you move on

What does le rein mean? ("A kidney".) Say it once more.

Chapter 155

Rest, Sleep, Dream, Anxiety, Love

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say rest, sleep, a dream, anxiety and love.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 155: I can say rest, sleep, a dream, anxiety and love.

155.1 le repos — rest

Before the new one: say the French for the liver, then the French for a kidney.

You'll want to know: le repos

le repos — "rest".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

repos — formed from the verb for "to rest", ← Late Latin repausare, "to rest", from pausare, "to pause". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le repos
- Say it: le repos, once more
- Say it: say le repos
- Recall: say the French for the liver, then the French for a kidney, then say le repos again

Before you move on

What does le repos mean? (“Rest”.) Say it once more.

155.2 le sommeil — sleep

Before the new one: say the French for a kidney, then the French for rest.

You’ll want to know: le sommeil

le sommeil — “sleep”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sommeil ← Vulgar Latin somniculus*, “a little sleep”, from Latin somnus, “sleep” (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sommeil
- Say it: le sommeil, once more
- Say it: say le sommeil
- Recall: say the French for a kidney, then the French for rest, then say le sommeil again

Before you move on

What does le sommeil mean? (“Sleep”.) Say it once more.

155.3 le rêve — a dream

Before the new one: say the French for rest, then the French for sleep.

You’ll want to know: le rêve

le rêve — “a dream”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rêve — formed from rêver, “to dream”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le rêve
- Say it: le rêve, once more
- Say it: say le rêve
- Recall: say the French for rest, then the French for sleep, then say le rêve again

Before you move on

What does le rêve mean? (“A dream”.) Say it once more.

155.4 l’angoisse — anxiety

Before the new one: say the French for sleep, then the French for a dream.

You'll want to know: l'angoisse

l'angoisse — "anxiety".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

angoisse ← Latin angustia, "narrowness, distress", from angustus, "narrow" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'angoisse
- Say it: l'angoisse, once more
- Say it: say l'angoisse
- Recall: say the French for sleep, then the French for a dream, then say l'angoisse again

Before you move on

What does l'angoisse mean? ("Anxiety".) Say it once more.

155.5 l'amour — love

Before the new one: say the French for a dream, then the French for anxiety.

You'll want to know: l'amour

l'amour — "love".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

amour ← Old French amor ← Latin amor, "love" — inherited (EtymDB 2.1). Its -our, where French usually has -eur as in douleur, is often put down to the love poetry of the south.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'amour
- Say it: l'amour, once more
- Say it: say l'amour
- Recall: say the French for a dream, then the French for anxiety, then say l'amour again

Before you move on

What does l'amour mean? ("Love".) Say it once more.

Chapter 156

Rarely, Afterwards, Finally, From now on, Still

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say rarely, afterwards, finally, from now on and still.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 156: I can say rarely, afterwards, finally, from now on and still.

156.1 rarement — rarely

Before the new one: say the French for anxiety, then the French for love.

You'll want to know: rarement

rarement — "rarely".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rarement — built from the word for "rare", ← Latin rarus, "thin, scattered" (Lewis & Short), with -ment.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rarement
- Say it: rarement, once more
- Say it: say rarement
- Recall: say the French for anxiety, then the French for love, then say rarement again

Before you move on

What does rarement mean? ("Rarely".) Say it once more.

156.2 ensuite — afterwards, next

Before the new one: say the French for love, then the French for rarely.

You'll want to know: ensuite

ensuite — "afterwards, next".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ensuite — en, "in", and the word for "what follows", ← Vulgar Latin sequita*, from Latin sequi, "to follow" (Lewis & Short): in what follows.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ensuite
- Say it: ensuite, once more
- Say it: say ensuite
- Recall: say the French for love, then the French for rarely, then say ensuite again

Before you move on

What does ensuite mean? ("Afterwards, next".) Say it once more.

156.3 enfin — finally

Before the new one: say the French for rarely, then the French for afterwards.

You'll want to know: enfin

enfin — "finally".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enfin — en, "in", and the word for "end", ← Latin finis, the fin of finir: in the end.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: enfin
- Say it: enfin, once more
- Say it: say enfin
- Recall: say the French for rarely, then the French for afterwards, then say enfin again

Before you move on

What does enfin mean? ("Finally".) Say it once more.

156.4 désormais — from now on

Before the new one: say the French for afterwards, then the French for finally.

You'll want to know: désormais

désormais — "from now on".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

désormais — "from now on more": Old French des, "from", ore, "now", ← Latin hora, "hour", and mais, "more", ← Latin magis (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: désormais
- Say it: désormais, once more
- Say it: say désormais
- Recall: say the French for afterwards, then the French for finally, then say désormais again

Before you move on

What does désormais mean? ("From now on".) Say it once more.

156.5 encore — still, again

Before the new one: say the French for finally, then the French for from now on.

You'll want to know: encore

encore — "still, again".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

encore — its origin is not settled: the usual account takes it to Latin hinc ad horam, "from here to the hour", or hanc horam, "this hour".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: encore
- Say it: encore, once more
- Say it: say encore
- Recall: say the French for finally, then the French for from now on, then say encore again

Before you move on

What does encore mean? ("Still, again".) Say it once more.

Chapter 157

Above, Below, In front, Behind, Beside

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say above, below, in front, behind and beside.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 157: I can say above, below, in front, behind and beside.

157.1 au-dessus — above

Before the new one: say the French for from now on, then the French for still.

You'll want to know: au-dessus

au-dessus — "above".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

au-dessus — au, "at the", and dessus, "on top". Dessus is de with Old French sus, "above", from Latin sursum, "upward".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: au-dessus
- Say it: au-dessus, once more
- Say it: say au-dessus
- Recall: say the French for from now on, then the French for still, then say au-dessus again

Before you move on

What does au-dessus mean? ("Above".) Say it once more.

157.2 au-dessous — below

Before the new one: say the French for still, then the French for above.

You'll want to know: au-dessous

au-dessous — "below".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

au-dessous — au, "at the", and dessous, "underneath". Dessous ← Latin dē + subtus, "below" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: au-dessous
- Say it: au-dessous, once more
- Say it: say au-dessous
- Recall: say the French for still, then the French for above, then say au-dessous again

Before you move on

What does au-dessous mean? (“Below”.) Say it once more.

157.3 devant — in front

Before the new one: say the French for above, then the French for below.

You’ll want to know: devant

devant — “in front”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

devant — de and the word for “before”, ← Late Latin abante.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: devant
- Say it: devant, once more
- Say it: say devant
- Recall: say the French for above, then the French for below, then say devant again

Before you move on

What does devant mean? (“In front”.) Say it once more.

157.4 derrière — behind

Before the new one: say the French for below, then the French for in front.

You'll want to know: derrière

derrière — "behind".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

derrière ← Late Latin de retro, "from behind" (Lewis & Short for retro).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: derrière
- Say it: derrière, once more
- Say it: say derrière
- Recall: say the French for below, then the French for in front, then say derrière again

Before you move on

What does derrière mean? ("Behind".) Say it once more.

157.5 à côté — beside

Before the new one: say the French for in front, then the French for behind.

You'll want to know: à côté

à côté — "beside".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

à côté — à, "at", and côté, "side", ← Latin costatum, from costa, "a rib" (EtymDB 2.1): at the side, by the ribs.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: à côté
- Say it: à côté, once more
- Say it: say à côté
- Recall: say the French for in front, then the French for behind, then say à côté again

Before you move on

What does à côté mean? ("Beside".) Say it once more.

Chapter 158

So, However, Anyway, On the contrary, Although

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say so, however, anyway, on the contrary and although.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 158: I can say so, however, anyway, on the contrary and although.

158.1 donc — so, therefore

Before the new one: say the French for behind, then the French for beside.

You'll want to know: donc

donc — "so, therefore".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

donc ← Late Latin dunc, "then, so" — inherited. How dunc was formed is debated; the usual account blends tunc, "then", with dum, "while". (EtymDB 2.1 has its Middle French form.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: donc
- Say it: donc, once more
- Say it: say donc
- Recall: say the French for behind, then the French for beside, then say donc again

Before you move on

What does donc mean? ("So, therefore".) Say it once more.

158.2 pourtant — however, yet

Before the new one: say the French for beside, then the French for so.

You'll want to know: pourtant

pourtant — "however, yet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pourtant — the words for "for" and "so much", the second ← Latin tantum (Lewis & Short): "for all that".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pourtant
- Say it: pourtant, once more
- Say it: say pourtant
- Recall: say the French for beside, then the French for so, then say pourtant again

Before you move on

What does pourtant mean? (“However, yet”.) Say it once more.

158.3 de toute façon — anyway

Before the new one: say the French for so, then the French for however.

You’ll want to know: de toute façon

de toute façon — “anyway”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

de toute façon — de, “in, of”, toute, “every”, ← Latin totus, and façon, “a way”, ← Latin factio, factionis, “a making” (EtymDB 2.1): in every way.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: de toute façon
- Say it: de toute façon, once more
- Say it: say de toute façon
- Recall: say the French for so, then the French for however, then say de toute façon again

Before you move on

What does de toute façon mean? (“Anyway”.) Say it once more.

158.4 au contraire — on the contrary

Before the new one: say the French for however, then the French for anyway.

You'll want to know: au contraire

au contraire — "on the contrary".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

au contraire — au, "to the", and contraire, "opposite", ← Latin contrarius, "lying opposite" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: au contraire
- Say it: au contraire, once more
- Say it: say au contraire
- Recall: say the French for however, then the French for anyway, then say au contraire again

Before you move on

What does au contraire mean? ("On the contrary".) Say it once more.

158.5 bien que — although

Before the new one: say the French for anyway, then the French for on the contrary.

You'll want to know: bien que

bien que — "although".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bien que — bien, "well", ← Latin bene, and que, "that" (EtymDB 2.1): "well that", granted that.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bien que
- Say it: bien que, once more
- Say it: say bien que
- Recall: say the French for anyway, then the French for on the contrary, then say bien que again

Before you move on

What does bien que mean? ("Although".) Say it once more.

Chapter 159

Comfortable, Uncomfortable, Polite, Rude, Unpleasant

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say comfortable, uncomfortable, polite, rude and unpleasant.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 159: I can say comfortable, uncomfortable, polite, rude and unpleasant.

159.1 confortable — comfortable

> Before the new one: say the French for on the contrary, then the French for although.

You'll want to know: confortable confortable — "comfortable".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

confortable ← English comfortable — borrowed in the 1700s. English had built it on Old French conforter, "to strengthen", from Latin fortis, "strong" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: confortable
- Say it: confortable, once more
- Say it: say confortable
- Recall: say the French for on the contrary, then the French for although, then say confortable again

Before you move on

What does confortable mean? ("Comfortable".) Say it once more.

159.2 inconfortable — uncomfortable

Before the new one: say the French for although, then the French for comfortable.

You'll want to know: inconfortable

inconfortable — "uncomfortable".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

inconfortable — in-, "not", and confortable. Confortable is borrowed from English comfortable, built on Old French conforter, "to strengthen" (EtymDB 2.1); in- is Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inconfortable
- Say it: inconfortable, once more
- Say it: say inconfortable
- Recall: say the French for although, then the French for comfortable, then say inconfortable again

Before you move on

What does inconfortable mean? (“Uncomfortable”.) Say it once more.

159.3 poli / polie — polite

Before the new one: say the French for comfortable, then the French for uncomfortable.

You’ll want to know: poli / polie

poli / polie — “polite”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poli is the past participle of the verb for “to polish”, ← Latin polire, “to smooth” (EtymDB 2.1 gives politus, “polished”): good manners are polish.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: poli / polie
- Say it: poli / polie, once more
- Say it: say poli / polie
- Recall: say the French for comfortable, then the French for uncomfortable, then say poli / polie again

Before you move on

What does poli / polie mean? (“Polite”.) Say it once more.

159.4 impoli / impolie — rude

Before the new one: say the French for uncomfortable, then the French for polite.

You'll want to know: impoli / impolie

impoli / impolie — "rude".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

impoli — im-, "not", and poli, "polite". Poli ← Latin polītus, "polished" (EtymDB 2.1), and im- is Latin in-, "not", before p.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: impoli / impolie
- Say it: impoli / impolie, once more
- Say it: say impoli / impolie
- Recall: say the French for uncomfortable, then the French for polite, then say impoli / impolie again

Before you move on

What does impoli / impolie mean? ("Rude".) Say it once more.

159.5 désagréable — unpleasant

Before the new one: say the French for polite, then the French for rude.

You'll want to know: désagréable

désagréable — "unpleasant".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

désagréable — dés-, "not", and the word for "pleasant", built on Old French gré, "liking", ← Latin gratum, "pleasing" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: désagréable
- Say it: désagréable, once more
- Say it: say désagréable
- Recall: say the French for polite, then the French for rude, then say désagréable again

Before you move on

What does désagréable mean? ("Unpleasant".) Say it once more.

Chapter 160

Deep, Low, Unknown, Dangerous, Safe

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say deep, low, unknown, dangerous and safe.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 160: I can say deep, low, unknown, dangerous and safe.

160.1 profond / profonde — deep

> Before the new one: say the French for rude, then the French for unpleasant.

You'll want to know: profond / profonde

profond / profonde — "deep".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

profond ← Old French profont ← Latin profundus, "deep", from pro and fundus, "bottom" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: profond / profonde
- Say it: profond / profonde, once more
- Say it: say profond / profonde
- Recall: say the French for rude, then the French for unpleasant, then say profond / profonde again

Before you move on

What does profond / profonde mean? (“Deep”.) Say it once more.

160.2 bas / basse — low

Before the new one: say the French for unpleasant, then the French for deep.

You’ll want to know: bas / basse

bas / basse — “low”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bas ← Late Latin bassus, “low, stout” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the adjective behind baisser.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bas / basse
- Say it: bas / basse, once more
- Say it: say bas / basse
- Recall: say the French for unpleasant, then the French for deep, then say bas / basse again

Before you move on

What does bas / basse mean? (“Low”.) Say it once more.

160.3 inconnu / inconnue — unknown

Before the new one: say the French for deep, then the French for low.

You’ll want to know: inconnu / inconnue

inconnu / inconnue — “unknown”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

inconnu — in-, “not”, and connu, the past participle of connaître: not known. Connaître ← Latin cognōscere, “to get to know” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inconnu / inconnue
- Say it: inconnu / inconnue, once more
- Say it: say inconnu / inconnue
- Recall: say the French for deep, then the French for low, then say inconnu / inconnue again

Before you move on

What does inconnu / inconnue mean? (“Unknown”.) Say it once more.

160.4 dangereux / dangereuse — dangerous

Before the new one: say the French for low, then the French for unknown.

You'll want to know: dangereux / dangereuse

dangereux / dangereuse — "dangerous".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dangereux — built from the word for "danger", with -eux (EtymDB 2.1). That word was Old French dangier, "the power to harm", from Vulgar Latin dominiarium*, built on dominus, "lord".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dangereux / dangereuse
- Say it: dangereux / dangereuse, once more
- Say it: say dangereux / dangereuse
- Recall: say the French for low, then the French for unknown, then say dangereux / dangereuse again

Before you move on

What does dangereux / dangereuse mean? ("Dangerous".) Say it once more.

160.5 sûr / sûre — safe, sure

Before the new one: say the French for unknown, then the French for dangerous.

You'll want to know: sûr / sûre

sûr / sûre — "safe, sure".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sûr ← Old French seür ← Latin securus, "free from care", from se-, "without", and cura, "care" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sûr / sûre
- Say it: sûr / sûre, once more
- Say it: say sûr / sûre
- Recall: say the French for unknown, then the French for dangerous, then say sûr / sûre again

Before you move on

What does sûr / sûre mean? ("Safe, sure".) Say it once more.

160.6 Words from chapters 152-155 — a first pass

Say the words for dangerous and safe.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to admire, to act, to move forward, to move back, to lower
- to notice, to replace, to meet, to blush, to bleed
- health, the brain, a lung, the liver, a kidney
- rest, sleep, a dream, anxiety, love

Before you move on

To admire? (admirer.) To act? (agir.) To move forward? (avancer.) To move back? (reculer.) To lower? (baisser.) To notice? (remarquer.) To replace? (remplacer.) To meet? (rencontrer.) To blush? (rougir.) To bleed? (saigner.) Health? (la santé.) The brain? (le cerveau.) A lung? (le poumon.) The liver? (le foie.) A kidney? (le rein.) Rest? (le repos.) Sleep? (le sommeil.) A dream? (le rêve.) Anxiety? (l'angoisse.) Love? (l'amour.)

160.7 Words from chapters 156-160 — a second pass

Say the words for rarely and afterwards.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- rarely, afterwards, finally, from now on, still
- above, below, in front, behind, beside
- so, however, anyway, on the contrary, although
- comfortable, uncomfortable, polite, rude, unpleasant
- deep, low, unknown, dangerous, safe

Before you move on

Rarely? (rarement.) Afterwards? (ensuite.) Finally? (enfin.) From now on? (désormais.) Still? (encore.) Above? (au-dessus.) Below? (au-dessous.) In front? (devant.) Behind? (derrière.) Beside? (à côté.) So? (donc.) However? (pourtant.) Anyway? (de toute façon.) On the contrary? (au contraire.) Although? (bien que.) Comfortable? (confortable.) Uncomfortable? (inconfortable.) Polite? (poli / polie.) Rude? (impoli / impolie.) Unpleasant? (désagréable.) Deep? (profond / profonde.) Low? (bas / basse.) Unknown? (inconnu / inconnue.) Dangerous? (dangereux / dangereuse.) Safe? (sûr / sûre.)

Chapter 161

Modern, Former, Fresh, Spicy, Raw

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say modern, former, fresh, spicy and raw.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 161: I can say modern, former, fresh, spicy and raw.

161.1 moderne — modern

> Before the new one: say the French for dangerous, then the French for safe, sure.

You'll want to know: moderne

moderne — "modern".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

moderne ← Late Latin modernus, "of now", from modo, "lately" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: moderne
- Say it: moderne, once more
- Say it: say moderne
- Recall: say the French for dangerous, then the French for safe, sure, then say moderne again

Before you move on

What does moderne mean? ("Modern".) Say it once more.

161.2 ancien / ancienne — former, ancient

Before the new one: say the French for safe, sure, then the French for modern.

You'll want to know: ancien / ancienne

ancien / ancienne — "former, ancient".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ancien ← Old French ancien ← Vulgar Latin anteanus*, from Latin ante, "before" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ancien / ancienne
- Say it: ancien / ancienne, once more
- Say it: say ancien / ancienne
- Recall: say the French for safe, sure, then the French for modern, then say ancien / ancienne again

Before you move on

What does ancien / ancienne mean? (“Former, ancient”.) Say it once more.

161.3 frais / fraîche — fresh, cool

Before the new one: say the French for modern, then the French for former.

You’ll want to know: frais / fraîche

frais / fraîche — “fresh, cool”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

frais ← Old French fres ← Frankish frisk*, “fresh” — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frais / fraîche
- Say it: frais / fraîche, once more
- Say it: say frais / fraîche
- Recall: say the French for modern, then the French for former, then say frais / fraîche again

Before you move on

What does frais / fraîche mean? (“Fresh, cool”.) Say it once more.

161.4 épicé / épicée — spicy

Before the new one: say the French for former, then the French for fresh.

You'll want to know: épicé / épicée

épicé / épicée — "spicy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

épicé is the past participle of the verb for "to spice", from the word for "spice", ← Latin species, "wares, spices" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: épicé / épicée
- Say it: épicé / épicée, once more
- Say it: say épicé / épicée
- Recall: say the French for former, then the French for fresh, then say épicé / épicée again

Before you move on

What does épicé / épicée mean? ("Spicy".) Say it once more.

161.5 cru / crue — raw

Before the new one: say the French for fresh, then the French for spicy.

You'll want to know: cru / crue

cru / crue — "raw".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cru ← Latin crudus, "raw, bloody" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cru / crue
- Say it: cru / crue, once more
- Say it: say cru / crue
- Recall: say the French for fresh, then the French for spicy, then say cru / crue again

Before you move on

What does cru / crue mean? (“Raw”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 162

Worried, With a cold, Single, Married, Divorced

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say worried, with a cold, single, married and divorced.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 162: I can say worried, with a cold, single, married and divorced.

162.1 inquiet / inquiète — worried

Before the new one: say the French for spicy, then the French for raw.

You'll want to know: inquiet / inquiète

inquiet / inquiète — "worried".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

inquiet ← Latin inquietus, "restless", from in-, "not", and quietus, "calm" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inquiet / inquiète
- Say it: inquiet / inquiète, once more
- Say it: say inquiet / inquiète
- Recall: say the French for spicy, then the French for raw, then say inquiet / inquiète again

Before you move on

What does inquiet / inquiète mean? ("Worried".) Say it once more.

162.2 enrhumé / enrhumée — with a cold

Before the new one: say the French for raw, then the French for worried.

You'll want to know: enrhumé / enrhumée

enrhumé / enrhumée — "with a cold".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enrhumé is the past participle of the verb for "to give a cold", built on the word for "a cold", ← Latin rheuma, from Greek rheuma, "a flow" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: enrhumé / enrhumée
- Say it: enrhumé / enrhumée, once more
- Say it: say enrhumé / enrhumée
- Recall: say the French for raw, then the French for worried, then say enrhumé / enrhumée again

Before you move on

What does enrhumé / enrhumée mean? (“With a cold”.) Say it once more.

162.3 célibataire — single

Before the new one: say the French for worried, then the French for with a cold.

You’ll want to know: célibataire

célibataire — “single”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

célibataire — built from the word for “celibacy”, ← Latin caelibatus, from caelebs, “unmarried”, with -aire. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: célibataire
- Say it: célibataire, once more
- Say it: say célibataire
- Recall: say the French for worried, then the French for with a cold, then say célibataire again

Before you move on

What does célibataire mean? (“Single”.) Say it once more.

162.4 marié / mariée — married

Before the new one: say the French for with a cold, then the French for single.

You'll want to know: marié / mariée

marié / mariée — "married".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

marié is the past participle of the verb for "to marry", ← Latin maritare, from maritus, the Latin of mari (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: marié / mariée
- Say it: marié / mariée, once more
- Say it: say marié / mariée
- Recall: say the French for with a cold, then the French for single, then say marié / mariée again

Before you move on

What does marié / mariée mean? ("Married".) Say it once more.

162.5 divorcé / divorcée — divorced

Before the new one: say the French for single, then the French for married.

You'll want to know: divorcé / divorcée

divorcé / divorcée — "divorced".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

divorcé is the past participle of the verb for "to divorce", from the noun, ← Latin divortium, "a separation" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: divorcé / divorcée
- Say it: divorcé / divorcée, once more
- Say it: say divorcé / divorcée
- Recall: say the French for single, then the French for married, then say divorcé / divorcée again

Before you move on

What does divorcé / divorcée mean? ("Divorced".) Say it once more.

Chapter 163

Flat, Dining room, Balcony, Lock, Doorbell

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a flat, a dining room, a balcony, a lock and a doorbell.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 163: I can say a flat, a dining room, a balcony, a lock and a doorbell.

163.1 l'appartement — a flat

> Before the new one: say the French for married, then the French for divorced.

You'll want to know: l'appartement

l'appartement — "a flat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

appartement ← Italian appartamento (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed; built on Latin ad and pars, "a part": a set of rooms apart.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'appartement
- Say it: l'appartement, once more
- Say it: say l'appartement
- Recall: say the French for married, then the French for divorced, then say l'appartement again

Before you move on

What does l'appartement mean? ("A flat".) Say it once more.

163.2 la salle à manger — a dining room

Before the new one: say the French for divorced, then the French for a flat.

You'll want to know: la salle à manger

la salle à manger — "a dining room".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salle à manger — "room for eating": salle, "a room", à, "for", and manger, "to eat". Salle ← Frankish sal, "hall", à ← Latin ad, and manger ← Latin manducāre, "to chew" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la salle à manger
- Say it: la salle à manger, once more
- Say it: say la salle à manger
- Recall: say the French for divorced, then the French for a flat, then say la salle à manger again

Before you move on

What does la salle à manger mean? (“A dining room”.) Say it once more.

163.3 le balcon — a balcony

Before the new one: say the French for a flat, then the French for a dining room.

You’ll want to know: le balcon

le balcon — “a balcony”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

balcon ← Italian balcone, from Lombardic balko*, “a beam” — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le balcon
- Say it: le balcon, once more
- Say it: say le balcon
- Recall: say the French for a flat, then the French for a dining room, then say le balcon again

Before you move on

What does le balcon mean? (“A balcony”.) Say it once more.

163.4 la serrure — a lock

Before the new one: say the French for a dining room, then the French for a balcony.

You'll want to know: la serrure

la serrure — "a lock".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

serrure — built from the verb for "to squeeze, to shut", ← Late Latin serare, "to bolt", from sera, "a door bar" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la serrure
- Say it: la serrure, once more
- Say it: say la serrure
- Recall: say the French for a dining room, then the French for a balcony, then say la serrure again

Before you move on

What does la serrure mean? ("A lock".) Say it once more.

163.5 la sonnette — a doorbell

Before the new one: say the French for a balcony, then the French for a lock.

You'll want to know: la sonnette

la sonnette — "a doorbell".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sonnette — built from the verb for "to ring", ← Latin sonare, "to sound", with -ette, "little". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la sonnette
- Say it: la sonnette, once more
- Say it: say la sonnette
- Recall: say the French for a balcony, then the French for a lock, then say la sonnette again

Before you move on

What does la sonnette mean? ("A doorbell".) Say it once more.

Chapter 164

Passport, Customs, Booking, Butcher's, Large river

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a passport, customs, a booking, a butcher's and a large river.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 164: I can say a passport, customs, a booking, a butcher's and a large river.

164.1 le passeport — a passport

Before the new one: say the French for a lock, then the French for a doorbell.

You'll want to know: le passeport

le passeport — "a passport".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

passeport — the verb for "to pass" and Old French port, "a harbour", ← Latin portus: leave to pass through a port. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le passeport
- Say it: le passeport, once more
- Say it: say le passeport
- Recall: say the French for a lock, then the French for a doorbell, then say le passeport again

Before you move on

What does le passeport mean? (“A passport”.) Say it once more.

164.2 la douane — customs

Before the new one: say the French for a doorbell, then the French for a passport.

You’ll want to know: la douane

la douane — “customs”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

douane ← Old Italian doana ← Arabic diwan, “a register, an office”, from Persian — borrowed.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la douane
- Say it: la douane, once more
- Say it: say la douane
- Recall: say the French for a doorbell, then the French for a passport, then say la douane again

Before you move on

What does la douane mean? ("Customs".) Say it once more.

164.3 la réservation — a booking

Before the new one: say the French for a passport, then the French for customs.

You'll want to know: la réservation

la réservation — "a booking".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réservation — built from the verb for "to book", ← Latin reservare, "to keep back" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la réservation
- Say it: la réservation, once more
- Say it: say la réservation
- Recall: say the French for a passport, then the French for customs, then say la réservation again

Before you move on

What does la réservation mean? ("A booking".) Say it once more.

164.4 la boucherie — a butcher's

Before the new one: say the French for customs, then the French for a booking.

You'll want to know: la boucherie

la boucherie — "a butcher's".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boucherie — built from the word for "butcher", with -ie. The butcher was first a seller of goat's meat, from the word for "he-goat". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la boucherie
- Say it: la boucherie, once more
- Say it: say la boucherie
- Recall: say the French for customs, then the French for a booking, then say la boucherie again

Before you move on

What does la boucherie mean? ("A butcher's".) Say it once more.

164.5 le fleuve — a large river

Before the new one: say the French for a booking, then the French for a butcher's.

You'll want to know: le fleuve

le fleuve — "a large river".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fleuve ← Middle French fleuve (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin fluvius, "a river" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le fleuve
- Say it: le fleuve, once more
- Say it: say le fleuve
- Recall: say the French for a booking, then the French for a butcher's, then say le fleuve again

Before you move on

What does le fleuve mean? ("A large river".) Say it once more.

Chapter 165

War, Peace, Army, Soldier, Tradition

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say war, peace, an army, a soldier and a tradition.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 165: I can say war, peace, an army, a soldier and a tradition.

165.1 la guerre — war

Before the new one: say the French for a butcher's, then the French for a large river.

You'll want to know: la guerre

la guerre — "war".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

guerre ← Old French guerre ← Medieval Latin werra (EtymDB 2.1), from Frankish werra*, "strife" — borrowed from the Franks; Germanic w- became French gu-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la guerre
- Say it: la guerre, once more
- Say it: say la guerre
- Recall: say the French for a butcher's, then the French for a large river, then say la guerre again

Before you move on

What does la guerre mean? ("War".) Say it once more.

165.2 la paix — peace

Before the new one: say the French for a large river, then the French for war.

You'll want to know: la paix

la paix — "peace".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

paix ← Old French pais ← Latin pax, pacis, "peace" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the pax behind payer.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la paix
- Say it: la paix, once more
- Say it: say la paix
- Recall: say the French for a large river, then the French for war, then say la paix again

Before you move on

What does la paix mean? (“Peace”.) Say it once more.

165.3 l’armée — an army

Before the new one: say the French for war, then the French for peace.

You’ll want to know: l’armée

l’armée — “an army”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

armée is the past participle of the verb for “to arm”, used as a noun: a force that is armed. (EtymDB 2.1 links it to Medieval Latin armata, “an armed force”.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’armée
- Say it: l’armée, once more
- Say it: say l’armée
- Recall: say the French for war, then the French for peace, then say l’armée again

Before you move on

What does l’armée mean? (“An army”.) Say it once more.

165.4 le soldat — a soldier

Before the new one: say the French for peace, then the French for an army.

You'll want to know: le soldat

le soldat — "a soldier".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soldat ← Italian soldato, "one who is paid", from soldo, "pay", ← Late Latin solidus, a gold coin — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le soldat
- Say it: le soldat, once more
- Say it: say le soldat
- Recall: say the French for peace, then the French for an army, then say le soldat again

Before you move on

What does le soldat mean? ("A soldier".) Say it once more.

165.5 la tradition — a tradition

Before the new one: say the French for an army, then the French for a soldier.

You'll want to know: la tradition

la tradition — "a tradition".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tradition ← Old French tradicion ← Latin traditio, "a handing over" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la tradition
- Say it: la tradition, once more
- Say it: say la tradition
- Recall: say the French for an army, then the French for a soldier, then say la tradition again

Before you move on

What does la tradition mean? ("A tradition".) Say it once more.

Chapter 166

Photographer, Journalist, Architect, Dentist, Pharmacist

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a photographer, a journalist, an architect, a dentist and a pharmacist.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 166: I can say a photographer, a journalist, an architect, a dentist and a pharmacist.

166.1 le photographe — a photographer

Before the new one: say the French for a soldier, then the French for a tradition.

You'll want to know: le photographe

le photographe — "a photographer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

photographe — built like photo, from Greek phos, photos, "light", and graphein, "to write": one who writes with light.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le photographe
- Say it: le photographe, once more
- Say it: say le photographe
- Recall: say the French for a soldier, then the French for a tradition, then say le photographe again

Before you move on

What does le photographe mean? ("A photographer".) Say it once more.

166.2 le journaliste — a journalist

Before the new one: say the French for a tradition, then the French for a photographer.

You'll want to know: le journaliste

le journaliste — "a journalist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

journaliste — built from the word for "a newspaper", itself built on jour, "day": a daily record.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le journaliste
- Say it: le journaliste, once more
- Say it: say le journaliste
- Recall: say the French for a tradition, then the French for a photographer, then say le journaliste again

Before you move on

What does le journaliste mean? ("A journalist".) Say it once more.

166.3 l'architecte — an architect

Before the new one: say the French for a photographer, then the French for a journalist.

You'll want to know: l'architecte

l'architecte — "an architect".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

architecte ← Latin architectus, from Greek architekton, "chief builder" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'architecte
- Say it: l'architecte, once more
- Say it: say l'architecte
- Recall: say the French for a photographer, then the French for a journalist, then say l'architecte again

Before you move on

What does l'architecte mean? ("An architect".) Say it once more.

166.4 le dentiste — a dentist

Before the new one: say the French for a journalist, then the French for an architect.

You'll want to know: le dentiste

le dentiste — "a dentist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dentiste — dent, "tooth", with -iste, "one who works with". Dent ← Latin dentem, "tooth" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dentiste
- Say it: le dentiste, once more
- Say it: say le dentiste
- Recall: say the French for a journalist, then the French for an architect, then say le dentiste again

Before you move on

What does le dentiste mean? ("A dentist".) Say it once more.

166.5 le pharmacien — a pharmacist

Before the new one: say the French for an architect, then the French for a dentist.

You'll want to know: le pharmacien

le pharmacien — "a pharmacist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pharmacien — pharmacie with -ien, "one who works in". Pharmacie ← Medieval Latin pharmacia, from Greek (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pharmacien
- Say it: le pharmacien, once more
- Say it: say le pharmacien
- Recall: say the French for an architect, then the French for a dentist, then say le pharmacien again

Before you move on

What does le pharmacien mean? ("A pharmacist".) Say it once more.

Chapter 167

Mother-in-law, Son-in-law, Daughter-in-law, Fiancé, Fiancée

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a mother-in-law, a son-in-law, a daughter-in-law, a fiancé and a fiancée.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 167: I can say a mother-in-law, a son-in-law, a daughter-in-law, a fiancé and a fiancée.

167.1 la belle-mère — a mother-in-law

> Before the new one: say the French for a dentist, then the French for a pharmacist.

You'll want to know: la belle-mère

la belle-mère — "a mother-in-law".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

belle-mère — the feminine of the word for "beautiful", ← Latin bella, used as a courtesy, and mère, "mother".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la belle-mère
- Say it: la belle-mère, once more
- Say it: say la belle-mère
- Recall: say the French for a dentist, then the French for a pharmacist, then say la belle-mère again

Before you move on

What does la belle-mère mean? ("A mother-in-law".) Say it once more.

167.2 le gendre — a son-in-law

Before the new one: say the French for a pharmacist, then the French for a mother-in-law.

You'll want to know: le gendre

le gendre — "a son-in-law".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gendre ← Latin gener, "son-in-law" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited; French slipped a d between n and r.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le gendre
- Say it: le gendre, once more
- Say it: say le gendre
- Recall: say the French for a pharmacist, then the French for a mother-in-law, then say le gendre again

Before you move on

What does le gendre mean? ("A son-in-law".) Say it once more.

167.3 la belle-fille — a daughter-in-law

Before the new one: say the French for a mother-in-law, then the French for a son-in-law.

You'll want to know: la belle-fille

la belle-fille — "a daughter-in-law".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

belle-fille — the feminine of the word for "beautiful", ← Latin bella, used as a courtesy, and fille, "daughter".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la belle-fille
- Say it: la belle-fille, once more
- Say it: say la belle-fille
- Recall: say the French for a mother-in-law, then the French for a son-in-law, then say la belle-fille again

Before you move on

What does la belle-fille mean? ("A daughter-in-law".) Say it once more.

167.4 le fiancé — a fiancé

Before the new one: say the French for a son-in-law, then the French for a daughter-in-law.

You'll want to know: le fiancé

le fiancé — "a fiancé".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fiancé is the past participle of the verb for "to betroth", built on Old French fiance, "a promise", from Vulgar Latin fidare*, "to trust", from Latin fides, "faith" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le fiancé
- Say it: le fiancé, once more
- Say it: say le fiancé
- Recall: say the French for a son-in-law, then the French for a daughter-in-law, then say le fiancé again

Before you move on

What does le fiancé mean? ("A fiancé".) Say it once more.

167.5 la fiancée — a fiancée

Before the new one: say the French for a daughter-in-law, then the French for a fiancé.

You'll want to know: la fiancée

la fiancée — "a fiancée".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fiancée is the feminine of fiancé: the woman promised in marriage. Fiancé comes from Old French fiance, "a promise", from the Latin family of fidēs, "faith".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fiancée
- Say it: la fiancée, once more
- Say it: say la fiancée
- Recall: say the French for a daughter-in-law, then the French for a fiancé, then say la fiancée again

Before you move on

What does la fiancée mean? ("A fiancée".) Say it once more.

Chapter 168

Rule, Permission, Ban, Safety, Advice

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a rule, permission, a ban, safety and advice.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 168: I can say a rule, permission, a ban, safety and advice.

168.1 la règle — a rule

Before the new one: say the French for a fiancé, then the French for a fiancée.

You'll want to know: la règle

la règle — "a rule".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

règle ← Latin regula, "a straight stick, a rule", from regere, "to guide" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la règle
- Say it: la règle, once more
- Say it: say la règle
- Recall: say the French for a fiancé, then the French for a fiancée, then say la règle again

Before you move on

What does la règle mean? ("A rule".) Say it once more.

168.2 la permission — permission

Before the new one: say the French for a fiancée, then the French for a rule.

You'll want to know: la permission

la permission — "permission".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

permission ← Latin permissio, "a letting go, leave", from permittere — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la permission
- Say it: la permission, once more
- Say it: say la permission
- Recall: say the French for a fiancée, then the French for a rule, then say la permission again

Before you move on

What does la permission mean? ("Permission".) Say it once more.

168.3 l'interdiction — a ban

Before the new one: say the French for a rule, then the French for permission.

You'll want to know: l'interdiction

l'interdiction — "a ban".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

interdiction ← Latin interdictio, "a forbidding", from interdicere — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'interdiction
- Say it: l'interdiction, once more
- Say it: say l'interdiction
- Recall: say the French for a rule, then the French for permission, then say l'interdiction again

Before you move on

What does l'interdiction mean? ("A ban".) Say it once more.

168.4 la sécurité — safety

Before the new one: say the French for permission, then the French for a ban.

You'll want to know: la sécurité

la sécurité — "safety".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sécurité ← Latin securitas, "freedom from care", from securus (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing; the same securus wore down into sûr.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la sécurité
- Say it: la sécurité, once more
- Say it: say la sécurité
- Recall: say the French for permission, then the French for a ban, then say la sécurité again

Before you move on

What does la sécurité mean? ("Safety".) Say it once more.

168.5 le conseil — advice

Before the new one: say the French for a ban, then the French for safety.

You'll want to know: le conseil

le conseil — "advice".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

conseil ← Old French conseil ← Latin consilium, "advice, a plan, a council" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le conseil
- Say it: le conseil, once more
- Say it: say le conseil
- Recall: say the French for a ban, then the French for safety, then say le conseil again

Before you move on

What does le conseil mean? ("Advice".) Say it once more.

Chapter 169

Postcard, Folder, Pay slip, Label, Guide

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a postcard, a folder, a pay slip, a label and a guide.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 169: I can say a postcard, a folder, a pay slip, a label and a guide.

169.1 la carte postale — a postcard

Before the new one: say the French for safety, then the French for advice.

You'll want to know: la carte postale

la carte postale — "a postcard".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

carte postale — "postal card": carte, "card", and the adjective made from poste.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la carte postale
- Say it: la carte postale, once more
- Say it: say la carte postale
- Recall: say the French for safety, then the French for advice, then say la carte postale again

Before you move on

What does la carte postale mean? ("A postcard".) Say it once more.

169.2 le dossier — a folder, a file

Before the new one: say the French for advice, then the French for a postcard.

You'll want to know: le dossier

le dossier — "a folder, a file".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dossier — built from the word for "back", ← Latin dorsum (Lewis & Short), with -ier: a bundle labelled on its back.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dossier
- Say it: le dossier, once more
- Say it: say le dossier
- Recall: say the French for advice, then the French for a postcard, then say le dossier again

Before you move on

What does le dossier mean? (“A folder, a file”.) Say it once more.

169.3 la fiche de paie — a pay slip

Before the new one: say the French for a postcard, then the French for a folder.

You’ll want to know: la fiche de paie

la fiche de paie — “a pay slip”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fiche de paie — “slip of pay”: fiche, “a slip, a peg”, from the verb for “to fix” (EtymDB 2.1); de, “of”; and paie, “pay”, from payer.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fiche de paie
- Say it: la fiche de paie, once more
- Say it: say la fiche de paie
- Recall: say the French for a postcard, then the French for a folder, then say la fiche de paie again

Before you move on

What does la fiche de paie mean? (“A pay slip”.) Say it once more.

169.4 l’étiquette — a label

Before the new one: say the French for a folder, then the French for a pay slip.

You'll want to know: l'étiquette

l'étiquette — "a label".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étiquette ← Old French estiquette, "a note stuck on", from estechier, "to stick, to attach", a Germanic word. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'étiquette
- Say it: l'étiquette, once more
- Say it: say l'étiquette
- Recall: say the French for a folder, then the French for a pay slip, then say l'étiquette again

Before you move on

What does l'étiquette mean? ("A label".) Say it once more.

169.5 le guide — a guide, a guidebook

Before the new one: say the French for a pay slip, then the French for a label.

You'll want to know: le guide

le guide — "a guide, a guidebook".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

guide ← Old Provençal guida, from guidar, "to guide", from Frankish witan*, "to show the way" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le guide
- Say it: le guide, once more
- Say it: say le guide
- Recall: say the French for a pay slip, then the French for a label, then say le guide again

Before you move on

What does le guide mean? ("A guide, a guidebook".) Say it once more.

169.6 Words from chapters 161-164 — a first pass

Say the words for a label and a guide.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- modern, former, fresh, spicy, raw
- worried, with a cold, single, married, divorced
- a flat, a dining room, a balcony, a lock, a doorbell
- a passport, customs, a booking, a butcher's, a large river

Before you move on

Modern? (moderne.) Former? (ancien / ancienne.) Fresh? (frais / fraîche.) Spicy? (épicé / épicée.) Raw? (cru / crue.) Worried? (inquiet / inquiète.) With a cold? (enrhumé / enrhumée.) Single? (célibataire.) Married? (marié / mariée.)

Divorced? (divorcé / divorcée.) A flat? (l'appartement.) A dining room? (la salle à manger.) A balcony? (le balcon.) A lock? (la serrure.) A doorbell? (la sonnette.) A passport? (le passeport.) Customs? (la douane.) A booking? (la réservation.) A butcher's? (la boucherie.) A large river? (le fleuve.)

169.7 Words from chapters 165-169 — a second pass

Say the words for war and peace.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- war, peace, an army, a soldier, a tradition
- a photographer, a journalist, an architect, a dentist, a pharmacist
- a mother-in-law, a son-in-law, a daughter-in-law, a fiancé, a fiancée
- a rule, permission, a ban, safety, advice
- a postcard, a folder, a pay slip, a label, a guide

Before you move on

War? (la guerre.) Peace? (la paix.) An army? (l'armée.) A soldier? (le soldat.) A tradition? (la tradition.) A photographer? (le photographe.) A journalist? (le journaliste.) An architect? (l'architecte.) A dentist? (le dentiste.) A pharmacist? (le pharmacien.) A mother-in-law? (la belle-mère.) A son-in-law? (le gendre.) A daughter-in-law? (la belle-fille.) A fiancé? (le fiancé.) A fiancée? (la fiancée.) A rule? (la règle.) Permission? (la permission.) A ban? (l'interdiction.) Safety? (la sécurité.) Advice? (le conseil.) A postcard? (la carte postale.) A folder? (le dossier.) A pay slip? (la fiche de paie.) A label? (l'étiquette.) A guide? (le guide.)

Chapter 170

Castle, Tower, Monument, Statue, Fountain

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a castle, a tower, a monument, a statue and a fountain.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 170: I can say a castle, a tower, a monument, a statue and a fountain.

170.1 le château — a castle

Before the new one: say the French for a label, then the French for a guide, a guidebook.

You'll want to know: le château

le château — "a castle".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

château ← Old French chastel ← Latin castellum, "a fort" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: ca- became cha-, and the circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le château
- Say it: le château, once more
- Say it: say le château
- Recall: say the French for a label, then the French for a guide, a guidebook, then say le château again

Before you move on

What does le château mean? (“A castle”.) Say it once more.

170.2 la tour — a tower

Before the new one: say the French for a guide, a guidebook, then the French for a castle.

You’ll want to know: la tour

la tour — “a tower”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tour ← Old French tor ← Latin turris, “a tower”, from Greek — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la tour
- Say it: la tour, once more
- Say it: say la tour
- Recall: say the French for a guide, a guidebook, then the French for a castle, then say la tour again

Before you move on

What does la tour mean? (“A tower”.) Say it once more.

170.3 le monument — a monument

Before the new one: say the French for a castle, then the French for a tower.

You’ll want to know: le monument

le monument — “a monument”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

monument ← Latin monumentum, “a memorial”, from monere, “to remind” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le monument
- Say it: le monument, once more
- Say it: say le monument
- Recall: say the French for a castle, then the French for a tower, then say le monument again

Before you move on

What does le monument mean? (“A monument”.) Say it once more.

170.4 la statue — a statue

Before the new one: say the French for a tower, then the French for a monument.

You'll want to know: la statue

la statue — "a statue".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

statue ← Latin statua, "a standing image", from stare, "to stand" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la statue
- Say it: la statue, once more
- Say it: say la statue
- Recall: say the French for a tower, then the French for a monument, then say la statue again

Before you move on

What does la statue mean? ("A statue".) Say it once more.

170.5 la fontaine — a fountain

Before the new one: say the French for a monument, then the French for a statue.

You'll want to know: la fontaine

la fontaine — "a fountain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fontaine ← Late Latin fontana, from fons, fontis, "a spring" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fontaine
- Say it: la fontaine, once more
- Say it: say la fontaine
- Recall: say the French for a monument, then the French for a statue, then say la fontaine again

Before you move on

What does la fontaine mean? ("A fountain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 171

Volcano, Plain, Waterfall, Rock, Pebble

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a volcano, a plain, a waterfall, a rock and a pebble.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 171: I can say a volcano, a plain, a waterfall, a rock and a pebble.

171.1 le volcan — a volcano

> Before the new one: say the French for a statue, then the French for a fountain.

You'll want to know: le volcan

le volcan — "a volcano".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

volcan ← Italian vulcano, from Latin Vulcanus, the god of fire — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1 records the Latin name.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le volcan
- Say it: le volcan, once more
- Say it: say le volcan
- Recall: say the French for a statue, then the French for a fountain, then say le volcan again

Before you move on

What does le volcan mean? ("A volcano".) Say it once more.

171.2 la plaine — a plain

Before the new one: say the French for a fountain, then the French for a volcano.

You'll want to know: la plaine

la plaine — "a plain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plaine ← Latin plana, "flat", the feminine of planus (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la plaine
- Say it: la plaine, once more
- Say it: say la plaine
- Recall: say the French for a fountain, then the French for a volcano, then say la plaine again

Before you move on

What does la plaine mean? ("A plain".) Say it once more.

171.3 la cascade — a waterfall

Before the new one: say the French for a volcano, then the French for a plain.

You'll want to know: la cascade

la cascade — "a waterfall".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cascade ← Italian cascata, from cascare, "to fall" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cascade
- Say it: la cascade, once more
- Say it: say la cascade
- Recall: say the French for a volcano, then the French for a plain, then say la cascade again

Before you move on

What does la cascade mean? ("A waterfall".) Say it once more.

171.4 le rocher — a rock

Before the new one: say the French for a plain, then the French for a waterfall.

You'll want to know: le rocher

le rocher — "a rock".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rocher ← Old French rochier, built from the word for "rock", ← Medieval Latin rocca, whose origin is unknown. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le rocher
- Say it: le rocher, once more
- Say it: say le rocher
- Recall: say the French for a plain, then the French for a waterfall, then say le rocher again

Before you move on

What does le rocher mean? ("A rock".) Say it once more.

171.5 le caillou — a pebble

Before the new one: say the French for a waterfall, then the French for a rock.

You'll want to know: le caillou

le caillou — "a pebble".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

caillou ← Norman French caillou (EtymDB 2.1), from a Gaulish word for "stone" — borrowed from the dialects.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le caillou
- Say it: le caillou, once more
- Say it: say le caillou
- Recall: say the French for a waterfall, then the French for a rock, then say le caillou again

Before you move on

What does le caillou mean? ("A pebble".) Say it once more.

Chapter 172

Plastic, Cotton, Wool, Silk, Leather

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say plastic, cotton, wool, silk and leather.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 172: I can say plastic, cotton, wool, silk and leather.

172.1 le plastique — plastic

Before the new one: say the French for a rock, then the French for a pebble.

You'll want to know: le plastique

le plastique — "plastic".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plastique ← Latin plasticus, "of moulding", from Greek plastikos (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le plastique
- Say it: le plastique, once more
- Say it: say le plastique
- Recall: say the French for a rock, then the French for a pebble, then say le plastique again

Before you move on

What does le plastique mean? ("Plastic".) Say it once more.

172.2 le coton — cotton

Before the new one: say the French for a pebble, then the French for plastic.

You'll want to know: le coton

le coton — "cotton".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

coton ← Italian cotone ← Arabic qutn — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le coton
- Say it: le coton, once more
- Say it: say le coton
- Recall: say the French for a pebble, then the French for plastic, then say le coton again

Before you move on

What does le coton mean? (“Cotton”.) Say it once more.

172.3 la laine — wool

Before the new one: say the French for plastic, then the French for cotton.

You’ll want to know: la laine

la laine — “wool”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

laine ← Old French lainne (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin lana, “wool” (Lewis & Short) — inherited: the stressed a became ai.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la laine
- Say it: la laine, once more
- Say it: say la laine
- Recall: say the French for plastic, then the French for cotton, then say la laine again

Before you move on

What does la laine mean? (“Wool”.) Say it once more.

172.4 la soie — silk

Before the new one: say the French for cotton, then the French for wool.

You'll want to know: la soie

la soie — "silk".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soie ← Latin saeta, "a bristle, a stiff hair", later a silk thread — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la soie
- Say it: la soie, once more
- Say it: say la soie
- Recall: say the French for cotton, then the French for wool, then say la soie again

Before you move on

What does la soie mean? ("Silk".) Say it once more.

172.5 le cuir — leather

Before the new one: say the French for wool, then the French for silk.

You'll want to know: le cuir

le cuir — "leather".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cuir ← Latin corium, "hide, leather" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le cuir
- Say it: le cuir, once more
- Say it: say le cuir
- Recall: say the French for wool, then the French for silk, then say le cuir again

Before you move on

What does le cuir mean? (“Leather”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 173

Ball, Racket, Gym, Swimming, Victory

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a ball, a racket, a gym, swimming and a victory.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 173: I can say a ball, a racket, a gym, swimming and a victory.

173.1 le ballon — a ball

> Before the new one: say the French for silk, then the French for leather.

You'll want to know: le ballon

le ballon — "a ball".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ballon ← Italian pallone, "a big ball", reshaped after the French word for "ball" — borrowed in the 1500s. (EtymDB 2.1 has its Middle French form.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le ballon
- Say it: le ballon, once more
- Say it: say le ballon
- Recall: say the French for silk, then the French for leather, then say le ballon again

Before you move on

What does le ballon mean? (“A ball”.) Say it once more.

173.2 la raquette — a racket

Before the new one: say the French for leather, then the French for a ball.

You’ll want to know: la raquette

la raquette — “a racket”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

raquette ← Medieval Latin rasceta, from Arabic raha, “the palm of the hand” — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la raquette
- Say it: la raquette, once more
- Say it: say la raquette
- Recall: say the French for leather, then the French for a ball, then say la raquette again

Before you move on

What does la raquette mean? (“A racket”.) Say it once more.

173.3 la salle de sport — a gym

Before the new one: say the French for a ball, then the French for a racket.

You’ll want to know: la salle de sport

la salle de sport — “a gym”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salle de sport — “room of sport”: salle, de and sport. Salle ← Frankish sal, “hall”; sport is borrowed from English (EtymDB 2.1), which took it from Old French desport, “a pastime”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la salle de sport
- Say it: la salle de sport, once more
- Say it: say la salle de sport
- Recall: say the French for a ball, then the French for a racket, then say la salle de sport again

Before you move on

What does la salle de sport mean? (“A gym”.) Say it once more.

173.4 la natation — swimming

Before the new one: say the French for a racket, then the French for a gym.

You'll want to know: la natation

la natation — "swimming".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

natation ← Latin natatio, "swimming", from natare, "to swim" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la natation
- Say it: la natation, once more
- Say it: say la natation
- Recall: say the French for a racket, then the French for a gym, then say la natation again

Before you move on

What does la natation mean? ("Swimming".) Say it once more.

173.5 la victoire — a victory

Before the new one: say the French for a gym, then the French for swimming.

You'll want to know: la victoire

la victoire — "a victory".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

victoire ← Latin victoria, "victory", from vincere, "to conquer" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la victoire
- Say it: la victoire, once more
- Say it: say la victoire
- Recall: say the French for a gym, then the French for swimming, then say la victoire again

Before you move on

What does la victoire mean? ("A victory".) Say it once more.

Chapter 174

Company, Colleague, Salary, Meeting, Contract

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a company, a colleague, a salary, a meeting and a contract.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 174: I can say a company, a colleague, a salary, a meeting and a contract.

174.1 l'entreprise — a company

> Before the new one: say the French for swimming, then the French for a victory.

You'll want to know: l'entreprise

l'entreprise — "a company".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

entreprise is the past participle of the verb for "to undertake", built from entre- and prendre, "to take": a thing taken in hand.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'entreprise
- Say it: l'entreprise, once more
- Say it: say l'entreprise
- Recall: say the French for swimming, then the French for a victory, then say l'entreprise again

Before you move on

What does l'entreprise mean? ("A company".) Say it once more.

174.2 le collègue — a colleague

Before the new one: say the French for a victory, then the French for a company.

You'll want to know: le collègue

le collègue — "a colleague".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

collègue ← Latin collega, "a partner in office" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le collègue
- Say it: le collègue, once more
- Say it: say le collègue
- Recall: say the French for a victory, then the French for a company, then say le collègue again

Before you move on

What does le collègue mean? ("A colleague".) Say it once more.

174.3 le salaire — a salary

Before the new one: say the French for a company, then the French for a colleague.

You'll want to know: le salaire

le salaire — "a salary".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

salaire ← Latin salarium, "wages", first "salt money", from sal, "salt" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le salaire
- Say it: le salaire, once more
- Say it: say le salaire
- Recall: say the French for a company, then the French for a colleague, then say le salaire again

Before you move on

What does le salaire mean? ("A salary".) Say it once more.

174.4 la réunion — a meeting

Before the new one: say the French for a colleague, then the French for a salary.

You'll want to know: la réunion

la réunion — "a meeting".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réunion — formed from the verb for "to reunite", built on the verb for "to unite", ← Latin unire, from unus, "one". (EtymDB 2.1 links it to the verb.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la réunion
- Say it: la réunion, once more
- Say it: say la réunion
- Recall: say the French for a colleague, then the French for a salary, then say la réunion again

Before you move on

What does la réunion mean? ("A meeting".) Say it once more.

174.5 le contrat — a contract

Before the new one: say the French for a salary, then the French for a meeting.

You'll want to know: le contrat

le contrat — "a contract".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

contrat ← Old French contract ← Latin contractum, "a thing drawn together, an agreement" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le contrat
- Say it: le contrat, once more
- Say it: say le contrat
- Recall: say the French for a salary, then the French for a meeting, then say le contrat again

Before you move on

What does le contrat mean? ("A contract".) Say it once more.

174.6 Words from chapters 170-171 — a first pass

Say the words for a meeting and a contract.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a castle, a tower, a monument, a statue, a fountain
- a volcano, a plain, a waterfall, a rock, a pebble

Before you move on

A castle? (le château.) A tower? (la tour.) A monument? (le monument.) A statue? (la statue.) A fountain? (la fontaine.) A volcano? (le volcan.) A plain? (la plaine.) A waterfall? (la cascade.) A rock? (le rocher.) A pebble? (le caillou.)

174.7 Words from chapters 172-174 — a second pass

Say the words for plastic and cotton.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- plastic, cotton, wool, silk, leather
- a ball, a racket, a gym, swimming, a victory
- a company, a colleague, a salary, a meeting, a contract

Before you move on

Plastic? (le plastique.) Cotton? (le coton.) Wool? (la laine.) Silk? (la soie.) Leather? (le cuir.) A ball? (le ballon.) A racket? (la raquette.) A gym? (la salle de sport.) Swimming? (la natation.) A victory? (la victoire.) A company? (l'entreprise.) A colleague? (le collègue.) A salary? (le salaire.) A meeting? (la réunion.) A contract? (le contrat.)

Chapter 175

To kiss, To greet, To thank, To invite, To park

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to kiss, to greet, to thank, to invite and to park.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 175: I can say to kiss, to greet, to thank, to invite and to park.

175.1 embrasser — to kiss

> Before the new one: say the French for a meeting, then the French for a contract.

You'll want to know: embrasser

embrasser — "to kiss".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

embrasser — built from em-, "into", and bras, "arm": to take into the arms, now to kiss.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: embrasser
- Say it: embrasser, once more
- Say it: say embrasser
- Recall: say the French for a meeting, then the French for a contract, then say embrasser again

Before you move on

What does embrasser mean? ("To kiss".) Say it once more.

175.2 saluer — to greet

Before the new one: say the French for a contract, then the French for to kiss.

You'll want to know: saluer

saluer — "to greet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

saluer ← Latin salutare, "to greet, to wish health", from salus, "health" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: saluer
- Say it: saluer, once more
- Say it: say saluer
- Recall: say the French for a contract, then the French for to kiss, then say saluer again

Before you move on

What does saluer mean? (“To greet”.) Say it once more.

175.3 remercier — to thank

Before the new one: say the French for to kiss, then the French for to greet.

You’ll want to know: remercier

remercier — “to thank”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

remercier — built from re- and the old verb for “to thank”, made from merci, “thank you”. (EtymDB 2.1 has its Middle French form.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: remercier
- Say it: remercier, once more
- Say it: say remercier
- Recall: say the French for to kiss, then the French for to greet, then say remercier again

Before you move on

What does remercier mean? (“To thank”.) Say it once more.

175.4 inviter — to invite

Before the new one: say the French for to greet, then the French for to thank.

You'll want to know: inviter

inviter — "to invite".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

inviter ← Latin invitare, "to invite" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inviter
- Say it: inviter, once more
- Say it: say inviter
- Recall: say the French for to greet, then the French for to thank, then say inviter again

Before you move on

What does inviter mean? ("To invite".) Say it once more.

175.5 garer — to park

Before the new one: say the French for to thank, then the French for to invite.

You'll want to know: garer

garer — "to park".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

garer ← Old French garer, warer, "to shelter, to guard" (EtymDB 2.1), from a Germanic verb meaning "to watch over" — borrowed: to park is to put in shelter.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: garer
- Say it: garer, once more
- Say it: say garer
- Recall: say the French for to thank, then the French for to invite, then say garer again

Before you move on

What does garer mean? ("To park".) Say it once more.

Chapter 176

To stop, To change, To move, To take off, To hold

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to stop, to change, to move, to take off and to hold.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 176: I can say to stop, to change, to move, to take off and to hold.

176.1 arrêter — to stop

> Before the new one: say the French for to invite, then the French for to park.

You'll want to know: arrêter

arrêter — "to stop".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

arrêter ← Old French arester ← Vulgar Latin arrestare*, from ad and restare, "to stay back" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: arrêter
- Say it: arrêter, once more
- Say it: say arrêter
- Recall: say the French for to invite, then the French for to park, then say arrêter again

Before you move on

What does arrêter mean? ("To stop".) Say it once more.

176.2 changer — to change

Before the new one: say the French for to park, then the French for to stop.

You'll want to know: changer

changer — "to change".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

changer ← Old French changier ← Late Latin cambiare, "to exchange", a word Latin took from Gaulish — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: changer
- Say it: changer, once more
- Say it: say changer
- Recall: say the French for to park, then the French for to stop, then say changer again

Before you move on

What does changer mean? ("To change".) Say it once more.

176.3 déplacer — to move (something)

Before the new one: say the French for to stop, then the French for to change.

You'll want to know: déplacer

déplacer — "to move (something)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

déplacer — built from dé- and the word for "a place", ← Latin platea, "a broad street" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: déplacer
- Say it: déplacer, once more
- Say it: say déplacer
- Recall: say the French for to stop, then the French for to change, then say déplacer again

Before you move on

What does déplacer mean? ("To move (something)".) Say it once more.

176.4 enlever — to take off, to remove

Before the new one: say the French for to change, then the French for to move.

You'll want to know: enlever

enlever — "to take off, to remove".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enlever — built from en, "away", and lever, "to lift", ← Latin levare.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: enlever
- Say it: enlever, once more
- Say it: say enlever
- Recall: say the French for to change, then the French for to move, then say enlever again

Before you move on

What does enlever mean? ("To take off, to remove".) Say it once more.

176.5 tenir — to hold

Before the new one: say the French for to move, then the French for to take off.

You'll want to know: tenir

tenir — "to hold".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tenir ← Vulgar Latin tenire* ← Latin tenere, "to hold" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tenir
- Say it: tenir, once more
- Say it: say tenir
- Recall: say the French for to move, then the French for to take off, then say tenir again

Before you move on

What does tenir mean? ("To hold".) Say it once more.

Chapter 177

To promise, To allow, To forbid, To protect, To rescue

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to promise, to allow, to forbid, to protect and to rescue.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 177: I can say to promise, to allow, to forbid, to protect and to rescue.

177.1 promettre — to promise

Before the new one: say the French for to take off, then the French for to hold.

You'll want to know: promettre

promettre — "to promise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

promettre ← Old French prometre ← Latin promittere, "to send forward, to promise" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: mettre with pro-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: promettre
- Say it: promettre, once more
- Say it: say promettre
- Recall: say the French for to take off, then the French for to hold, then say promettre again

Before you move on

What does promettre mean? ("To promise".) Say it once more.

177.2 permettre — to allow

Before the new one: say the French for to hold, then the French for to promise.

You'll want to know: permettre

permettre — "to allow".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

permettre ← Latin permittere, "to let through, to allow" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited, reshaped on mettre.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: permettre
- Say it: permettre, once more
- Say it: say permettre
- Recall: say the French for to hold, then the French for to promise, then say permettre again

Before you move on

What does permettre mean? (“To allow”.) Say it once more.

177.3 interdire — to forbid

Before the new one: say the French for to promise, then the French for to allow.

You’ll want to know: interdire

interdire — “to forbid”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

interdire ← Latin interdicere, “to forbid”, from inter, “between”, and dicere, “to say” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interdire
- Say it: interdire, once more
- Say it: say interdire
- Recall: say the French for to promise, then the French for to allow, then say interdire again

Before you move on

What does interdire mean? (“To forbid”.) Say it once more.

177.4 protéger — to protect

Before the new one: say the French for to allow, then the French for to forbid.

You'll want to know: protéger

protéger — "to protect".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

protéger ← Latin protegere, "to cover in front" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: protéger
- Say it: protéger, once more
- Say it: say protéger
- Recall: say the French for to allow, then the French for to forbid, then say protéger again

Before you move on

What does protéger mean? ("To protect".) Say it once more.

177.5 sauver — to rescue

Before the new one: say the French for to forbid, then the French for to protect.

You'll want to know: sauver

sauver — "to rescue".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sauver ← Late Latin salvare, "to save", from salvus, "safe" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sauver
- Say it: sauver, once more
- Say it: say sauver
- Recall: say the French for to forbid, then the French for to protect, then say sauver again

Before you move on

What does sauver mean? ("To rescue".) Say it once more.

Chapter 178

To snow, To go with, To add, To announce, To appear

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to snow, to go with, to add, to announce and to appear.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 178: I can say to snow, to go with, to add, to announce and to appear.

178.1 neiger — to snow

> Before the new one: say the French for to protect, then the French for to rescue.

You'll want to know: neiger

neiger — "to snow".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

neiger ← Vulgar Latin nivicare*, from Latin nix, nivis, "snow" — inherited; neige was made from it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: neiger
- Say it: neiger, once more
- Say it: say neiger
- Recall: say the French for to protect, then the French for to rescue, then say neiger again

Before you move on

What does neiger mean? ("To snow".) Say it once more.

178.2 accompagner — to go with

Before the new one: say the French for to rescue, then the French for to snow.

You'll want to know: accompagner

accompagner — "to go with".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

accompagner ← Old French acompagner, built on compaing, "a companion" (EtymDB 2.1), from Late Latin companio, "one who shares bread", from panis, the Latin of pain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: accompagner
- Say it: accompagner, once more
- Say it: say accompagner
- Recall: say the French for to rescue, then the French for to snow, then say accompagner again

Before you move on

What does accompagner mean? ("To go with".) Say it once more.

178.3 ajouter — to add

Before the new one: say the French for to snow, then the French for to go with.

You'll want to know: ajouter

ajouter — "to add".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ajouter ← Old French ajouster ← Vulgar Latin adiuxtare*, "to put beside", from Latin iuxta, "next to" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ajouter
- Say it: ajouter, once more
- Say it: say ajouter
- Recall: say the French for to snow, then the French for to go with, then say ajouter again

Before you move on

What does ajouter mean? ("To add".) Say it once more.

178.4 annoncer — to announce

Before the new one: say the French for to go with, then the French for to add.

You'll want to know: annoncer annoncer — "to announce".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

annoncer ← Old French anoncier ← Latin annuntiare, "to make known", from nuntius, "a messenger" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: annoncer
- Say it: annoncer, once more
- Say it: say annoncer
- Recall: say the French for to go with, then the French for to add, then say annoncer again

Before you move on

What does annoncer mean? ("To announce".) Say it once more.

178.5 apparaître — to appear

Before the new one: say the French for to add, then the French for to announce.

You'll want to know: apparaître

apparaître — "to appear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

apparaître ← Old French aparoistre ← Late Latin apparescere, from Latin apparere, "to appear" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: apparaître
- Say it: apparaître, once more
- Say it: say apparaître
- Recall: say the French for to add, then the French for to announce, then say apparaître again

Before you move on

What does apparaître mean? ("To appear".) Say it once more.

Chapter 179

To depend, To share, To avoid, To throw, To turn

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to depend, to share, to avoid, to throw and to turn.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 179: I can say to depend, to share, to avoid, to throw and to turn.

179.1 dépendre — to depend

Before the new one: say the French for to announce, then the French for to appear.

You'll want to know: dépendre

dépendre — "to depend".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dépendre ← Latin dependere, "to hang from" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dépendre
- Say it: dépendre, once more
- Say it: say dépendre
- Recall: say the French for to announce, then the French for to appear, then say dépendre again

Before you move on

What does dépendre mean? ("To depend".) Say it once more.

179.2 partager — to share

Before the new one: say the French for to appear, then the French for to depend.

You'll want to know: partager

partager — "to share".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

partager — built from the word for "a share", from the word for "a part", ← Latin pars, partis (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: partager
- Say it: partager, once more
- Say it: say partager
- Recall: say the French for to appear, then the French for to depend, then say partager again

Before you move on

What does partager mean? (“To share”.) Say it once more.

179.3 éviter — to avoid

Before the new one: say the French for to depend, then the French for to share.

You’ll want to know: éviter

éviter — “to avoid”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

éviter ← Latin evitare, “to shun” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: éviter
- Say it: éviter, once more
- Say it: say éviter
- Recall: say the French for to depend, then the French for to share, then say éviter again

Before you move on

What does éviter mean? (“To avoid”.) Say it once more.

179.4 lancer — to throw

Before the new one: say the French for to share, then the French for to avoid.

You'll want to know: lancer

lancer — "to throw".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lancer ← Old French lancier ← Late Latin lanceare, "to wield a lance", from lancea, "a lance" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lancer
- Say it: lancer, once more
- Say it: say lancer
- Recall: say the French for to share, then the French for to avoid, then say lancer again

Before you move on

What does lancer mean? ("To throw".) Say it once more.

179.5 tourner — to turn

Before the new one: say the French for to avoid, then the French for to throw.

You'll want to know: tourner

tourner — "to turn".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tourner ← Old French torner ← Latin tornare, "to turn on a lathe", from tornus, "a lathe" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tourner
- Say it: tourner, once more
- Say it: say tourner
- Recall: say the French for to avoid, then the French for to throw, then say tourner again

Before you move on

What does tourner mean? ("To turn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 180

To prepare, To introduce, To lend, To propose, To pick up

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to prepare, to introduce, to lend, to propose and to pick up.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 180: I can say to prepare, to introduce, to lend, to propose and to pick up.

180.1 préparer — to prepare

Before the new one: say the French for to throw, then the French for to turn.

You'll want to know: préparer

préparer — "to prepare".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

préparer ← Latin praeparare, "to make ready beforehand" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: préparer
- Say it: préparer, once more
- Say it: say préparer
- Recall: say the French for to throw, then the French for to turn, then say préparer again

Before you move on

What does préparer mean? ("To prepare".) Say it once more.

180.2 présenter — to introduce

Before the new one: say the French for to turn, then the French for to prepare.

You'll want to know: présenter

présenter — "to introduce".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

présenter ← Latin praesentare, "to show, to place before" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: présenter
- Say it: présenter, once more
- Say it: say présenter
- Recall: say the French for to turn, then the French for to prepare, then say présenter again

Before you move on

What does présenter mean? ("To introduce".) Say it once more.

180.3 prêter — to lend

Before the new one: say the French for to prepare, then the French for to introduce.

You'll want to know: prêter

prêter — "to lend".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prêter ← Middle French prester ← Latin praestare, "to provide, to vouch for" (Lewis & Short) — inherited; the circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prêter
- Say it: prêter, once more
- Say it: say prêter
- Recall: say the French for to prepare, then the French for to introduce, then say prêter again

Before you move on

What does prêter mean? ("To lend".) Say it once more.

180.4 proposer — to propose

Before the new one: say the French for to introduce, then the French for to lend.

You'll want to know: proposer

proposer — "to propose".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

proposer ← Old French proposer, after Latin proponere, "to put forward" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: proposer
- Say it: proposer, once more
- Say it: say proposer
- Recall: say the French for to introduce, then the French for to lend, then say proposer again

Before you move on

What does proposer mean? ("To propose".) Say it once more.

180.5 ramasser — to pick up

Before the new one: say the French for to lend, then the French for to propose.

You'll want to know: ramasser

ramasser — "to pick up".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ramasser — built from re- and the verb for "to heap up", from the word for "a mass", ← Latin massa, "a lump" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ramasser
- Say it: ramasser, once more
- Say it: say ramasser
- Recall: say the French for to lend, then the French for to propose, then say ramasser again

Before you move on

What does ramasser mean? ("To pick up".) Say it once more.

Chapter 181

To look like, To push, To pull, To waste, To overtake

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to look like, to push, to pull, to waste and to overtake.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 181: I can say to look like, to push, to pull, to waste and to overtake.

181.1 ressembler — to look like

Before the new one: say the French for to propose, then the French for to pick up.

You'll want to know: ressembler

ressembler — "to look like".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ressembler — built from re- and sembler, "to seem": to seem like.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ressembler
- Say it: ressembler, once more
- Say it: say ressembler
- Recall: say the French for to propose, then the French for to pick up, then say ressembler again

Before you move on

What does ressembler mean? ("To look like".) Say it once more.

181.2 pousser — to push

Before the new one: say the French for to pick up, then the French for to look like.

You'll want to know: pousser

pousser — "to push".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pousser ← Latin pulsare, "to push, to beat" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pousser
- Say it: pousser, once more
- Say it: say pousser
- Recall: say the French for to pick up, then the French for to look like, then say pousser again

Before you move on

What does pousser mean? (“To push”.) Say it once more.

181.3 tirer — to pull

Before the new one: say the French for to look like, then the French for to push.

You’ll want to know: tirer

tirer — “to pull”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tirer ← Old French tirer, “to draw out” (EtymDB 2.1), of uncertain origin; EtymDB links it to Gothic tairan, “to tear”, one of several proposals.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tirer
- Say it: tirer, once more
- Say it: say tirer
- Recall: say the French for to look like, then the French for to push, then say tirer again

Before you move on

What does tirer mean? (“To pull”.) Say it once more.

181.4 gaspiller — to waste

Before the new one: say the French for to push, then the French for to pull.

You'll want to know: gaspiller

gaspiller — "to waste".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gaspiller — from a dialect word for scattering chaff (EtymDB 2.1 has Old French gaspail, "chaff of wheat"); its deeper origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gaspiller
- Say it: gaspiller, once more
- Say it: say gaspiller
- Recall: say the French for to push, then the French for to pull, then say gaspiller again

Before you move on

What does gaspiller mean? ("To waste".) Say it once more.

181.5 dépasser — to overtake

Before the new one: say the French for to pull, then the French for to waste.

You'll want to know: dépasser

dépasser — "to overtake".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dépasser — built from dé-, "beyond", and the verb for "to pass", ← Vulgar Latin passare*, from Latin passus, "a step" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dépasser
- Say it: dépasser, once more
- Say it: say dépasser
- Recall: say the French for to pull, then the French for to waste, then say dépasser again

Before you move on

What does dépasser mean? ("To overtake".) Say it once more.

Chapter 182

To correct, To direct, To destroy, To exaggerate, To celebrate

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to correct, to direct, to destroy, to exaggerate and to celebrate.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 182: I can say to correct, to direct, to destroy, to exaggerate and to celebrate.

182.1 corriger — to correct

Before the new one: say the French for to waste, then the French for to overtake.

You'll want to know: corriger

corriger — "to correct".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

corriger ← Latin corrigere, "to set straight" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: corriger
- Say it: corriger, once more
- Say it: say corriger
- Recall: say the French for to waste, then the French for to overtake, then say corriger again

Before you move on

What does corriger mean? ("To correct".) Say it once more.

182.2 diriger — to direct

Before the new one: say the French for to overtake, then the French for to correct.

You'll want to know: diriger

diriger — "to direct".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

diriger ← Latin dirigere, "to set straight, to direct" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: diriger
- Say it: diriger, once more
- Say it: say diriger
- Recall: say the French for to overtake, then the French for to correct, then say diriger again

Before you move on

What does diriger mean? ("To direct".) Say it once more.

182.3 détruire — to destroy

Before the new one: say the French for to correct, then the French for to direct.

You'll want to know: détruire

détruire — "to destroy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

détruire ← Old French destruire ← Vulgar Latin destrugere* ← Latin destruere, "to pull down" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: détruire
- Say it: détruire, once more
- Say it: say détruire
- Recall: say the French for to correct, then the French for to direct, then say détruire again

Before you move on

What does détruire mean? ("To destroy".) Say it once more.

182.4 exagérer — to exaggerate

Before the new one: say the French for to direct, then the French for to destroy.

You'll want to know: exagérer exagérer — "to exaggerate".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

exagérer ← Latin exaggerare, "to heap up" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exagérer
- Say it: exagérer, once more
- Say it: say exagérer
- Recall: say the French for to direct, then the French for to destroy, then say exagérer again

Before you move on

What does exagérer mean? ("To exaggerate".) Say it once more.

182.5 fêter — to celebrate

Before the new one: say the French for to destroy, then the French for to exaggerate.

You'll want to know: fêter

fêter — "to celebrate".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fêter ← Old French fester (EtymDB 2.1), from the word for "a feast", ← Latin festa, "festivals" (Lewis & Short); the circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fêter
- Say it: fêter, once more
- Say it: say fêter
- Recall: say the French for to destroy, then the French for to exaggerate, then say fêter again

Before you move on

What does fêter mean? ("To celebrate".) Say it once more.

Chapter 183

To give up, To exchange, To download, To ski, To slip

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to give up, to exchange, to download, to ski and to slip.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 183: I can say to give up, to exchange, to download, to ski and to slip.

183.1 renoncer — to give up

Before the new one: say the French for to exaggerate, then the French for to celebrate.

You'll want to know: renoncer

renoncer — "to give up".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

renoncer ← Latin renuntiare, "to send back word, to give up" — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: renoncer
- Say it: renoncer, once more
- Say it: say renoncer
- Recall: say the French for to exaggerate, then the French for to celebrate, then say renoncer again

Before you move on

What does renoncer mean? ("To give up".) Say it once more.

183.2 échanger — to exchange

Before the new one: say the French for to celebrate, then the French for to give up.

You'll want to know: échanger

échanger — "to exchange".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

échanger ← Old French eschangier ← Vulgar Latin excambiare* (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: changer with é-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: échanger
- Say it: échanger, once more
- Say it: say échanger
- Recall: say the French for to celebrate, then the French for to give up, then say échanger again

Before you move on

What does échanger mean? (“To exchange”.) Say it once more.

183.3 télécharger — to download

Before the new one: say the French for to give up, then the French for to exchange.

You’ll want to know: télécharger

télécharger — “to download”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

télécharger — télé-, “far off”, from Greek tele, and the verb for “to load”, ← Late Latin carricare (EtymDB 2.1), from carrus, “a wagon”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: télécharger
- Say it: télécharger, once more
- Say it: say télécharger
- Recall: say the French for to give up, then the French for to exchange, then say télécharger again

Before you move on

What does télécharger mean? (“To download”.) Say it once more.

183.4 skier — to ski

Before the new one: say the French for to exchange, then the French for to download.

You'll want to know: skier

skier — "to ski".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

skier — formed from the word for "ski", ← Norwegian ski, from Old Norse skid, "a stick of wood, a snowshoe". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: skier
- Say it: skier, once more
- Say it: say skier
- Recall: say the French for to exchange, then the French for to download, then say skier again

Before you move on

What does skier mean? ("To ski".) Say it once more.

183.5 glisser — to slip

Before the new one: say the French for to download, then the French for to ski.

You'll want to know: glisser

glisser — "to slip".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

glisser ← Old French glicier, "to slip, to glide" (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to Frankish glidan*, "to glide".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: glisser
- Say it: glisser, once more
- Say it: say glisser
- Recall: say the French for to download, then the French for to ski, then say glisser again

Before you move on

What does glisser mean? ("To slip".) Say it once more.

183.6 Words from chapters 175-178 — a first pass

Say the words for to ski and to slip.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to kiss, to greet, to thank, to invite, to park
- to stop, to change, to move, to take off, to hold
- to promise, to allow, to forbid, to protect, to rescue
- to snow, to go with, to add, to announce, to appear

Before you move on

To kiss? (embrasser.) To greet? (saluer.) To thank? (remercier.) To invite? (inviter.) To park? (garer.) To stop? (arrêter.) To change? (changer.) To move? (déplacer.) To take off? (enlever.) To hold? (tenir.) To promise? (promettre.) To allow? (permettre.) To forbid? (interdire.) To protect?

(protéger.) To rescue? (sauver.) To snow? (neiger.) To go with? (accompagner.) To add? (ajouter.) To announce? (annoncer.) To appear? (apparaître.)

183.7 Words from chapters 179-183 — a second pass

Say the words for to depend and to share.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to depend, to share, to avoid, to throw, to turn
- to prepare, to introduce, to lend, to propose, to pick up
- to look like, to push, to pull, to waste, to overtake
- to correct, to direct, to destroy, to exaggerate, to celebrate
- to give up, to exchange, to download, to ski, to slip

Before you move on

To depend? (dépendre.) To share? (partager.) To avoid? (éviter.) To throw? (lancer.) To turn? (tourner.) To prepare? (préparer.) To introduce? (présenter.) To lend? (prêter.) To propose? (proposer.) To pick up? (ramasser.) To look like? (ressembler.) To push? (pousser.) To pull? (tirer.) To waste? (gaspiller.) To overtake? (dépasser.) To correct? (corriger.) To direct? (diriger.) To destroy? (détruire.) To exaggerate? (exagérer.) To celebrate? (fêter.) To give up? (renoncer.) To exchange? (échanger.) To download? (télécharger.) To ski? (skier.) To slip? (glisser.)

Chapter 184

To stir, To pick, To defend, To disappear, To borrow

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to stir, to pick, to defend, to disappear and to borrow.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 184: I can say to stir, to pick, to defend, to disappear and to borrow.

184.1 bouger — to stir, to move

> Before the new one: say the French for to ski, then the French for to slip.

You'll want to know: bouger

bouger — "to stir, to move".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bouger ← Vulgar Latin bullicare*, "to bubble, to stir", from Latin bullire, "to boil" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bouger
- Say it: bouger, once more
- Say it: say bouger
- Recall: say the French for to ski, then the French for to slip, then say bouger again

Before you move on

What does bouger mean? ("To stir, to move".) Say it once more.

184.2 cueillir — to pick (flowers, fruit)

Before the new one: say the French for to slip, then the French for to stir.

You'll want to know: cueillir

cueillir — "to pick (flowers, fruit)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cueillir ← Old French coillir (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin colligere, "to gather together" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cueillir
- Say it: cueillir, once more
- Say it: say cueillir
- Recall: say the French for to slip, then the French for to stir, then say cueillir again

Before you move on

What does cueillir mean? (“To pick (flowers, fruit)”.) Say it once more.

184.3 défendre — to defend

Before the new one: say the French for to stir, then the French for to pick.

You’ll want to know: défendre

défendre — “to defend”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

défendre ← Latin defendere, “to ward off” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: défendre
- Say it: défendre, once more
- Say it: say défendre
- Recall: say the French for to stir, then the French for to pick, then say défendre again

Before you move on

What does défendre mean? (“To defend”.) Say it once more.

184.4 disparaître — to disappear

Before the new one: say the French for to pick, then the French for to defend.

You'll want to know: disparaître

disparaître — "to disappear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

disparaître — built from dis-, "apart", and the verb for "to appear": the opposite of apparaître.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: disparaître
- Say it: disparaître, once more
- Say it: say disparaître
- Recall: say the French for to pick, then the French for to defend, then say disparaître again

Before you move on

What does disparaître mean? ("To disappear".) Say it once more.

184.5 emprunter — to borrow

Before the new one: say the French for to defend, then the French for to disappear.

You'll want to know: emprunter

emprunter — "to borrow".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

emprunter ← Middle French emprunter (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin imprumutare*, from Latin promutuum, "a loan paid in advance" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: emprunter
- Say it: emprunter, once more
- Say it: say emprunter
- Recall: say the French for to defend, then the French for to disappear, then say emprunter again

Before you move on

What does emprunter mean? ("To borrow".) Say it once more.

Chapter 185

Muscle, Thumb, Wound, Scar, Cold

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a muscle, a thumb, a wound, a scar and a cold.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 185: I can say a muscle, a thumb, a wound, a scar and a cold.

185.1 le muscle — a muscle

> Before the new one: say the French for to disappear, then the French for to borrow.

You'll want to know: le muscle

le muscle — "a muscle".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

muscle ← Latin musculus, "a little mouse", from mus, "mouse" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing: a flexing muscle looked like a mouse under the skin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le muscle
- Say it: le muscle, once more
- Say it: say le muscle
- Recall: say the French for to disappear, then the French for to borrow, then say le muscle again

Before you move on

What does le muscle mean? (“A muscle”.) Say it once more.

185.2 le pouce — a thumb

Before the new one: say the French for to borrow, then the French for a muscle.

You’ll want to know: le pouce

le pouce — “a thumb”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pouce ← Old French pouce ← Latin pollex, pollicis, “thumb” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pouce
- Say it: le pouce, once more
- Say it: say le pouce
- Recall: say the French for to borrow, then the French for a muscle, then say le pouce again

Before you move on

What does le pouce mean? (“A thumb”.) Say it once more.

185.3 la blessure — a wound

Before the new one: say the French for a muscle, then the French for a thumb.

You’ll want to know: la blessure

la blessure — “a wound”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

blessure — built from the verb for “to wound”, ← Old French blecier, from Frankish blettjan*, “to bruise”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la blessure
- Say it: la blessure, once more
- Say it: say la blessure
- Recall: say the French for a muscle, then the French for a thumb, then say la blessure again

Before you move on

What does la blessure mean? (“A wound”.) Say it once more.

185.4 la cicatrice — a scar

Before the new one: say the French for a thumb, then the French for a wound.

You'll want to know: la cicatrice

la cicatrice — "a scar".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cicatrice ← Latin cicatrix, "a scar" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cicatrice
- Say it: la cicatrice, once more
- Say it: say la cicatrice
- Recall: say the French for a thumb, then the French for a wound, then say la cicatrice again

Before you move on

What does la cicatrice mean? ("A scar".) Say it once more.

185.5 le rhume — a cold

Before the new one: say the French for a wound, then the French for a scar.

You'll want to know: le rhume

le rhume — "a cold".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rhume ← Latin rheuma, "a flow", from Greek rheuma (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le rhume
- Say it: le rhume, once more
- Say it: say le rhume
- Recall: say the French for a wound, then the French for a scar, then say le rhume again

Before you move on

What does le rhume mean? ("A cold".) Say it once more.

Chapter 186

Friendship, Hope, Trust, Courage, Shame

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say friendship, hope, trust, courage and shame.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 186: I can say friendship, hope, trust, courage and shame.

186.1 l'amitié — friendship

Before the new one: say the French for a scar, then the French for a cold.

You'll want to know: l'amitié

l'amitié — "friendship".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

amitié ← Old French amistié ← Vulgar Latin amicitas*, from amicus, the Latin of ami — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'amitié
- Say it: l'amitié, once more
- Say it: say l'amitié
- Recall: say the French for a scar, then the French for a cold, then say l'amitié again

Before you move on

What does l'amitié mean? ("Friendship".) Say it once more.

186.2 l'espoir — hope

Before the new one: say the French for a cold, then the French for friendship.

You'll want to know: l'espoir

l'espoir — "hope".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

espoir — formed from espérer, "to hope".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'espoir
- Say it: l'espoir, once more
- Say it: say l'espoir
- Recall: say the French for a cold, then the French for friendship, then say l'espoir again

Before you move on

What does l'espoir mean? ("Hope".) Say it once more.

186.3 la confiance — trust

Before the new one: say the French for friendship, then the French for hope.

You'll want to know: la confiance

la confiance — "trust".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

confiance — built on the verb for "to entrust", with -ance; behind it is Latin confidere, "to trust fully". (EtymDB 2.1 links it to Latin confidentia.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la confiance
- Say it: la confiance, once more
- Say it: say la confiance
- Recall: say the French for friendship, then the French for hope, then say la confiance again

Before you move on

What does la confiance mean? ("Trust".) Say it once more.

186.4 le courage — courage

Before the new one: say the French for hope, then the French for trust.

You'll want to know: le courage

le courage — "courage".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

courage — built in Old French from cuer, "heart", ← Latin cor (EtymDB 2.1), with -age: heart in action.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le courage
- Say it: le courage, once more
- Say it: say le courage
- Recall: say the French for hope, then the French for trust, then say le courage again

Before you move on

What does le courage mean? ("Courage".) Say it once more.

186.5 la honte — shame

Before the new one: say the French for trust, then the French for courage.

You'll want to know: la honte

la honte — "shame".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

honte ← Frankish haunitha*, "scorn" — borrowed from the Franks.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la honte
- Say it: la honte, once more
- Say it: say la honte
- Recall: say the French for trust, then the French for courage, then say la honte again

Before you move on

What does la honte mean? (“Shame”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 187

In that case, Late, Suddenly, Until, Since

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say in that case, late, suddenly, until and since.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 187: I can say in that case, late, suddenly, until and since.

187.1 alors — in that case, so

> Before the new one: say the French for courage, then the French for shame.

You'll want to know: alors

alors — "in that case, so".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

alors — à and Old French lors, "then", ← Latin illa hora, "at that hour". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: alors
- Say it: alors, once more
- Say it: say alors
- Recall: say the French for courage, then the French for shame, then say alors again

Before you move on

What does alors mean? ("In that case, so".) Say it once more.

187.2 tard — late

Before the new one: say the French for shame, then the French for in that case.

You'll want to know: tard

tard — "late".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tard ← Latin tarde, "slowly", from tardus, "slow" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tard
- Say it: tard, once more
- Say it: say tard
- Recall: say the French for shame, then the French for in that case, then say tard again

Before you move on

What does tard mean? (“Late”.) Say it once more.

187.3 soudain — suddenly

Before the new one: say the French for in that case, then the French for late.

You’ll want to know: soudain

soudain — “suddenly”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soudain ← Old French sodain ← Vulgar Latin subitanus* ← Latin subitaneus, “sudden”, from subitus — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: soudain
- Say it: soudain, once more
- Say it: say soudain
- Recall: say the French for in that case, then the French for late, then say soudain again

Before you move on

What does soudain mean? (“Suddenly”.) Say it once more.

187.4 jusqu’à — until

Before the new one: say the French for late, then the French for suddenly.

You'll want to know: jusqu'à

jusqu'à — "until".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jusqu'à — Old French josque, from Latin de usque, "right up to" (Lewis & Short for usque), and à, "to".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jusqu'à
- Say it: jusqu'à, once more
- Say it: say jusqu'à
- Recall: say the French for late, then the French for suddenly, then say jusqu'à again

Before you move on

What does jusqu'à mean? ("Until".) Say it once more.

187.5 depuis — since, for

Before the new one: say the French for suddenly, then the French for until.

You'll want to know: depuis

depuis — "since, for".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

depuis — de, "from", and puis, "then": from then on. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: depuis
- Say it: depuis, once more
- Say it: say depuis
- Recall: say the French for suddenly, then the French for until, then say depuis again

Before you move on

What does depuis mean? (“Since, for”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 188

Near to, Far from, At the bottom, On the right, On the left

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say near to, far from, at the bottom, on the right and on the left.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 188: I can say near to, far from, at the bottom, on the right and on the left.

188.1 près de — near to

Before the new one: say the French for until, then the French for since.

You'll want to know: près de

près de — "near to".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

près de — près, "near", and de, "of". Près ← Latin presse, "closely" (EtymDB 2.1), and de ← Latin dē.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: près de
- Say it: près de, once more
- Say it: say près de
- Recall: say the French for until, then the French for since, then say près de again

Before you move on

What does près de mean? (“Near to”.) Say it once more.

188.2 loin de — far from

Before the new one: say the French for since, then the French for near to.

You’ll want to know: loin de

loin de — “far from”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

loin de — loin, “far”, and de, “from”. Loin comes from Latin longē, “far off”, and de from dē.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: loin de
- Say it: loin de, once more
- Say it: say loin de
- Recall: say the French for since, then the French for near to, then say loin de again

Before you move on

What does loin de mean? (“Far from”.) Say it once more.

188.3 au fond — at the bottom, at the back

Before the new one: say the French for near to, then the French for far from.

You’ll want to know: au fond

au fond — “at the bottom, at the back”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

au fond — au, “at the”, and fond, “bottom”, ← Latin fundus, “bottom”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: au fond
- Say it: au fond, once more
- Say it: say au fond
- Recall: say the French for near to, then the French for far from, then say au fond again

Before you move on

What does au fond mean? (“At the bottom, at the back”.) Say it once more.

188.4 à droite — on the right

Before the new one: say the French for far from, then the French for at the bottom.

You'll want to know: à droite

à droite — "on the right".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

à droite — à, "on", and droite, "the right". Droite ← Latin dīrēctus, "straight" (Lewis & Short), through Old French dreit; à ← Latin ad.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: à droite
- Say it: à droite, once more
- Say it: say à droite
- Recall: say the French for far from, then the French for at the bottom, then say à droite again

Before you move on

What does à droite mean? ("On the right".) Say it once more.

188.5 à gauche — on the left

Before the new one: say the French for at the bottom, then the French for on the right.

You'll want to know: à gauche

à gauche — "on the left".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

à gauche — à, "on", and gauche, "the left". Gauche comes from Old French gauchir, "to warp" (EtymDB 2.1), probably Frankish further back; à ← Latin ad.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: à gauche
- Say it: à gauche, once more
- Say it: say à gauche
- Recall: say the French for at the bottom, then the French for on the right, then say à gauche again

Before you move on

What does à gauche mean? ("On the left".) Say it once more.

Chapter 189

Despite, Unfortunately, Luckily, Certainly, Really

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say despite, unfortunately, luckily, certainly and really.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 189: I can say despite, unfortunately, luckily, certainly and really.

189.1 malgré — despite

Before the new one: say the French for on the right, then the French for on the left.

You'll want to know: malgré

malgré — "despite".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

malgré ← Middle French maugré, from Old French mal, "bad", and gré, "liking", ← Latin gratum, "pleasing" (EtymDB 2.1): against one's liking.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: malgré
- Say it: malgré, once more
- Say it: say malgré
- Recall: say the French for on the right, then the French for on the left, then say malgré again

Before you move on

What does malgré mean? (“Despite”.) Say it once more.

189.2 malheureusement — unfortunately

Before the new one: say the French for on the left, then the French for despite.

You’ll want to know: malheureusement

malheureusement — “unfortunately”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

malheureusement — heureux, “lucky”, with mal-, “badly”, in front and the adverb ending -ment: unluckily. Heureux is built on Old French eur, “luck”, from Latin augurium, “an omen”, and mal- ← Latin male, “badly” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: malheureusement
- Say it: malheureusement, once more
- Say it: say malheureusement

- Recall: say the French for on the left, then the French for despite, then say malheureusement again

Before you move on

What does malheureusement mean? (“Unfortunately”.) Say it once more.

189.3 heureusement — luckily

Before the new one: say the French for despite, then the French for unfortunately.

You’ll want to know: heureusement

heureusement — “luckily”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

heureusement — heureux, “lucky”, with the adverb ending -ment. Heureux is built on Old French eur, “luck”, from Latin augurium, “an omen” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: heureusement
- Say it: heureusement, once more
- Say it: say heureusement
- Recall: say the French for despite, then the French for unfortunately, then say heureusement again

Before you move on

What does heureusement mean? (“Luckily”.) Say it once more.

189.4 certainement — certainly

Before the new one: say the French for unfortunately, then the French for luckily.

You'll want to know: certainement

certainement — "certainly".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

certainement — the word for "certain", ← Vulgar Latin certanus*, from Latin certus, "sure" (Lewis & Short), with -ment; Old French already had it (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: certainement
- Say it: certainement, once more
- Say it: say certainement
- Recall: say the French for unfortunately, then the French for luckily, then say certainement again

Before you move on

What does certainement mean? ("Certainly".) Say it once more.

189.5 vraiment — really

Before the new one: say the French for luckily, then the French for certainly.

You'll want to know: vraiment

vraiment — "really".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vraiment ← Old French veraiement (EtymDB 2.1), from the word for "true", ← Vulgar Latin veracus*, from Latin verus, "true", with -ment.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vraiment
- Say it: vraiment, once more
- Say it: say vraiment
- Recall: say the French for luckily, then the French for certainly, then say vraiment again

Before you move on

What does vraiment mean? ("Really".) Say it once more.

Chapter 190

Cheerful, Serious, Shy, Brave, Fearful

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say cheerful, serious, shy, brave and fearful.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 190: I can say cheerful, serious, shy, brave and fearful.

190.1 joyeux / joyeuse — cheerful

> Before the new one: say the French for certainly, then the French for really.

You'll want to know: joyeux / joyeuse

joyeux / joyeuse — "cheerful".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

joyeux — joie, "joy", with -eux, "full of". Joie ← Latin gaudia, "joys", and -eux ← Latin -ōsus (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: joyeux / joyeuse
- Say it: joyeux / joyeuse, once more
- Say it: say joyeux / joyeuse
- Recall: say the French for certainly, then the French for really, then say joyeux / joyeuse again

Before you move on

What does joyeux / joyeuse mean? ("Cheerful".) Say it once more.

190.2 sérieux / sérieuse — serious

Before the new one: say the French for really, then the French for cheerful.

You'll want to know: sérieux / sérieuse

sérieux / sérieuse — "serious".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sérieux ← Medieval Latin seriosus, from serius, "earnest" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sérieux / sérieuse
- Say it: sérieux / sérieuse, once more
- Say it: say sérieux / sérieuse
- Recall: say the French for really, then the French for cheerful, then say sérieux / sérieuse again

Before you move on

What does sérieux / sérieuse mean? (“Serious”.) Say it once more.

190.3 timide — shy

Before the new one: say the French for cheerful, then the French for serious.

You’ll want to know: timide

timide — “shy”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

timide ← Latin timidus, “fearful”, from timere, “to fear” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: timide
- Say it: timide, once more
- Say it: say timide
- Recall: say the French for cheerful, then the French for serious, then say timide again

Before you move on

What does timide mean? (“Shy”.) Say it once more.

190.4 courageux / courageuse — brave

Before the new one: say the French for serious, then the French for shy.

You'll want to know: courageux / courageuse

courageux / courageuse — "brave".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

courageux — courage with -eux, "full of". Courage is built on Latin cor, "heart" (EtymDB 2.1), and -eux ← Latin -ōsus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: courageux / courageuse
- Say it: courageux / courageuse, once more
- Say it: say courageux / courageuse
- Recall: say the French for serious, then the French for shy, then say courageux / courageuse again

Before you move on

What does courageux / courageuse mean? ("Brave".) Say it once more.

190.5 peureux / peureuse — fearful

Before the new one: say the French for shy, then the French for brave.

You'll want to know: peureux / peureuse

peureux / peureuse — "fearful".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

peureux — peur, "fear", with -eux, "full of". Peur ← Latin pavor, "fear" (EtymDB 2.1), and -eux ← Latin -ōsus.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peureux / peureuse
- Say it: peureux / peureuse, once more
- Say it: say peureux / peureuse
- Recall: say the French for shy, then the French for brave, then say peureux / peureuse again

Before you move on

What does peureux / peureuse mean? ("Fearful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 191

Simple, Complicated, Necessary, Useful, Useless

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say simple, complicated, necessary, useful and useless.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 191: I can say simple, complicated, necessary, useful and useless.

191.1 simple — simple

Before the new one: say the French for brave, then the French for fearful.

You'll want to know: simple

simple — "simple".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

simple ← Latin simplex, "single, plain" — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: simple
- Say it: simple, once more
- Say it: say simple
- Recall: say the French for brave, then the French for fearful, then say simple again

Before you move on

What does simple mean? ("Simple".) Say it once more.

191.2 compliqué / compliquée — complicated

Before the new one: say the French for fearful, then the French for simple.

You'll want to know: compliqué / compliquée

compliqué / compliquée — "complicated".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins compliqué is the past participle of the verb for "to complicate", ← Latin complicare, "to fold together" (Lewis & Short): folded in on itself.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: compliqué / compliquée
- Say it: compliqué / compliquée, once more
- Say it: say compliqué / compliquée
- Recall: say the French for fearful, then the French for simple, then say compliqué / compliquée again

Before you move on

What does compliqué / compliquée mean? (“Complicated”.) Say it once more.

191.3 nécessaire — necessary

Before the new one: say the French for simple, then the French for complicated.

You’ll want to know: nécessaire

nécessaire — “necessary”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nécessaire ← Latin necessarius, “unavoidable”, from necesse, “needful” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nécessaire
- Say it: nécessaire, once more
- Say it: say nécessaire
- Recall: say the French for simple, then the French for complicated, then say nécessaire again

Before you move on

What does nécessaire mean? (“Necessary”.) Say it once more.

191.4 utile — useful

Before the new one: say the French for complicated, then the French for necessary.

You'll want to know: utile

utile — "useful".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

utile ← Latin utilis, "useful", from uti, "to use" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: utile
- Say it: utile, once more
- Say it: say utile
- Recall: say the French for complicated, then the French for necessary, then say utile again

Before you move on

What does utile mean? ("Useful".) Say it once more.

191.5 inutile — useless

Before the new one: say the French for necessary, then the French for useful.

You'll want to know: inutile

inutile — "useless".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

inutile ← Latin inutilis, "useless": utile with in-, "not" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: inutile
- Say it: inutile, once more
- Say it: say inutile
- Recall: say the French for necessary, then the French for useful, then say inutile again

Before you move on

What does inutile mean? ("Useless".) Say it once more.

Chapter 192

Cooked, Ripe, Dark, Clear, Distant

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say cooked, ripe, dark, clear and distant.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 192: I can say cooked, ripe, dark, clear and distant.

192.1 cuit / cuite — cooked

Before the new one: say the French for useful, then the French for useless.

You'll want to know: cuit / cuite

cuit / cuite — "cooked".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cuit ← Old French cuit ← Latin coctus, "cooked", the past participle of coquere (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: -ct- became -it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cuit / cuite
- Say it: cuit / cuite, once more
- Say it: say cuit / cuite
- Recall: say the French for useful, then the French for useless, then say cuit / cuite again

Before you move on

What does cuit / cuite mean? ("Cooked".) Say it once more.

192.2 mûr / mûre — ripe

Before the new one: say the French for useless, then the French for cooked.

You'll want to know: mûr / mûre

mûr / mûre — "ripe".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mûr ← Old French meür (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin maturus, "ripe" (Lewis & Short) — inherited; the t between vowels dropped out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mûr / mûre
- Say it: mûr / mûre, once more
- Say it: say mûr / mûre
- Recall: say the French for useless, then the French for cooked, then say mûr / mûre again

Before you move on

What does mûr / mûre mean? (“Ripe”.) Say it once more.

192.3 sombre — dark

Before the new one: say the French for cooked, then the French for ripe.

You’ll want to know: sombre

sombre — “dark”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sombre ← Old French sombre, “dark” (EtymDB 2.1), of uncertain origin; it is usually linked to Late Latin subumbrare, “to shade”, from umbra, “shadow”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sombre
- Say it: sombre, once more
- Say it: say sombre
- Recall: say the French for cooked, then the French for ripe, then say sombre again

Before you move on

What does sombre mean? (“Dark”.) Say it once more.

192.4 clair / claire — clear, light (of a colour)

Before the new one: say the French for ripe, then the French for dark.

You'll want to know: clair / claire

clair / claire — "clear, light (of a colour)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

clair ← Old French cler ← Latin clarus, "bright, clear" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the stressed a became e; the ai spelling was put back later to look more like the Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: clair / claire
- Say it: clair / claire, once more
- Say it: say clair / claire
- Recall: say the French for ripe, then the French for dark, then say clair / claire again

Before you move on

What does clair / claire mean? ("Clear, light (of a colour)".) Say it once more.

192.5 lointain / lointaine — distant

Before the new one: say the French for dark, then the French for clear.

You'll want to know: lointain / lointaine

lointain / lointaine — "distant".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lointain ← Old French loingtien ← Vulgar Latin longitanus*, from Latin longe, "far off", the Latin of loin — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lointain / lointaine
- Say it: lointain / lointaine, once more
- Say it: say lointain / lointaine
- Recall: say the French for dark, then the French for clear, then say lointain / lointaine again

Before you move on

What does lointain / lointaine mean? ("Distant".) Say it once more.

192.6 Words from chapters 184-187 — a first pass

Say the words for clear and distant.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to stir, to pick, to defend, to disappear, to borrow
- a muscle, a thumb, a wound, a scar, a cold
- friendship, hope, trust, courage, shame
- in that case, late, suddenly, until, since

Before you move on

To stir? (bouger.) To pick? (cueillir.) To defend? (défendre.) To disappear? (disparaître.) To borrow? (emprunter.) A muscle? (le muscle.) A thumb? (le pouce.) A wound? (la blessure.) A scar? (la cicatrice.) A cold? (le rhume.) Friendship? (l'amitié.) Hope? (l'espoir.) Trust? (la confiance.) Courage? (le courage.)

Shame? (la honte.) In that case? (alors.) Late? (tard.) Suddenly? (soudain.) Until? (jusqu'à.) Since? (depuis.)

192.7 Words from chapters 188-192 — a second pass

Say the words for near to and far from.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- near to, far from, at the bottom, on the right, on the left
- despite, unfortunately, luckily, certainly, really
- cheerful, serious, shy, brave, fearful
- simple, complicated, necessary, useful, useless
- cooked, ripe, dark, clear, distant

Before you move on

Near to? (près de.) Far from? (loin de.) At the bottom? (au fond.) On the right? (à droite.) On the left? (à gauche.) Despite? (malgré.) Unfortunately? (malheureusement.) Luckily? (heureusement.) Certainly? (certainement.) Really? (vraiment.) Cheerful? (joyeux / joyeuse.) Serious? (sérieux / sérieuse.) Shy? (timide.) Brave? (courageux / courageuse.) Fearful? (peureux / peureuse.) Simple? (simple.) Complicated? (compliqué / compliquée.) Necessary? (nécessaire.) Useful? (utile.) Useless? (inutile.) Cooked? (cuit / cuite.) Ripe? (mûr / mûre.) Dark? (sombre.) Clear? (clair / claire.) Distant? (lointain / lointaine.)

Chapter 193

Sheet, Drawer, Armchair, Saucepan, Frying pan

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a sheet, a drawer, an armchair, a saucepan and a frying pan.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 193: I can say a sheet, a drawer, an armchair, a saucepan and a frying pan.

193.1 le drap — a sheet

Before the new one: say the French for clear, light (of a colour), then the French for distant.

You'll want to know: le drap

le drap — "a sheet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

drap ← Late Latin drappus, "cloth", probably a Gaulish word — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le drap
- Say it: le drap, once more
- Say it: say le drap
- Recall: say the French for clear, light (of a colour), then the French for distant, then say le drap again

Before you move on

What does le drap mean? (“A sheet”.) Say it once more.

193.2 le tiroir — a drawer

Before the new one: say the French for distant, then the French for a sheet.

You’ll want to know: le tiroir

le tiroir — “a drawer”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tiroir — tirer, “to pull”, with -oir, “a thing for”: the thing you pull out. Tirer is of uncertain origin; EtymDB 2.1 points to a Gothic verb, “to tear away”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tiroir
- Say it: le tiroir, once more
- Say it: say le tiroir
- Recall: say the French for distant, then the French for a sheet, then say le tiroir again

Before you move on

What does le tiroir mean? (“A drawer”.) Say it once more.

193.3 le fauteuil — an armchair

Before the new one: say the French for a sheet, then the French for a drawer.

You’ll want to know: le fauteuil

le fauteuil — “an armchair”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fauteuil ← Old French faudestuel ← Frankish faldistol*, “a folding stool” — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le fauteuil
- Say it: le fauteuil, once more
- Say it: say le fauteuil
- Recall: say the French for a sheet, then the French for a drawer, then say le fauteuil again

Before you move on

What does le fauteuil mean? (“An armchair”.) Say it once more.

193.4 la casserole — a saucepan

Before the new one: say the French for a drawer, then the French for an armchair.

You'll want to know: la casserole

la casserole — "a saucepan".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

casserole — built from an older word for "a pan", from Old Provençal cassa, with a little-thing ending. cassa goes back to Medieval Latin cattia, "a ladle, a pan".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la casserole
- Say it: la casserole, once more
- Say it: say la casserole
- Recall: say the French for a drawer, then the French for an armchair, then say la casserole again

Before you move on

What does la casserole mean? ("A saucepan".) Say it once more.

193.5 la poêle — a frying pan

Before the new one: say the French for an armchair, then the French for a saucepan.

You'll want to know: la poêle

la poêle — "a frying pan".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poêle ← Old French paelle ← Latin patella, "a small pan" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poêle
- Say it: la poêle, once more
- Say it: say la poêle
- Recall: say the French for an armchair, then the French for a saucepan, then say la poêle again

Before you move on

What does la poêle mean? ("A frying pan".) Say it once more.

Chapter 194

Valley, Temperature, Butterfly, Fly, Mosquito

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a valley, temperature, a butterfly, a fly and a mosquito.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 194: I can say a valley, temperature, a butterfly, a fly and a mosquito.

194.1 la vallée — a valley

Before the new one: say the French for a saucepan, then the French for a frying pan.

You'll want to know: la vallée

la vallée — "a valley".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vallée — built in Old French from val, "a valley", ← Latin vallis, with -ée. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la vallée
- Say it: la vallée, once more
- Say it: say la vallée
- Recall: say the French for a saucepan, then the French for a frying pan, then say la vallée again

Before you move on

What does la vallée mean? ("A valley".) Say it once more.

194.2 la température — temperature

Before the new one: say the French for a frying pan, then the French for a valley.

You'll want to know: la température

la température — "temperature".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

température ← Latin temperatura, "due measure, a mixing", from temperare, "to mix in proportion" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la température
- Say it: la température, once more
- Say it: say la température
- Recall: say the French for a frying pan, then the French for a valley, then say la température again

Before you move on

What does la température mean? ("Temperature".) Say it once more.

194.3 le papillon — a butterfly

Before the new one: say the French for a valley, then the French for temperature.

You'll want to know: le papillon

le papillon — "a butterfly".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

papillon ← Latin papilio, papilionis, "a butterfly" (EtymDB 2.1) — semi-learned: it kept its middle p. The fully inherited twin, with v, became the word for a tent, English pavilion.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le papillon
- Say it: le papillon, once more
- Say it: say le papillon
- Recall: say the French for a valley, then the French for temperature, then say le papillon again

Before you move on

What does le papillon mean? ("A butterfly".) Say it once more.

194.4 la mouche — a fly

Before the new one: say the French for temperature, then the French for a butterfly.

You'll want to know: la mouche

la mouche — "a fly".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mouche ← Old French mousche ← Latin musca, "a fly" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la mouche
- Say it: la mouche, once more
- Say it: say la mouche
- Recall: say the French for temperature, then the French for a butterfly, then say la mouche again

Before you move on

What does la mouche mean? ("A fly".) Say it once more.

194.5 le moustique — a mosquito

Before the new one: say the French for a butterfly, then the French for a fly.

You'll want to know: le moustique

le moustique — "a mosquito".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

moustique ← Spanish mosquito, "a little fly", from mosca, ← Latin musca — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le moustique
- Say it: le moustique, once more
- Say it: say le moustique
- Recall: say the French for a butterfly, then the French for a fly, then say le moustique again

Before you move on

What does le moustique mean? ("A mosquito".) Say it once more.

Chapter 195

Dialect, Piece of news, Advertising, Screen, Keyboard

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a dialect, a piece of news, advertising, a screen and a keyboard.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 195: I can say a dialect, a piece of news, advertising, a screen and a keyboard.

195.1 le dialecte — a dialect

> Before the new one: say the French for a fly, then the French for a mosquito.

You'll want to know: le dialecte

le dialecte — "a dialect".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dialecte ← Latin dialectos, from Greek dialektos, "a way of speaking" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dialecte
- Say it: le dialecte, once more
- Say it: say le dialecte
- Recall: say the French for a fly, then the French for a mosquito, then say le dialecte again

Before you move on

What does le dialecte mean? ("A dialect".) Say it once more.

195.2 la nouvelle — a piece of news

Before the new one: say the French for a mosquito, then the French for a dialect.

You'll want to know: la nouvelle

la nouvelle — "a piece of news".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nouvelle ← Old French novele ← Vulgar Latin novella, "new things" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the feminine of the word behind nouveau.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la nouvelle
- Say it: la nouvelle, once more
- Say it: say la nouvelle
- Recall: say the French for a mosquito, then the French for a dialect, then say la nouvelle again

Before you move on

What does la nouvelle mean? (“A piece of news”.) Say it once more.

195.3 la publicité — advertising

Before the new one: say the French for a dialect, then the French for a piece of news.

You’ll want to know: la publicité

la publicité — “advertising”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

publicité ← Medieval Latin publicitas, from publicus, “of the people” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la publicité
- Say it: la publicité, once more
- Say it: say la publicité
- Recall: say the French for a dialect, then the French for a piece of news, then say la publicité again

Before you move on

What does la publicité mean? (“Advertising”.) Say it once more.

195.4 l’écran — a screen

Before the new one: say the French for a piece of news, then the French for advertising.

You'll want to know: l'écran

l'écran — "a screen".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

écran ← Old French escran, from Middle Dutch scherm, "a shield, a screen" — borrowed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'écran
- Say it: l'écran, once more
- Say it: say l'écran
- Recall: say the French for a piece of news, then the French for advertising, then say l'écran again

Before you move on

What does l'écran mean? ("A screen".) Say it once more.

195.5 le clavier — a keyboard

Before the new one: say the French for advertising, then the French for a screen.

You'll want to know: le clavier

le clavier — "a keyboard".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

clavier — built from Latin clavis, "key", the Latin of clé, with -ier: a row of keys. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le clavier
- Say it: le clavier, once more
- Say it: say le clavier
- Recall: say the French for advertising, then the French for a screen, then say le clavier again

Before you move on

What does le clavier mean? ("A keyboard".) Say it once more.

Chapter 196

Butcher, Mechanic, Electrician, Plumber, Worker

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a butcher, a mechanic, an electrician, a plumber and a worker.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 196: I can say a butcher, a mechanic, an electrician, a plumber and a worker.

196.1 le boucher — a butcher

> Before the new one: say the French for a screen, then the French for a keyboard.

You'll want to know: le boucher

le boucher — "a butcher".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boucher ← Old French bouchier, built from bouc, "a he-goat" (EtymDB 2.1): first a seller of goat's meat.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le boucher
- Say it: le boucher, once more
- Say it: say le boucher
- Recall: say the French for a screen, then the French for a keyboard, then say le boucher again

Before you move on

What does le boucher mean? (“A butcher”.) Say it once more.

196.2 le mécanicien — a mechanic

Before the new one: say the French for a keyboard, then the French for a butcher.

You’ll want to know: le mécanicien

le mécanicien — “a mechanic”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mécanicien — built from the word for “mechanics”, ← Latin mechanicus, from Greek mekhanikos, “of machines” (Lewis & Short), with -ien.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le mécanicien
- Say it: le mécanicien, once more
- Say it: say le mécanicien
- Recall: say the French for a keyboard, then the French for a butcher, then say le mécanicien again

Before you move on

What does le mécanicien mean? ("A mechanic".) Say it once more.

196.3 l'électricien — an electrician

Before the new one: say the French for a butcher, then the French for a mechanic.

You'll want to know: l'électricien

l'électricien — "an electrician".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

électricien — built from the word for "electric", from Latin electrum, "amber", from Greek elektron (Lewis & Short): rubbed amber draws things to it.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'électricien
- Say it: l'électricien, once more
- Say it: say l'électricien
- Recall: say the French for a butcher, then the French for a mechanic, then say l'électricien again

Before you move on

What does l'électricien mean? ("An electrician".) Say it once more.

196.4 le plombier — a plumber

Before the new one: say the French for a mechanic, then the French for an electrician.

You'll want to know: le plombier

le plombier — "a plumber".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plombier — built from the word for "lead", ← Latin plumbum (Lewis & Short), with -ier: pipes were once lead.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le plombier
- Say it: le plombier, once more
- Say it: say le plombier
- Recall: say the French for a mechanic, then the French for an electrician, then say le plombier again

Before you move on

What does le plombier mean? ("A plumber".) Say it once more.

196.5 l'ouvrier — a worker

Before the new one: say the French for an electrician, then the French for a plumber.

You'll want to know: l'ouvrier

l'ouvrier — "a worker".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ouvrier ← Old French ovrier ← Latin operarius, "a labourer", from opus, operis, "work" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ouvrier
- Say it: l'ouvrier, once more
- Say it: say l'ouvrier
- Recall: say the French for an electrician, then the French for a plumber, then say l'ouvrier again

Before you move on

What does l'ouvrier mean? ("A worker".) Say it once more.

Chapter 197

Bridegroom, Bride, Widower, Success, Failure

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a bridegroom, a bride, a widower, success and failure.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 197: I can say a bridegroom, a bride, a widower, success and failure.

197.1 le marié — a bridegroom

> Before the new one: say the French for a plumber, then the French for a worker.

You'll want to know: le marié

le marié — "a bridegroom".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

marié — the adjective marié, "married", used as a noun: the man being married. Marier ← Latin marītāre, "to wed" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le marié
- Say it: le marié, once more
- Say it: say le marié
- Recall: say the French for a plumber, then the French for a worker, then say le marié again

Before you move on

What does le marié mean? (“A bridegroom”.) Say it once more.

197.2 la mariée — a bride

Before the new one: say the French for a worker, then the French for a bridegroom.

You’ll want to know: la mariée

la mariée — “a bride”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mariée — the feminine of marié, used as a noun: the bride. Marier ← Latin marītāre, “to wed” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la mariée
- Say it: la mariée, once more
- Say it: say la mariée
- Recall: say the French for a worker, then the French for a bridegroom, then say la mariée again

Before you move on

What does la mariée mean? (“A bride”.) Say it once more.

197.3 le veuf — a widower

Before the new one: say the French for a bridegroom, then the French for a bride.

You’ll want to know: le veuf

le veuf — “a widower”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

veuf ← Latin viduus, “bereaved” (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le veuf
- Say it: le veuf, once more
- Say it: say le veuf
- Recall: say the French for a bridegroom, then the French for a bride, then say le veuf again

Before you move on

What does le veuf mean? (“A widower”.) Say it once more.

197.4 le succès — success

Before the new one: say the French for a bride, then the French for a widower.

You'll want to know: le succès

le succès — "success".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

succès ← Latin successus, "an outcome", from succedere, "to come after" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le succès
- Say it: le succès, once more
- Say it: say le succès
- Recall: say the French for a bride, then the French for a widower, then say le succès again

Before you move on

What does le succès mean? ("Success".) Say it once more.

197.5 l'échec — failure

Before the new one: say the French for a widower, then the French for success.

You'll want to know: l'échec

l'échec — "failure".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

échec ← Old French eschec, "check" in chess, from Arabic, from Persian shah, "king" — borrowed: a check is a setback.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'échec
- Say it: l'échec, once more
- Say it: say l'échec
- Recall: say the French for a widower, then the French for success, then say l'échec again

Before you move on

What does l'échec mean? ("Failure".) Say it once more.

Chapter 198

Promise, Discount, Sales, Coin, Banknote

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a promise, a discount, the sales, a coin and a banknote.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 198: I can say a promise, a discount, the sales, a coin and a banknote.

198.1 la promesse — a promise

Before the new one: say the French for success, then the French for failure.

You'll want to know: la promesse

la promesse — "a promise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

promesse ← Latin promissa, "things promised" — inherited: the noun beside promettre.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la promesse
- Say it: la promesse, once more
- Say it: say la promesse
- Recall: say the French for success, then the French for failure, then say la promesse again

Before you move on

What does la promesse mean? ("A promise".) Say it once more.

198.2 la réduction — a discount

Before the new one: say the French for failure, then the French for a promise.

You'll want to know: la réduction

la réduction — "a discount".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réduction ← Latin reductio, "a leading back", from reducere (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la réduction
- Say it: la réduction, once more
- Say it: say la réduction
- Recall: say the French for failure, then the French for a promise, then say la réduction again

Before you move on

What does la réduction mean? ("A discount".) Say it once more.

198.3 les soldes — the sales

Before the new one: say the French for a promise, then the French for a discount.

You'll want to know: les soldes

les soldes — "the sales".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soldes — from the verb for "to settle an account", ← Italian saldare, from saldo, "solid", ← Latin solidus — borrowed: goods sold off to settle up.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les soldes
- Say it: les soldes, once more
- Say it: say les soldes
- Recall: say the French for a promise, then the French for a discount, then say les soldes again

Before you move on

What does les soldes mean? ("The sales".) Say it once more.

198.4 la pièce — a coin, a room

Before the new one: say the French for a discount, then the French for the sales.

You'll want to know: la pièce

la pièce — "a coin, a room".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pièce ← Old French piece ← Late Latin pettia, "a piece", from Gaulish — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pièce
- Say it: la pièce, once more
- Say it: say la pièce
- Recall: say the French for a discount, then the French for the sales, then say la pièce again

Before you move on

What does la pièce mean? ("A coin, a room".) Say it once more.

198.5 le billet de banque — a banknote

Before the new one: say the French for the sales, then the French for a coin.

You'll want to know: le billet de banque

le billet de banque — "a banknote".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

billet de banque — billet, "a note", de, "of", and banque, "bank". Billet ← Old French billette, from Latin bulla (EtymDB 2.1); banque is borrowed from Italian banca, "a bench", the money-changer's table.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le billet de banque
- Say it: le billet de banque, once more
- Say it: say le billet de banque
- Recall: say the French for the sales, then the French for a coin, then say le billet de banque again

Before you move on

What does le billet de banque mean? ("A banknote".) Say it once more.

198.6 Words from chapters 193-195 — a first pass

Say the words for a coin and a banknote.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a sheet, a drawer, an armchair, a saucepan, a frying pan
- a valley, temperature, a butterfly, a fly, a mosquito
- a dialect, a piece of news, advertising, a screen, a keyboard

Before you move on

A sheet? (le drap.) A drawer? (le tiroir.) An armchair? (le fauteuil.) A saucepan? (la casserole.) A frying pan? (la poêle.) A valley? (la vallée.) Temperature? (la température.) A butterfly? (le papillon.) A fly? (la mouche.) A mosquito? (le moustique.) A dialect? (le dialecte.) A piece of news? (la nouvelle.) Advertising? (la publicité.) A screen? (l'écran.) A keyboard? (le clavier.)

198.7 Words from chapters 196-198 — a second pass

Say the words for a butcher and a mechanic.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a butcher, a mechanic, an electrician, a plumber, a worker
- a bridegroom, a bride, a widower, success, failure
- a promise, a discount, the sales, a coin, a banknote

Before you move on

A butcher? (le boucher.) A mechanic? (le mécanicien.) An electrician? (l'électricien.) A plumber? (le plombier.) A worker? (l'ouvrier.) A bridegroom? (le marié.) A bride? (la mariée.) A widower? (le veuf.) Success? (le succès.) Failure? (l'échec.) A promise? (la promesse.) A discount? (la réduction.) The sales? (les soldes.) A coin? (la pièce.) A banknote? (le billet de banque.)

Chapter 199

Entrance, Exit, Luggage, Seat, Steering wheel

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an entrance, an exit, luggage, a seat and a steering wheel.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 199: I can say an entrance, an exit, luggage, a seat and a steering wheel.

199.1 l'entrée — an entrance

Before the new one: say the French for a coin, a room, then the French for a banknote.

You'll want to know: l'entrée

l'entrée — "an entrance".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

entrée is the past participle of the verb for "to enter", used as a noun, ← Latin intrare (Lewis & Short): the way in.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'entrée
- Say it: l'entrée, once more
- Say it: say l'entrée
- Recall: say the French for a coin, a room, then the French for a banknote, then say l'entrée again

Before you move on

What does l'entrée mean? ("An entrance".) Say it once more.

199.2 la sortie — an exit

Before the new one: say the French for a banknote, then the French for an entrance.

You'll want to know: la sortie

la sortie — "an exit".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sortie is the past participle of the verb for "to go out", used as a noun: the way out. The verb's origin is uncertain; the usual guess is Latin sortiri, "to draw lots".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la sortie
- Say it: la sortie, once more
- Say it: say la sortie
- Recall: say the French for a banknote, then the French for an entrance, then say la sortie again

Before you move on

What does la sortie mean? (“An exit”.) Say it once more.

199.3 les bagages — luggage

Before the new one: say the French for an entrance, then the French for an exit.

You’ll want to know: les bagages

les bagages — “luggage”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bagages — built from Old French bague, “a bundle” (EtymDB 2.1), with -age; bague’s own origin is uncertain.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les bagages
- Say it: les bagages, once more
- Say it: say les bagages
- Recall: say the French for an entrance, then the French for an exit, then say les bagages again

Before you move on

What does les bagages mean? (“Luggage”.) Say it once more.

199.4 le siège — a seat

Before the new one: say the French for an exit, then the French for luggage.

You'll want to know: le siège

le siège — "a seat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

siège ← Old French siege ← Vulgar Latin sedicum*, from Latin sedes, "a seat" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le siège
- Say it: le siège, once more
- Say it: say le siège
- Recall: say the French for an exit, then the French for luggage, then say le siège again

Before you move on

What does le siège mean? ("A seat".) Say it once more.

199.5 le volant — a steering wheel

Before the new one: say the French for luggage, then the French for a seat.

You'll want to know: le volant

le volant — "a steering wheel".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

volant is the present participle of the verb for "to fly", ← Latin volare (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: a thing that spins freely.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le volant
- Say it: le volant, once more
- Say it: say le volant
- Recall: say the French for luggage, then the French for a seat, then say le volant again

Before you move on

What does le volant mean? ("A steering wheel".) Say it once more.

Chapter 200

Gate, Fence, Cellar, Attic, Vegetable garden

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a gate, a fence, a cellar, an attic and a vegetable garden.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 200: I can say a gate, a fence, a cellar, an attic and a vegetable garden.

200.1 le portail — a gate

Before the new one: say the French for a seat, then the French for a steering wheel.

You'll want to know: le portail

le portail — "a gate".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

portail — built from the word for "door", ← Latin porta, "a gate" (EtymDB 2.1), with -ail.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le portail
- Say it: le portail, once more
- Say it: say le portail
- Recall: say the French for a seat, then the French for a steering wheel, then say le portail again

Before you move on

What does le portail mean? (“A gate”.) Say it once more.

200.2 la clôture — a fence

Before the new one: say the French for a steering wheel, then the French for a gate.

You’ll want to know: la clôture

la clôture — “a fence”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

clôture ← Old French closture ← Late Latin clausura, “a bar, a lock”, from clausus, “closed” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la clôture
- Say it: la clôture, once more
- Say it: say la clôture
- Recall: say the French for a steering wheel, then the French for a gate, then say la clôture again

Before you move on

What does la clôture mean? (“A fence”.) Say it once more.

200.3 la cave — a cellar

Before the new one: say the French for a gate, then the French for a fence.

You’ll want to know: la cave

la cave — “a cellar”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cave ← Latin cava, “hollow places”, from cavus, “hollow” — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la cave
- Say it: la cave, once more
- Say it: say la cave
- Recall: say the French for a gate, then the French for a fence, then say la cave again

Before you move on

What does la cave mean? (“A cellar”.) Say it once more.

200.4 le grenier — an attic

Before the new one: say the French for a fence, then the French for a cellar.

You'll want to know: le grenier

le grenier — "an attic".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

grenier ← Old French grenier ← Latin granarium, "a granary", from granum, "grain" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le grenier
- Say it: le grenier, once more
- Say it: say le grenier
- Recall: say the French for a fence, then the French for a cellar, then say le grenier again

Before you move on

What does le grenier mean? ("An attic".) Say it once more.

200.5 le potager — a vegetable garden

Before the new one: say the French for a cellar, then the French for an attic.

You'll want to know: le potager

le potager — "a vegetable garden".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

potager — built from the word for "soup", Old French potage, "what goes in the pot", from pot, ← Vulgar Latin pottum* (EtymDB 2.1), with -er: the garden that fills the pot.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le potager
- Say it: le potager, once more
- Say it: say le potager
- Recall: say the French for a cellar, then the French for an attic, then say le potager again

Before you move on

What does le potager mean? ("A vegetable garden".) Say it once more.

Chapter 201

Earth, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Flame

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say earth, mud, dust, smoke and a flame.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 201: I can say earth, mud, dust, smoke and a flame.

201.1 la terre — earth, land

Before the new one: say the French for an attic, then the French for a vegetable garden.

You'll want to know: la terre

la terre — "earth, land".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

terre ← Old French terre ← Latin terra, "earth, land" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la terre
- Say it: la terre, once more
- Say it: say la terre
- Recall: say the French for an attic, then the French for a vegetable garden, then say la terre again

Before you move on

What does la terre mean? ("Earth, land".) Say it once more.

201.2 la boue — mud

Before the new one: say the French for a vegetable garden, then the French for earth.

You'll want to know: la boue

la boue — "mud".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

boue ← Gaulish bawa*, "dirt" — a Celtic word. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la boue
- Say it: la boue, once more
- Say it: say la boue
- Recall: say the French for a vegetable garden, then the French for earth, then say la boue again

Before you move on

What does la boue mean? (“Mud”.) Say it once more.

201.3 la poussière — dust

Before the new one: say the French for earth, then the French for mud.

You’ll want to know: la poussière

la poussière — “dust”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poussière — built from Old French pous, “dust”, ← Vulgar Latin pulvus*, from Latin pulvis, “dust” (Lewis & Short), with -ière.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la poussière
- Say it: la poussière, once more
- Say it: say la poussière
- Recall: say the French for earth, then the French for mud, then say la poussière again

Before you move on

What does la poussière mean? (“Dust”.) Say it once more.

201.4 la fumée — smoke

Before the new one: say the French for mud, then the French for dust.

You'll want to know: la fumée

la fumée — "smoke".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fumée is the past participle of fumer, "to smoke", used as a noun: what is smoked out. Fumer ← Latin fūmāre, "to smoke" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la fumée
- Say it: la fumée, once more
- Say it: say la fumée
- Recall: say the French for mud, then the French for dust, then say la fumée again

Before you move on

What does la fumée mean? ("Smoke".) Say it once more.

201.5 la flamme — a flame

Before the new one: say the French for dust, then the French for smoke.

You'll want to know: la flamme

la flamme — "a flame".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

flamme ← Old French flame ← Latin flamma, "a flame" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la flamme
- Say it: la flamme, once more
- Say it: say la flamme
- Recall: say the French for dust, then the French for smoke, then say la flamme again

Before you move on

What does la flamme mean? ("A flame".) Say it once more.

Chapter 202

Natural rubber, Metal, Brick, Small bag, Rope

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say natural rubber, metal, a brick, a small bag and a rope.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 202: I can say natural rubber, metal, a brick, a small bag and a rope.

202.1 le caoutchouc — natural rubber

Before the new one: say the French for smoke, then the French for a flame.

You'll want to know: le caoutchouc

le caoutchouc — "natural rubber".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

caoutchouc ← Spanish caucho ← Quechua kawchu — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le caoutchouc
- Say it: le caoutchouc, once more
- Say it: say le caoutchouc
- Recall: say the French for smoke, then the French for a flame, then say le caoutchouc again

Before you move on

What does le caoutchouc mean? ("Natural rubber".) Say it once more.

202.2 le métal — metal

Before the new one: say the French for a flame, then the French for natural rubber.

You'll want to know: le métal

le métal — "metal".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

métal ← Latin metallum, "a mine, a metal", from Greek metallon — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le métal
- Say it: le métal, once more
- Say it: say le métal
- Recall: say the French for a flame, then the French for natural rubber, then say le métal again

Before you move on

What does le métal mean? (“Metal”.) Say it once more.

202.3 la brique — a brick

Before the new one: say the French for natural rubber, then the French for metal.

You’ll want to know: la brique

la brique — “a brick”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

brique ← Middle Dutch bricke — borrowed.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la brique
- Say it: la brique, once more
- Say it: say la brique
- Recall: say the French for natural rubber, then the French for metal, then say la brique again

Before you move on

What does la brique mean? (“A brick”.) Say it once more.

202.4 le sachet — a small bag

Before the new one: say the French for metal, then the French for a brick.

You'll want to know: le sachet

le sachet — "a small bag".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sachet — sac, "bag", with -et, "little". Sac ← Latin saccus, from Greek sakkos (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sachet
- Say it: le sachet, once more
- Say it: say le sachet
- Recall: say the French for metal, then the French for a brick, then say le sachet again

Before you move on

What does le sachet mean? ("A small bag".) Say it once more.

202.5 la corde — a rope

Before the new one: say the French for a brick, then the French for a small bag.

You'll want to know: la corde

la corde — "a rope".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

corde ← Old French corde ← Latin chorda, "a string of gut", from Greek chorde — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la corde
- Say it: la corde, once more
- Say it: say la corde
- Recall: say the French for a brick, then the French for a small bag, then say la corde again

Before you move on

What does la corde mean? ("A rope".) Say it once more.

Chapter 203

Defeat, Championship, Player, Coach, Connection

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a defeat, a championship, a player, a coach and a connection.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 203: I can say a defeat, a championship, a player, a coach and a connection.

203.1 la défaite — a defeat

Before the new one: say the French for a small bag, then the French for a rope.

You'll want to know: la défaite

la défaite — "a defeat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

défaite is the past participle of the verb for "to undo", used as a noun: an undoing. Old French had desfait, "undone" (EtymDB 2.1); the verb is built on Latin facere, "to do".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la défaite
- Say it: la défaite, once more
- Say it: say la défaite
- Recall: say the French for a small bag, then the French for a rope, then say la défaite again

Before you move on

What does la défaite mean? ("A defeat".) Say it once more.

203.2 le championnat — a championship

Before the new one: say the French for a rope, then the French for a defeat.

You'll want to know: le championnat

le championnat — "a championship".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

championnat — built from the word for "champion", ← Medieval Latin campio, "a fighter in a duel", which EtymDB 2.1 takes from Frankish kampjo*, "a fighter", with -at.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le championnat
- Say it: le championnat, once more
- Say it: say le championnat
- Recall: say the French for a rope, then the French for a defeat, then say le championnat again

Before you move on

What does le championnat mean? (“A championship”.) Say it once more.

203.3 le joueur — a player

Before the new one: say the French for a defeat, then the French for a championship.

You’ll want to know: le joueur

le joueur — “a player”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

joueur — jouer, “to play”, with -eur, “one who”. Jouer ← Vulgar Latin iocāre, “to joke” (EtymDB 2.1), and -eur ← Latin -or.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le joueur
- Say it: le joueur, once more
- Say it: say le joueur
- Recall: say the French for a defeat, then the French for a championship, then say le joueur again

Before you move on

What does le joueur mean? (“A player”.) Say it once more.

203.4 l’entraîneur — a coach

Before the new one: say the French for a championship, then the French for a player.

You'll want to know: l'entraîneur

l'entraîneur — "a coach".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

entraîneur — built from the verb for "to train, to draw along", from en- and the verb for "to drag", ← Vulgar Latin traginare*, from Latin trahere, "to draw" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'entraîneur
- Say it: l'entraîneur, once more
- Say it: say l'entraîneur
- Recall: say the French for a championship, then the French for a player, then say l'entraîneur again

Before you move on

What does l'entraîneur mean? ("A coach".) Say it once more.

203.5 la correspondance — a connection

Before the new one: say the French for a player, then the French for a coach.

You'll want to know: la correspondance

la correspondance — "a connection".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

correspondance — built from the verb for "to correspond", ← Medieval Latin correspondere, from com- and respondere, "to answer".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la correspondance
- Say it: la correspondance, once more
- Say it: say la correspondance
- Recall: say the French for a player, then the French for a coach, then say la correspondance again

Before you move on

What does la correspondance mean? ("A connection".) Say it once more.

Chapter 204

Interview, Career, Printer, Mobile phone, Sheet of paper

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say an interview, a career, a printer, a mobile phone and a sheet of paper.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 204: I can say an interview, a career, a printer, a mobile phone and a sheet of paper.

204.1 l'entretien — an interview

Before the new one: say the French for a coach, then the French for a connection.

You'll want to know: l'entretien

l'entretien — "an interview".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

entretien — built from entre-, "between", and tenir, "to hold": a talk held between two.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'entretien
- Say it: l'entretien, once more
- Say it: say l'entretien
- Recall: say the French for a coach, then the French for a connection, then say l'entretien again

Before you move on

What does l'entretien mean? ("An interview".) Say it once more.

204.2 la carrière — a career

Before the new one: say the French for a connection, then the French for an interview.

You'll want to know: la carrière

la carrière — "a career".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

carrière — the "career" sense ← Old Provençal carreira, "a road, a racecourse", from Late Latin carraria, "a cart road", from carrus, "a wagon" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la carrière
- Say it: la carrière, once more
- Say it: say la carrière
- Recall: say the French for a connection, then the French for an interview, then say la carrière again

Before you move on

What does la carrière mean? (“A career”.) Say it once more.

204.3 l’imprimante — a printer

Before the new one: say the French for an interview, then the French for a career.

You’ll want to know: l’imprimante

l’imprimante — “a printer”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins imprimante — the feminine present participle of the verb for “to print”, ← Latin imprimere, “to press into” (Lewis & Short): the printing machine.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’imprimante
- Say it: l’imprimante, once more
- Say it: say l’imprimante
- Recall: say the French for an interview, then the French for a career, then say l’imprimante again

Before you move on

What does l’imprimante mean? (“A printer”.) Say it once more.

204.4 le téléphone portable — a mobile phone

Before the new one: say the French for a career, then the French for a printer.

You'll want to know: le téléphone portable

le téléphone portable — "a mobile phone".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

téléphone portable — téléphone and portable, "that can be carried", ← Latin portabilis. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le téléphone portable
- Say it: le téléphone portable, once more
- Say it: say le téléphone portable
- Recall: say the French for a career, then the French for a printer, then say le téléphone portable again

Before you move on

What does le téléphone portable mean? ("A mobile phone".) Say it once more.

204.5 la feuille de papier — a sheet of paper

Before the new one: say the French for a printer, then the French for a mobile phone.

You'll want to know: la feuille de papier

la feuille de papier — "a sheet of paper".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

feuille de papier — feuille, "a leaf, a sheet", de, "of", and papier, "paper". Feuille ← Latin folia, "leaves", and papier ← Latin papyrus (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la feuille de papier
- Say it: la feuille de papier, once more
- Say it: say la feuille de papier
- Recall: say the French for a printer, then the French for a mobile phone, then say la feuille de papier again

Before you move on

What does la feuille de papier mean? ("A sheet of paper".) Say it once more.

204.6 Words from chapters 199-201 — a first pass

Say the words for a mobile phone and a sheet of paper.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- an entrance, an exit, luggage, a seat, a steering wheel
- a gate, a fence, a cellar, an attic, a vegetable garden
- earth, mud, dust, smoke, a flame

Before you move on

An entrance? (l'entrée.) An exit? (la sortie.) Luggage? (les bagages.) A seat? (le siège.) A steering wheel? (le volant.) A gate? (le portail.) A fence? (la clôture.) A cellar? (la cave.) An attic? (le grenier.) A vegetable garden? (le potager.) Earth? (la terre.) Mud? (la boue.) Dust? (la poussière.) Smoke? (la fumée.) A flame? (la flamme.)

204.7 Words from chapters 202-204 — a second pass

Say the words for natural rubber and metal.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- natural rubber, metal, a brick, a small bag, a rope
- a defeat, a championship, a player, a coach, a connection
- an interview, a career, a printer, a mobile phone, a sheet of paper

Before you move on

Natural rubber? (le caoutchouc.) Metal? (le métal.) A brick? (la brique.) A small bag? (le sachet.) A rope? (la corde.) A defeat? (la défaite.) A championship? (le championnat.) A player? (le joueur.) A coach? (l'entraîneur.) A connection? (la correspondance.) An interview? (l'entretien.) A career? (la carrière.) A printer? (l'imprimante.) A mobile phone? (le téléphone portable.) A sheet of paper? (la feuille de papier.)

Chapter 205

To book, To spend, To save, To order, To dry

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to book, to spend, to save, to order and to dry.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 205: I can say to book, to spend, to save, to order and to dry.

205.1 réserver — to book

Before the new one: say the French for a mobile phone, then the French for a sheet of paper.

You'll want to know: réserver

réserver — "to book".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réserver ← Latin reservare, "to keep back" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: réserver
- Say it: réserver, once more
- Say it: say réserver
- Recall: say the French for a mobile phone, then the French for a sheet of paper, then say réserver again

Before you move on

What does réserver mean? ("To book".) Say it once more.

205.2 dépenser — to spend (money)

Before the new one: say the French for a sheet of paper, then the French for to book.

You'll want to know: dépenser

dépenser — "to spend (money)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dépenser ← Old French despenser ← Latin dispensare, "to weigh out, to pay out" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dépenser
- Say it: dépenser, once more
- Say it: say dépenser
- Recall: say the French for a sheet of paper, then the French for to book, then say dépenser again

Before you move on

What does dépenser mean? ("To spend (money)".) Say it once more.

205.3 économiser — to save (money)

Before the new one: say the French for to book, then the French for to spend.

You'll want to know: économiser

économiser — "to save (money)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

économiser — built from the word for "economy", ← Latin oeconomia, from Greek oikonomia, "running a household" (EtymDB 2.1), with -iser.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: économiser
- Say it: économiser, once more
- Say it: say économiser
- Recall: say the French for to book, then the French for to spend, then say économiser again

Before you move on

What does économiser mean? ("To save (money)".) Say it once more.

205.4 commander — to order

Before the new one: say the French for to spend, then the French for to save.

You'll want to know: commander

commander — "to order".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

commander ← Old French comander ← Vulgar Latin commandare*, from Latin commendare, "to entrust" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: commander
- Say it: commander, once more
- Say it: say commander
- Recall: say the French for to spend, then the French for to save, then say commander again

Before you move on

What does commander mean? ("To order".) Say it once more.

205.5 sécher — to dry

Before the new one: say the French for to save, then the French for to order.

You'll want to know: sécher

sécher — "to dry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sécher ← Old French secher ← Latin siccare, "to dry", from siccus, the Latin of sec — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: sécher
- Say it: sécher, once more
- Say it: say sécher
- Recall: say the French for to save, then the French for to order, then say sécher again

Before you move on

What does sécher mean? ("To dry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 206

To break, To touch, To taste, To heat, To cool down

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to break, to touch, to taste, to heat and to cool down.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 206: I can say to break, to touch, to taste, to heat and to cool down.

206.1 casser — to break

Before the new one: say the French for to order, then the French for to dry.

You'll want to know: casser

casser — "to break".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

casser ← Old French quasser ← Latin quassare, "to shake hard, to shatter" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: casser
- Say it: casser, once more
- Say it: say casser
- Recall: say the French for to order, then the French for to dry, then say casser again

Before you move on

What does casser mean? ("To break".) Say it once more.

206.2 toucher — to touch

Before the new one: say the French for to dry, then the French for to break.

You'll want to know: toucher

toucher — "to touch".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

toucher ← Vulgar Latin toccare*, "to knock", imitating the sound of a tap — inherited; the account is the usual one, not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: toucher
- Say it: toucher, once more
- Say it: say toucher
- Recall: say the French for to dry, then the French for to break, then say toucher again

Before you move on

What does toucher mean? ("To touch".) Say it once more.

206.3 goûter — to taste

Before the new one: say the French for to break, then the French for to touch.

You'll want to know: goûter

goûter — "to taste".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

goûter ← Old French goster ← Latin gustare, "to taste" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited; the circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: goûter
- Say it: goûter, once more
- Say it: say goûter
- Recall: say the French for to break, then the French for to touch, then say goûter again

Before you move on

What does goûter mean? ("To taste".) Say it once more.

206.4 chauffer — to heat

Before the new one: say the French for to touch, then the French for to taste.

You'll want to know: chauffer

chauffer — "to heat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chauffer ← Old French chauffer (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin calefare*, from Latin calefacere, "to make warm" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: chauffer
- Say it: chauffer, once more
- Say it: say chauffer
- Recall: say the French for to touch, then the French for to taste, then say chauffer again

Before you move on

What does chauffer mean? ("To heat".) Say it once more.

206.5 refroidir — to cool down

Before the new one: say the French for to taste, then the French for to heat.

You'll want to know: refroidir

refroidir — "to cool down".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

refroidir — built from re- and the word for "cold", ← Latin frigidus (EtymDB 2.1), with the verb ending -ir.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: refroidir
- Say it: refroidir, once more
- Say it: say refroidir
- Recall: say the French for to taste, then the French for to heat, then say refroidir again

Before you move on

What does refroidir mean? ("To cool down".) Say it once more.

Chapter 207

To be born, To die, To grow old, To marry, To divorce

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to be born, to die, to grow old, to marry and to divorce.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 207: I can say to be born, to die, to grow old, to marry and to divorce.

207.1 naître — to be born

> Before the new one: say the French for to heat, then the French for to cool down.

You'll want to know: naître

naître — "to be born".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

naître ← Old French naistre ← Vulgar Latin nascere* ← Latin nasci, "to be born" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited; the circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: naître
- Say it: naître, once more
- Say it: say naître
- Recall: say the French for to heat, then the French for to cool down, then say naître again

Before you move on

What does naître mean? (“To be born”.) Say it once more.

207.2 mourir — to die

Before the new one: say the French for to cool down, then the French for to be born.

You’ll want to know: mourir

mourir — “to die”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mourir ← Old French morir ← Vulgar Latin morire* ← Latin mori, “to die” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mourir
- Say it: mourir, once more
- Say it: say mourir
- Recall: say the French for to cool down, then the French for to be born, then say mourir again

Before you move on

What does mourir mean? (“To die”.) Say it once more.

207.3 vieillir — to grow old

Before the new one: say the French for to be born, then the French for to die.

You’ll want to know: vieillir

vieillir — “to grow old”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vieillir — built from vieux, “old”, with the verb ending -ir: to grow old. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vieillir
- Say it: vieillir, once more
- Say it: say vieillir
- Recall: say the French for to be born, then the French for to die, then say vieillir again

Before you move on

What does vieillir mean? (“To grow old”.) Say it once more.

207.4 épouser — to marry

Before the new one: say the French for to die, then the French for to grow old.

You'll want to know: épouser

épouser — "to marry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

épouser ← Old French espouser ← Latin sponsare, "to betroth" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: épouser
- Say it: épouser, once more
- Say it: say épouser
- Recall: say the French for to die, then the French for to grow old, then say épouser again

Before you move on

What does épouser mean? ("To marry".) Say it once more.

207.5 divorcer — to divorce

Before the new one: say the French for to grow old, then the French for to marry.

You'll want to know: divorcer

divorcer — "to divorce".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

divorcer — formed from the noun for "a divorce", the noun behind divorcé. Divorce comes from Latin dīvortium, "a separation".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: divorcer
- Say it: divorcer, once more
- Say it: say divorcer
- Recall: say the French for to grow old, then the French for to marry, then say divorcer again

Before you move on

What does divorcer mean? ("To divorce".) Say it once more.

Chapter 208

To applaud, To cross, To increase, To decrease, To warn

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to applaud, to cross, to increase, to decrease and to warn.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 208: I can say to applaud, to cross, to increase, to decrease and to warn.

208.1 applaudir — to applaud

Before the new one: say the French for to marry, then the French for to divorce.

You'll want to know: applaudir

applaudir — "to applaud".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

applaudir ← Latin applaudere, "to clap the hands" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: applaudir
- Say it: applaudir, once more
- Say it: say applaudir
- Recall: say the French for to marry, then the French for to divorce, then say applaudir again

Before you move on

What does applaudir mean? ("To applaud".) Say it once more.

208.2 traverser — to cross

Before the new one: say the French for to divorce, then the French for to applaud.

You'll want to know: traverser

traverser — "to cross".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

traverser ← Vulgar Latin transversare*, from Latin transversus, "turned across" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: traverser
- Say it: traverser, once more
- Say it: say traverser
- Recall: say the French for to divorce, then the French for to applaud, then say traverser again

Before you move on

What does traverser mean? ("To cross".) Say it once more.

208.3 augmenter — to increase

Before the new one: say the French for to applaud, then the French for to cross.

You'll want to know: augmenter

augmenter — "to increase".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

augmenter ← Late Latin augmentare, from augere, "to increase" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: augmenter
- Say it: augmenter, once more
- Say it: say augmenter
- Recall: say the French for to applaud, then the French for to cross, then say augmenter again

Before you move on

What does augmenter mean? ("To increase".) Say it once more.

208.4 diminuer — to decrease

Before the new one: say the French for to cross, then the French for to increase.

You'll want to know: diminuer

diminuer — "to decrease".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

diminuer ← Latin diminuere, "to break into small pieces" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: diminuer
- Say it: diminuer, once more
- Say it: say diminuer
- Recall: say the French for to cross, then the French for to increase, then say diminuer again

Before you move on

What does diminuer mean? ("To decrease".) Say it once more.

208.5 prévenir — to warn

Before the new one: say the French for to increase, then the French for to decrease.

You'll want to know: prévenir

prévenir — "to warn".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prévenir ← Latin praevenire, "to come before" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing: to warn is to get there first.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prévenir
- Say it: prévenir, once more
- Say it: say prévenir
- Recall: say the French for to increase, then the French for to decrease, then say prévenir again

Before you move on

What does prévenir mean? ("To warn".) Say it once more.

Chapter 209

To enjoy, To imagine, To point out, To inform, To complain

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to enjoy, to imagine, to point out, to inform and to complain.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 209: I can say to enjoy, to imagine, to point out, to inform and to complain.

209.1 profiter — to enjoy, to make the most of

> Before the new one: say the French for to decrease, then the French for to warn.

You'll want to know: profiter

profiter — "to enjoy, to make the most of".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

profiter — formed from the word for "profit", ← Latin profectus, "progress, gain" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: profiter
- Say it: profiter, once more
- Say it: say profiter
- Recall: say the French for to decrease, then the French for to warn, then say profiter again

Before you move on

What does profiter mean? (“To enjoy, to make the most of”.) Say it once more.

209.2 imaginer — to imagine

Before the new one: say the French for to warn, then the French for to enjoy.

You’ll want to know: imaginer

imaginer — “to imagine”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

imaginer ← Latin imaginari, “to picture”, from imago, “an image” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: imaginer
- Say it: imaginer, once more
- Say it: say imaginer
- Recall: say the French for to warn, then the French for to enjoy, then say imaginer again

Before you move on

What does imaginer mean? ("To imagine".) Say it once more.

209.3 indiquer — to point out

Before the new one: say the French for to enjoy, then the French for to imagine.

You'll want to know: indiquer

indiquer — "to point out".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

indiquer ← Latin indicare, "to point out" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: indiquer
- Say it: indiquer, once more
- Say it: say indiquer
- Recall: say the French for to enjoy, then the French for to imagine, then say indiquer again

Before you move on

What does indiquer mean? ("To point out".) Say it once more.

209.4 informer — to inform

Before the new one: say the French for to imagine, then the French for to point out.

You'll want to know: informer

informer — "to inform".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

informer ← Latin informare, "to give shape to, to describe" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: informer
- Say it: informer, once more
- Say it: say informer
- Recall: say the French for to imagine, then the French for to point out, then say informer again

Before you move on

What does informer mean? ("To inform".) Say it once more.

209.5 se plaindre — to complain

Before the new one: say the French for to point out, then the French for to inform.

You'll want to know: se plaindre

se plaindre — "to complain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se plaindre ← Latin plangere, "to beat the breast, to lament" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se plaindre
- Say it: se plaindre, once more
- Say it: say se plaindre
- Recall: say the French for to point out, then the French for to inform, then say se plaindre again

Before you move on

What does se plaindre mean? ("To complain".) Say it once more.

Chapter 210

To reach, To achieve, To give a present, To give back, To recognise

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to reach, to achieve, to give a present, to give back and to recognise.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 210: I can say to reach, to achieve, to give a present, to give back and to recognise.

210.1 atteindre — to reach

> Before the new one: say the French for to inform, then the French for to complain.

You'll want to know: atteindre

atteindre — "to reach".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

atteindre ← Old French ateindre (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin attingere, "to touch upon, to reach" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: atteindre
- Say it: atteindre, once more
- Say it: say atteindre
- Recall: say the French for to inform, then the French for to complain, then say atteindre again

Before you move on

What does atteindre mean? ("To reach".) Say it once more.

210.2 réaliser — to achieve

Before the new one: say the French for to complain, then the French for to reach.

You'll want to know: réaliser

réaliser — "to achieve".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réaliser — built from the word for "real", ← Late Latin realis, from res, "a thing", with -iser: to make real. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: réaliser
- Say it: réaliser, once more
- Say it: say réaliser
- Recall: say the French for to complain, then the French for to reach, then say réaliser again

Before you move on

What does réaliser mean? ("To achieve".) Say it once more.

210.3 offrir un cadeau — to give a present

Before the new one: say the French for to reach, then the French for to achieve.

You'll want to know: offrir un cadeau

offrir un cadeau — "to give a present".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

offrir un cadeau — offrir, "to offer", ← Latin offerre (EtymDB 2.1), un, "a", and cadeau, "a present".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: offrir un cadeau
- Say it: offrir un cadeau, once more
- Say it: say offrir un cadeau
- Recall: say the French for to reach, then the French for to achieve, then say offrir un cadeau again

Before you move on

What does offrir un cadeau mean? ("To give a present".) Say it once more.

210.4 rendre — to give back

Before the new one: say the French for to achieve, then the French for to give a present.

You'll want to know: rendre

rendre — "to give back".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rendre ← Vulgar Latin rendere* ← Latin reddere, "to give back" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited, its -n- taken from the Latin verb for "to take".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rendre
- Say it: rendre, once more
- Say it: say rendre
- Recall: say the French for to achieve, then the French for to give a present, then say rendre again

Before you move on

What does rendre mean? ("To give back".) Say it once more.

210.5 reconnaître — to recognise

Before the new one: say the French for to give a present, then the French for to give back.

You'll want to know: reconnaître

reconnaître — "to recognise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

reconnaître ← Old French reconoistre ← Latin recognoscere, "to know anew" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: connaître with re-.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: reconnaître
- Say it: reconnaître, once more
- Say it: say reconnaître
- Recall: say the French for to give a present, then the French for to give back, then say reconnaître again

Before you move on

What does reconnaître mean? ("To recognise".) Say it once more.

Chapter 211

To be silent, To fear, To attempt, To transport, To kill

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to be silent, to fear, to attempt, to transport and to kill.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 211: I can say to be silent, to fear, to attempt, to transport and to kill.

211.1 se taire — to be silent

Before the new one: say the French for to give back, then the French for to recognise.

You'll want to know: se taire

se taire — "to be silent".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se taire ← Old French taire (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin tacere, "to be silent" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se taire
- Say it: se taire, once more
- Say it: say se taire
- Recall: say the French for to give back, then the French for to recognise, then say se taire again

Before you move on

What does se taire mean? ("To be silent".) Say it once more.

211.2 craindre — to fear

Before the new one: say the French for to recognise, then the French for to be silent.

You'll want to know: craindre

craindre — "to fear".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

craindre — usually traced to Latin tremere, "to tremble" (Lewis & Short), whose t- became c-, perhaps under a Gaulish word — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: craindre
- Say it: craindre, once more
- Say it: say craindre
- Recall: say the French for to recognise, then the French for to be silent, then say craindre again

Before you move on

What does craindre mean? (“To fear”.) Say it once more.

211.3 tenter — to attempt

Before the new one: say the French for to be silent, then the French for to fear.

You’ll want to know: tenter

tenter — “to attempt”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tenter ← Latin temptare, “to test, to try” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: -mpt- regularly became -nt-.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tenter
- Say it: tenter, once more
- Say it: say tenter
- Recall: say the French for to be silent, then the French for to fear, then say tenter again

Before you move on

What does tenter mean? (“To attempt”.) Say it once more.

211.4 transporter — to transport

Before the new one: say the French for to fear, then the French for to attempt.

You'll want to know: transporter

transporter — "to transport".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

transporter ← Latin transportare, "to carry across" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: transporter
- Say it: transporter, once more
- Say it: say transporter
- Recall: say the French for to fear, then the French for to attempt, then say transporter again

Before you move on

What does transporter mean? ("To transport".) Say it once more.

211.5 tuer — to kill

Before the new one: say the French for to attempt, then the French for to transport.

You'll want to know: tuer

tuer — "to kill".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tuer ← Old French tuer ← Vulgar Latin tutare*, "to put out (a fire)", from Latin tutari, "to guard" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tuer
- Say it: tuer, once more
- Say it: say tuer
- Recall: say the French for to attempt, then the French for to transport, then say tuer again

Before you move on

What does tuer mean? ("To kill".) Say it once more.

Chapter 212

To fix, To brake, To function, To float, To chase

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to fix, to brake, to function, to float and to chase.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 212: I can say to fix, to brake, to function, to float and to chase.

212.1 fixer — to fix, to stare at

> Before the new one: say the French for to transport, then the French for to kill.

You'll want to know: fixer

fixer — "to fix, to stare at".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fixer — built from the word for "fixed", ← Latin fixus, from figere, "to fasten". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fixer
- Say it: fixer, once more
- Say it: say fixer
- Recall: say the French for to transport, then the French for to kill, then say fixer again

Before you move on

What does fixer mean? ("To fix, to stare at".) Say it once more.

212.2 freiner — to brake

Before the new one: say the French for to kill, then the French for to fix.

You'll want to know: freiner

freiner — "to brake".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

freiner — built from the word for "a bit, a brake", ← Latin frenum, "a bridle" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: freiner
- Say it: freiner, once more
- Say it: say freiner
- Recall: say the French for to kill, then the French for to fix, then say freiner again

Before you move on

What does freiner mean? ("To brake".) Say it once more.

212.3 fonctionner — to function, to work

Before the new one: say the French for to fix, then the French for to brake.

You'll want to know: fonctionner

fonctionner — "to function, to work".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fonctionner — built from the word for "function", ← Latin functio, "a performing", with -er. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fonctionner
- Say it: fonctionner, once more
- Say it: say fonctionner
- Recall: say the French for to fix, then the French for to brake, then say fonctionner again

Before you move on

What does fonctionner mean? ("To function, to work".) Say it once more.

212.4 flotter — to float

Before the new one: say the French for to brake, then the French for to function.

You'll want to know: flotter

flotter — "to float".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

flotter ← Old French floter ← Frankish flotan*, "to float" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: flotter
- Say it: flotter, once more
- Say it: say flotter
- Recall: say the French for to brake, then the French for to function, then say flotter again

Before you move on

What does flotter mean? ("To float".) Say it once more.

212.5 poursuivre — to chase

Before the new one: say the French for to function, then the French for to float.

You'll want to know: poursuivre

poursuivre — "to chase".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poursuivre ← Old French porsivre (EtymDB 2.1), from pour-, "forward", and the verb for "to follow", ← Latin sequi — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: poursuivre
- Say it: poursuivre, once more
- Say it: say poursuivre
- Recall: say the French for to function, then the French for to float, then say poursuivre again

Before you move on

What does poursuivre mean? ("To chase".) Say it once more.

Chapter 213

To lift, To surprise, To suspect, To squeeze, To suggest

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to lift, to surprise, to suspect, to squeeze and to suggest.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 213: I can say to lift, to surprise, to suspect, to squeeze and to suggest.

213.1 soulever — to lift

Before the new one: say the French for to float, then the French for to chase.

You'll want to know: soulever

soulever — "to lift".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soulever — sou-, "under", and lever, "to lift": to lift from beneath. Lever ← Latin levāre, "to raise" (EtymDB 2.1), and sou- ← Latin sub, "under".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: soulever
- Say it: soulever, once more
- Say it: say soulever
- Recall: say the French for to float, then the French for to chase, then say soulever again

Before you move on

What does soulever mean? ("To lift".) Say it once more.

213.2 surprendre — to surprise

Before the new one: say the French for to chase, then the French for to lift.

You'll want to know: surprendre

surprendre — "to surprise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

surprendre ← Old French sorprendre, "to overtake": sur-, "over", and prendre, "to take". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: surprendre
- Say it: surprendre, once more
- Say it: say surprendre
- Recall: say the French for to chase, then the French for to lift, then say surprendre again

Before you move on

What does surprendre mean? ("To surprise".) Say it once more.

213.3 soupçonner — to suspect

Before the new one: say the French for to lift, then the French for to surprise.

You'll want to know: soupçonner

soupçonner — "to suspect".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

soupçonner — built from the word for "suspicion", ← Late Latin suspectio, from suspicere, "to look up at, to suspect" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: soupçonner
- Say it: soupçonner, once more
- Say it: say soupçonner
- Recall: say the French for to lift, then the French for to surprise, then say soupçonner again

Before you move on

What does soupçonner mean? ("To suspect".) Say it once more.

213.4 serrer — to squeeze

Before the new one: say the French for to surprise, then the French for to suspect.

You'll want to know: serrer

serrer — "to squeeze".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

serrer ← Old French serrer ← Vulgar Latin serrare* ← Late Latin serare, "to bolt", from sera, "a bar" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the verb behind serrure.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: serrer
- Say it: serrer, once more
- Say it: say serrer
- Recall: say the French for to surprise, then the French for to suspect, then say serrer again

Before you move on

What does serrer mean? ("To squeeze".) Say it once more.

213.5 suggérer — to suggest

Before the new one: say the French for to suspect, then the French for to squeeze.

You'll want to know: suggérer

suggérer — "to suggest".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

suggérer ← Latin suggerere, "to bring up, to supply" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suggérer
- Say it: suggérer, once more
- Say it: say suggérer
- Recall: say the French for to suspect, then the French for to squeeze, then say suggérer again

Before you move on

What does suggérer mean? ("To suggest".) Say it once more.

213.6 Words from chapters 205-208 — a first pass

Say the words for to squeeze and to suggest.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to book, to spend, to save, to order, to dry
- to break, to touch, to taste, to heat, to cool down
- to be born, to die, to grow old, to marry, to divorce
- to applaud, to cross, to increase, to decrease, to warn

Before you move on

To book? (réserver.) To spend? (dépenser.) To save? (économiser.) To order? (commander.) To dry? (sécher.) To break? (casser.) To touch? (toucher.) To taste? (goûter.) To heat? (chauffer.) To cool down? (refroidir.) To be born? (naître.) To die? (mourir.) To grow old? (vieillir.) To marry?

(épouser.) To divorce? (divorcer.) To applaud? (applaudir.) To cross? (traverser.) To increase? (augmenter.) To decrease? (diminuer.) To warn? (prévenir.)

213.7 Words from chapters 209-213 — a second pass

Say the words for to enjoy and to imagine.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to enjoy, to imagine, to point out, to inform, to complain
- to reach, to achieve, to give a present, to give back, to recognise
- to be silent, to fear, to attempt, to transport, to kill
- to fix, to brake, to function, to float, to chase
- to lift, to surprise, to suspect, to squeeze, to suggest

Before you move on

To enjoy? (profiter.) To imagine? (imaginer.) To point out? (indiquer.) To inform? (informer.) To complain? (se plaindre.) To reach? (atteindre.) To achieve? (réaliser.) To give a present? (offrir un cadeau.) To give back? (rendre.) To recognise? (reconnaître.) To be silent? (se taire.) To fear? (craindre.) To attempt? (tenter.) To transport? (transporter.) To kill? (tuer.) To fix? (fixer.) To brake? (freiner.) To function? (fonctionner.) To float? (flotter.) To chase? (poursuivre.) To lift? (soulever.) To surprise? (surprendre.) To suspect? (soupçonner.) To squeeze? (serrer.) To suggest? (suggérer.)

Chapter 214

To record, To maintain, To exist, To express, To put on weight

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to record, to maintain, to exist, to express and to put on weight.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 214: I can say to record, to maintain, to exist, to express and to put on weight.

214.1 enregistrer — to record

> Before the new one: say the French for to squeeze, then the French for to suggest.

You'll want to know: enregistrer

enregistrer — "to record".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enregistrer — built from en-, the word for "a register", ← Medieval Latin registrum (EtymDB 2.1), and -er: to put in the register.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: enregistrer
- Say it: enregistrer, once more
- Say it: say enregistrer
- Recall: say the French for to squeeze, then the French for to suggest, then say enregistrer again

Before you move on

What does enregistrer mean? ("To record".) Say it once more.

214.2 entretenir — to maintain

Before the new one: say the French for to suggest, then the French for to record.

You'll want to know: entretenir

entretenir — "to maintain".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

entretenir ← Old French entretenir: entre-, "between", and tenir, "to hold". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: entretenir
- Say it: entretenir, once more
- Say it: say entretenir
- Recall: say the French for to suggest, then the French for to record, then say entretenir again

Before you move on

What does entretenir mean? (“To maintain”.) Say it once more.

214.3 exister — to exist

Before the new one: say the French for to record, then the French for to maintain.

You’ll want to know: exister

exister — “to exist”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

exister ← Latin existere, “to stand out, to arise” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exister
- Say it: exister, once more
- Say it: say exister
- Recall: say the French for to record, then the French for to maintain, then say exister again

Before you move on

What does exister mean? (“To exist”.) Say it once more.

214.4 exprimer — to express

Before the new one: say the French for to maintain, then the French for to exist.

You'll want to know: exprimer

exprimer — "to express".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

exprimer ← Latin exprimere, "to press out" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: exprimer
- Say it: exprimer, once more
- Say it: say exprimer
- Recall: say the French for to maintain, then the French for to exist, then say exprimer again

Before you move on

What does exprimer mean? ("To express".) Say it once more.

214.5 grossir — to put on weight

Before the new one: say the French for to exist, then the French for to express.

You'll want to know: grossir

grossir — "to put on weight".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

grossir — gros, "fat", with the verb ending -ir: to grow fat. Gros ← Late Latin grossus, "thick" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: grossir
- Say it: grossir, once more
- Say it: say grossir
- Recall: say the French for to exist, then the French for to express, then say grossir again

Before you move on

What does grossir mean? ("To put on weight".) Say it once more.

Chapter 215

Flu, Prescription, Tablet, Syrup, Ointment

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say flu, a prescription, a tablet, a syrup and an ointment.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 215: I can say flu, a prescription, a tablet, a syrup and an ointment.

215.1 la grippe — flu

Before the new one: say the French for to express, then the French for to put on weight.

You'll want to know: la grippe

la grippe — "flu".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

grippe — formed from the verb for "to seize", from Frankish gripan*, "to grab" (EtymDB 2.1): the illness that grabs you.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la grippe
- Say it: la grippe, once more
- Say it: say la grippe
- Recall: say the French for to express, then the French for to put on weight, then say la grippe again

Before you move on

What does la grippe mean? ("Flu".) Say it once more.

215.2 l'ordonnance — a prescription

Before the new one: say the French for to put on weight, then the French for flu.

You'll want to know: l'ordonnance

l'ordonnance — "a prescription".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ordonnance — built from the verb for "to arrange, to order", ← Latin ordinare, from ordo, "order" (Lewis & Short), with -ance.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'ordonnance
- Say it: l'ordonnance, once more
- Say it: say l'ordonnance
- Recall: say the French for to put on weight, then the French for flu, then say l'ordonnance again

Before you move on

What does l'ordonnance mean? ("A prescription".) Say it once more.

215.3 le comprimé — a tablet (medicine)

Before the new one: say the French for flu, then the French for a prescription.

You'll want to know: le comprimé

le comprimé — "a tablet (medicine)".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

comprimé is the past participle of the verb for "to compress", ← Latin comprimere, "to press together" (Lewis & Short): a pressed tablet.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le comprimé
- Say it: le comprimé, once more
- Say it: say le comprimé
- Recall: say the French for flu, then the French for a prescription, then say le comprimé again

Before you move on

What does le comprimé mean? ("A tablet (medicine)".) Say it once more.

215.4 le sirop — a syrup

Before the new one: say the French for a prescription, then the French for a tablet.

You'll want to know: le sirop

le sirop — "a syrup".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sirop ← Medieval Latin siruppus, from Arabic sharab, "a drink" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sirop
- Say it: le sirop, once more
- Say it: say le sirop
- Recall: say the French for a prescription, then the French for a tablet, then say le sirop again

Before you move on

What does le sirop mean? ("A syrup".) Say it once more.

215.5 la pommade — an ointment

Before the new one: say the French for a tablet, then the French for a syrup.

You'll want to know: la pommade

la pommade — "an ointment".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pommade ← Italian pomata, from pomo, "apple", ← Latin pomum (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed: the first ointments were made with apples.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pommade
- Say it: la pommade, once more
- Say it: say la pommade
- Recall: say the French for a tablet, then the French for a syrup, then say la pommade again

Before you move on

What does la pommade mean? ("An ointment".) Say it once more.

Chapter 216

Around, Everywhere, Elsewhere, Up there, Suburbs

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say around, everywhere, elsewhere, up there and the suburbs.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 216: I can say around, everywhere, elsewhere, up there and the suburbs.

216.1 autour — around

Before the new one: say the French for a syrup, then the French for an ointment.

You'll want to know: autour

autour — "around".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

autour — au and the word for "a turn", ← Latin tornus, "a lathe": round about. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: autour
- Say it: autour, once more
- Say it: say autour
- Recall: say the French for a syrup, then the French for an ointment, then say autour again

Before you move on

What does autour mean? ("Around".) Say it once more.

216.2 partout — everywhere

Before the new one: say the French for an ointment, then the French for around.

You'll want to know: partout

partout — "everywhere".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

partout — the words for "through" and "all", the second ← Latin totus (EtymDB 2.1): through all places.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: partout
- Say it: partout, once more
- Say it: say partout
- Recall: say the French for an ointment, then the French for around, then say partout again

Before you move on

What does partout mean? ("Everywhere".) Say it once more.

216.3 ailleurs — elsewhere

Before the new one: say the French for around, then the French for everywhere.

You'll want to know: ailleurs

ailleurs — "elsewhere".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ailleurs ← Old French aillors (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin aliorsum, "toward another place" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ailleurs
- Say it: ailleurs, once more
- Say it: say ailleurs
- Recall: say the French for around, then the French for everywhere, then say ailleurs again

Before you move on

What does ailleurs mean? ("Elsewhere".) Say it once more.

216.4 là-haut — up there

Before the new one: say the French for everywhere, then the French for elsewhere.

You'll want to know: là-haut

là-haut — "up there".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

là-haut — là, "there", and haut, "high". Haut ← Latin altus, "high", with an h from Frankish (EtymDB 2.1 records the Frankish hauh); là ← Latin illāc, "there".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: là-haut
- Say it: là-haut, once more
- Say it: say là-haut
- Recall: say the French for everywhere, then the French for elsewhere, then say là-haut again

Before you move on

What does là-haut mean? ("Up there".) Say it once more.

216.5 la banlieue — the suburbs

Before the new one: say the French for elsewhere, then the French for up there.

You'll want to know: la banlieue

la banlieue — "the suburbs".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

banlieue ← Medieval Latin banleuca: ban, "a lord's rule", a Frankish word, and leuca, "a league", a Gaulish one — the land within a league of a town. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la banlieue
- Say it: la banlieue, once more
- Say it: say la banlieue
- Recall: say the French for elsewhere, then the French for up there, then say la banlieue again

Before you move on

What does la banlieue mean? ("The suburbs".) Say it once more.

Chapter 217

Almost, About, Only, Together, Nevertheless

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say almost, about, only, together and nevertheless.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 217: I can say almost, about, only, together and nevertheless.

217.1 presque — almost

Before the new one: say the French for up there, then the French for the suburbs.

You'll want to know: presque

presque — "almost".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

presque — près, "near", and que, "that": nearly. Près ← Latin presse, "closely" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: presque
- Say it: presque, once more
- Say it: say presque
- Recall: say the French for up there, then the French for the suburbs, then say presque again

Before you move on

What does presque mean? ("Almost".) Say it once more.

217.2 environ — about, approximately

Before the new one: say the French for the suburbs, then the French for almost.

You'll want to know: environ

environ — "about, approximately".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

environ — en, "in", and Old French viron, "a circuit", from the verb for "to turn": in the round of. En ← Latin in; the verb behind viron is of uncertain origin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: environ
- Say it: environ, once more
- Say it: say environ
- Recall: say the French for the suburbs, then the French for almost, then say environ again

Before you move on

What does environ mean? (“About, approximately”.) Say it once more.

217.3 seulement — only

Before the new one: say the French for almost, then the French for about.

You’ll want to know: seulement

seulement — “only”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

seulement — the word for “alone”, ← Latin solus (Lewis & Short), with -ment.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: seulement
- Say it: seulement, once more
- Say it: say seulement
- Recall: say the French for almost, then the French for about, then say seulement again

Before you move on

What does seulement mean? (“Only”.) Say it once more.

217.4 ensemble — together

Before the new one: say the French for about, then the French for only.

You'll want to know: ensemble

ensemble — "together".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins ensemble ← Late Latin insimul, "at the same time", from simul, "together" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ensemble
- Say it: ensemble, once more
- Say it: say ensemble
- Recall: say the French for about, then the French for only, then say ensemble again

Before you move on

What does ensemble mean? ("Together".) Say it once more.

217.5 cependant — nevertheless, however

Before the new one: say the French for only, then the French for together.

You'll want to know: cependant

cependant — "nevertheless, however".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

cependant — ce, "this", and the word for "during", from the verb for "to hang", ← Latin pendere (EtymDB 2.1): "during this".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: cependant
- Say it: cependant, once more
- Say it: say cependant
- Recall: say the French for only, then the French for together, then say cependant again

Before you move on

What does cependant mean? ("Nevertheless, however".) Say it once more.

Chapter 218

Curious, Jealous, Proud, Nervous, Quiet

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say curious, jealous, proud, nervous and quiet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 218: I can say curious, jealous, proud, nervous and quiet.

218.1 curieux / curieuse — curious

> Before the new one: say the French for together, then the French for nevertheless.

You'll want to know: curieux / curieuse

curieux / curieuse — "curious".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

curieux ← Latin curiosus, "careful, inquisitive", from cura, "care" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: curieux / curieuse
- Say it: curieux / curieuse, once more
- Say it: say curieux / curieuse
- Recall: say the French for together, then the French for nevertheless, then say curieux / curieuse again

Before you move on

What does curieux / curieuse mean? ("Curious".) Say it once more.

218.2 jaloux / jalouse — jealous

Before the new one: say the French for nevertheless, then the French for curious.

You'll want to know: jaloux / jalouse

jaloux / jalouse — "jealous".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jaloux ← Old French jalous ← Late Latin zelosus, from zelus, "zeal", from Greek zelos — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jaloux / jalouse
- Say it: jaloux / jalouse, once more
- Say it: say jaloux / jalouse
- Recall: say the French for nevertheless, then the French for curious, then say jaloux / jalouse again

Before you move on

What does jaloux / jalouse mean? (“Jealous”.) Say it once more.

218.3 fier / fière — proud

Before the new one: say the French for curious, then the French for jealous.

You’ll want to know: fier / fière

fier / fière — “proud”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fier ← Latin ferus, “wild, untamed” (Lewis & Short) — inherited: fierce first, then proud.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fier / fière
- Say it: fier / fière, once more
- Say it: say fier / fière
- Recall: say the French for curious, then the French for jealous, then say fier / fière again

Before you move on

What does fier / fière mean? (“Proud”.) Say it once more.

218.4 nerveux / nerveuse — nervous

Before the new one: say the French for jealous, then the French for proud.

You'll want to know: nerveux / nerveuse

nerveux / nerveuse — "nervous".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nerveux ← Old French nerveus ← Latin nervosus, "sinewy", from nervus, "a sinew" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nerveux / nerveuse
- Say it: nerveux / nerveuse, once more
- Say it: say nerveux / nerveuse
- Recall: say the French for jealous, then the French for proud, then say nerveux / nerveuse again

Before you move on

What does nerveux / nerveuse mean? ("Nervous".) Say it once more.

218.5 tranquille — quiet, peaceful

Before the new one: say the French for proud, then the French for nervous.

You'll want to know: tranquille

tranquille — "quiet, peaceful".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tranquille ← Latin tranquillus, "calm" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tranquille
- Say it: tranquille, once more
- Say it: say tranquille
- Recall: say the French for proud, then the French for nervous, then say tranquille again

Before you move on

What does tranquille mean? ("Quiet, peaceful".) Say it once more.

Chapter 219

Boring, Fun, Strange, Different, Same

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say boring, fun, strange, different and the same.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 219: I can say boring, fun, strange, different and the same.

219.1 ennuyeux / ennuyeuse — boring

Before the new one: say the French for nervous, then the French for quiet.

You'll want to know: ennuyeux / ennuyeuse

ennuyeux / ennuyeuse — "boring".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ennuyeux — built from the noun beside s'ennuyer, with -eux, "full of": full of boredom.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ennuyeux / ennuyeuse
- Say it: ennuyeux / ennuyeuse, once more
- Say it: say ennuyeux / ennuyeuse
- Recall: say the French for nervous, then the French for quiet, then say ennuyeux / ennuyeuse again

Before you move on

What does ennuyeux / ennuyeuse mean? ("Boring".) Say it once more.

219.2 amusant / amusante — fun, amusing

Before the new one: say the French for quiet, then the French for boring.

You'll want to know: amusant / amusante

amusant / amusante — "fun, amusing".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

amusant is the present participle of the verb in s'amuser, "to amuse": amusing. Amuser ← Old French amuser, "to keep idle", from muser, "to gape" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: amusant / amusante
- Say it: amusant / amusante, once more
- Say it: say amusant / amusante

- Recall: say the French for quiet, then the French for boring, then say amusant / amusante again

Before you move on

What does amusant / amusante mean? ("Fun, amusing".) Say it once more.

219.3 étrange — strange

Before the new one: say the French for boring, then the French for fun.

You'll want to know: étrange

étrange — "strange".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étrange ← Old French estrange ← Latin extraneus, "from outside, foreign" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: étrange
- Say it: étrange, once more
- Say it: say étrange
- Recall: say the French for boring, then the French for fun, then say étrange again

Before you move on

What does étrange mean? ("Strange".) Say it once more.

219.4 différent / différente — different

Before the new one: say the French for fun, then the French for strange.

You'll want to know: différent / différente

différent / différente — "different".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

différent ← Latin differens, "carrying apart", from differre (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: différent / différente
- Say it: différent / différente, once more
- Say it: say différent / différente
- Recall: say the French for fun, then the French for strange, then say différent / différente again

Before you move on

What does différent / différente mean? ("Different".) Say it once more.

219.5 pareil / pareille — the same

Before the new one: say the French for strange, then the French for different.

You'll want to know: pareil / pareille

pareil / pareille — "the same".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pareil ← Middle French pareil (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin pariculus*, from Latin par, "equal" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: pareil / pareille
- Say it: pareil / pareille, once more
- Say it: say pareil / pareille
- Recall: say the French for strange, then the French for different, then say pareil / pareille again

Before you move on

What does pareil / pareille mean? ("The same".) Say it once more.

Chapter 220

Punctual, Foreign, Friendly, Honest, Patient

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say punctual, foreign, friendly, honest and patient.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 220: I can say punctual, foreign, friendly, honest and patient.

220.1 ponctuel / ponctuelle — punctual

Before the new one: say the French for different, then the French for the same.

You'll want to know: ponctuel / ponctuelle

ponctuel / ponctuelle — "punctual".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ponctuel ← Medieval Latin punctualis, from punctus, "a point" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ponctuel / ponctuelle
- Say it: ponctuel / ponctuelle, once more
- Say it: say ponctuel / ponctuelle
- Recall: say the French for different, then the French for the same, then say ponctuel / ponctuelle again

Before you move on

What does ponctuel / ponctuelle mean? ("Punctual".) Say it once more.

220.2 étranger / étrangère — foreign

Before the new one: say the French for the same, then the French for punctual.

You'll want to know: étranger / étrangère

étranger / étrangère — "foreign".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étranger — built from étrange, then meaning "foreign", with -ier. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: étranger / étrangère
- Say it: étranger / étrangère, once more
- Say it: say étranger / étrangère
- Recall: say the French for the same, then the French for punctual, then say étranger / étrangère again

Before you move on

What does étranger / étrangère mean? (“Foreign”.) Say it once more.

220.3 aimable — friendly

Before the new one: say the French for punctual, then the French for foreign.

You’ll want to know: aimable

aimable — “friendly”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aimable ← Latin amabilis, “lovable” (Lewis & Short) — inherited, reshaped on aimer.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: aimable
- Say it: aimable, once more
- Say it: say aimable
- Recall: say the French for punctual, then the French for foreign, then say aimable again

Before you move on

What does aimable mean? (“Friendly”.) Say it once more.

220.4 honnête — honest

Before the new one: say the French for foreign, then the French for friendly.

You'll want to know: honnête

honnête — "honest".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

honnête ← Old French honeste ← Latin honestus, "honourable", from honor (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited; the circumflex marks the lost s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: honnête
- Say it: honnête, once more
- Say it: say honnête
- Recall: say the French for foreign, then the French for friendly, then say honnête again

Before you move on

What does honnête mean? ("Honest".) Say it once more.

220.5 patient / patiente — patient

Before the new one: say the French for friendly, then the French for honest.

You'll want to know: patient / patiente

patient / patiente — "patient".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

patient ← Latin patiens, patientis, "enduring", from pati, "to suffer" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: patient / patiente
- Say it: patient / patiente, once more
- Say it: say patient / patiente
- Recall: say the French for friendly, then the French for honest, then say patient / patiente again

Before you move on

What does patient / patiente mean? ("Patient".) Say it once more.

Chapter 221

Scissors, Watch, Pyjamas, Button, Peach

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say scissors, a watch, pyjamas, a button and a peach.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 221: I can say scissors, a watch, pyjamas, a button and a peach.

221.1 les ciseaux — scissors

Before the new one: say the French for honest, then the French for patient.

You'll want to know: les ciseaux

les ciseaux — "scissors".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ciseaux is the plural of the word for "a chisel", usually traced to Late Latin cisorium, "a cutting tool", from caedere, "to cut" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les ciseaux
- Say it: les ciseaux, once more
- Say it: say les ciseaux
- Recall: say the French for honest, then the French for patient, then say les ciseaux again

Before you move on

What does les ciseaux mean? ("Scissors".) Say it once more.

221.2 la montre — a watch

Before the new one: say the French for patient, then the French for scissors.

You'll want to know: la montre

la montre — "a watch".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

montre — formed from montrer, "to show": the thing that shows the time.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la montre
- Say it: la montre, once more
- Say it: say la montre
- Recall: say the French for patient, then the French for scissors, then say la montre again

Before you move on

What does la montre mean? (“A watch”.) Say it once more.

221.3 le pyjama — pyjamas

Before the new one: say the French for scissors, then the French for a watch.

You’ll want to know: le pyjama

le pyjama — “pyjamas”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pyjama ← English pyjamas, from Hindi pajama, from Persian, “a leg garment” — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pyjama
- Say it: le pyjama, once more
- Say it: say le pyjama
- Recall: say the French for scissors, then the French for a watch, then say le pyjama again

Before you move on

What does le pyjama mean? (“Pyjamas”.) Say it once more.

221.4 le bouton — a button

Before the new one: say the French for a watch, then the French for pyjamas.

You'll want to know: le bouton

le bouton — "a button".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bouton ← Old French boton, built from boter, "to push, to sprout" (EtymDB 2.1): a bud, then a button.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le bouton
- Say it: le bouton, once more
- Say it: say le bouton
- Recall: say the French for a watch, then the French for pyjamas, then say le bouton again

Before you move on

What does le bouton mean? ("A button".) Say it once more.

221.5 la pêche — a peach

Before the new one: say the French for pyjamas, then the French for a button.

You'll want to know: la pêche

la pêche — "a peach".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pêche ← Old French pesche ← Vulgar Latin pessica*, from Latin persica, "the Persian (apple)" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pêche
- Say it: la pêche, once more
- Say it: say la pêche
- Recall: say the French for pyjamas, then the French for a button, then say la pêche again

Before you move on

What does la pêche mean? ("A peach".) Say it once more.

Chapter 222

Society, Government, Law, Court, Judge

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say society, the government, a law, a court and a judge.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 222: I can say society, the government, a law, a court and a judge.

222.1 la société — society

Before the new one: say the French for a button, then the French for a peach.

You'll want to know: la société

la société — "society".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

société ← Latin societas, "fellowship", from socius, "a companion" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la société
- Say it: la société, once more
- Say it: say la société
- Recall: say the French for a button, then the French for a peach, then say la société again

Before you move on

What does la société mean? ("Society".) Say it once more.

222.2 le gouvernement — the government

Before the new one: say the French for a peach, then the French for society.

You'll want to know: le gouvernement

le gouvernement — "the government".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gouvernement — built from the verb for "to govern", ← Latin gubernare, "to steer a ship" (Lewis & Short), with -ment.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le gouvernement
- Say it: le gouvernement, once more
- Say it: say le gouvernement
- Recall: say the French for a peach, then the French for society, then say le gouvernement again

Before you move on

What does le gouvernement mean? ("The government".) Say it once more.

222.3 la loi — a law

Before the new one: say the French for society, then the French for the government.

You'll want to know: la loi

la loi — "a law".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

loi ← Old French loi ← Latin lex, legis, "law" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la loi
- Say it: la loi, once more
- Say it: say la loi
- Recall: say the French for society, then the French for the government, then say la loi again

Before you move on

What does la loi mean? ("A law".) Say it once more.

222.4 le tribunal — a court

Before the new one: say the French for the government, then the French for a law.

You'll want to know: le tribunal

le tribunal — "a court".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins tribunal ← Latin tribunal, "the raised seat of the tribunes" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tribunal
- Say it: le tribunal, once more
- Say it: say le tribunal
- Recall: say the French for the government, then the French for a law, then say le tribunal again

Before you move on

What does le tribunal mean? ("A court".) Say it once more.

222.5 le juge — a judge

Before the new one: say the French for a law, then the French for a court.

You'll want to know: le juge

le juge — "a judge".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

juge ← Old French juge ← Latin iudex, iudicis, "a judge", from ius, "law", and dicere, "to say" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le juge
- Say it: le juge, once more
- Say it: say le juge
- Recall: say the French for a law, then the French for a court, then say le juge again

Before you move on

What does le juge mean? ("A judge".) Say it once more.

222.6 Words from chapters 214-217 — a first pass

Say the words for a court and a judge.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to record, to maintain, to exist, to express, to put on weight
- flu, a prescription, a tablet, a syrup, an ointment
- around, everywhere, elsewhere, up there, the suburbs
- almost, about, only, together, nevertheless

Before you move on

To record? (enregistrer.) To maintain? (entretenir.) To exist? (exister.) To express? (exprimer.) To put on weight? (grossir.) Flu? (la grippe.) A prescription? (l'ordonnance.) A tablet? (le comprimé.) A syrup? (le sirop.) An ointment? (la pommade.) Around? (autour.) Everywhere? (partout.) Elsewhere?

(ailleurs.) Up there? (là-haut.) The suburbs? (la banlieue.) Almost? (presque.) About? (environ.) Only? (seulement.) Together? (ensemble.) Nevertheless? (cependant.)

222.7 Words from chapters 218-222 — a second pass

Say the words for curious and jealous.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- curious, jealous, proud, nervous, quiet
- boring, fun, strange, different, the same
- punctual, foreign, friendly, honest, patient
- scissors, a watch, pyjamas, a button, a peach
- society, the government, a law, a court, a judge

Before you move on

Curious? (curieux / curieuse.) Jealous? (jaloux / jalouse.) Proud? (fier / fière.) Nervous? (nerveux / nerveuse.) Quiet? (tranquille.) Boring? (ennuyeux / ennuyeuse.) Fun? (amusant / amusante.) Strange? (étrange.) Different? (différent / différente.) The same? (pareil / pareille.) Punctual? (ponctuel / ponctuelle.) Foreign? (étranger / étrangère.) Friendly? (aimable.) Honest? (honnête.) Patient? (patient / patiente.) Scissors? (les ciseaux.) A watch? (la montre.) Pyjamas? (le pyjama.) A button? (le bouton.) A peach? (la pêche.) Society? (la société.) The government? (le gouvernement.) A law? (la loi.) A court? (le tribunal.) A judge? (le juge.)

Chapter 223

Battery, Charger, Singer, Concert, Show

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a battery, a charger, a singer, a concert and a show.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 223: I can say a battery, a charger, a singer, a concert and a show.

223.1 la batterie — a battery

Before the new one: say the French for a court, then the French for a judge.

You'll want to know: la batterie

la batterie — "a battery".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

batterie — built from the verb for "to beat", ← Latin battuere, with -erie (EtymDB 2.1): guns firing together, then cells working together.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la batterie
- Say it: la batterie, once more
- Say it: say la batterie
- Recall: say the French for a court, then the French for a judge, then say la batterie again

Before you move on

What does la batterie mean? (“A battery”.) Say it once more.

223.2 le chargeur — a charger

Before the new one: say the French for a judge, then the French for a battery.

You’ll want to know: le chargeur

le chargeur — “a charger”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chargeur — built from the verb for “to load”, ← Late Latin carricare (EtymDB 2.1), from carrus, “a wagon”, with -eur.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le chargeur
- Say it: le chargeur, once more
- Say it: say le chargeur
- Recall: say the French for a judge, then the French for a battery, then say le chargeur again

Before you move on

What does le chargeur mean? (“A charger”.) Say it once more.

223.3 le chanteur — a singer

Before the new one: say the French for a battery, then the French for a charger.

You’ll want to know: le chanteur

le chanteur — “a singer”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chanteur ← Old French chanteor (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin cantator, cantatoris, “a singer”, from cantare, “to sing” (Lewis & Short) — inherited: the same root as chanson. Latin cantor gave a different word, the one for a church precentor.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le chanteur
- Say it: le chanteur, once more
- Say it: say le chanteur
- Recall: say the French for a battery, then the French for a charger, then say le chanteur again

Before you move on

What does le chanteur mean? (“A singer”.) Say it once more.

223.4 le concert — a concert

Before the new one: say the French for a charger, then the French for a singer.

You'll want to know: le concert

le concert — "a concert".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

concert ← Italian concerto, "an agreement, a concert" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le concert
- Say it: le concert, once more
- Say it: say le concert
- Recall: say the French for a charger, then the French for a singer, then say le concert again

Before you move on

What does le concert mean? ("A concert".) Say it once more.

223.5 le spectacle — a show

Before the new one: say the French for a singer, then the French for a concert.

You'll want to know: le spectacle

le spectacle — "a show".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

spectacle ← Latin spectaculum, "a show", from spectare, "to watch" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le spectacle
- Say it: le spectacle, once more
- Say it: say le spectacle
- Recall: say the French for a singer, then the French for a concert, then say le spectacle again

Before you move on

What does le spectacle mean? ("A show".) Say it once more.

Chapter 224

Employee, Pilot, Accountant, Scientist, Researcher

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an employee, a pilot, an accountant, a scientist and a researcher.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 224: I can say an employee, a pilot, an accountant, a scientist and a researcher.

224.1 l'employé — an employee

> Before the new one: say the French for a concert, then the French for a show.

You'll want to know: l'employé

l'employé — "an employee".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

employé is the past participle of the verb for "to employ", ← Latin implicare, "to involve" (Lewis & Short), used as a noun: one employed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'employé
- Say it: l'employé, once more
- Say it: say l'employé
- Recall: say the French for a concert, then the French for a show, then say l'employé again

Before you move on

What does l'employé mean? ("An employee".) Say it once more.

224.2 le pilote — a pilot

Before the new one: say the French for a show, then the French for an employee.

You'll want to know: le pilote

le pilote — "a pilot".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pilote ← Italian pilota, from a Medieval Greek word for "steersman", built on pedon, "an oar" — borrowed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pilote
- Say it: le pilote, once more
- Say it: say le pilote
- Recall: say the French for a show, then the French for an employee, then say le pilote again

Before you move on

What does le pilote mean? (“A pilot”.) Say it once more.

224.3 le comptable — an accountant

Before the new one: say the French for an employee, then the French for a pilot.

You’ll want to know: le comptable

le comptable — “an accountant”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

comptable — compter, “to count”, with -able: one who keeps the counts. Compter ← Latin computāre, “to reckon” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le comptable
- Say it: le comptable, once more
- Say it: say le comptable
- Recall: say the French for an employee, then the French for a pilot, then say le comptable again

Before you move on

What does le comptable mean? (“An accountant”.) Say it once more.

224.4 le scientifique — a scientist

Before the new one: say the French for a pilot, then the French for an accountant.

You'll want to know: le scientifique

le scientifique — "a scientist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

scientifique ← Latin scientificus, "making knowledge", from scientia, "knowledge" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le scientifique
- Say it: le scientifique, once more
- Say it: say le scientifique
- Recall: say the French for a pilot, then the French for an accountant, then say le scientifique again

Before you move on

What does le scientifique mean? ("A scientist".) Say it once more.

224.5 le chercheur — a researcher

Before the new one: say the French for an accountant, then the French for a scientist.

You'll want to know: le chercheur

le chercheur — "a researcher".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chercheur — chercher, "to look for", with -eur: one who searches. Chercher ← Old French cerchier, from Late Latin circāre, "to go around" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le chercheur
- Say it: le chercheur, once more
- Say it: say le chercheur
- Recall: say the French for an accountant, then the French for a scientist, then say le chercheur again

Before you move on

What does le chercheur mean? ("A researcher".) Say it once more.

Chapter 225

Experience, Choice, Decision, Possibility, Reason

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say experience, a choice, a decision, a possibility and a reason.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 225: I can say experience, a choice, a decision, a possibility and a reason.

225.1 l'expérience — experience

> Before the new one: say the French for a scientist, then the French for a researcher.

You'll want to know: l'expérience

l'expérience — "experience".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

expérience ← Latin experientia, "a trial, a test", from experiri, "to try" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'expérience
- Say it: l'expérience, once more
- Say it: say l'expérience
- Recall: say the French for a scientist, then the French for a researcher, then say l'expérience again

Before you move on

What does l'expérience mean? ("Experience".) Say it once more.

225.2 le choix — a choice

Before the new one: say the French for a researcher, then the French for experience.

You'll want to know: le choix

le choix — "a choice".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

choix ← Old French chois, formed from the verb for "to choose" (EtymDB 2.1), which came from a Germanic verb meaning "to test, to taste".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le choix
- Say it: le choix, once more
- Say it: say le choix
- Recall: say the French for a researcher, then the French for experience, then say le choix again

Before you move on

What does le choix mean? ("A choice".) Say it once more.

225.3 la décision — a decision

Before the new one: say the French for experience, then the French for a choice.

You'll want to know: la décision

la décision — "a decision".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

décision ← Latin decisio, "a settling", the noun beside décider — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la décision
- Say it: la décision, once more
- Say it: say la décision
- Recall: say the French for experience, then the French for a choice, then say la décision again

Before you move on

What does la décision mean? ("A decision".) Say it once more.

225.4 la possibilité — a possibility

Before the new one: say the French for a choice, then the French for a decision.

You'll want to know: la possibilité

la possibilité — "a possibility".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

possibilité ← Latin possibilitas, from possibilis, "possible", from posse, "to be able" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la possibilité
- Say it: la possibilité, once more
- Say it: say la possibilité
- Recall: say the French for a choice, then the French for a decision, then say la possibilité again

Before you move on

What does la possibilité mean? ("A possibility".) Say it once more.

225.5 la raison — a reason

Before the new one: say the French for a decision, then the French for a possibility.

You'll want to know: la raison

la raison — "a reason".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

raison ← Latin ratio, rationis, "reckoning, reason" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la raison
- Say it: la raison, once more
- Say it: say la raison
- Recall: say the French for a decision, then the French for a possibility, then say la raison again

Before you move on

What does la raison mean? ("A reason".) Say it once more.

Chapter 226

Bank card, Cash machine, Bank account, Loan, Debt

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a bank card, a cash machine, a bank account, a loan and a debt.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 226: I can say a bank card, a cash machine, a bank account, a loan and a debt.

226.1 la carte bancaire — a bank card

Before the new one: say the French for a possibility, then the French for a reason.

You'll want to know: la carte bancaire

la carte bancaire — "a bank card".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

carte bancaire — carte, "card", and the adjective made from banque.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la carte bancaire
- Say it: la carte bancaire, once more
- Say it: say la carte bancaire
- Recall: say the French for a possibility, then the French for a reason, then say la carte bancaire again

Before you move on

What does la carte bancaire mean? ("A bank card".) Say it once more.

226.2 le distributeur — a cash machine

Before the new one: say the French for a reason, then the French for a bank card.

You'll want to know: le distributeur

le distributeur — "a cash machine".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

distributeur ← Late Latin distributor, "one who hands out" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le distributeur
- Say it: le distributeur, once more
- Say it: say le distributeur
- Recall: say the French for a reason, then the French for a bank card, then say le distributeur again

Before you move on

What does le distributeur mean? ("A cash machine".) Say it once more.

226.3 le compte bancaire — a bank account

Before the new one: say the French for a bank card, then the French for a cash machine.

You'll want to know: le compte bancaire

le compte bancaire — "a bank account".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

compte bancaire — compte, "an account", from compter, and the adjective made from banque.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le compte bancaire
- Say it: le compte bancaire, once more
- Say it: say le compte bancaire
- Recall: say the French for a bank card, then the French for a cash machine, then say le compte bancaire again

Before you move on

What does le compte bancaire mean? ("A bank account".) Say it once more.

226.4 le prêt — a loan

Before the new one: say the French for a cash machine, then the French for a bank account.

You'll want to know: le prêt

le prêt — "a loan".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prêt — formed from prêter, "to lend": a thing lent.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le prêt
- Say it: le prêt, once more
- Say it: say le prêt
- Recall: say the French for a cash machine, then the French for a bank account, then say le prêt again

Before you move on

What does le prêt mean? ("A loan".) Say it once more.

226.5 la dette — a debt

Before the new one: say the French for a bank account, then the French for a loan.

You'll want to know: la dette

la dette — "a debt".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dette ← Latin debita, "things owed", from debere, the Latin of devoir (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la dette
- Say it: la dette, once more
- Say it: say la dette
- Recall: say the French for a bank account, then the French for a loan, then say la dette again

Before you move on

What does la dette mean? ("A debt".) Say it once more.

Chapter 227

Wheel, Engine, Toll, Motorway, Fine

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a wheel, an engine, a toll, a motorway and a fine.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 227: I can say a wheel, an engine, a toll, a motorway and a fine.

227.1 la roue — a wheel

> Before the new one: say the French for a loan, then the French for a debt.

You'll want to know: la roue

la roue — "a wheel".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

roue ← Old French ruee (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin rota, "a wheel" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la roue
- Say it: la roue, once more
- Say it: say la roue
- Recall: say the French for a loan, then the French for a debt, then say la roue again

Before you move on

What does la roue mean? (“A wheel”.) Say it once more.

227.2 le moteur — an engine

Before the new one: say the French for a debt, then the French for a wheel.

You’ll want to know: le moteur

le moteur — “an engine”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

moteur ← Latin motor, “a mover”, from movere, “to move” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le moteur
- Say it: le moteur, once more
- Say it: say le moteur
- Recall: say the French for a debt, then the French for a wheel, then say le moteur again

Before you move on

What does le moteur mean? (“An engine”.) Say it once more.

227.3 le péage — a toll

Before the new one: say the French for a wheel, then the French for an engine.

You’ll want to know: le péage

le péage — “a toll”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

péage ← Medieval Latin pedaticum, “the right to set foot”, from pes, pedis, the Latin of pied — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le péage
- Say it: le péage, once more
- Say it: say le péage
- Recall: say the French for a wheel, then the French for an engine, then say le péage again

Before you move on

What does le péage mean? (“A toll”.) Say it once more.

227.4 l’autoroute — a motorway

Before the new one: say the French for an engine, then the French for a toll.

You'll want to know: l'autoroute

l'autoroute — "a motorway".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

autoroute — auto-, from the word for "motor car", and the word for "a road", ← Latin via rupta, "a road broken through" (Lewis & Short for rumpere).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'autoroute
- Say it: l'autoroute, once more
- Say it: say l'autoroute
- Recall: say the French for an engine, then the French for a toll, then say l'autoroute again

Before you move on

What does l'autoroute mean? ("A motorway".) Say it once more.

227.5 l'amende — a fine

Before the new one: say the French for a toll, then the French for a motorway.

You'll want to know: l'amende

l'amende — "a fine".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

amende — formed from the verb for "to make amends", ← Latin emendare, "to correct" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'amende
- Say it: l'amende, once more
- Say it: say l'amende
- Recall: say the French for a toll, then the French for a motorway, then say l'amende again

Before you move on

What does l'amende mean? ("A fine".) Say it once more.

227.6 Words from chapters 223-224 — a first pass

Say the words for a motorway and a fine.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a battery, a charger, a singer, a concert, a show
- an employee, a pilot, an accountant, a scientist, a researcher

Before you move on

A battery? (la batterie.) A charger? (le chargeur.) A singer? (le chanteur.) A concert? (le concert.) A show? (le spectacle.) An employee? (l'employé.) A pilot? (le pilote.) An accountant? (le comptable.) A scientist? (le scientifique.) A researcher? (le chercheur.)

227.7 Words from chapters 225-227 — a second pass

Say the words for experience and a choice.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- experience, a choice, a decision, a possibility, a reason
- a bank card, a cash machine, a bank account, a loan, a debt
- a wheel, an engine, a toll, a motorway, a fine

Before you move on

Experience? (l'expérience.) A choice? (le choix.) A decision? (la décision.) A possibility? (la possibilité.) A reason? (la raison.) A bank card? (la carte bancaire.) A cash machine? (le distributeur.) A bank account? (le compte bancaire.) A loan? (le prêt.) A debt? (la dette.) A wheel? (la roue.) An engine? (le moteur.) A toll? (le péage.) A motorway? (l'autoroute.) A fine? (l'amende.)

Chapter 228

Vase, Plant, Seed, Root, Branch

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a vase, a plant, a seed, a root and a branch.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 228: I can say a vase, a plant, a seed, a root and a branch.

228.1 le vase — a vase

> Before the new one: say the French for a motorway, then the French for a fine.

You'll want to know: le vase

le vase — "a vase".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vase ← Latin vas, vasis, "a vessel" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le vase
- Say it: le vase, once more
- Say it: say le vase
- Recall: say the French for a motorway, then the French for a fine, then say le vase again

Before you move on

What does le vase mean? (“A vase”.) Say it once more.

228.2 la plante — a plant

Before the new one: say the French for a fine, then the French for a vase.

You’ll want to know: la plante

la plante — “a plant”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plante ← Latin planta, “a sprout, a cutting” (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la plante
- Say it: la plante, once more
- Say it: say la plante
- Recall: say the French for a fine, then the French for a vase, then say la plante again

Before you move on

What does la plante mean? (“A plant”.) Say it once more.

228.3 la graine — a seed

Before the new one: say the French for a vase, then the French for a plant.

You’ll want to know: la graine

la graine — “a seed”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

graine ← Vulgar Latin grana, “grains”, the plural of granum — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la graine
- Say it: la graine, once more
- Say it: say la graine
- Recall: say the French for a vase, then the French for a plant, then say la graine again

Before you move on

What does la graine mean? (“A seed”.) Say it once more.

228.4 la racine — a root

Before the new one: say the French for a plant, then the French for a seed.

You'll want to know: la racine

la racine — "a root".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

racine ← Late Latin radicina*, from radix, radicis, "a root" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la racine
- Say it: la racine, once more
- Say it: say la racine
- Recall: say the French for a plant, then the French for a seed, then say la racine again

Before you move on

What does la racine mean? ("A root".) Say it once more.

228.5 la branche — a branch

Before the new one: say the French for a seed, then the French for a root.

You'll want to know: la branche

la branche — "a branch".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

branche ← Late Latin branca, "a paw" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the noun behind brancher.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la branche
- Say it: la branche, once more
- Say it: say la branche
- Recall: say the French for a seed, then the French for a root, then say la branche again

Before you move on

What does la branche mean? ("A branch".) Say it once more.

Chapter 229

Lightning, Thunder, Climate, Environment, Pollution

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say lightning, thunder, the climate, the environment and pollution.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 229: I can say lightning, thunder, the climate, the environment and pollution.

229.1 l'éclair — lightning

Before the new one: say the French for a root, then the French for a branch.

You'll want to know: l'éclair

l'éclair — "lightning".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

éclair — formed from the verb for "to light up", built on clair, "bright".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'éclair
- Say it: l'éclair, once more
- Say it: say l'éclair
- Recall: say the French for a root, then the French for a branch, then say l'éclair again

Before you move on

What does l'éclair mean? ("Lightning".) Say it once more.

229.2 le tonnerre — thunder

Before the new one: say the French for a branch, then the French for lightning.

You'll want to know: le tonnerre

le tonnerre — "thunder".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tonnerre ← Old French tuneire ← Latin tonitrus, "thunder" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tonnerre
- Say it: le tonnerre, once more
- Say it: say le tonnerre
- Recall: say the French for a branch, then the French for lightning, then say le tonnerre again

Before you move on

What does le tonnerre mean? (“Thunder”.) Say it once more.

229.3 le climat — the climate

Before the new one: say the French for lightning, then the French for thunder.

You’ll want to know: le climat

le climat — “the climate”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

climat ← Latin clima, from Greek klima, “a slope, a zone of latitude” — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le climat
- Say it: le climat, once more
- Say it: say le climat
- Recall: say the French for lightning, then the French for thunder, then say le climat again

Before you move on

What does le climat mean? (“The climate”.) Say it once more.

229.4 l’environnement — the environment

Before the new one: say the French for thunder, then the French for the climate.

You'll want to know: l'environnement

l'environnement — "the environment".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

environnement — built from environ, "round about", with -ment: what lies around.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'environnement
- Say it: l'environnement, once more
- Say it: say l'environnement
- Recall: say the French for thunder, then the French for the climate, then say l'environnement again

Before you move on

What does l'environnement mean? ("The environment".) Say it once more.

229.5 la pollution — pollution

Before the new one: say the French for the climate, then the French for the environment.

You'll want to know: la pollution

la pollution — "pollution".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins pollution ← Latin pollutio, "a defiling" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pollution
- Say it: la pollution, once more
- Say it: say la pollution
- Recall: say the French for the climate, then the French for the environment, then say la pollution again

Before you move on

What does la pollution mean? ("Pollution".) Say it once more.

Chapter 230

Thread, Needle, Nail for hammering, Hammer, Ladder

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a thread, a needle, a nail for hammering, a hammer and a ladder.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 230: I can say a thread, a needle, a nail for hammering, a hammer and a ladder.

230.1 le fil — a thread, a wire

> Before the new one: say the French for the environment, then the French for pollution.

You'll want to know: le fil

le fil — "a thread, a wire".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fil ← Old French fil ← Latin filum, "a thread" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le fil
- Say it: le fil, once more
- Say it: say le fil
- Recall: say the French for the environment, then the French for pollution, then say le fil again

Before you move on

What does le fil mean? (“A thread, a wire”.) Say it once more.

230.2 l’aiguille — a needle

Before the new one: say the French for pollution, then the French for a thread.

You’ll want to know: l’aiguille

l’aiguille — “a needle”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

aiguille ← Old French aguille (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin acucula*, “a little needle”, from Latin acus, “a needle” — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’aiguille
- Say it: l’aiguille, once more
- Say it: say l’aiguille
- Recall: say the French for pollution, then the French for a thread, then say l’aiguille again

Before you move on

What does l'aiguille mean? ("A needle".) Say it once more.

230.3 le clou — a nail for hammering

Before the new one: say the French for a thread, then the French for a needle.

You'll want to know: le clou

le clou — "a nail for hammering".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

clou ← Old French clou ← Latin clavus, "a nail" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le clou
- Say it: le clou, once more
- Say it: say le clou
- Recall: say the French for a thread, then the French for a needle, then say le clou again

Before you move on

What does le clou mean? ("A nail for hammering".) Say it once more.

230.4 le marteau — a hammer

Before the new one: say the French for a needle, then the French for a nail for hammering.

You'll want to know: le marteau

le marteau — "a hammer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

marteau ← Vulgar Latin martellus* ← Latin martulus, "a hammer" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le marteau
- Say it: le marteau, once more
- Say it: say le marteau
- Recall: say the French for a needle, then the French for a nail for hammering, then say le marteau again

Before you move on

What does le marteau mean? ("A hammer".) Say it once more.

230.5 l'échelle — a ladder

Before the new one: say the French for a nail for hammering, then the French for a hammer.

You'll want to know: l'échelle

l'échelle — "a ladder".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

échelle ← Old French eschele, eschiele ← Latin scala, "a ladder" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited; escalier came later from a word built on the same scala.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'échelle
- Say it: l'échelle, once more
- Say it: say l'échelle
- Recall: say the French for a nail for hammering, then the French for a hammer, then say l'échelle again

Before you move on

What does l'échelle mean? ("A ladder".) Say it once more.

Chapter 231

Return, Arrival, Departure, Destination, Landscape

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say the return, arrival, departure, a destination and a landscape.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 231: I can say the return, arrival, departure, a destination and a landscape.

231.1 le retour — the return

Before the new one: say the French for a hammer, then the French for a ladder.

You'll want to know: le retour

le retour — "the return".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

retour — formed from the verb for "to return", re- with tourner, "to turn". Tourner ← Latin tornāre, "to turn" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le retour
- Say it: le retour, once more
- Say it: say le retour
- Recall: say the French for a hammer, then the French for a ladder, then say le retour again

Before you move on

What does le retour mean? ("The return".) Say it once more.

231.2 l'arrivée — arrival

Before the new one: say the French for a ladder, then the French for the return.

You'll want to know: l'arrivée

l'arrivée — "arrival".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

arrivée is the past participle of the verb for "to arrive", ← Vulgar Latin arripare*, "to reach the shore", from ripa, "a bank", the Latin of rivière.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'arrivée
- Say it: l'arrivée, once more
- Say it: say l'arrivée
- Recall: say the French for a ladder, then the French for the return, then say l'arrivée again

Before you move on

What does l'arrivée mean? ("Arrival".) Say it once more.

231.3 le départ — departure

Before the new one: say the French for the return, then the French for arrival.

You'll want to know: le départ

le départ — "departure".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

départ — formed from Old French departir, "to divide, to go away", from de- and Old French partir, "to share out", ← Latin partire.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le départ
- Say it: le départ, once more
- Say it: say le départ
- Recall: say the French for the return, then the French for arrival, then say le départ again

Before you move on

What does le départ mean? ("Departure".) Say it once more.

231.4 la destination — a destination

Before the new one: say the French for arrival, then the French for departure.

You'll want to know: la destination

la destination — "a destination".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

destination ← Latin destinatio, "a fixing, a purpose", from destinare, "to make fast" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la destination
- Say it: la destination, once more
- Say it: say la destination
- Recall: say the French for arrival, then the French for departure, then say la destination again

Before you move on

What does la destination mean? ("A destination".) Say it once more.

231.5 le paysage — a landscape

Before the new one: say the French for departure, then the French for a destination.

You'll want to know: le paysage

le paysage — "a landscape".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

paysage — built from the word for "country", ← Late Latin pagensis, from pagus, "a district" (Lewis & Short), with -age.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le paysage
- Say it: le paysage, once more
- Say it: say le paysage
- Recall: say the French for departure, then the French for a destination, then say le paysage again

Before you move on

What does le paysage mean? ("A landscape".) Say it once more.

Chapter 232

Magazine, Dictionary, University, Mistake, History

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a magazine, a dictionary, a university, a mistake and history.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 232: I can say a magazine, a dictionary, a university, a mistake and history.

232.1 le magazine — a magazine

Before the new one: say the French for a destination, then the French for a landscape.

You'll want to know: le magazine

le magazine — "a magazine".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

magazine ← English magazine, a storehouse of writings (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed back: English had taken it from magasin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le magazine
- Say it: le magazine, once more
- Say it: say le magazine
- Recall: say the French for a destination, then the French for a landscape, then say le magazine again

Before you move on

What does le magazine mean? ("A magazine".) Say it once more.

232.2 le dictionnaire — a dictionary

Before the new one: say the French for a landscape, then the French for a magazine.

You'll want to know: le dictionnaire

le dictionnaire — "a dictionary".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dictionnaire ← Medieval Latin dictionarium, from dictio, "a saying, a word" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le dictionnaire
- Say it: le dictionnaire, once more
- Say it: say le dictionnaire
- Recall: say the French for a landscape, then the French for a magazine, then say le dictionnaire again

Before you move on

What does le dictionnaire mean? (“A dictionary”.) Say it once more.

232.3 l’université — a university

Before the new one: say the French for a magazine, then the French for a dictionary.

You’ll want to know: l’université

l’université — “a university”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

université ← Latin universitas, “the whole, a corporation”, from universus, “all together” (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’université
- Say it: l’université, once more
- Say it: say l’université
- Recall: say the French for a magazine, then the French for a dictionary, then say l’université again

Before you move on

What does l’université mean? (“A university”.) Say it once more.

232.4 l’erreur — a mistake

Before the new one: say the French for a dictionary, then the French for a university.

You'll want to know: l'erreur

l'erreur — "a mistake".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

erreur ← Latin error, "a wandering", from errare, "to wander" (Lewis & Short) — taken from Latin.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'erreur
- Say it: l'erreur, once more
- Say it: say l'erreur
- Recall: say the French for a dictionary, then the French for a university, then say l'erreur again

Before you move on

What does l'erreur mean? ("A mistake".) Say it once more.

232.5 l'histoire — history, a story

Before the new one: say the French for a university, then the French for a mistake.

You'll want to know: l'histoire

l'histoire — "history, a story".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

histoire ← Latin historia, from Greek historia, "inquiry, a narrative" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'histoire
- Say it: l'histoire, once more
- Say it: say l'histoire
- Recall: say the French for a university, then the French for a mistake, then say l'histoire again

Before you move on

What does l'histoire mean? ("History, a story".) Say it once more.

232.6 Words from chapters 228-229 — a first pass

Say the words for a mistake and history.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a vase, a plant, a seed, a root, a branch
- lightning, thunder, the climate, the environment, pollution

Before you move on

A vase? (le vase.) A plant? (la plante.) A seed? (la graine.) A root? (la racine.) A branch? (la branche.) Lightning? (l'éclair.) Thunder? (le tonnerre.) The climate? (le climat.) The environment? (l'environnement.) Pollution? (la pollution.)

232.7 Words from chapters 230-232 — a second pass

Say the words for a thread and a needle.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a thread, a needle, a nail for hammering, a hammer, a ladder
- the return, arrival, departure, a destination, a landscape
- a magazine, a dictionary, a university, a mistake, history

Before you move on

A thread? (le fil.) A needle? (l'aiguille.) A nail for hammering? (le clou.) A hammer? (le marteau.) A ladder? (l'échelle.) The return? (le retour.) Arrival? (l'arrivée.) Departure? (le départ.) A destination? (la destination.) A landscape? (le paysage.) A magazine? (le magazine.) A dictionary? (le dictionnaire.) A university? (l'université.) A mistake? (l'erreur.) History? (l'histoire.)

Chapter 233

To iron, To repair, To build, To photograph, To repeat

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to iron, to repair, to build, to photograph and to repeat.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 233: I can say to iron, to repair, to build, to photograph and to repeat.

233.1 repasser — to iron

Before the new one: say the French for a mistake, then the French for history, a story.

You'll want to know: repasser

repasser — "to iron".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

repasser — built from re- and the verb for "to pass", ← Vulgar Latin passare* (EtymDB 2.1): to pass the hot iron over the cloth.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: repasser
- Say it: repasser, once more
- Say it: say repasser
- Recall: say the French for a mistake, then the French for history, a story, then say repasser again

Before you move on

What does repasser mean? ("To iron".) Say it once more.

233.2 réparer — to repair

Before the new one: say the French for history, a story, then the French for to iron.

You'll want to know: réparer

réparer — "to repair".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réparer ← Latin reparare, "to restore" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: réparer
- Say it: réparer, once more
- Say it: say réparer
- Recall: say the French for history, a story, then the French for to iron, then say réparer again

Before you move on

What does réparer mean? (“To repair”.) Say it once more.

233.3 construire — to build

Before the new one: say the French for to iron, then the French for to repair.

You’ll want to know: construire

construire — “to build”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

construire ← Latin construere, “to heap together, to build” — taken from Latin and shaped like détruire. (EtymDB 2.1 has its Old French form.)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: construire
- Say it: construire, once more
- Say it: say construire
- Recall: say the French for to iron, then the French for to repair, then say construire again

Before you move on

What does construire mean? (“To build”.) Say it once more.

233.4 photographier — to photograph

Before the new one: say the French for to repair, then the French for to build.

You'll want to know: photographier

photographier — "to photograph".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

photographier — formed from the word for "photography", built like photo from Greek phos, "light", and graphein, "to write".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: photographier
- Say it: photographier, once more
- Say it: say photographier
- Recall: say the French for to repair, then the French for to build, then say photographier again

Before you move on

What does photographier mean? ("To photograph".) Say it once more.

233.5 répéter — to repeat

Before the new one: say the French for to build, then the French for to photograph.

You'll want to know: répéter

répéter — "to repeat".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

répéter ← Latin repetere, "to go back to, to seek once more" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: répéter
- Say it: répéter, once more
- Say it: say répéter
- Recall: say the French for to build, then the French for to photograph, then say répéter again

Before you move on

What does répéter mean? ("To repeat".) Say it once more.

Chapter 234

To fill, To empty, To measure, To weigh, To check

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to fill, to empty, to measure, to weigh and to check.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 234: I can say to fill, to empty, to measure, to weigh and to check.

234.1 remplir — to fill

Before the new one: say the French for to photograph, then the French for to repeat.

You'll want to know: remplir

remplir — "to fill".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

remplir ← Old French remplir: re- and emplir, "to fill", ← Latin implere. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: remplir
- Say it: remplir, once more
- Say it: say remplir
- Recall: say the French for to photograph, then the French for to repeat, then say remplir again

Before you move on

What does remplir mean? ("To fill".) Say it once more.

234.2 vider — to empty

Before the new one: say the French for to repeat, then the French for to fill.

You'll want to know: vider

vider — "to empty".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vider ← Old French vuidier ← Vulgar Latin vocitare*, "to empty" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the verb beside vide.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vider
- Say it: vider, once more
- Say it: say vider
- Recall: say the French for to repeat, then the French for to fill, then say vider again

Before you move on

What does vider mean? ("To empty".) Say it once more.

234.3 mesurer — to measure

Before the new one: say the French for to fill, then the French for to empty.

You'll want to know: mesurer

mesurer — "to measure".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mesurer ← Late Latin mensurare, from mensura, "a measure" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mesurer
- Say it: mesurer, once more
- Say it: say mesurer
- Recall: say the French for to fill, then the French for to empty, then say mesurer again

Before you move on

What does mesurer mean? ("To measure".) Say it once more.

234.4 peser — to weigh

Before the new one: say the French for to empty, then the French for to measure.

You'll want to know: peser

peser — "to weigh".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

peser ← Vulgar Latin pesare* ← Latin pensare, "to weigh, to ponder" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: peser
- Say it: peser, once more
- Say it: say peser
- Recall: say the French for to empty, then the French for to measure, then say peser again

Before you move on

What does peser mean? ("To weigh".) Say it once more.

234.5 vérifier — to check

Before the new one: say the French for to measure, then the French for to weigh.

You'll want to know: vérifier

vérifier — "to check".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vérifier ← Medieval Latin verificare, "to make true", from verus, "true" — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: vérifier
- Say it: vérifier, once more
- Say it: say vérifier
- Recall: say the French for to measure, then the French for to weigh, then say vérifier again

Before you move on

What does vérifier mean? ("To check".) Say it once more.

Chapter 235

To move house, To rent, To rest, To wake up, To do one's hair

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to move house, to rent, to rest, to wake up and to do one's hair.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 235: I can say to move house, to rent, to rest, to wake up and to do one's hair.

235.1 déménager — to move house

Before the new one: say the French for to weigh, then the French for to check.

You'll want to know: déménager

déménager — "to move house".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

déménager — built from dé-, "out", and the word for "a household", from Old French maisnie, "a household", ← Vulgar Latin mansionata*, from mansio, "a dwelling": to take the household out.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: déménager
- Say it: déménager, once more
- Say it: say déménager
- Recall: say the French for to weigh, then the French for to check, then say déménager again

Before you move on

What does déménager mean? ("To move house".) Say it once more.

235.2 louer — to rent

Before the new one: say the French for to check, then the French for to move house.

You'll want to know: louer

louer — "to rent".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

louer ← Latin locare, "to place, to hire out" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1) A second louer, "to praise", comes from Latin laudare.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: louer
- Say it: louer, once more
- Say it: say louer
- Recall: say the French for to check, then the French for to move house, then say louer again

Before you move on

What does louer mean? (“To rent”.) Say it once more.

235.3 se reposer — to rest

Before the new one: say the French for to move house, then the French for to rent.

You’ll want to know: se reposer

se reposer — “to rest”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se reposer ← Late Latin repausare, “to rest” (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the verb beside repos.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se reposer
- Say it: se reposer, once more
- Say it: say se reposer
- Recall: say the French for to move house, then the French for to rent, then say se reposer again

Before you move on

What does se reposer mean? (“To rest”.) Say it once more.

235.4 se réveiller — to wake up

Before the new one: say the French for to rent, then the French for to rest.

You'll want to know: se réveiller

se réveiller — "to wake up".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se réveiller — re- and the verb for "to wake", ← Vulgar Latin exvigilare*, from Latin vigilare, "to keep watch" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se réveiller
- Say it: se réveiller, once more
- Say it: say se réveiller
- Recall: say the French for to rent, then the French for to rest, then say se réveiller again

Before you move on

What does se réveiller mean? ("To wake up".) Say it once more.

235.5 se coiffer — to do one's hair

Before the new one: say the French for to rest, then the French for to wake up.

You'll want to know: se coiffer

se coiffer — "to do one's hair".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se coiffer — formed from the word for "a cap", ← Late Latin cofia, a Germanic word. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se coiffer
- Say it: se coiffer, once more
- Say it: say se coiffer
- Recall: say the French for to rest, then the French for to wake up, then say se coiffer again

Before you move on

What does se coiffer mean? ("To do one's hair".) Say it once more.

Chapter 236

To be enough, To burn, To throw away, To calculate, To hit

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to be enough, to burn, to throw away, to calculate and to hit.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 236: I can say to be enough, to burn, to throw away, to calculate and to hit.

236.1 suffire — to be enough

Before the new one: say the French for to wake up, then the French for to do one's hair.

You'll want to know: suffire

suffire — "to be enough".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

suffire ← Latin sufficere, "to be enough" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: suffire
- Say it: suffire, once more
- Say it: say suffire
- Recall: say the French for to wake up, then the French for to do one's hair, then say suffire again

Before you move on

What does suffire mean? ("To be enough".) Say it once more.

236.2 brûler — to burn

Before the new one: say the French for to do one's hair, then the French for to be enough.

You'll want to know: brûler

brûler — "to burn".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

brûler — its origin is uncertain. The usual account mixes Latin ustulare, "to scorch", with a Germanic verb for "to burn".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: brûler
- Say it: brûler, once more
- Say it: say brûler
- Recall: say the French for to do one's hair, then the French for to be enough, then say brûler again

Before you move on

What does brûler mean? (“To burn”.) Say it once more.

236.3 jeter — to throw away

Before the new one: say the French for to be enough, then the French for to burn.

You’ll want to know: jeter

jeter — “to throw away”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jeter ← Old French jeter (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin iectare* ← Latin iactare, “to throw about” (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: jeter
- Say it: jeter, once more
- Say it: say jeter
- Recall: say the French for to be enough, then the French for to burn, then say jeter again

Before you move on

What does jeter mean? (“To throw away”.) Say it once more.

236.4 calculer — to calculate

Before the new one: say the French for to burn, then the French for to throw away.

You'll want to know: calculer

calculer — "to calculate".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

calculer ← Late Latin calculare, from calculus, "a pebble" (Lewis & Short): sums were done with counting stones — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: calculer
- Say it: calculer, once more
- Say it: say calculer
- Recall: say the French for to burn, then the French for to throw away, then say calculer again

Before you move on

What does calculer mean? ("To calculate".) Say it once more.

236.5 frapper — to hit, to knock

Before the new one: say the French for to throw away, then the French for to calculate.

You'll want to know: frapper

frapper — "to hit, to knock".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

frapper ← Old French fraper, "to strike" (EtymDB 2.1), of uncertain origin; it may imitate the sound of a blow.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: frapper
- Say it: frapper, once more
- Say it: say frapper
- Recall: say the French for to throw away, then the French for to calculate, then say frapper again

Before you move on

What does frapper mean? ("To hit, to knock".) Say it once more.

Chapter 237

To miss, To deserve, To improve, To get worse, To offer

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to miss, to deserve, to improve, to get worse and to offer.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 237: I can say to miss, to deserve, to improve, to get worse and to offer.

237.1 manquer — to miss, to be missing

Before the new one: say the French for to calculate, then the French for to hit.

You'll want to know: manquer

manquer — "to miss, to be missing".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

manquer ← Italian mancare, "to be lacking", from manco, "maimed", ← Latin mancus — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: manquer
- Say it: manquer, once more
- Say it: say manquer
- Recall: say the French for to calculate, then the French for to hit, then say manquer again

Before you move on

What does manquer mean? ("To miss, to be missing".) Say it once more.

237.2 mériter — to deserve

Before the new one: say the French for to hit, then the French for to miss.

You'll want to know: mériter

mériter — "to deserve".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mériter — formed from the word for "merit", ← Latin meritum, "what one has earned". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mériter
- Say it: mériter, once more
- Say it: say mériter
- Recall: say the French for to hit, then the French for to miss, then say mériter again

Before you move on

What does mériter mean? ("To deserve".) Say it once more.

237.3 améliorer — to improve

Before the new one: say the French for to miss, then the French for to deserve.

You'll want to know: améliorer

améliorer — "to improve".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

améliorer — built on the word for "better", ← Latin melior, "better". (EtymDB 2.1 records the Old French form.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: améliorer
- Say it: améliorer, once more
- Say it: say améliorer
- Recall: say the French for to miss, then the French for to deserve, then say améliorer again

Before you move on

What does améliorer mean? ("To improve".) Say it once more.

237.4 empirer — to get worse

Before the new one: say the French for to deserve, then the French for to improve.

You'll want to know: empirer

empirer — "to get worse".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

empirer — built from em- and the word for "worse", ← Latin peior, "worse" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: empirer
- Say it: empirer, once more
- Say it: say empirer
- Recall: say the French for to deserve, then the French for to improve, then say empirer again

Before you move on

What does empirer mean? ("To get worse".) Say it once more.

237.5 offrir — to offer

Before the new one: say the French for to improve, then the French for to get worse.

You'll want to know: offrir

offrir — "to offer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

offrir ← Old French ofrir ← Vulgar Latin offerire* ← Latin offerre, "to bring before" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: offrir
- Say it: offrir, once more
- Say it: say offrir
- Recall: say the French for to improve, then the French for to get worse, then say offrir again

Before you move on

What does offrir mean? ("To offer".) Say it once more.

Chapter 238

To reduce, To refuse, To risk, To solve, To fly

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to reduce, to refuse, to risk, to solve and to fly.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 238: I can say to reduce, to refuse, to risk, to solve and to fly.

238.1 réduire — to reduce

Before the new one: say the French for to get worse, then the French for to offer.

You'll want to know: réduire

réduire — "to reduce".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

réduire ← Old French reduire (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin reducere, "to lead back" (Lewis & Short) — inherited, like conduire.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: réduire
- Say it: réduire, once more
- Say it: say réduire
- Recall: say the French for to get worse, then the French for to offer, then say réduire again

Before you move on

What does réduire mean? ("To reduce".) Say it once more.

238.2 refuser — to refuse

Before the new one: say the French for to offer, then the French for to reduce.

You'll want to know: refuser

refuser — "to refuse".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

refuser — usually traced to Vulgar Latin refusare*, a blend of Latin refutare, "to rebut", and recusare, "to decline" — the account is not certain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: refuser
- Say it: refuser, once more
- Say it: say refuser
- Recall: say the French for to offer, then the French for to reduce, then say refuser again

Before you move on

What does refuser mean? ("To refuse".) Say it once more.

238.3 risquer — to risk

Before the new one: say the French for to reduce, then the French for to refuse.

You'll want to know: risquer

risquer — "to risk".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

risquer — formed from the word for "risk", ← Old Italian risco (EtymDB 2.1), whose own origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: risquer
- Say it: risquer, once more
- Say it: say risquer
- Recall: say the French for to reduce, then the French for to refuse, then say risquer again

Before you move on

What does risquer mean? ("To risk".) Say it once more.

238.4 résoudre — to solve

Before the new one: say the French for to refuse, then the French for to risk.

You'll want to know: résoudre

résoudre — "to solve".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

résoudre ← Latin resolvere, "to loosen, to untie" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: résoudre
- Say it: résoudre, once more
- Say it: say résoudre
- Recall: say the French for to refuse, then the French for to risk, then say résoudre again

Before you move on

What does résoudre mean? ("To solve".) Say it once more.

238.5 voler — to fly, to steal

Before the new one: say the French for to risk, then the French for to solve.

You'll want to know: voler

voler — "to fly, to steal".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

voler ← Latin volare, "to fly" (Lewis & Short) — inherited. "To steal" grew out of falconry: a hawk flew at its prey.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: voler
- Say it: voler, once more
- Say it: say voler
- Recall: say the French for to risk, then the French for to solve, then say voler again

Before you move on

What does voler mean? ("To fly, to steal".) Say it once more.

Chapter 239

To unite, To be worth, To get used to, To realise, To hurry

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to unite, to be worth, to get used to, to realise and to hurry.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 239: I can say to unite, to be worth, to get used to, to realise and to hurry.

239.1 unir — to unite

> Before the new one: say the French for to solve, then the French for to fly.

You'll want to know: unir

unir — "to unite".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

unir ← Latin unire, "to make one", from unus, "one" — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1 has its Old French form.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: unir
- Say it: unir, once more
- Say it: say unir
- Recall: say the French for to solve, then the French for to fly, then say unir again

Before you move on

What does unir mean? (“To unite”.) Say it once more.

239.2 valoir — to be worth

Before the new one: say the French for to fly, then the French for to unite.

You’ll want to know: valoir

valoir — “to be worth”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

valoir ← Old French valoir ← Latin valere, “to be strong, to be worth” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: valoir
- Say it: valoir, once more
- Say it: say valoir
- Recall: say the French for to fly, then the French for to unite, then say valoir again

Before you move on

What does valoir mean? ("To be worth".) Say it once more.

239.3 s'habituer — to get used to

Before the new one: say the French for to unite, then the French for to be worth.

You'll want to know: s'habituer

s'habituer — "to get used to".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

s'habituer ← Late Latin habituare, "to bring into a condition", from habitus, "a state, a habit" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: s'habituer
- Say it: s'habituer, once more
- Say it: say s'habituer
- Recall: say the French for to unite, then the French for to be worth, then say s'habituer again

Before you move on

What does s'habituer mean? ("To get used to".) Say it once more.

239.4 se rendre compte — to realise

Before the new one: say the French for to be worth, then the French for to get used to.

You'll want to know: se rendre compte

se rendre compte — "to realise".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se rendre compte — "to render oneself an account": rendre, "to give back", and compte, "an account". Rendre ← Latin reddere, "to give back", and compte ← Latin computus, "a reckoning" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se rendre compte
- Say it: se rendre compte, once more
- Say it: say se rendre compte
- Recall: say the French for to be worth, then the French for to get used to, then say se rendre compte again

Before you move on

What does se rendre compte mean? ("To realise".) Say it once more.

239.5 se dépêcher — to hurry

Before the new one: say the French for to get used to, then the French for to realise.

You'll want to know: se dépêcher

se dépêcher — "to hurry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

se dépêcher — built in Old French as the opposite of the verb for "to hinder", ← Late Latin impedicare, "to catch, to entangle" (Lewis & Short): to get free and go.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: se dépêcher
- Say it: se dépêcher, once more
- Say it: say se dépêcher
- Recall: say the French for to get used to, then the French for to realise, then say se dépêcher again

Before you move on

What does se dépêcher mean? ("To hurry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 240

To insist, To interrupt, To tie, To mix, To obey

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to insist, to interrupt, to tie, to mix and to obey.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 240: I can say to insist, to interrupt, to tie, to mix and to obey.

240.1 insister — to insist

> Before the new one: say the French for to realise, then the French for to hurry.

You'll want to know: insister

insister — "to insist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

insister ← Latin insistere, "to stand on, to press on" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: insister
- Say it: insister, once more
- Say it: say insister
- Recall: say the French for to realise, then the French for to hurry, then say insister again

Before you move on

What does insister mean? ("To insist".) Say it once more.

240.2 interrompre — to interrupt

Before the new one: say the French for to hurry, then the French for to insist.

You'll want to know: interrompre

interrompre — "to interrupt".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

interrompre ← Latin interrumpere, "to break apart" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: interrompre
- Say it: interrompre, once more
- Say it: say interrompre
- Recall: say the French for to hurry, then the French for to insist, then say interrompre again

Before you move on

What does interrompre mean? ("To interrupt".) Say it once more.

240.3 attacher — to tie, to fasten

Before the new one: say the French for to insist, then the French for to interrupt.

You'll want to know: attacher

attacher — "to tie, to fasten".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

attacher ← Old French atachier, built on the word for "a nail, a fastener", which came from a Germanic word for "a stake". (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: attacher
- Say it: attacher, once more
- Say it: say attacher
- Recall: say the French for to insist, then the French for to interrupt, then say attacher again

Before you move on

What does attacher mean? ("To tie, to fasten".) Say it once more.

240.4 mélanger — to mix

Before the new one: say the French for to interrupt, then the French for to tie.

You'll want to know: mélanger

mélanger — "to mix".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mélanger — built from the verb for "to mix", ← Vulgar Latin misculare*, from Latin miscere, "to mix" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: mélanger
- Say it: mélanger, once more
- Say it: say mélanger
- Recall: say the French for to interrupt, then the French for to tie, then say mélanger again

Before you move on

What does mélanger mean? ("To mix".) Say it once more.

240.5 obéir — to obey

Before the new one: say the French for to tie, then the French for to mix.

You'll want to know: obéir

obéir — "to obey".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

obéir ← Old French obeir ← Latin oboedire, "to obey" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: obéir
- Say it: obéir, once more
- Say it: say obéir
- Recall: say the French for to tie, then the French for to mix, then say obéir again

Before you move on

What does obéir mean? ("To obey".) Say it once more.

Chapter 241

To cough, To tremble, To scream, To vote, To welcome

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say to cough, to tremble, to scream, to vote and to welcome.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 241: I can say to cough, to tremble, to scream, to vote and to welcome.

241.1 tousser — to cough

> Before the new one: say the French for to mix, then the French for to obey.

You'll want to know: tousser

tousser — "to cough".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tousser ← Latin tussire, "to cough" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the verb beside toux.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: tousser
- Say it: tousser, once more
- Say it: say tousser
- Recall: say the French for to mix, then the French for to obey, then say tousser again

Before you move on

What does tousser mean? (“To cough”.) Say it once more.

241.2 trembler — to tremble

Before the new one: say the French for to obey, then the French for to cough.

You’ll want to know: trembler

trembler — “to tremble”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

trembler ← Old French trembler ← Vulgar Latin tremulare*, from Latin tremulus, “trembling” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: trembler
- Say it: trembler, once more
- Say it: say trembler
- Recall: say the French for to obey, then the French for to cough, then say trembler again

Before you move on

What does trembler mean? ("To tremble".) Say it once more.

241.3 hurler — to scream

Before the new one: say the French for to cough, then the French for to tremble.

You'll want to know: hurler

hurler — "to scream".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

hurler ← Latin ululare, "to howl" (Lewis & Short) — inherited, with its first l turned to r.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: hurler
- Say it: hurler, once more
- Say it: say hurler
- Recall: say the French for to cough, then the French for to tremble, then say hurler again

Before you move on

What does hurler mean? ("To scream".) Say it once more.

241.4 voter — to vote

Before the new one: say the French for to tremble, then the French for to scream.

You'll want to know: voter

voter — "to vote".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

voter — formed from the word for "a vote", ← English vote, from Latin votum, "a vow, a wish" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: voter
- Say it: voter, once more
- Say it: say voter
- Recall: say the French for to tremble, then the French for to scream, then say voter again

Before you move on

What does voter mean? ("To vote".) Say it once more.

241.5 accueillir — to welcome

Before the new one: say the French for to scream, then the French for to vote.

You'll want to know: accueillir

accueillir — "to welcome".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

accueillir ← Old French acoillir ← Vulgar Latin accolligere* (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: cueillir with ac-, "to".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: accueillir
- Say it: accueillir, once more
- Say it: say accueillir
- Recall: say the French for to scream, then the French for to vote, then say accueillir again

Before you move on

What does accueillir mean? ("To welcome".) Say it once more.

241.6 Words from chapters 233-236 — a first pass

Say the words for to vote and to welcome.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to iron, to repair, to build, to photograph, to repeat
- to fill, to empty, to measure, to weigh, to check
- to move house, to rent, to rest, to wake up, to do one's hair
- to be enough, to burn, to throw away, to calculate, to hit

Before you move on

To iron? (repasser.) To repair? (réparer.) To build? (construire.) To photograph? (photographier.) To repeat? (répéter.) To fill? (remplir.) To empty? (vider.) To measure? (mesurer.) To weigh? (peser.) To check? (vérifier.) To move house? (déménager.) To rent? (louer.) To rest? (se reposer.)

To wake up? (se réveiller.) To do one's hair? (se coiffer.) To be enough? (suffire.) To burn? (brûler.) To throw away? (jeter.) To calculate? (calculer.) To hit? (frapper.)

241.7 Words from chapters 237-241 — a second pass

Say the words for to miss and to deserve.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to miss, to deserve, to improve, to get worse, to offer
- to reduce, to refuse, to risk, to solve, to fly
- to unite, to be worth, to get used to, to realise, to hurry
- to insist, to interrupt, to tie, to mix, to obey
- to cough, to tremble, to scream, to vote, to welcome

Before you move on

To miss? (manquer.) To deserve? (mériter.) To improve? (améliorer.) To get worse? (empirer.) To offer? (offrir.) To reduce? (réduire.) To refuse? (refuser.) To risk? (risquer.) To solve? (résoudre.) To fly? (voler.) To unite? (unir.) To be worth? (valoir.) To get used to? (s'habituer.) To realise? (se rendre compte.) To hurry? (se dépêcher.) To insist? (insister.) To interrupt? (interrompre.) To tie? (attacher.) To mix? (mélanger.) To obey? (obéir.) To cough? (tousser.) To tremble? (trembler.) To scream? (hurler.) To vote? (voter.) To welcome? (accueillir.)

Chapter 242

To lose weight, To feed, To go on holiday, To joke, To tidy up

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say to lose weight, to feed, to go on holiday, to joke and to tidy up.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 242: I can say to lose weight, to feed, to go on holiday, to joke and to tidy up.

242.1 maigrir — to lose weight

Before the new one: say the French for to vote, then the French for to welcome.

You'll want to know: maigrir

maigrir — "to lose weight".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

maigrir — built from the word for "thin", ← Latin macer, "lean" (Lewis & Short), with the verb ending -ir. (EtymDB 2.1 has the Old French form of the adjective.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: maigrir
- Say it: maigrir, once more
- Say it: say maigrir
- Recall: say the French for to vote, then the French for to welcome, then say maigrir again

Before you move on

What does maigrir mean? ("To lose weight".) Say it once more.

242.2 nourrir — to feed

Before the new one: say the French for to welcome, then the French for to lose weight.

You'll want to know: nourrir

nourrir — "to feed".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

nourrir ← Old French norrir ← Latin nutrire, "to suckle, to feed" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: nourrir
- Say it: nourrir, once more
- Say it: say nourrir
- Recall: say the French for to welcome, then the French for to lose weight, then say nourrir again

Before you move on

What does nourrir mean? (“To feed”.) Say it once more.

242.3 partir en vacances — to go on holiday

Before the new one: say the French for to lose weight, then the French for to feed.

You’ll want to know: partir en vacances

partir en vacances — “to go on holiday”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

partir en vacances — partir, “to leave”, first “to divide”, ← Latin partire, “to share out” (EtymDB 2.1); en, “on”; and vacances, “holidays”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: partir en vacances
- Say it: partir en vacances, once more
- Say it: say partir en vacances
- Recall: say the French for to lose weight, then the French for to feed, then say partir en vacances again

Before you move on

What does partir en vacances mean? (“To go on holiday”.) Say it once more.

242.4 plaisanter — to joke

Before the new one: say the French for to feed, then the French for to go on holiday.

You'll want to know: plaisanter

plaisanter — "to joke".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

plaisanter — built from the word for "pleasing", from the verb for "to please", ← Latin placere (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: plaisanter
- Say it: plaisanter, once more
- Say it: say plaisanter
- Recall: say the French for to feed, then the French for to go on holiday, then say plaisanter again

Before you move on

What does plaisanter mean? ("To joke".) Say it once more.

242.5 ranger — to tidy up

Before the new one: say the French for to go on holiday, then the French for to joke.

You'll want to know: ranger

ranger — "to tidy up".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

ranger — built from the word for “a row, a rank”, ← Frankish hring*, “a ring”. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: ranger
- Say it: ranger, once more
- Say it: say ranger
- Recall: say the French for to go on holiday, then the French for to joke, then say ranger again

Before you move on

What does ranger mean? (“To tidy up”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 243

Plaster, Emergency department, Emergency, Medical appointment, Diet

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a plaster, the emergency department, an emergency, a medical appointment and a diet.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 243: I can say a plaster, the emergency department, an emergency, a medical appointment and a diet.

243.1 le pansement — a plaster, a dressing

> Before the new one: say the French for to joke, then the French for to tidy up.

You'll want to know: le pansement

le pansement — "a plaster, a dressing".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pansement — built from the verb for "to dress a wound", once the same verb as penser, "to think": to tend is to think of. (EtymDB 2.1 links it to the verb.)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pansement
- Say it: le pansement, once more
- Say it: say le pansement
- Recall: say the French for to joke, then the French for to tidy up, then say le pansement again

Before you move on

What does le pansement mean? ("A plaster, a dressing".) Say it once more.

243.2 les urgences — the emergency department

Before the new one: say the French for to tidy up, then the French for a plaster.

You'll want to know: les urgences

les urgences — "the emergency department".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

urgences is the plural of the word for "an emergency", ← Latin urgens, "pressing", from urgere, "to press" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les urgences
- Say it: les urgences, once more

- Say it: say les urgences
- Recall: say the French for to tidy up, then the French for a plaster, then say les urgences again

Before you move on

What does les urgences mean? ("The emergency department".) Say it once more.

243.3 l'urgence — an emergency

Before the new one: say the French for a plaster, then the French for the emergency department.

You'll want to know: l'urgence

l'urgence — "an emergency".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

urgence — built from the word for "urgent", ← Latin urgens, "pressing", from urgere, "to press" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'urgence
- Say it: l'urgence, once more
- Say it: say l'urgence
- Recall: say the French for a plaster, then the French for the emergency department, then say l'urgence again

Before you move on

What does l'urgence mean? ("An emergency".) Say it once more.

243.4 la consultation — a medical appointment

Before the new one: say the French for the emergency department, then the French for an emergency.

You'll want to know: la consultation

la consultation — "a medical appointment".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

consultation ← Latin consultatio, "a deliberation" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la consultation
- Say it: la consultation, once more
- Say it: say la consultation
- Recall: say the French for the emergency department, then the French for an emergency, then say la consultation again

Before you move on

What does la consultation mean? ("A medical appointment".) Say it once more.

243.5 le régime — a diet

Before the new one: say the French for an emergency, then the French for a medical appointment.

You'll want to know: le régime

le régime — "a diet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

régime ← Latin regimen, "guidance, rule", from regere, "to rule" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le régime
- Say it: le régime, once more
- Say it: say le régime
- Recall: say the French for an emergency, then the French for a medical appointment, then say le régime again

Before you move on

What does le régime mean? ("A diet".) Say it once more.

Chapter 244

Silent, Clean, Hard, Smooth, Rough

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say silent, clean, hard, smooth and rough.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 244: I can say silent, clean, hard, smooth and rough.

244.1 silencieux / silencieuse — silent

> Before the new one: say the French for a medical appointment, then the French for a diet.

You'll want to know: silencieux / silencieuse

silencieux / silencieuse — "silent".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

silencieux — built from the word for "silence", ← Latin silentium (Lewis & Short), with -eux, "full of".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: silencieux / silencieuse
- Say it: silencieux / silencieuse, once more
- Say it: say silencieux / silencieuse
- Recall: say the French for a medical appointment, then the French for a diet, then say silencieux / silencieuse again

Before you move on

What does silencieux / silencieuse mean? ("Silent".) Say it once more.

244.2 propre — clean

Before the new one: say the French for a diet, then the French for silent.

You'll want to know: propre

propre — "clean".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

propre ← Latin proprius, "one's own" (EtymDB 2.1) — taken from Latin; "clean" grew out of "proper".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: propre
- Say it: propre, once more
- Say it: say propre
- Recall: say the French for a diet, then the French for silent, then say propre again

Before you move on

What does propre mean? (“Clean”.) Say it once more.

244.3 dur / dure — hard

Before the new one: say the French for silent, then the French for clean.

You’ll want to know: dur / dure

dur / dure — “hard”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

dur ← Latin durus, “hard” (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: dur / dure
- Say it: dur / dure, once more
- Say it: say dur / dure
- Recall: say the French for silent, then the French for clean, then say dur / dure again

Before you move on

What does dur / dure mean? (“Hard”.) Say it once more.

244.4 lisse — smooth

Before the new one: say the French for clean, then the French for hard.

You'll want to know: lisse

lisse — "smooth".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

lisse — formed from the verb for "to smooth", whose origin is uncertain.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: lisse
- Say it: lisse, once more
- Say it: say lisse
- Recall: say the French for clean, then the French for hard, then say lisse again

Before you move on

What does lisse mean? ("Smooth".) Say it once more.

244.5 rugueux / rugueuse — rough

Before the new one: say the French for hard, then the French for smooth.

You'll want to know: rugueux / rugueuse

rugueux / rugueuse — "rough".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

rugueux ← Latin rugosus, "wrinkled", from ruga, the Latin of rue — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: rugueux / rugueuse
- Say it: rugueux / rugueuse, once more
- Say it: say rugueux / rugueuse
- Recall: say the French for hard, then the French for smooth, then say rugueux / rugueuse again

Before you move on

What does rugueux / rugueuse mean? ("Rough".) Say it once more.

Chapter 245

Similar, Fair, False, Ready, Free of charge

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say similar, fair, false, ready and free of charge.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 245: I can say similar, fair, false, ready and free of charge.

245.1 semblable — similar

Before the new one: say the French for smooth, then the French for rough.

You'll want to know: semblable

semblable — "similar".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

semblable — sembler with -able: seeming alike. Sembler ← Late Latin similāre, from similis, "like" (EtymDB 2.1).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: semblable
- Say it: semblable, once more
- Say it: say semblable
- Recall: say the French for smooth, then the French for rough, then say semblable again

Before you move on

What does semblable mean? ("Similar".) Say it once more.

245.2 juste — fair, right

Before the new one: say the French for rough, then the French for similar.

You'll want to know: juste

juste — "fair, right".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

juste ← Latin iustus, "lawful, right", from ius, "law" — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: juste
- Say it: juste, once more
- Say it: say juste
- Recall: say the French for rough, then the French for similar, then say juste again

Before you move on

What does juste mean? (“Fair, right”.) Say it once more.

245.3 faux / fausse — false, wrong

Before the new one: say the French for similar, then the French for fair.

You’ll want to know: faux / fausse

faux / fausse — “false, wrong”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

faux ← Old French faus ← Latin falsus, “deceived, false”, from fallere, “to deceive” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: faux / fausse
- Say it: faux / fausse, once more
- Say it: say faux / fausse
- Recall: say the French for similar, then the French for fair, then say faux / fausse again

Before you move on

What does faux / fausse mean? (“False, wrong”.) Say it once more.

245.4 prêt / prête — ready

Before the new one: say the French for fair, then the French for false.

You'll want to know: prêt / prête

prêt / prête — "ready".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

prêt ← Late Latin praestus, "at hand", from praesto, "ready" (Lewis & Short) — inherited. It is a different word from prêt, "a loan".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: prêt / prête
- Say it: prêt / prête, once more
- Say it: say prêt / prête
- Recall: say the French for fair, then the French for false, then say prêt / prête again

Before you move on

What does prêt / prête mean? ("Ready".) Say it once more.

245.5 gratuit / gratuite — free of charge

Before the new one: say the French for false, then the French for ready.

You'll want to know: gratuit / gratuite

gratuit / gratuite — "free of charge".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gratuit ← Latin gratuitus, "freely given", from gratia, "favour" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: gratuit / gratuite
- Say it: gratuit / gratuite, once more
- Say it: say gratuit / gratuite
- Recall: say the French for false, then the French for ready, then say gratuit / gratuite again

Before you move on

What does gratuit / gratuite mean? ("Free of charge".) Say it once more.

Chapter 246

Generous, Lazy, Hard-working, Talkative, Angry

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say generous, lazy, hard-working, talkative and angry.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 246: I can say generous, lazy, hard-working, talkative and angry.

246.1 généreux / généreuse — generous

Before the new one: say the French for ready, then the French for free of charge.

You'll want to know: généreux / généreuse

généreux / généreuse — "generous".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

généreux ← Latin generosus, "of noble birth", from genus, "birth, kind" — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: généreux / généreuse
- Say it: généreux / généreuse, once more
- Say it: say généreux / généreuse
- Recall: say the French for ready, then the French for free of charge, then say généreux / généreuse again

Before you move on

What does généreux / généreuse mean? ("Generous".) Say it once more.

246.2 paresseux / paresseuse — lazy

Before the new one: say the French for free of charge, then the French for generous.

You'll want to know: paresseux / paresseuse

paresseux / paresseuse — "lazy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

paresseux — built from the word for "laziness", ← Latin pigritia, "sloth" (Lewis & Short), with -eux, "full of".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: paresseux / paresseuse
- Say it: paresseux / paresseuse, once more
- Say it: say paresseux / paresseuse
- Recall: say the French for free of charge, then the French for generous, then say paresseux / paresseuse again

Before you move on

What does paresseux / paresseuse mean? (“Lazy”.) Say it once more.

246.3 travailleur / travailleuse — hard-working

Before the new one: say the French for generous, then the French for lazy.

You’ll want to know: travailleur / travailleuse

travailleur / travailleuse — “hard-working”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

travailleur — travailler, “to work”, with -eur, “one who”. Travailler ← Vulgar Latin tripaliāre*, “to torture” (EtymDB 2.1).

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: travailleur / travailleuse
- Say it: travailleur / travailleuse, once more
- Say it: say travailleur / travailleuse
- Recall: say the French for generous, then the French for lazy, then say travailleur / travailleuse again

Before you move on

What does travailleur / travailleuse mean? (“Hard-working”.) Say it once more.

246.4 bavard / bavarde — talkative

Before the new one: say the French for lazy, then the French for hard-working.

You'll want to know: bavard / bavarde

bavard / bavarde — "talkative".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

bavard — built from the word for "drool", with -ard: the adjective behind bavarder.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: bavard / bavarde
- Say it: bavard / bavarde, once more
- Say it: say bavard / bavarde
- Recall: say the French for lazy, then the French for hard-working, then say bavard / bavarde again

Before you move on

What does bavard / bavarde mean? ("Talkative".) Say it once more.

246.5 fâché / fâchée — angry

Before the new one: say the French for hard-working, then the French for talkative.

You'll want to know: fâché / fâchée

fâché / fâchée — "angry".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

fâché is the past participle of the verb in se fâcher, "to get angry": angered. Fâcher is of uncertain origin, usually traced to Latin fastīdium, "disgust".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: fâché / fâchée
- Say it: fâché / fâchée, once more
- Say it: say fâché / fâchée
- Recall: say the French for hard-working, then the French for talkative, then say fâché / fâchée again

Before you move on

What does fâché / fâchée mean? ("Angry".) Say it once more.

Chapter 247

Bill, Tip, Stop, Motorbike, Platform

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say the bill, a tip, a stop, a motorbike and a platform.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 247: I can say the bill, a tip, a stop, a motorbike and a platform.

247.1 l'addition — the bill

> Before the new one: say the French for talkative, then the French for angry.

You'll want to know: l'addition

l'addition — "the bill".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

addition ← Latin additio, "an adding", from addere, "to add" (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing: the bill adds it all up.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'addition
- Say it: l'addition, once more
- Say it: say l'addition
- Recall: say the French for talkative, then the French for angry, then say l'addition again

Before you move on

What does l'addition mean? ("The bill".) Say it once more.

247.2 le pourboire — a tip

Before the new one: say the French for angry, then the French for the bill.

You'll want to know: le pourboire

le pourboire — "a tip".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pourboire — the word for "for" and boire, "to drink": money for a drink. Boire ← Latin bibere, "to drink" (EtymDB 2.1), and pour ← Vulgar Latin por.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le pourboire
- Say it: le pourboire, once more
- Say it: say le pourboire
- Recall: say the French for angry, then the French for the bill, then say le pourboire again

Before you move on

What does le pourboire mean? ("A tip".) Say it once more.

247.3 l'arrêt — a stop

Before the new one: say the French for the bill, then the French for a tip.

You'll want to know: l'arrêt

l'arrêt — "a stop".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

arrêt — formed from arrêter, "to stop": a stop. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'arrêt
- Say it: l'arrêt, once more
- Say it: say l'arrêt
- Recall: say the French for the bill, then the French for a tip, then say l'arrêt again

Before you move on

What does l'arrêt mean? ("A stop".) Say it once more.

247.4 la moto — a motorbike

Before the new one: say the French for a tip, then the French for a stop.

You'll want to know: la moto

la moto — "a motorbike".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

moto — short for motocyclette, built from the word for "motor", as in moteur, and the word for "cycle".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la moto
- Say it: la moto, once more
- Say it: say la moto
- Recall: say the French for a tip, then the French for a stop, then say la moto again

Before you move on

What does la moto mean? ("A motorbike".) Say it once more.

247.5 le quai — a platform

Before the new one: say the French for a stop, then the French for a motorbike.

You'll want to know: le quai

le quai — "a platform".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

quai ← Old French cai ← Gaulish caio-*, "an enclosure" — a Celtic word that came into French through the northern dialects. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le quai
- Say it: le quai, once more
- Say it: say le quai
- Recall: say the French for a stop, then the French for a motorbike, then say le quai again

Before you move on

What does le quai mean? ("A platform".) Say it once more.

Chapter 248

Mayor, Elections, Vote, Politics, Economy

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a mayor, elections, a vote, politics and the economy.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 248: I can say a mayor, elections, a vote, politics and the economy.

248.1 le maire — a mayor

Before the new one: say the French for a motorbike, then the French for a platform.

You'll want to know: le maire

le maire — "a mayor".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

maire ← Old French maire ← Latin maior, "greater" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: the noun behind mairie.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le maire
- Say it: le maire, once more
- Say it: say le maire
- Recall: say the French for a motorbike, then the French for a platform, then say le maire again

Before you move on

What does le maire mean? ("A mayor".) Say it once more.

248.2 les élections — elections

Before the new one: say the French for a platform, then the French for a mayor.

You'll want to know: les élections

les élections — "elections".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

élections is the plural of the word for "an election", ← Latin electio, "a choosing", from eligere, "to pick out" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les élections
- Say it: les élections, once more
- Say it: say les élections
- Recall: say the French for a platform, then the French for a mayor, then say les élections again

Before you move on

What does les élections mean? (“Elections”.) Say it once more.

248.3 le vote — a vote

Before the new one: say the French for a mayor, then the French for elections.

You’ll want to know: le vote

le vote — “a vote”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vote ← English vote ← Latin votum, “a vow, a wish” — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le vote
- Say it: le vote, once more
- Say it: say le vote
- Recall: say the French for a mayor, then the French for elections, then say le vote again

Before you move on

What does le vote mean? (“A vote”.) Say it once more.

248.4 la politique — politics

Before the new one: say the French for elections, then the French for a vote.

You'll want to know: la politique

la politique — "politics".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

politique ← Latin politicus, from Greek politikos, "of citizens", from the same polis, "city", as police — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la politique
- Say it: la politique, once more
- Say it: say la politique
- Recall: say the French for elections, then the French for a vote, then say la politique again

Before you move on

What does la politique mean? ("Politics".) Say it once more.

248.5 l'économie — the economy

Before the new one: say the French for a vote, then the French for politics.

You'll want to know: l'économie

l'économie — "the economy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

économie ← Latin oeconomia, from Greek oikonomia, "running a household", from oikos, "house" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'économie
- Say it: l'économie, once more
- Say it: say l'économie
- Recall: say the French for a vote, then the French for politics, then say l'économie again

Before you move on

What does l'économie mean? ("The economy".) Say it once more.

Chapter 249

Actor, Actress, Poem, Writer, Painter

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say an actor, an actress, a poem, a writer and a painter.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 249: I can say an actor, an actress, a poem, a writer and a painter.

249.1 l'acteur — an actor

> Before the new one: say the French for politics, then the French for the economy.

You'll want to know: l'acteur

l'acteur — "an actor".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

acteur ← Latin actor, "a doer, a performer", from agere, the Latin of agir — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'acteur
- Say it: l'acteur, once more
- Say it: say l'acteur
- Recall: say the French for politics, then the French for the economy, then say l'acteur again

Before you move on

What does l'acteur mean? ("An actor".) Say it once more.

249.2 l'actrice — an actress

Before the new one: say the French for the economy, then the French for an actor.

You'll want to know: l'actrice

l'actrice — "an actress".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

actrice ← Latin actrix, the feminine of actor: the feminine of acteur — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'actrice
- Say it: l'actrice, once more
- Say it: say l'actrice
- Recall: say the French for the economy, then the French for an actor, then say l'actrice again

Before you move on

What does l'actrice mean? ("An actress".) Say it once more.

249.3 le poème — a poem

Before the new one: say the French for an actor, then the French for an actress.

You'll want to know: le poème

le poème — "a poem".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

poème ← Latin poema, from Greek poiema, "a thing made", from poiein, "to make" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le poème
- Say it: le poème, once more
- Say it: say le poème
- Recall: say the French for an actor, then the French for an actress, then say le poème again

Before you move on

What does le poème mean? ("A poem".) Say it once more.

249.4 l'écrivain — a writer

Before the new one: say the French for an actress, then the French for a poem.

You'll want to know: l'écrivain

l'écrivain — "a writer".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

écrivain ← Old French escrivain ← Vulgar Latin scribanem*, from Latin scriba, "a clerk", from scribere, the Latin of écrire — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'écrivain
- Say it: l'écrivain, once more
- Say it: say l'écrivain
- Recall: say the French for an actress, then the French for a poem, then say l'écrivain again

Before you move on

What does l'écrivain mean? ("A writer".) Say it once more.

249.5 le peintre — a painter

Before the new one: say the French for a poem, then the French for a writer.

You'll want to know: le peintre

le peintre — "a painter".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

peintre ← Old French peintre (EtymDB 2.1) ← Vulgar Latin pinctor* ← Latin pictor, "a painter" (Lewis & Short) — inherited: the noun beside peindre.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le peintre
- Say it: le peintre, once more
- Say it: say le peintre
- Recall: say the French for a poem, then the French for a writer, then say le peintre again

Before you move on

What does le peintre mean? ("A painter".) Say it once more.

Chapter 250

Foreigner, Tourist, Adult, Elderly person, Twin

Modes: voice (7) Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a foreigner, a tourist, an adult, an elderly person and a twin.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 250: I can say a foreigner, a tourist, an adult, an elderly person and a twin.

250.1 l'étranger — a foreigner

Before the new one: say the French for a writer, then the French for a painter.

You'll want to know: l'étranger

l'étranger — "a foreigner".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

étranger — the adjective étranger, "foreign", used as a noun: a foreigner. It is built on Old French estrange, "foreign" (EtymDB 2.1), from Latin extrāneus, "from outside".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'étranger
- Say it: l'étranger, once more
- Say it: say l'étranger
- Recall: say the French for a writer, then the French for a painter, then say l'étranger again

Before you move on

What does l'étranger mean? ("A foreigner".) Say it once more.

250.2 le touriste — a tourist

Before the new one: say the French for a painter, then the French for a foreigner.

You'll want to know: le touriste

le touriste — "a tourist".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

touriste ← English tourist, built on English tour, "a circuit", which English had taken from French — borrowed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le touriste
- Say it: le touriste, once more
- Say it: say le touriste
- Recall: say the French for a painter, then the French for a foreigner, then say le touriste again

Before you move on

What does le touriste mean? ("A tourist".) Say it once more.

250.3 l'adulte — an adult

Before the new one: say the French for a foreigner, then the French for a tourist.

You'll want to know: l'adulte

l'adulte — "an adult".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

adulte ← Latin adultus, "grown up", from adolescere, "to grow up" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'adulte
- Say it: l'adulte, once more
- Say it: say l'adulte
- Recall: say the French for a foreigner, then the French for a tourist, then say l'adulte again

Before you move on

What does l'adulte mean? ("An adult".) Say it once more.

250.4 la personne âgée — an elderly person

Before the new one: say the French for a tourist, then the French for an adult.

You'll want to know: la personne âgée

la personne âgée — "an elderly person".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

personne âgée — personne, "a person", and âgée, "aged", from âge, "age", ← Vulgar Latin aetaticum*, from Latin aetas, "age" (Lewis & Short).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la personne âgée
- Say it: la personne âgée, once more
- Say it: say la personne âgée
- Recall: say the French for a tourist, then the French for an adult, then say la personne âgée again

Before you move on

What does la personne âgée mean? ("An elderly person".) Say it once more.

250.5 le jumeau — a twin

Before the new one: say the French for an adult, then the French for an elderly person.

You'll want to know: le jumeau

le jumeau — "a twin".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

jumeau ← Old French jumel (EtymDB 2.1) ← Latin gemellus, "twin-born", a little form of geminus, "a twin" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le jumeau
- Say it: le jumeau, once more
- Say it: say le jumeau
- Recall: say the French for an adult, then the French for an elderly person, then say le jumeau again

Before you move on

What does le jumeau mean? ("A twin".) Say it once more.

250.6 Words from chapters 242-245 — a first pass

Say the words for an elderly person and a twin.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- to lose weight, to feed, to go on holiday, to joke, to tidy up
- a plaster, the emergency department, an emergency, a medical appointment, a diet
- silent, clean, hard, smooth, rough
- similar, fair, false, ready, free of charge

Before you move on

To lose weight? (maigrir.) To feed? (nourrir.) To go on holiday? (partir en vacances.) To joke? (plaisanter.) To tidy up? (ranger.) A plaster? (le pansement.) The emergency department? (les urgences.) An emergency? (l'urgence.) A medical appointment? (la consultation.) A diet? (le régime.) Silent? (silencieux / silencieuse.) Clean? (propre.) Hard? (dur / dure.) Smooth? (lisse.) Rough? (rugueux / rugueuse.) Similar? (semblable.) Fair? (juste.) False? (faux / fausse.) Ready? (prêt / prête.) Free of charge? (gratuit / gratuite.)

250.7 Words from chapters 246-250 — a second pass

Say the words for generous and lazy.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- generous, lazy, hard-working, talkative, angry
- the bill, a tip, a stop, a motorbike, a platform
- a mayor, elections, a vote, politics, the economy
- an actor, an actress, a poem, a writer, a painter
- a foreigner, a tourist, an adult, an elderly person, a twin

Before you move on

Generous? (généreux / généreuse.) Lazy? (paresseux / paresseuse.) Hard-working? (travailleur / travailleuse.) Talkative? (bavard / bavarde.) Angry? (fâché / fâchée.) The bill? (l'addition.) A tip? (le pourboire.) A stop? (l'arrêt.) A motorbike? (la moto.) A platform? (le quai.) A mayor? (le maire.) Elections? (les élections.) A vote? (le vote.) Politics? (la politique.) The economy? (l'économie.) An actor? (l'acteur.) An actress? (l'actrice.) A poem? (le poème.) A writer? (l'écrivain.) A painter? (le peintre.) A foreigner? (l'étranger.) A tourist? (le touriste.) An adult? (l'adulte.) An elderly person? (la personne âgée.) A twin? (le jumeau.)

Chapter 251

Result, Difference, Example, Truth, Lie

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a result, a difference, an example, the truth and a lie.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 251: I can say a result, a difference, an example, the truth and a lie.

251.1 le résultat — a result

Before the new one: say the French for an elderly person, then the French for a twin.

You'll want to know: le résultat

le résultat — "a result".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

résultat ← Medieval Latin resultatum, from resultare, "to spring back" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le résultat
- Say it: le résultat, once more
- Say it: say le résultat
- Recall: say the French for an elderly person, then the French for a twin, then say le résultat again

Before you move on

What does le résultat mean? ("A result".) Say it once more.

251.2 la différence — a difference

Before the new one: say the French for a twin, then the French for a result.

You'll want to know: la différence

la différence — "a difference".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

différence ← Latin differentia, "a difference" — the noun beside différent. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la différence
- Say it: la différence, once more
- Say it: say la différence
- Recall: say the French for a twin, then the French for a result, then say la différence again

Before you move on

What does la différence mean? ("A difference".) Say it once more.

251.3 l'exemple — an example

Before the new one: say the French for a result, then the French for a difference.

You'll want to know: l'exemple

l'exemple — "an example".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

exemple ← Latin exemplum, "a sample, a pattern" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'exemple
- Say it: l'exemple, once more
- Say it: say l'exemple
- Recall: say the French for a result, then the French for a difference, then say l'exemple again

Before you move on

What does l'exemple mean? ("An example".) Say it once more.

251.4 la vérité — the truth

Before the new one: say the French for a difference, then the French for an example.

You'll want to know: la vérité

la vérité — "the truth".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

vérité ← Old French verité ← Latin veritas, "truth", from verus, "true" — taken from Latin. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la vérité
- Say it: la vérité, once more
- Say it: say la vérité
- Recall: say the French for a difference, then the French for an example, then say la vérité again

Before you move on

What does la vérité mean? ("The truth".) Say it once more.

251.5 le mensonge — a lie

Before the new one: say the French for an example, then the French for the truth.

You'll want to know: le mensonge

le mensonge — "a lie".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mensonge ← Old French mençonge (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to Vulgar Latin mentionica*, built on Latin mentiri, "to lie" (Lewis & Short) — inherited.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le mensonge
- Say it: le mensonge, once more
- Say it: say le mensonge
- Recall: say the French for an example, then the French for the truth, then say le mensonge again

Before you move on

What does le mensonge mean? ("A lie".) Say it once more.

Chapter 252

Tax, Form, Envelope, Stamp, Parcel

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a tax, a form, an envelope, a stamp and a parcel.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 252: I can say a tax, a form, an envelope, a stamp and a parcel.

252.1 l'impôt — a tax

> Before the new one: say the French for the truth, then the French for a lie.

You'll want to know: l'impôt

l'impôt — "a tax".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

impôt ← Middle French impost ← Medieval Latin impositum, "a thing laid on", from imponere (EtymDB 2.1) — a learned borrowing; the circumflex marks the s French later stopped writing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'impôt
- Say it: l'impôt, once more
- Say it: say l'impôt
- Recall: say the French for the truth, then the French for a lie, then say l'impôt again

Before you move on

What does l'impôt mean? ("A tax".) Say it once more.

252.2 le formulaire — a form

Before the new one: say the French for a lie, then the French for a tax.

You'll want to know: le formulaire

le formulaire — "a form".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

formulaire ← Latin formularium, "a book of forms", from formula, "a little form" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le formulaire
- Say it: le formulaire, once more
- Say it: say le formulaire
- Recall: say the French for a lie, then the French for a tax, then say le formulaire again

Before you move on

What does le formulaire mean? (“A form”.) Say it once more.

252.3 l’enveloppe — an envelope

Before the new one: say the French for a tax, then the French for a form.

You’ll want to know: l’enveloppe

l’enveloppe — “an envelope”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

enveloppe — formed from the verb for “to wrap up” (EtymDB 2.1), built from en- and an Old French verb for “to wrap” of uncertain origin.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’enveloppe
- Say it: l’enveloppe, once more
- Say it: say l’enveloppe
- Recall: say the French for a tax, then the French for a form, then say l’enveloppe again

Before you move on

What does l’enveloppe mean? (“An envelope”.) Say it once more.

252.4 le timbre — a stamp

Before the new one: say the French for a form, then the French for an envelope.

You'll want to know: le timbre

le timbre — "a stamp".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

timbre ← Old French timbre, "a drum, a bell" ← Latin tympanum, from Greek tympanon, "a drum" — inherited (EtymDB 2.1): then the mark struck on a letter.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le timbre
- Say it: le timbre, once more
- Say it: say le timbre
- Recall: say the French for a form, then the French for an envelope, then say le timbre again

Before you move on

What does le timbre mean? ("A stamp".) Say it once more.

252.5 le colis — a parcel

Before the new one: say the French for an envelope, then the French for a stamp.

You'll want to know: le colis

le colis — "a parcel".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

colis ← Italian colli, "loads", the plural of collo, "a neck, a load carried on it", ← Latin collum, the Latin of cou — borrowed.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le colis
- Say it: le colis, once more
- Say it: say le colis
- Recall: say the French for an envelope, then the French for a stamp, then say le colis again

Before you move on

What does le colis mean? ("A parcel".) Say it once more.

Chapter 253

Driving licence, Helmet, Tunnel, Building site, Block of flats

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say a driving licence, a helmet, a tunnel, a building site and a block of flats.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 253: I can say a driving licence, a helmet, a tunnel, a building site and a block of flats.

253.1 le permis de conduire — a driving licence

Before the new one: say the French for a stamp, then the French for a parcel.

You'll want to know: le permis de conduire

le permis de conduire — "a driving licence".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

permis de conduire — permis, "permitted", from permettre, de, "of", and conduire, "to drive": leave to drive.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le permis de conduire
- Say it: le permis de conduire, once more
- Say it: say le permis de conduire
- Recall: say the French for a stamp, then the French for a parcel, then say le permis de conduire again

Before you move on

What does le permis de conduire mean? ("A driving licence".) Say it once more.

253.2 le casque — a helmet

Before the new one: say the French for a parcel, then the French for a driving licence.

You'll want to know: le casque

le casque — "a helmet".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

casque ← Spanish casco, "a skull, a helmet", from cascar, "to break", ← Latin quassare, "to shatter" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le casque
- Say it: le casque, once more
- Say it: say le casque
- Recall: say the French for a parcel, then the French for a driving licence, then say le casque again

Before you move on

What does le casque mean? (“A helmet”.) Say it once more.

253.3 le tunnel — a tunnel

Before the new one: say the French for a driving licence, then the French for a helmet.

You’ll want to know: le tunnel

le tunnel — “a tunnel”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tunnel ← English tunnel (EtymDB 2.1) — borrowed back: English had taken it from Old French tonel, “a cask”.

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tunnel
- Say it: le tunnel, once more
- Say it: say le tunnel
- Recall: say the French for a driving licence, then the French for a helmet, then say le tunnel again

Before you move on

What does le tunnel mean? (“A tunnel”.) Say it once more.

253.4 le chantier — a building site

Before the new one: say the French for a helmet, then the French for a tunnel.

You'll want to know: le chantier

le chantier — "a building site".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

chantier ← Latin cantherius, "a gelding; a rafter, a trestle" (EtymDB 2.1) — inherited: first a timber support, then a work yard.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le chantier
- Say it: le chantier, once more
- Say it: say le chantier
- Recall: say the French for a helmet, then the French for a tunnel, then say le chantier again

Before you move on

What does le chantier mean? ("A building site".) Say it once more.

253.5 l'immeuble — a block of flats

Before the new one: say the French for a tunnel, then the French for a building site.

You'll want to know: l'immeuble

l'immeuble — "a block of flats".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

immeuble ← Latin immobilis, "that cannot be moved" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing: first property in land and buildings.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'immeuble
- Say it: l'immeuble, once more
- Say it: say l'immeuble
- Recall: say the French for a tunnel, then the French for a building site, then say l'immeuble again

Before you move on

What does l'immeuble mean? ("A block of flats".) Say it once more.

Chapter 254

Trunk, Thorn, Lawn, Path, Cave

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a trunk, a thorn, a lawn, a path and a cave.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 254: I can say a trunk, a thorn, a lawn, a path and a cave.

254.1 le tronc — a trunk

> Before the new one: say the French for a building site, then the French for a block of flats.

You'll want to know: le tronc

le tronc — "a trunk".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tronc ← Latin truncus, "a trunk, a stem" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tronc

- Say it: le tronc, once more
- Say it: say le tronc
- Recall: say the French for a building site, then the French for a block of flats, then say le tronc again

Before you move on

What does le tronc mean? (“A trunk”.) Say it once more.

254.2 l’épine — a thorn

Before the new one: say the French for a block of flats, then the French for a trunk.

You’ll want to know: l’épine

l’épine — “a thorn”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

épine ← Old French espine ← Latin spina, “a thorn” — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l’épine
- Say it: l’épine, once more
- Say it: say l’épine
- Recall: say the French for a block of flats, then the French for a trunk, then say l’épine again

Before you move on

What does l’épine mean? (“A thorn”.) Say it once more.

254.3 la pelouse — a lawn

Before the new one: say the French for a trunk, then the French for a thorn.

You'll want to know: la pelouse

la pelouse — "a lawn".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

pelouse — from a southern word for "hairy", ← Latin pilosus, "hairy", from pilus, "a hair" (Lewis & Short): short grass like hair.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la pelouse
- Say it: la pelouse, once more
- Say it: say la pelouse
- Recall: say the French for a trunk, then the French for a thorn, then say la pelouse again

Before you move on

What does la pelouse mean? ("A lawn".) Say it once more.

254.4 le sentier — a path

Before the new one: say the French for a thorn, then the French for a lawn.

You'll want to know: le sentier

le sentier — "a path".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

sentier ← Old French sentier ← Vulgar Latin semitarius*, from Latin semita, "a path" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le sentier
- Say it: le sentier, once more
- Say it: say le sentier
- Recall: say the French for a thorn, then the French for a lawn, then say le sentier again

Before you move on

What does le sentier mean? ("A path".) Say it once more.

254.5 la grotte — a cave

Before the new one: say the French for a lawn, then the French for a path.

You'll want to know: la grotte

la grotte — "a cave".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

grotte ← Italian grotta ← Latin crypta, from Greek krypte, "a hidden place" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la grotte
- Say it: la grotte, once more
- Say it: say la grotte
- Recall: say the French for a lawn, then the French for a path, then say la grotte again

Before you move on

What does la grotte mean? (“A cave”.) Say it once more.

Chapter 255

Rubbish, Recycling, Energy, Electricity, Gas

Modes: voice (5) Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

By the end of this chapter: I can say rubbish, recycling, energy, electricity and gas.

Complete the last lesson of chapter 255: I can say rubbish, recycling, energy, electricity and gas.

255.1 les déchets — rubbish

Before the new one: say the French for a path, then the French for a cave.

You'll want to know: les déchets

les déchets — "rubbish".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

déchets is the plural of a word formed from the verb for "to fall away", built on Latin cadere, "to fall" (Lewis & Short): what falls away.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les déchets
- Say it: les déchets, once more
- Say it: say les déchets
- Recall: say the French for a path, then the French for a cave, then say les déchets again

Before you move on

What does les déchets mean? ("Rubbish".) Say it once more.

255.2 le recyclage — recycling

Before the new one: say the French for a cave, then the French for rubbish.

You'll want to know: le recyclage

le recyclage — "recycling".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

recyclage — built from re-, the word for "cycle", ← Latin cyclus, from Greek kyklos, "a circle" (Lewis & Short), and -age; modelled on English recycling.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le recyclage
- Say it: le recyclage, once more
- Say it: say le recyclage
- Recall: say the French for a cave, then the French for rubbish, then say le recyclage again

Before you move on

What does le recyclage mean? ("Recycling".) Say it once more.

255.3 l'énergie — energy

Before the new one: say the French for rubbish, then the French for recycling.

You'll want to know: l'énergie

l'énergie — "energy".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

énergie ← Late Latin energia, from Greek energeia, "activity", built on ergon, "work" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'énergie
- Say it: l'énergie, once more
- Say it: say l'énergie
- Recall: say the French for rubbish, then the French for recycling, then say l'énergie again

Before you move on

What does l'énergie mean? ("Energy".) Say it once more.

255.4 l'électricité — electricity

Before the new one: say the French for recycling, then the French for energy.

You'll want to know: l'électricité

l'électricité — "electricity".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

électricité ← English electricity (EtymDB 2.1), built on Latin electrum, "amber" — borrowed in the 1700s.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'électricité
- Say it: l'électricité, once more
- Say it: say l'électricité
- Recall: say the French for recycling, then the French for energy, then say l'électricité again

Before you move on

What does l'électricité mean? ("Electricity".) Say it once more.

255.5 le gaz — gas

Before the new one: say the French for energy, then the French for electricity.

You'll want to know: le gaz

le gaz — "gas".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

gaz — coined in the 1600s by the Flemish chemist Jan Baptist van Helmont from Greek khaos, "empty space" (EtymDB 2.1 links Dutch gas to khaos).

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le gaz
- Say it: le gaz, once more
- Say it: say le gaz
- Recall: say the French for energy, then the French for electricity, then say le gaz again

Before you move on

What does le gaz mean? ("Gas".) Say it once more.

Chapter 256

Tool, Guitar, Piano, Violin, Drum

Modes: 🚗 voice (5) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 5 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say a tool, a guitar, a piano, a violin and a drum.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 256: I can say a tool, a guitar, a piano, a violin and a drum.

256.1 l'outil — a tool

> Before the new one: say the French for electricity, then the French for gas.

You'll want to know: l'outil

l'outil — "a tool".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

outil ← Old French ustil ← Late Latin usitilium*, "a tool", from uti, "to use" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'outil
- Say it: l'outil, once more
- Say it: say l'outil
- Recall: say the French for electricity, then the French for gas, then say l'outil again

Before you move on

What does l'outil mean? ("A tool".) Say it once more.

256.2 la guitare — a guitar

Before the new one: say the French for gas, then the French for a tool.

You'll want to know: la guitare

la guitare — "a guitar".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

guitare ← Spanish guitarra ← Arabic qitara, from Greek kithara, "a lyre" — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la guitare
- Say it: la guitare, once more
- Say it: say la guitare
- Recall: say the French for gas, then the French for a tool, then say la guitare again

Before you move on

What does la guitare mean? (“A guitar”.) Say it once more.

256.3 le piano — a piano

Before the new one: say the French for a tool, then the French for a guitar.

You’ll want to know: le piano

le piano — “a piano”.

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

piano ← Italian piano, short for pianoforte, “soft-loud”; piano, “soft”, ← Latin planus, “flat, smooth” — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you’ve built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le piano
- Say it: le piano, once more
- Say it: say le piano
- Recall: say the French for a tool, then the French for a guitar, then say le piano again

Before you move on

What does le piano mean? (“A piano”.) Say it once more.

256.4 le violon — a violin

Before the new one: say the French for a guitar, then the French for a piano.

You'll want to know: le violon

le violon — "a violin".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

violon — built from Old French viole, a stringed instrument, with -on, under the influence of Italian violino.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le violon
- Say it: le violon, once more
- Say it: say le violon
- Recall: say the French for a guitar, then the French for a piano, then say le violon again

Before you move on

What does le violon mean? ("A violin".) Say it once more.

256.5 le tambour — a drum

Before the new one: say the French for a piano, then the French for a violin.

You'll want to know: le tambour

le tambour — "a drum".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

tambour ← Old French tabour, from Arabic tunbur — borrowed. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: le tambour
- Say it: le tambour, once more
- Say it: say le tambour
- Recall: say the French for a piano, then the French for a violin, then say le tambour again

Before you move on

What does le tambour mean? ("A drum".) Say it once more.

Chapter 257

Geography, Mathematics, Art, Team, Birthday

Modes: 🚗 voice (7) 🚗 Hands-free start: all 7 lessons.

> By the end of this chapter: I can say geography, mathematics, art, a team and a birthday.
>
> Complete the last lesson of chapter 257: I can say geography, mathematics, art, a team and a birthday.

257.1 la géographie — geography

> Before the new one: say the French for a violin, then the French for a drum.

You'll want to know: la géographie

la géographie — "geography".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

géographie ← Latin geographia, from Greek geographia, "a description of the earth" — a learned borrowing. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: la géographie
- Say it: la géographie, once more
- Say it: say la géographie
- Recall: say the French for a violin, then the French for a drum, then say la géographie again

Before you move on

What does la géographie mean? ("Geography".) Say it once more.

257.2 les mathématiques — mathematics

Before the new one: say the French for a drum, then the French for geography.

You'll want to know: les mathématiques

les mathématiques — "mathematics".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

mathématiques ← Latin mathematicus, "of mathematics" (Lewis & Short), from Greek mathematikos, built on mathema, "a thing learned" — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: les mathématiques
- Say it: les mathématiques, once more
- Say it: say les mathématiques
- Recall: say the French for a drum, then the French for geography, then say les mathématiques again

Before you move on

What does les mathématiques mean? ("Mathematics".) Say it once more.

257.3 l'art — art

Before the new one: say the French for geography, then the French for mathematics.

You'll want to know: l'art

l'art — "art".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

art ← Latin ars, artis, "skill, craft" — inherited. (EtymDB 2.1)

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'art
- Say it: l'art, once more
- Say it: say l'art
- Recall: say the French for geography, then the French for mathematics, then say l'art again

Before you move on

What does l'art mean? ("Art".) Say it once more.

257.4 l'équipe — a team

Before the new one: say the French for mathematics, then the French for art.

You'll want to know: l'équipe

l'équipe — "a team".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

équipe — formed from the verb for "to fit out", first "to fit out a ship" (EtymDB 2.1), usually traced to Old Norse skipa, from skip, "a ship".

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'équipe
- Say it: l'équipe, once more
- Say it: say l'équipe
- Recall: say the French for mathematics, then the French for art, then say l'équipe again

Before you move on

What does l'équipe mean? ("A team".) Say it once more.

257.5 l'anniversaire — a birthday

Before the new one: say the French for art, then the French for a team.

You'll want to know: l'anniversaire

l'anniversaire — "a birthday".

The word, taken apart — and its English cousins

anniversaire ← Latin anniversarius, "coming round each year", from annus, the Latin of an, and vertere, "to turn" (Lewis & Short) — a learned borrowing.

What you've built

One more word for this chapter.

Your turn

- Say it: l'anniversaire
- Say it: l'anniversaire, once more
- Say it: say l'anniversaire
- Recall: say the French for art, then the French for a team, then say l'anniversaire again

Before you move on

What does l'anniversaire mean? ("A birthday".) Say it once more.

257.6 Words from chapters 251-253 — a first pass

Say the words for a team and a birthday.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a result, a difference, an example, the truth, a lie
- a tax, a form, an envelope, a stamp, a parcel
- a driving licence, a helmet, a tunnel, a building site, a block of flats

Before you move on

A result? (le résultat.) A difference? (la différence.) An example? (l'exemple.) The truth? (la vérité.) A lie? (le mensonge.) A tax? (l'impôt.) A form? (le formulaire.) An envelope? (l'enveloppe.) A stamp? (le timbre.) A parcel? (le colis.) A driving licence? (le permis de conduire.) A helmet? (le casque.) A tunnel? (le tunnel.) A building site? (le chantier.) A block of flats? (l'immeuble.)

257.7 Words from chapters 254-257 — a second pass

Say the words for a trunk and a thorn.

Your turn

Say these aloud:

- a trunk, a thorn, a lawn, a path, a cave
- rubbish, recycling, energy, electricity, gas
- a tool, a guitar, a piano, a violin, a drum
- geography, mathematics, art, a team, a birthday

Before you move on

A trunk? (le tronc.) A thorn? (l'épine.) A lawn? (la pelouse.) A path? (le sentier.) A cave? (la grotte.) Rubbish? (les déchets.) Recycling? (le recyclage.) Energy? (l'énergie.) Electricity? (l'électricité.) Gas? (le gaz.) A tool? (l'outil.) A guitar? (la guitare.) A piano? (le piano.) A violin? (le violon.) A drum? (le tambour.) Geography? (la géographie.) Mathematics? (les mathématiques.) Art? (l'art.) A team? (l'équipe.) A birthday? (l'anniversaire.)

Pronunciation — a reference, not a chapter

A reference, not a chapter. Each lesson tells you the sounds you need for its word and links here for more. French spelling hides more sound than Spanish does — silent letters, nasal vowels, liaison — so this page is worth dipping into, but never a gate to pass before Lesson 1.

Ids (e.g. `silent-final`) are cited in each lesson's frontmatter `sounds:` field.

The big three habits (unlearn Spanish/English here)

- `silent-final` — most final consonants are silent. salut → sa-LU (no t); vous → voo and les → lay (no s). Common exceptions kept: final c, r, f, l (the word "CaReFuL"). bonjour's r is pronounced.
- `liaison` — a normally-silent final consonant reconnects onto a following vowel: vous + avez → vou-zavez. Comes later; just know it exists.
- `nasal` — some vowels are nasal: air through the nose, and the n/m itself goes silent. bon is not "bon" but a nasal bõ; bien is a nasal byẽ. See below.

Vowels

- `vowel-ou` — ou = oo as in food: jour (zhoor), vous, bonjour.

- `vowel-u` — u = a front-rounded ee with rounded lips (say ee, then purse your lips): salut, tu. No English equivalent; not oo.
- `vowel-oi` — oi = wa: soir (swahr), bonsoir, moi (mwah).
- `vowel-e-acute` — é = a crisp ay (no glide): enchanté.
- `vowel-e-grave` — è / ê = an open eh as in bed: très.

Nasal vowels

- `nasal-on` — on / om = nasal õ (like song without the g): bon, bonjour, bonsoir, nom.
- `nasal-in` — in / ain / ien = nasal ẽ: bien (byẽ), matin, bientôt.
- `nasal-an` — an / en = nasal ã: enchanté (ã-shã-TAY), comment.
- `double-n-blocks-nasal` — a doubled nn/mm cancels the nasal and the vowel goes back through the mouth: bon (bõ) vs. bonne (bun).

Consonants that differ

- `j-zh` — j = the soft zh of measure: jour (zhoor), je (zhuh).
- `soft-g` — g before e/i = the same zh: âge.
- `r-uvular` — r = a soft guttural sound at the back of the throat, not the Spanish tap/trill nor the English r. bonjour, soir.
- `h-silent` — h is always silent (as in Spanish): heure → euhr.
- `ch-sh` — ch = English sh: enchanté (ã-shã-tay).
- `gn` — gn = the ny of canyon (= Spanish ñ): signe.

Accents & spelling marks

- `accent-marks` — French accents mostly change vowel quality, not stress: é (closed ay), è/ê (open eh), à/ù (distinguish words), ç (soft s). Unlike Spanish, they do not mark which syllable is stressed — French stresses the last syllable of a group, lightly and evenly.

Glossary

This glossary collects every word and phrase taught in the book. Pronunciation appears when it differs from the written form; chapter numbers show where each entry is introduced.

(s')appeler
to call / to call oneself Introduced in Chapter 2.

à to, at — one letter, Latin ad, and the accent that keeps it apart from the verb a Introduced in Chapter 39.

à bientôt
see you soon (literally "to well-soon")
Introduced in Chapter 4.

à côté
beside Introduced in Chapter 157.

à demain
see you tomorrow (literally "to tomorrow")
Introduced in Chapter 4.

à droite
on the right
Introduced in Chapter 188.

à gauche
on the left
Introduced in Chapter 188.

à plus tard
see you later (literally "to more late")
Introduced in Chapter 4.

accompagner
to go with
Introduced in Chapter 178.

accueillir
to welcome
Introduced in Chapter 241.

acheter
to buy
Introduced in Chapter 64.

admirer
to admire
Introduced in Chapter 152.

agir
to act
Introduced in Chapter 152.

aider
to help — English aid arriving by the Latin road, while English help came by the Germanic one; the two words are unrelated Introduced in Chapter 28.

ailleurs
elsewhere
Introduced in Chapter 216.

aimable
friendly
Introduced in Chapter 220.

aimer
to like AND to love — one French verb where English keeps two, so the strength comes from what follows it, and adding bien makes it WEAKER Introduced in Chapter 28.

ajouter
to add
Introduced in Chapter 178.

aller
to go (and, oddly, “to be” in “how are you?”) Introduced in Chapter 3.

allumer
to switch on, to light
Introduced in Chapter 143.

alors
in that case, so Introduced in Chapter 187.

améliorer
to improve Introduced in Chapter 237.

amer
bitter
Introduced in Chapter 94.

amusant / amusante
fun, amusing
Introduced in Chapter 219.

ancien / ancienne
former, ancient Introduced in Chapter 161.

annoncer
to announce Introduced in Chapter 178.

août
August — the month renamed for the emperor Augustus
Introduced in Chapter 10.

apparaître
to appear Introduced in Chapter 178.

applaudir
to applaud
Introduced in Chapter 208.

apprendre
to learn
Introduced in Chapter 60.

arrêter
to stop
Introduced in Chapter 176.

assez
enough, and rather — one word doing both jobs, and it takes de before a noun and nothing before an adjective Introduced in Chapter 44.

attacher
to tie, to fasten Introduced in Chapter 240.

atteindre
to reach Introduced in Chapter 210.

attendre
to wait for
Introduced in Chapter 64.

au contraire
on the contrary
Introduced in Chapter 158.

au fond
at the bottom, at the back Introduced in Chapter 188.

au revoir
goodbye (literally "until the seeing-again")
Introduced in Chapter 4.

au-dessous
below
Introduced in Chapter 157.

au-dessus
above
Introduced in Chapter 157.

aucun / aucune
none, not a single Introduced in Chapter 139.

augmenter
to increase
Introduced in Chapter 208.

aujourd'hui
today
Introduced in Chapter 97.

autour
around Introduced in Chapter 216.

autrefois
formerly, in the old days
Introduced in Chapter 140.

avancer
to move forward
Introduced in Chapter 152.

avant-hier
the day before yesterday
Introduced in Chapter 140.

avril
April — perhaps the opening month
Introduced in Chapter 9.

baisser
to lower
Introduced in Chapter 152.

bas / basse
low
Introduced in Chapter 160.

bavard / bavarde
talkative
Introduced in Chapter 246.

bavarder
to chat
Introduced in Chapter 150.

beaucoup
a lot — a beautiful blow, two words fused, and the p that never sounds Introduced in Chapter 44.

bien
well / good / fine
Introduced in Chapter 1.

bien que
although Introduced in Chapter 158.

blanc
white — a Germanic word in a Latin language, running against the traffic Introduced in Chapter 16.

bleu
blue — a Germanic word that went to France, changed clothes, and came back Introduced in Chapter 16.

bleu, blanc, rouge
the flag, in order — and two of its three colours are loanwords Introduced in Chapter 16.

boire
to drink
Introduced in Chapter 61.

bon / bonne
good (adjective)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

bonjour
hello / good day
Introduced in Chapter 1.

bonne nuit
good night (going to bed)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

bonsoir
good evening
Introduced in Chapter 1.

bouger
to stir, to move
Introduced in Chapter 184.

brancher
to plug in Introduced in Chapter 150.

brûler
to burn
Introduced in Chapter 236.

brun
brown (of hair, skin)
Introduced in Chapter 130.

bruyant
noisy
Introduced in Chapter 132.

c'est
this is, that is — ce plus est, with the elision you have been hearing since l'eau Introduced in Chapter 38.

cacher
to hide
Introduced in Chapter 66.

calculer
to calculate
Introduced in Chapter 236.

calme
calm, quiet
Introduced in Chapter 131.

carré square
Introduced in Chapter 94.

casser
to break
Introduced in Chapter 206.

ce soir
this evening
Introduced in Chapter 141.

célèbre
famous
Introduced in Chapter 132.

célibataire
single Introduced in Chapter 162.

cent
a hundred
Introduced in Chapter 105.

cependant
nevertheless, however
Introduced in Chapter 217.

certainement
certainly Introduced in Chapter 189.

changer
to change
Introduced in Chapter 176.

chauffer
to heat
Introduced in Chapter 206.

cher
dear; expensive
Introduced in Chapter 90.

chercher
to look for
Introduced in Chapter 63.

chien, chat
dog and cat — chien is the REGULAR, expected descendant of canis (unlike Spanish's mysterious perro); chat continues cattus, the same Egypt-to-Rome story as Spanish's gato Introduced in Chapter 26.

cinq
five
Introduced in Chapter 6.

cinquante
fifty
Introduced in Chapter 105.

clair / claire
clear, light (of a colour)
Introduced in Chapter 192.

combien
how much and how many — one word where English needs two Introduced in Chapter 36.

commander
to order
Introduced in Chapter 205.

comme ci, comme ça
so-so (literally "like this, like that") Introduced in Chapter 3.

commencer
to begin Introduced in Chapter 137.

comment
how
Introduced in Chapter 2.

comment
how — a word you have been using since your first lesson
Introduced in Chapter 36.

comment ça va ?
how are you? — the neutral everyday question
Introduced in Chapter 3.

comment vous appelez-vous?
what's your name? (literally "how do you call yourself?")
Introduced in Chapter 2.

comparer
to compare
Introduced in Chapter 147.

compliqué / compliquée
complicated
Introduced in Chapter 191.

comprendre
to understand — literally com- + prendre, "to take together," so in French understanding IS grasping, and the verb conjugates exactly like the one it is built from Introduced in Chapter 29.

compter
to count
Introduced in Chapter 66.

conduire
to drive
Introduced in Chapter 138.

confortable
comfortable
Introduced in Chapter 159.

connaître
to know (a person, a place)
Introduced in Chapter 138.

conseiller
to advise
Introduced in Chapter 147.

construire
to build Introduced in Chapter 233.

content pleased, glad Introduced in Chapter 56.

continuer
to continue
Introduced in Chapter 144.

convaincre
to convince Introduced in Chapter 147.

corriger
to correct
Introduced in Chapter 182.

couper
to cut
Introduced in Chapter 63.

courageux / courageuse
brave
Introduced in Chapter 190.

courir
to run — Latin currere, the root under current, course, courier and curriculum, and the verb that shows why chien palatalized its c and courir did not Introduced in Chapter 30.

craindre
to fear
Introduced in Chapter 211.

crier
to shout
Introduced in Chapter 143.

critiquer
to criticise
Introduced in Chapter 147.

croire
to believe
Introduced in Chapter 137.

cru / crue
raw Introduced in Chapter 161.

cueillir
to pick (flowers, fruit)
Introduced in Chapter 184.

cuisiner
to cook
Introduced in Chapter 60.

cuit / cuite
cooked
Introduced in Chapter 192.

curieux / curieuse
curious
Introduced in Chapter 218.

dangereux / dangereuse
dangerous
Introduced in Chapter 160.

de
of, from — the word already inside du, and the one that does what English does with an apostrophe Introduced in Chapter 39.

de rien
you're welcome (literally "of nothing")
Introduced in Chapter 3.

de toute façon
anyway
Introduced in Chapter 158.

décembre
December — the month that still says "ten"
Introduced in Chapter 10.

décider
to decide
Introduced in Chapter 144.

découvrir
to discover Introduced in Chapter 149.

dedans
inside
Introduced in Chapter 97.

défendre
to defend Introduced in Chapter 184.

dehors
outside
Introduced in Chapter 97.

déjà already Introduced in Chapter 140.

demander
to ask — an ordinary, polite, everyday word, and one of the sharpest false friends French holds for an English speaker Introduced in Chapter 28.

déménager
to move house
Introduced in Chapter 235.

démontrer
to prove Introduced in Chapter 147.

dépasser
to overtake Introduced in Chapter 181.

dépendre
to depend
Introduced in Chapter 179.

dépenser
to spend (money)
Introduced in Chapter 205.

déplacer
to move (something)
Introduced in Chapter 176.

depuis
since, for Introduced in Chapter 187.

dernier
last Introduced in Chapter 132.

derrière
behind
Introduced in Chapter 157.

désagréable
unpleasant
Introduced in Chapter 159.

désormais
from now on Introduced in Chapter 156.

dessiner
to draw
Introduced in Chapter 66.

dessous
underneath
Introduced in Chapter 97.

dessus
on top
Introduced in Chapter 97.

détruire
to destroy Introduced in Chapter 182.

deux
two Introduced in Chapter 6.

devant
in front
Introduced in Chapter 157.

devoir
must — the third of the set, and the one with a debt inside it Introduced in Chapter 37.

différent / différente different Introduced in Chapter 219.

difficile difficult
Introduced in Chapter 90.

dimanche
Sunday — the Lord's day
Introduced in Chapter 7.

diminuer
to decrease
Introduced in Chapter 208.

diriger
to direct
Introduced in Chapter 182.

discuter
to discuss
Introduced in Chapter 145.

disparaître
to disappear
Introduced in Chapter 184.

divorcé / divorcée
divorced
Introduced in Chapter 162.

divorcer
to divorce
Introduced in Chapter 207.

dix ten
Introduced in Chapter 6.

dix-huit
eighteen — free, once you have the rule
Introduced in Chapter 15.

dix-neuf
nineteen — the last number before the system changes again Introduced in Chapter 15.

dix-sept
seventeen — the number where French stops inheriting and starts building Introduced in Chapter 15.

donc
so, therefore Introduced in Chapter 158.

donner
to give
Introduced in Chapter 61.

dormir
to sleep — Latin dormīre, unchanged in French, and the source of dormitory and dormant, though not of the dormouse Introduced in Chapter 30.

doux
soft; mild; sweet
Introduced in Chapter 92.

douze
twelve — the second welded teen, and the one that shows the pattern Introduced in Chapter 14.

drôle
funny
Introduced in Chapter 132.

dur / dure
hard Introduced in Chapter 244.

échanger
to exchange
Introduced in Chapter 183.

économiser
to save (money)
Introduced in Chapter 205.

écouter
to listen to Introduced in Chapter 64.

écrire
to write — Latin scrībere, "to scratch," with a propped-up é- that French added in front of every borrowed sc-, sp- and st- word Introduced in Chapter 29.

embrasser
to kiss
Introduced in Chapter 175.

empirer
to get worse
Introduced in Chapter 237.

emprunter
to borrow
Introduced in Chapter 184.

enchanté(e)
pleased to meet you (literally "enchanted") Introduced in Chapter 2.

encore
still, again
Introduced in Chapter 156.

enfin
finally Introduced in Chapter 156.

enlever
to take off, to remove
Introduced in Chapter 176.

ennuyeux / ennuyeuse
boring
Introduced in Chapter 219.

enregistrer
to record
Introduced in Chapter 214.

enrhumé / enrhumée
with a cold
Introduced in Chapter 162.

enseigner
to teach Introduced in Chapter 61.

ensemble
together
Introduced in Chapter 217.

ensuite
afterwards, next Introduced in Chapter 156.

entendre
to hear — from a Latin verb meaning “to stretch toward,” so English’s intend is its closest surviving cousin, and French still keeps the older sense in entendu and s’entendre Introduced in Chapter 30.

entretenir
to maintain Introduced in Chapter 214.

environ
about, approximately Introduced in Chapter 217.

envoyer
to send
Introduced in Chapter 65.

épicé / épicée
spicy
Introduced in Chapter 161.

épouser
to marry
Introduced in Chapter 207.

espérer
to hope
Introduced in Chapter 138.

essayer
to try
Introduced in Chapter 144.

et
and — Latin et unchanged, and a t that never joins to the next word Introduced in Chapter 40.

et demie
half past — literally “and a half”
Introduced in Chapter 8.

et quart
quarter past — literally “and a quarter”
Introduced in Chapter 8.

éteindre
to switch off, to put out Introduced in Chapter 143.

étrange
strange
Introduced in Chapter 219.

étranger / étrangère
foreign
Introduced in Chapter 220.

être / ser · estar
the same two Latin verbs, and the opposite solution — Spanish kept them apart Introduced in Chapter 19.

étroit
narrow Introduced in Chapter 92.

étudier
to study
Introduced in Chapter 62.

éviter
to avoid Introduced in Chapter 179.

exagérer
to exaggerate
Introduced in Chapter 182.

exister
to exist
Introduced in Chapter 214.

expliquer
to explain
Introduced in Chapter 144.

exprimer
to express
Introduced in Chapter 214.

fâché / fâchée
angry
Introduced in Chapter 246.

facile
easy
Introduced in Chapter 89.

faible
weak
Introduced in Chapter 91.

faux / fausse
false, wrong
Introduced in Chapter 245.

fermé
closed
Introduced in Chapter 131.

fermer
to close — from Latin firmāre, "to make firm," so a French door is not shut but made fast; the same verb gave Italian "to stop" and Spanish "to sign"
Introduced in Chapter 31.

fêter
to celebrate Introduced in Chapter 182.

février
February — the month of the purification festival
Introduced in Chapter 9.

fier / fière
proud Introduced in Chapter 218.

finir
to finish — and the second regular family, which grows an extra syllable in the plural Introduced in Chapter 41.

fixer
to fix, to stare at Introduced in Chapter 212.

flotter
to float
Introduced in Chapter 212.

fonctionner
to function, to work
Introduced in Chapter 212.

fort strong
Introduced in Chapter 91.

frais / fraîche
fresh, cool
Introduced in Chapter 161.

frapper
to hit, to knock Introduced in Chapter 236.

freiner
to brake
Introduced in Chapter 212.

fumer
to smoke
Introduced in Chapter 146.

gagner
to win; to earn
Introduced in Chapter 66.

garer
to park
Introduced in Chapter 175.

gaspiller
to waste
Introduced in Chapter 181.

généreux / généreuse
generous Introduced in Chapter 246.

gentil
kind, nice
Introduced in Chapter 92.

glisser
to slip Introduced in Chapter 183.

goûter
to taste
Introduced in Chapter 206.

gratuit / gratuite
free of charge
Introduced in Chapter 245.

gris
grey
Introduced in Chapter 91.

gros
big, fat
Introduced in Chapter 93.

grossir
to put on weight
Introduced in Chapter 214.

habiter
to live / to dwell (a second -er verb — same pattern)
Introduced in Chapter 5.

haut
high, tall
Introduced in Chapter 90.

héberger
to put up (a guest)
Introduced in Chapter 151.

heure
hour (feminine)
Introduced in Chapter 8.

heureusement
luckily
Introduced in Chapter 189.

heureux
happy
Introduced in Chapter 55.

hier
yesterday
Introduced in Chapter 98.

honnête
honest
Introduced in Chapter 220.

huit
eight Introduced in Chapter 6.

hurler
to scream
Introduced in Chapter 241.

ici, là, là-bas
here, there, over there — three distances, and the same ci and la already frozen inside voici and voila
Introduced in Chapter 38.

il a, elle a
he has, she has — the verb worn down to a single letter
Introduced in Chapter 17.

il est, ... heures
"it is … o'clock" — the frame that tells the time
Introduced in Chapter 8.

il est, elle est
he is, she is — the most frequently said word in the language
Introduced in Chapter 19.

il y a
there is, there are — literally it has there, and the y is a Latin word for there that survives nowhere else
Introduced in Chapter 38.

ils ont, elles ont
they have — the form that refuses to look like the rest
Introduced in Chapter 17.

ils sont, elles sont
they are — the hiss against ils ont's buzz
Introduced in Chapter 19.

imaginer
to imagine
Introduced in Chapter 209.

impoli / impolie
rude
Introduced in Chapter 159.

inconfortable
uncomfortable
Introduced in Chapter 159.

inconnu / inconnue
unknown
Introduced in Chapter 160.

indiquer
to point out
Introduced in Chapter 209.

informer
to inform
Introduced in Chapter 209.

inquiet / inquiète
worried
Introduced in Chapter 162.

insister
to insist
Introduced in Chapter 240.

interdire
to forbid
Introduced in Chapter 177.

interrompre
to interrupt
Introduced in Chapter 240.

inutile
useless
Introduced in Chapter 191.

inviter
to invite Introduced in Chapter 175.

j'ai
I have — one syllable, one vowel, and all that is left of Latin habeō
Introduced in Chapter 17.

j'ai vingt ans / I am twenty
a clean split down Europe — Romance HAS its years, Germanic IS its years
Introduced in Chapter 17.

jaloux / jalouse
jealous
Introduced in Chapter 218.

jamais
never; ever
Introduced in Chapter 96.

janvier
January — the month of Janus, god of doorways Introduced in Chapter 9.

je
I
Introduced in Chapter 2.

je m'appelle...
my name is… (literally "I call myself")
Introduced in Chapter 2.

Je parle français
"I speak French" — your first full sentence (français = French)
Introduced in Chapter 5.

je suis
I am — from Latin sum, and one of the oldest word-shapes in Europe
Introduced in Chapter 19.

je suis désolé(e)
I'm sorry (literally "I am desolate")
Introduced in Chapter 24.

jeter
to throw away
Introduced in Chapter 236.

jeudi
Thursday — the day of Jupiter
Introduced in Chapter 7.

jeune
young
Introduced in Chapter 92.

joli pretty
Introduced in Chapter 130.

jouer
to play
Introduced in Chapter 60.

jour
day (le jour — masculine)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

joyeux / joyeuse
cheerful
Introduced in Chapter 190.

juillet
July — the month renamed for Julius Caesar
Introduced in Chapter 10.

juin
June — the month of Juno, queen of the gods
Introduced in Chapter 9.

jusqu'à
until Introduced in Chapter 187.

juste fair, right
Introduced in Chapter 245.

l'abeille
a bee
Introduced in Chapter 87.

l'acteur
an actor
Introduced in Chapter 249.

l'actrice
an actress
Introduced in Chapter 249.

l'addition
the bill Introduced in Chapter 247.

l'adresse
an address
Introduced in Chapter 134.

l'adulte
an adult
Introduced in Chapter 250.

l'aéroport
an airport
Introduced in Chapter 103.

l'agriculteur
a farmer
Introduced in Chapter 123.

l'aiguille
a needle
Introduced in Chapter 230.

l'ail
garlic
Introduced in Chapter 120.

l'amende
a fine
Introduced in Chapter 227.

l'ami, l'amie
friend — masculine or feminine by a regular swap, and the reason le/la elides to l' before a vowel Introduced in Chapter 33.

l'amitié
friendship
Introduced in Chapter 186.

l'amour
love
Introduced in Chapter 155.

l'angoisse
anxiety
Introduced in Chapter 155.

l'anniversaire
a birthday
Introduced in Chapter 257.

l'annonce
an advert, an announcement
Introduced in Chapter 142.

l'appartement
a flat
Introduced in Chapter 163.

l'arbre
a tree
Introduced in Chapter 81.

l'architecte
an architect Introduced in Chapter 166.

l'argent
money; silver
Introduced in Chapter 79.

l'armée
an army
Introduced in Chapter 165.

l'armoire
a wardrobe
Introduced in Chapter 112.

l'arrêt
a stop
Introduced in Chapter 247.

l'arrivée
arrival
Introduced in Chapter 231.

l'art
art
Introduced in Chapter 257.

l'ascenseur
a lift, an elevator
Introduced in Chapter 106.

l'aspirateur
a vacuum cleaner
Introduced in Chapter 115.

l'assiette
a plate
Introduced in Chapter 76.

l'automne
autumn — the season English borrowed whole
Introduced in Chapter 11.

l'autoroute
a motorway
Introduced in Chapter 227.

l'avenir
the future
Introduced in Chapter 141.

l'avion
an aeroplane
Introduced in Chapter 99.

l'avis
a notice, an opinion
Introduced in Chapter 142.

l'avocat
a lawyer; an avocado
Introduced in Chapter 124.

l'eau
water — the most worn-down word French ever took from Latin Introduced in Chapter 13.

l'écharpe
a scarf
Introduced in Chapter 116.

l'échec
failure
Introduced in Chapter 197.

l'échelle
a ladder
Introduced in Chapter 230.

l'éclair
lightning
Introduced in Chapter 229.

l'école
a school
Introduced in Chapter 99.

l'économie
the economy
Introduced in Chapter 248.

l'écran
a screen
Introduced in Chapter 195.

l'écrivain
a writer
Introduced in Chapter 249.

l'église
a church
Introduced in Chapter 100.

l'électricien
an electrician
Introduced in Chapter 196.

l'électricité
electricity
Introduced in Chapter 255.

l'éléphant
an elephant
Introduced in Chapter 88.

l'élève
a pupil
Introduced in Chapter 59.

l'employé
an employee
Introduced in Chapter 224.

l'énergie energy
Introduced in Chapter 255.

l'enfant
child — one spelling for both genders, the article alone showing which; literally "not yet speaking"
Introduced in Chapter 33.

l'entraîneur
a coach
Introduced in Chapter 203.

l'entrée
an entrance
Introduced in Chapter 199.

l'entreprise
a company
Introduced in Chapter 174.

l'entretien
an interview
Introduced in Chapter 204.

l'enveloppe
an envelope
Introduced in Chapter 252.

l'environnement
the environment
Introduced in Chapter 229.

l'épaule
a shoulder
Introduced in Chapter 50.

l'épicerie
a grocer's shop
Introduced in Chapter 107.

l'épine
a thorn
Introduced in Chapter 254.

l'équipe
a team
Introduced in Chapter 257.

l'erreur
a mistake
Introduced in Chapter 232.

l'escalier
the stairs
Introduced in Chapter 75.

l'espoir
hope Introduced in Chapter 186.

l'estomac
the stomach
Introduced in Chapter 52.

l'étagère
a shelf
Introduced in Chapter 112.

l'été
summer — literally "the heat"
Introduced in Chapter 11.

l'étiquette
a label
Introduced in Chapter 169.

l'étoile
a star
Introduced in Chapter 83.

l'étranger
a foreigner
Introduced in Chapter 250.

l'étudiant
a student Introduced in Chapter 124.

l'examen
an exam
Introduced in Chapter 126.

l'exemple
an example
Introduced in Chapter 251.

l'expérience
experience
Introduced in Chapter 225.

l'herbe
grass
Introduced in Chapter 134.

l'histoire
history, a story
Introduced in Chapter 232.

l'hiver
winter — literally "the wintry season"
Introduced in Chapter 11.

l'hôpital
a hospital
Introduced in Chapter 54.

l'horaire
opening hours, a timetable
Introduced in Chapter 142.

l'hôtel
a hotel
Introduced in Chapter 101.

l'huile
oil
Introduced in Chapter 69.

l'idée
an idea
Introduced in Chapter 127.

l'île
an island
Introduced in Chapter 82.

l'immeuble
a block of flats
Introduced in Chapter 253.

l'impôt
a tax
Introduced in Chapter 252.

l'imprimante
a printer
Introduced in Chapter 204.

l'infirmière
a nurse
Introduced in Chapter 123.

l'ingénieur
an engineer
Introduced in Chapter 124.

l'interdiction
a ban
Introduced in Chapter 168.

l'invité
a guest
Introduced in Chapter 58.

l'oignon
an onion
Introduced in Chapter 68.

l'oiseau
a bird
Introduced in Chapter 85.

l'oncle
an uncle
Introduced in Chapter 57.

l'ongle
a nail (finger or toe)
Introduced in Chapter 51.

l'orage
a storm
Introduced in Chapter 133.

l'orange
an orange
Introduced in Chapter 68.

l'ordinateur
a computer
Introduced in Chapter 111.

l'ordonnance
a prescription
Introduced in Chapter 215.

l'oreille
an ear
Introduced in Chapter 134.

l'oreiller
a pillow
Introduced in Chapter 113.

l'ouest
the west
Introduced in Chapter 109.

l'ours
a bear
Introduced in Chapter 86.

l'outil
a tool
Introduced in Chapter 256.

l'ouvrier
a worker
Introduced in Chapter 196.

l'université
a university
Introduced in Chapter 232.

l'urgence
an emergency
Introduced in Chapter 243.

l'usine
a factory
Introduced in Chapter 108.

l'œil, les yeux
eye — masculine, with a plural that looks irregular but is the REGULAR outcome of Latin oculos; œil's own singular is the piece that changed
Introduced in Chapter 35.

l'œuf, les œufs
egg — masculine, a genuine cousin of English egg, and the one French noun whose final consonant vanishes only in the plural Introduced in Chapter 34.

la bague
a ring
Introduced in Chapter 118.

la baignoire
a bathtub
Introduced in Chapter 112.

la banane
a banana
Introduced in Chapter 68.

la banlieue
the suburbs
Introduced in Chapter 216.

la banque
a bank
Introduced in Chapter 99.

la batterie
a battery
Introduced in Chapter 223.

la belle-fille
a daughter-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 167.

la belle-mère
a mother-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 167.

la bibliothèque
a library
Introduced in Chapter 102.

la bière
beer
Introduced in Chapter 121.

la blessure
a wound
Introduced in Chapter 185.

la boîte
a box
Introduced in Chapter 80.

la boîte aux lettres
a letterbox, a postbox
Introduced in Chapter 109.

la bouche
mouth — feminine, and originally the Latin word for cheek, not mouth at all Introduced in Chapter 35.

la boucherie
a butcher's
Introduced in Chapter 164.

la boue
mud
Introduced in Chapter 201.

la boulangerie
a bakery
Introduced in Chapter 102.

la bouteille
a bottle
Introduced in Chapter 77.

la branche
a branch
Introduced in Chapter 228.

la brique
a brick
Introduced in Chapter 202.

la brosse à dents
a toothbrush
Introduced in Chapter 113.

la caisse
a till, a checkout
Introduced in Chapter 125.

la carotte
a carrot
Introduced in Chapter 69.

la carrière
a career
Introduced in Chapter 204.

la carte
a map; a card
Introduced in Chapter 80.

la carte bancaire
a bank card
Introduced in Chapter 226.

la carte postale
a postcard
Introduced in Chapter 169.

la cascade
a waterfall
Introduced in Chapter 171.

la casquette
a cap
Introduced in Chapter 117.

la casserole
a saucepan
Introduced in Chapter 193.

la cave
a cellar
Introduced in Chapter 200.

la ceinture
a belt
Introduced in Chapter 116.

la cerise
a cherry
Introduced in Chapter 120.

la chaise
a chair
Introduced in Chapter 73.

la chaleur
heat
Introduced in Chapter 133.

la chambre
a bedroom
Introduced in Chapter 74.

la chanson
a song
Introduced in Chapter 128.

la chemise
a shirt
Introduced in Chapter 103.

la cheville
an ankle
Introduced in Chapter 52.

la chèvre
a goat
Introduced in Chapter 87.

la cicatrice
a scar
Introduced in Chapter 185.

la classe
a class; a classroom
Introduced in Chapter 126.

la clé
a key
Introduced in Chapter 73.

la clôture
a fence
Introduced in Chapter 200.

la colère
anger
Introduced in Chapter 55.

la colline
a hill
Introduced in Chapter 84.

la confiance
trust
Introduced in Chapter 186.

la confiture
jam
Introduced in Chapter 71.

la consultation
a medical appointment
Introduced in Chapter 243.

la corde
a rope
Introduced in Chapter 202.

la correspondance
a connection
Introduced in Chapter 203.

la couleur
a colour
Introduced in Chapter 129.

la cousine
a cousin (female)
Introduced in Chapter 57.

la couverture
a blanket
Introduced in Chapter 113.

la cravate
a tie
Introduced in Chapter 116.

la crème
cream
Introduced in Chapter 72.

la cuillère
a spoon
Introduced in Chapter 77.

la cuisine
a kitchen; cooking
Introduced in Chapter 73.

la date
a date
Introduced in Chapter 135.

la décision
a decision
Introduced in Chapter 225.

la défaite
a defeat
Introduced in Chapter 203.

la dent
a tooth
Introduced in Chapter 49.

la destination
a destination
Introduced in Chapter 231.

la dette
a debt
Introduced in Chapter 226.

la différence
a difference
Introduced in Chapter 251.

la douane
customs Introduced in Chapter 164.

la douche
a shower
Introduced in Chapter 112.

la douleur
pain
Introduced in Chapter 53.

la droite
the right
Introduced in Chapter 110.

la facture
a bill, an invoice
Introduced in Chapter 142.

la famille
family — feminine and fixed, whoever is in it, and once meant the household's servants Introduced in Chapter 33.

la farine
flour
Introduced in Chapter 120.

la fatigue
tiredness
Introduced in Chapter 54.

la femme
a woman; a wife
Introduced in Chapter 57.

la fenêtre
a window
Introduced in Chapter 73.

la feuille
a leaf; a sheet of paper
Introduced in Chapter 81.

la feuille de papier
a sheet of paper
Introduced in Chapter 204.

la fiancée
a fiancée
Introduced in Chapter 167.

la fiche de paie
a pay slip Introduced in Chapter 169.

la fièvre
a fever
Introduced in Chapter 53.

la fille
a daughter; a girl
Introduced in Chapter 56.

la flamme
a flame
Introduced in Chapter 201.

la fleur
a flower
Introduced in Chapter 81.

la fois
a time, an occasion
Introduced in Chapter 129.

la fontaine
a fountain
Introduced in Chapter 170.

la fourchette
a fork
Introduced in Chapter 77.

la fourmi an ant
Introduced in Chapter 88.

la fraise
a strawberry
Introduced in Chapter 120.

la frontière
a border
Introduced in Chapter 109.

la fumée
smoke
Introduced in Chapter 201.

la gauche
the left
Introduced in Chapter 110.

la géographie
geography
Introduced in Chapter 257.

la glace
ice cream; ice; a mirror
Introduced in Chapter 121.

la gomme
a rubber, an eraser
Introduced in Chapter 127.

la gorge
the throat
Introduced in Chapter 51.

la graine
a seed
Introduced in Chapter 228.

la grand-mère
a grandmother
Introduced in Chapter 56.

la grenouille
a frog
Introduced in Chapter 88.

la grippe
flu
Introduced in Chapter 215.

la grotte
a cave
Introduced in Chapter 254.

la guerre
war
Introduced in Chapter 165.

la guitare
a guitar
Introduced in Chapter 256.

la honte
shame
Introduced in Chapter 186.

la jambe
a leg
Introduced in Chapter 49.

la joie
joy
Introduced in Chapter 55.

la joue
a cheek
Introduced in Chapter 51.

la jupe
a skirt
Introduced in Chapter 104.

la laine
wool
Introduced in Chapter 172.

la lampe
a lamp Introduced in Chapter 74.

la leçon
a lesson
Introduced in Chapter 126.

la lessive
washing powder; the washing Introduced in Chapter 115.

la lettre
a letter
Introduced in Chapter 118.

la lèvre
a lip
Introduced in Chapter 134.

la loi
a law
Introduced in Chapter 222.

la lune
the Moon (feminine) Introduced in Chapter 7.

la main
the hand — feminine despite ending in a consonant, and the root of half the words you know Introduced in Chapter 21.

la mairie
the town hall
Introduced in Chapter 102.

la maladie
an illness
Introduced in Chapter 54.

la mariée
a bride
Introduced in Chapter 197.

la mer
the sea
Introduced in Chapter 82.

la mère
mother — and the reason English calls physical stuff “matter”
Introduced in Chapter 12.

la monnaie
change (coins); currency
Introduced in Chapter 135.

la montagne
a mountain
Introduced in Chapter 81.

la montre
a watch
Introduced in Chapter 221.

la moto
a motorbike
Introduced in Chapter 247.

la mouche
a fly
Introduced in Chapter 194.

la musique
music
Introduced in Chapter 128.

la natation
swimming
Introduced in Chapter 173.

la neige
snow
Introduced in Chapter 83.

la nièce
a niece
Introduced in Chapter 59.

la noix
a walnut, a nut
Introduced in Chapter 72.

la nouvelle
a piece of news
Introduced in Chapter 195.

la paix
peace
Introduced in Chapter 165.

la peau
skin
Introduced in Chapter 51.

la pêche
a peach
Introduced in Chapter 221.

la pelouse
a lawn
Introduced in Chapter 254.

la permission
permission
Introduced in Chapter 168.

la personne
person — feminine no matter who is meant, even a man, and secretly "nobody" when it stands next to ne
Introduced in Chapter 33.

la personne âgée
an elderly person
Introduced in Chapter 250.

la petite-fille
a granddaughter
Introduced in Chapter 58.

la peur
fear
Introduced in Chapter 55.

la pharmacie
a pharmacy
Introduced in Chapter 101.

la photo
a photo
Introduced in Chapter 80.

la pièce
a coin, a room
Introduced in Chapter 198.

la pierre
a stone
Introduced in Chapter 82.

la piscine
a swimming pool
Introduced in Chapter 107.

la plage
a beach
Introduced in Chapter 82.

la plaine
a plain Introduced in Chapter 171.

la plante
a plant
Introduced in Chapter 228.

la pluie
rain
Introduced in Chapter 83.

la poche
a pocket
Introduced in Chapter 115.

la poêle
a frying pan
Introduced in Chapter 193.

la poire
a pear
Introduced in Chapter 70.

la poitrine
the chest
Introduced in Chapter 52.

la police
the police
Introduced in Chapter 102.

la politique
politics
Introduced in Chapter 248.

la pollution pollution
Introduced in Chapter 229.

la pommade
an ointment
Introduced in Chapter 215.

la pomme
an apple
Introduced in Chapter 67.

la pomme de terre
a potato
Introduced in Chapter 68.

la possibilité
a possibility
Introduced in Chapter 225.

la poste
the post office
Introduced in Chapter 101.

la poubelle
a bin
Introduced in Chapter 114.

la poule
a hen
Introduced in Chapter 86.

la poussière
dust
Introduced in Chapter 201.

la promesse
a promise
Introduced in Chapter 198.

la publicité
advertising
Introduced in Chapter 195.

la racine
a root
Introduced in Chapter 228.

la radio
a radio
Introduced in Chapter 111.

la raison
a reason
Introduced in Chapter 225.

la raquette
a racket
Introduced in Chapter 173.

la réduction
a discount
Introduced in Chapter 198.

la règle
a rule
Introduced in Chapter 168.

la réponse
an answer
Introduced in Chapter 127.

la réservation
a booking
Introduced in Chapter 164.

la réunion
a meeting
Introduced in Chapter 174.

la rivière
a river
Introduced in Chapter 81.

la robe
a dress
Introduced in Chapter 103.

la roue
a wheel
Introduced in Chapter 227.

la rue
a street
Introduced in Chapter 98.

la salade
a salad; lettuce
Introduced in Chapter 72.

la salle à manger
a dining room
Introduced in Chapter 163.

la salle de bain
a bathroom
Introduced in Chapter 74.

la salle de sport
a gym
Introduced in Chapter 173.

la santé
health
Introduced in Chapter 154.

la sauce
a sauce
Introduced in Chapter 122.

la seconde
a second
Introduced in Chapter 135.

la sécurité
safety
Introduced in Chapter 168.

la semaine
a week
Introduced in Chapter 95.

la serrure
a lock
Introduced in Chapter 163.

la serviette
a towel; a napkin
Introduced in Chapter 113.

la société
society
Introduced in Chapter 222.

la soie
silk
Introduced in Chapter 172.

la soif
thirst
Introduced in Chapter 54.

la sonnette
a doorbell
Introduced in Chapter 163.

la sortie
an exit
Introduced in Chapter 199.

la soupe
a soup
Introduced in Chapter 69.

la souris
a mouse
Introduced in Chapter 85.

la statue
a statue
Introduced in Chapter 170.

la sœur
sister — the one family word that broke the pattern Introduced in Chapter 12.

la taille
size; the waist
Introduced in Chapter 117.

la tante
an aunt Introduced in Chapter 57.

la tasse
a cup
Introduced in Chapter 77.

la télévision
a television
Introduced in Chapter 111.

la température
temperature
Introduced in Chapter 194.

la terre earth, land
Introduced in Chapter 201.

la tête
the head — from Latin for a clay pot
Introduced in Chapter 21.

la tomate
a tomato Introduced in Chapter 68.

la tortue
a tortoise
Introduced in Chapter 89.

la tour
a tower
Introduced in Chapter 170.

la toux
a cough
Introduced in Chapter 53.

la tradition
a tradition
Introduced in Chapter 165.

la tristesse
sadness
Introduced in Chapter 55.

la vache
a cow
Introduced in Chapter 85.

la vague
a wave
Introduced in Chapter 84.

la valise
a suitcase
Introduced in Chapter 80.

la vallée
a valley
Introduced in Chapter 194.

la vérité
the truth
Introduced in Chapter 251.

la veste
a jacket
Introduced in Chapter 116.

la victoire
a victory
Introduced in Chapter 173.

la vie
life
Introduced in Chapter 129.

la ville
a town, a city
Introduced in Chapter 98.

la voiture
a car
Introduced in Chapter 100.

là-haut
up there
Introduced in Chapter 216.

laisser
to leave (something); to let Introduced in Chapter 65.

lancer
to throw Introduced in Chapter 179.

laver
to wash
Introduced in Chapter 60.

le / la / les
the (masculine / feminine / plural)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

le balai
a broom Introduced in Chapter 114.

le balcon
a balcony
Introduced in Chapter 163.

le ballon
a ball
Introduced in Chapter 173.

le bébé
a baby
Introduced in Chapter 58.

le beurre
butter — masculine, and the same borrowed word as English butter, not two separate coinages Introduced in Chapter 34.

le bijou
a jewel, a piece of jewellery Introduced in Chapter 118.

le billet
a ticket; a banknote
Introduced in Chapter 80.

le billet de banque
a banknote
Introduced in Chapter 198.

le biscuit
a biscuit
Introduced in Chapter 121.

le boucher
a butcher
Introduced in Chapter 196.

le boulanger
a baker
Introduced in Chapter 124.

le bouton
a button
Introduced in Chapter 221.

le bras
an arm
Introduced in Chapter 49.

le brouillard
fog
Introduced in Chapter 133.

le bureau
an office; a desk
Introduced in Chapter 108.

le bœuf
beef; an ox
Introduced in Chapter 119.

le cadeau
a present, a gift
Introduced in Chapter 79.

le café
coffee — masculine, and the one drink-word nearly all of Europe borrowed along the same single road
Introduced in Chapter 32.

le cahier
a notebook
Introduced in Chapter 78.

le caillou
a pebble
Introduced in Chapter 171.

le canapé
a sofa
Introduced in Chapter 75.

le canard
a duck
Introduced in Chapter 86.

le caoutchouc
natural rubber
Introduced in Chapter 202.

le carrefour
a crossroads
Introduced in Chapter 108.

le casque
a helmet
Introduced in Chapter 253.

le cerveau
the brain
Introduced in Chapter 154.

le champignon
a mushroom
Introduced in Chapter 119.

le championnat
a championship
Introduced in Chapter 203.

le chanteur
a singer
Introduced in Chapter 223.

le chantier
a building site
Introduced in Chapter 253.

le chapeau
a hat
Introduced in Chapter 104.

le chargeur
a charger
Introduced in Chapter 223.

le château
a castle
Introduced in Chapter 170.

le chauffeur
a driver
Introduced in Chapter 124.

le chercheur
a researcher
Introduced in Chapter 224.

le chocolat
chocolate
Introduced in Chapter 121.

le choix
a choice
Introduced in Chapter 225.

le cinéma
a cinema
Introduced in Chapter 107.

le citron
a lemon
Introduced in Chapter 71.

le clavier
a keyboard
Introduced in Chapter 195.

le client
a customer
Introduced in Chapter 125.

le climat
the climate
Introduced in Chapter 229.

le clou
a nail for hammering Introduced in Chapter 230.

le cochon
a pig
Introduced in Chapter 85.

le colis
a parcel
Introduced in Chapter 252.

le collègue
a colleague
Introduced in Chapter 174.

le collier
a necklace
Introduced in Chapter 118.

le comprimé
a tablet (medicine)
Introduced in Chapter 215.

le comptable
an accountant
Introduced in Chapter 224.

le compte bancaire
a bank account
Introduced in Chapter 226.

le concert
a concert
Introduced in Chapter 223.

le concombre
a cucumber
Introduced in Chapter 119.

le conseil
advice
Introduced in Chapter 168.

le contrat
a contract
Introduced in Chapter 174.

le coton
cotton
Introduced in Chapter 172.

le cou
the neck
Introduced in Chapter 50.

le coude
an elbow
Introduced in Chapter 52.

le couloir
a corridor
Introduced in Chapter 76.

le courage
courage
Introduced in Chapter 186.

le courriel
an email
Introduced in Chapter 135.

le couteau
a knife
Introduced in Chapter 77.

le crayon
a pencil
Introduced in Chapter 78.

le cuir
leather
Introduced in Chapter 172.

le cuisinier
a cook
Introduced in Chapter 123.

le déjeuner
lunch
Introduced in Chapter 70.

le dentifrice
toothpaste
Introduced in Chapter 114.

le dentiste
a dentist
Introduced in Chapter 166.

le départ
departure
Introduced in Chapter 231.

le désert
a desert
Introduced in Chapter 84.

le dessert
a dessert
Introduced in Chapter 122.

le dessin
a drawing
Introduced in Chapter 129.

le dialecte
a dialect
Introduced in Chapter 195.

le dictionnaire
a dictionary
Introduced in Chapter 232.

le dîner
dinner
Introduced in Chapter 70.

le distributeur
a cash machine
Introduced in Chapter 226.

le doigt
a finger
Introduced in Chapter 49.

le dossier
a folder, a file
Introduced in Chapter 169.

le drap
a sheet
Introduced in Chapter 193.

le facteur
a postman, a postwoman
Introduced in Chapter 125.

le fauteuil
an armchair
Introduced in Chapter 193.

le fer
iron; an iron (for clothes)
Introduced in Chapter 115.

le feu
fire
Introduced in Chapter 84.

le feu rouge
a red light
Introduced in Chapter 108.

le fiancé
a fiancé
Introduced in Chapter 167.

le fil
a thread, a wire
Introduced in Chapter 230.

le film
a film
Introduced in Chapter 128.

le fleuve
a large river
Introduced in Chapter 164.

le foie
the liver
Introduced in Chapter 154.

le formulaire
a form
Introduced in Chapter 252.

le frère
brother — and the friar who is one Introduced in Chapter 12.

le fromage
cheese — masculine, and named for its MOULD rather than for the milk it's made from Introduced in Chapter 34.

le fruit
a fruit
Introduced in Chapter 67.

le gâteau
a cake
Introduced in Chapter 69.

le gaz
gas
Introduced in Chapter 255.

le gendre
a son-in-law
Introduced in Chapter 167.

le genou
a knee
Introduced in Chapter 50.

le gouvernement
the government
Introduced in Chapter 222.

le grand-père
a grandfather
Introduced in Chapter 56.

le grenier
an attic
Introduced in Chapter 200.

le guide
a guide, a guidebook
Introduced in Chapter 169.

le jambon
ham
Introduced in Chapter 71.

le jardin
a garden
Introduced in Chapter 74.

le jeu
a game
Introduced in Chapter 128.

le joueur
a player
Introduced in Chapter 203.

le journaliste
a journalist
Introduced in Chapter 166.

le juge
a judge
Introduced in Chapter 222.

le jumeau
a twin Introduced in Chapter 250.

le jus
juice
Introduced in Chapter 121.

le lait
milk — masculine, and the one drink in this chapter French did not have to borrow Introduced in Chapter 32.

le lapin
a rabbit
Introduced in Chapter 88.

le linge
laundry, linen
Introduced in Chapter 115.

le lion
a lion
Introduced in Chapter 87.

le loup
a wolf
Introduced in Chapter 85.

le loyer
the rent
Introduced in Chapter 142.

le magasin
a shop
Introduced in Chapter 99.

le magazine
a magazine
Introduced in Chapter 232.

le maillot
a swimsuit; a sports shirt
Introduced in Chapter 117.

le maire
a mayor
Introduced in Chapter 248.

le manteau
a coat
Introduced in Chapter 104.

le mari
a husband
Introduced in Chapter 57.

le marié
a bridegroom
Introduced in Chapter 197.

le marteau
a hammer
Introduced in Chapter 230.

le matin
the morning
Introduced in Chapter 95.

le mécanicien
a mechanic
Introduced in Chapter 196.

le médecin
a doctor
Introduced in Chapter 53.

le médicament
a medicine
Introduced in Chapter 53.

le melon
a melon
Introduced in Chapter 120.

le mensonge
a lie
Introduced in Chapter 251.

le menton
the chin
Introduced in Chapter 51.

le métal
metal
Introduced in Chapter 202.

le métro
the underground, the metro
Introduced in Chapter 106.

le miel
honey
Introduced in Chapter 69.

le miroir a mirror
Introduced in Chapter 75.

le mois
a month
Introduced in Chapter 95.

le monde
the world
Introduced in Chapter 110.

le monument
a monument
Introduced in Chapter 170.

le mot
a word
Introduced in Chapter 126.

le moteur
an engine
Introduced in Chapter 227.

le moustique
a mosquito
Introduced in Chapter 194.

le mouton
a sheep
Introduced in Chapter 87.

le mur
a wall
Introduced in Chapter 73.

le muscle
a muscle
Introduced in Chapter 185.

le musée
a museum
Introduced in Chapter 100.

le neveu
a nephew
Introduced in Chapter 59.

le nez nose — masculine, a silent final z, and another genuine cousin of its English counterpart Introduced in Chapter 35.

le nord
the north
Introduced in Chapter 109.

le nuage
a cloud
Introduced in Chapter 83.

le numéro
a number (on a door, a phone)
Introduced in Chapter 134.

le pain
bread — and the companion who is, literally, someone you share it with Introduced in Chapter 13.

le pansement
a plaster, a dressing
Introduced in Chapter 243.

le pantalon
trousers
Introduced in Chapter 104.

le papier
paper
Introduced in Chapter 78.

le papillon
a butterfly
Introduced in Chapter 194.

le parapluie
an umbrella
Introduced in Chapter 79.

le parc
a park
Introduced in Chapter 100.

le parfum
perfume
Introduced in Chapter 118.

le parking
a car park
Introduced in Chapter 106.

le passeport
a passport
Introduced in Chapter 164.

le paysage
a landscape
Introduced in Chapter 231.

le péage
a toll
Introduced in Chapter 227.

le peigne
a comb
Introduced in Chapter 114.

le peintre
a painter
Introduced in Chapter 249.

le père
father — one of the oldest words anyone can reconstruct
Introduced in Chapter 12.

le permis de conduire
a driving licence
Introduced in Chapter 253.

le petit-déjeuner
breakfast
Introduced in Chapter 70.

le petit-fils
a grandson
Introduced in Chapter 58.

le pharmacien
a pharmacist
Introduced in Chapter 166.

le photographe
a photographer
Introduced in Chapter 166.

le piano
a piano
Introduced in Chapter 256.

le pied
a foot
Introduced in Chapter 49.

le pilote
a pilot
Introduced in Chapter 224.

le placard
a cupboard
Introduced in Chapter 76.

le plafond
a ceiling
Introduced in Chapter 76.

le plastique
plastic
Introduced in Chapter 172.

le plombier
a plumber
Introduced in Chapter 196.

le poème
a poem
Introduced in Chapter 249.

le poignet
a wrist
Introduced in Chapter 52.

le poisson
fish
Introduced in Chapter 67.

le poivre
pepper
Introduced in Chapter 72.

le policier
a police officer
Introduced in Chapter 123.

le pompier
a firefighter
Introduced in Chapter 125.

le pont
a bridge
Introduced in Chapter 100.

le portail
a gate
Introduced in Chapter 200.

le portefeuille
a wallet
Introduced in Chapter 117.

le potager
a vegetable garden
Introduced in Chapter 200.

le pouce
a thumb
Introduced in Chapter 185.

le poulet
chicken
Introduced in Chapter 67.

le poumon
a lung
Introduced in Chapter 154.

le pourboire
a tip
Introduced in Chapter 247.

le prêt
a loan
Introduced in Chapter 226.

le printemps
spring — literally "the first time"
Introduced in Chapter 11.

le prix
a price; a prize
Introduced in Chapter 129.

le problème
a problem
Introduced in Chapter 127.

le professeur
a teacher
Introduced in Chapter 59.

le projet
a plan, a project
Introduced in Chapter 141.

le pyjama
pyjamas
Introduced in Chapter 221.

le quai
a platform
Introduced in Chapter 247.

le quartier
a district, a neighbourhood
Introduced in Chapter 103.

le raisin grapes
Introduced in Chapter 71.

le recyclage
recycling
Introduced in Chapter 255.

le réfrigérateur
a fridge
Introduced in Chapter 111.

le régime
a diet
Introduced in Chapter 243.

le rein
a kidney Introduced in Chapter 154.

le renard
a fox
Introduced in Chapter 86.

le repas
a meal
Introduced in Chapter 122.

le repos
rest
Introduced in Chapter 155.

le restaurant
a restaurant
Introduced in Chapter 101.

le résultat
a result
Introduced in Chapter 251.

le retour
the return
Introduced in Chapter 231.

le rêve
a dream
Introduced in Chapter 155.

le rhume
a cold
Introduced in Chapter 185.

le rideau
a curtain
Introduced in Chapter 112.

le riz
rice
Introduced in Chapter 70.

le rocher
a rock
Introduced in Chapter 171.

le sable
sand
Introduced in Chapter 82.

le sac
a bag
Introduced in Chapter 78.

le sachet
a small bag
Introduced in Chapter 202.

le salaire
a salary
Introduced in Chapter 174.

le salon
a living room
Introduced in Chapter 75.

le sandwich
a sandwich
Introduced in Chapter 122.

le sang blood
Introduced in Chapter 50.

le savon
soap
Introduced in Chapter 113.

le scientifique
a scientist
Introduced in Chapter 224.

le sel
salt — masculine, cousin of English salt by common descent, and the source of a salary story no ancient writer actually tells Introduced in Chapter 34.

le sentier
a path
Introduced in Chapter 254.

le serpent
a snake
Introduced in Chapter 86.

le serveur
a waiter
Introduced in Chapter 125.

le shampooing
shampoo
Introduced in Chapter 114.

le siècle
a century
Introduced in Chapter 135.

le siège
a seat
Introduced in Chapter 199.

le singe
a monkey
Introduced in Chapter 87.

le sirop
a syrup
Introduced in Chapter 215.

le sol
the floor, the ground
Introduced in Chapter 75.

le soldat
a soldier
Introduced in Chapter 165.

le soleil
the sun
Introduced in Chapter 83.

le sommeil
sleep
Introduced in Chapter 155.

le spectacle
a show
Introduced in Chapter 223.

le sport
sport
Introduced in Chapter 128.

le stade
a stadium
Introduced in Chapter 107.

le stylo
a pen
Introduced in Chapter 78.

le succès
success
Introduced in Chapter 197.

le sucre sugar — masculine, closing a chapter where every drink-word is; the fourth and longest road of the four Introduced in Chapter 32.

le sud
the south
Introduced in Chapter 109.

le supermarché
a supermarket
Introduced in Chapter 107.

le tableau
a board; a painting
Introduced in Chapter 126.

le tambour
a drum
Introduced in Chapter 256.

le tapis
a rug, a carpet
Introduced in Chapter 111.

le taxi
a taxi
Introduced in Chapter 106.

le téléphone
a phone
Introduced in Chapter 79.

le téléphone portable
a mobile phone
Introduced in Chapter 204.

le temps, il pleut
weather — le temps means BOTH "time" and "weather," the SAME Latin tempus polysemy as Spanish's tiempo; il pleut keeps Latin's pl- UNCHANGED, unlike Spanish's llueve Introduced in Chapter 25.

le thé
tea — masculine, and the drink whose name split in two depending which Chinese port a trader dealt with Introduced in Chapter 32.

le théâtre
a theatre
Introduced in Chapter 102.

le tigre
a tiger
Introduced in Chapter 88.

le timbre
a stamp
Introduced in Chapter 252.

le tiroir
a drawer
Introduced in Chapter 193.

le toit
a roof
Introduced in Chapter 74.

le tonnerre
thunder
Introduced in Chapter 229.

le touriste
a tourist Introduced in Chapter 250.

le train
a train
Introduced in Chapter 99.

le tribunal
a court
Introduced in Chapter 222.

le tronc
a trunk
Introduced in Chapter 254.

le trottoir
a pavement
Introduced in Chapter 108.

le tunnel
a tunnel
Introduced in Chapter 253.

le vase
a vase
Introduced in Chapter 228.

le vélo
a bicycle
Introduced in Chapter 106.

le vendeur
a shop assistant
Introduced in Chapter 123.

le vent
the wind
Introduced in Chapter 84.

le ventre
stomach — masculine, nasal like la main but through a different vowel, and the word that closes four chapters of everyday nouns Introduced in Chapter 35.

le verre
a glass
Introduced in Chapter 76.

le veuf
a widower
Introduced in Chapter 197.

le village
a village
Introduced in Chapter 101.

le vin
wine — the word that refused to wear down, in any language
Introduced in Chapter 13.

le vinaigre
vinegar
Introduced in Chapter 122.

le violon
a violin
Introduced in Chapter 256.

le visage
the face
Introduced in Chapter 50.

le voisin
a neighbour
Introduced in Chapter 58.

le volant
a steering wheel
Introduced in Chapter 199.

le volcan
a volcano
Introduced in Chapter 171.

le vote
a vote
Introduced in Chapter 248.

le voyage
a journey, a trip
Introduced in Chapter 110.

le yaourt
a yoghurt
Introduced in Chapter 71.

léger
light (not heavy)
Introduced in Chapter 93.

lequel / laquelle
which one Introduced in Chapter 139.

les bagages
luggage
Introduced in Chapter 199.

les bottes
boots
Introduced in Chapter 117.

les chaussettes
socks
Introduced in Chapter 105.

les chaussures
shoes
Introduced in Chapter 104.

les ciseaux
scissors
Introduced in Chapter 221.

les déchets
rubbish
Introduced in Chapter 255.

les devoirs
homework
Introduced in Chapter 127.

les élections
elections
Introduced in Chapter 248.

les gants
gloves
Introduced in Chapter 116.

les haricots
beans
Introduced in Chapter 119.

les légumes
vegetables
Introduced in Chapter 119.

les lunettes
glasses
Introduced in Chapter 79.

les mathématiques
mathematics
Introduced in Chapter 257.

les pâtes
pasta
Introduced in Chapter 72.

les soldes
the sales
Introduced in Chapter 198.

les urgences
the emergency department
Introduced in Chapter 243.

les vacances
holidays
Introduced in Chapter 110.

les vêtements
clothes
Introduced in Chapter 103.

libre
free
Introduced in Chapter 131.

lire
to read — from a Latin verb that first meant "to gather," which is why reading, electing, collecting and being elegant all turn out to be the same act
Introduced in Chapter 29.

lisse
smooth
Introduced in Chapter 244.

livrer
to deliver
Introduced in Chapter 150.

loin
far Introduced in Chapter 96.

loin de far from
Introduced in Chapter 188.

lointain / lointaine distant
Introduced in Chapter 192.

louer
to rent
Introduced in Chapter 235.

lourd
heavy
Introduced in Chapter 93.

lui et elle
him and her, standing alone — where elle is the same word twice and lui is not Introduced in Chapter 43.

lundi
Monday — the Moon's day
Introduced in Chapter 7.

mai
May — the month of Maia, goddess of growth
Introduced in Chapter 9.

maigrir
to lose weight
Introduced in Chapter 242.

maintenant
now
Introduced in Chapter 96.

mais
but — Latin magis, more, which stayed more in Spanish and became but only here Introduced in Chapter 40.

malade
ill, sick
Introduced in Chapter 54.

malgré
despite
Introduced in Chapter 189.

malheureusement
unfortunately Introduced in Chapter 189.

manger
to eat
Introduced in Chapter 61.

manquer
to miss, to be missing
Introduced in Chapter 237.

marcher
to walk — and also to work, so ça marche is the most useful two words in the chapter; its own origin is genuinely unsettled between a Frankish verb and a Latin hammer Introduced in Chapter 30.

mardi
Tuesday — the day of Mars
Introduced in Chapter 7.

marié / mariée
married
Introduced in Chapter 162.

marron
brown (chestnut)
Introduced in Chapter 130.

mars
March — the war-god's month, and the old start of the year
Introduced in Chapter 9.

me
me / myself (reflexive and object pronoun)
Introduced in Chapter 2.

méchant
nasty, mean
Introduced in Chapter 133.

mélanger
to mix
Introduced in Chapter 240.

merci
thank you
Introduced in Chapter 3.

mercredi
Wednesday — the day of Mercury
Introduced in Chapter 7.

mériter
to deserve
Introduced in Chapter 237.

mesurer
to measure
Introduced in Chapter 234.

mettre
to put; to put on Introduced in Chapter 137.

midi
noon — literally "the day's middle"
Introduced in Chapter 8.

mille
a thousand
Introduced in Chapter 136.

mince
thin, slim
Introduced in Chapter 93.

minuit
midnight — literally "the night's middle"
Introduced in Chapter 8.

moderne modern
Introduced in Chapter 161.

moi et toi
me and you, standing alone — the heavy twins of je and tu, split by stress exactly as quoi split from que
Introduced in Chapter 43.

moins le quart
quarter to — literally "minus the quarter"
Introduced in Chapter 8.

Monsieur, Madame
sir and madam — my lord and my lady, worn down, and the two words French uses where English uses a surname Introduced in Chapter 44.

montrer
to show
Introduced in Chapter 62.

mouillé
wet
Introduced in Chapter 95.

mourir
to die
Introduced in Chapter 207.

mûr / mûre
ripe
Introduced in Chapter 192.

n'importe quoi
anything at all Introduced in Chapter 139.

naître
to be born
Introduced in Chapter 207.

nécessaire
necessary
Introduced in Chapter 191.

neiger
to snow
Introduced in Chapter 178.

nerveux / nerveuse
nervous
Introduced in Chapter 218.

nettoyer
to clean
Introduced in Chapter 63.

neuf
nine
Introduced in Chapter 6.

noir
black — the straightforward one, straight down from Latin Introduced in Chapter 16.

non no / not Introduced in Chapter 22.

non plus neither, not either
Introduced in Chapter 139.

nourrir
to feed
Introduced in Chapter 242.

nous avons
we have — and the ending is finally something you can hear
Introduced in Chapter 17.

nous sommes
we are — and the only plural that keeps the regular ending Introduced in Chapter 19.

nouveau
new Introduced in Chapter 89.

novembre
November — the month that still says “nine”
Introduced in Chapter 10.

nuit
night (la nuit — feminine)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

obéir
to obey
Introduced in Chapter 240.

observer
to observe Introduced in Chapter 148.

occupé
busy
Introduced in Chapter 131.

octobre
October — the month that still says “eight”
Introduced in Chapter 10.

offrir
to offer
Introduced in Chapter 237.

offrir un cadeau
to give a present
Introduced in Chapter 210.

on one, people, and in practice we — a noun for man that turned into a pronoun Introduced in Chapter 41.

onze
eleven — and not “ten-one”, which is the whole surprise
Introduced in Chapter 14.

organiser
to organise Introduced in Chapter 141.

ou
or — the same three letters as the question word for where, kept apart by one accent Introduced in Chapter 40.

où
where — and the accent that separates it from a completely different word Introduced in Chapter 36.

oublier
to forget
Introduced in Chapter 63.

oui
yes
Introduced in Chapter 22.

ouvert
open
Introduced in Chapter 131.

ouvrir
to open — an -ir verb that takes -er endings, from a Latin verb reshaped to look like its own opposite, and the source of English overt and overture Introduced in Chapter 31.

parce que
because — three words fused into two, par ce que, ’by this that’
Introduced in Chapter 40.

pareil / pareille
the same
Introduced in Chapter 219.

paresseux / paresseuse
lazy
Introduced in Chapter 246.

parfois
sometimes
Introduced in Chapter 98.

parler
to speak / to talk (your first regular -er verb)
Introduced in Chapter 5.

partager
to share
Introduced in Chapter 179.

participer
to take part Introduced in Chapter 148.

partir en vacances
to go on holiday
Introduced in Chapter 242.

partout
everywhere
Introduced in Chapter 216.

passé simple · Präteritum · passato remoto three languages, one retreat — and it spread by contact, not coincidence Introduced in Chapter 18.

patient / patiente
patient
Introduced in Chapter 220.

pauvre
poor
Introduced in Chapter 91.

payer
to pay
Introduced in Chapter 62.

peindre
to paint
Introduced in Chapter 66.

penser
to think — from a Latin verb meaning "to weigh," which is why English pensive, ponder, compensate, expense and even the flower pansy all sit in one family Introduced in Chapter 29.

perdre
to lose
Introduced in Chapter 63.

permettre
to allow Introduced in Chapter 177.

peser to weigh
Introduced in Chapter 234.

peureux / peureuse
fearful
Introduced in Chapter 190.

photographier
to photograph
Introduced in Chapter 233.

plaisanter
to joke
Introduced in Chapter 242.

plein
full Introduced in Chapter 90.

pleurer
to cry
Introduced in Chapter 60.

plier
to fold
Introduced in Chapter 148.

poli / polie
polite
Introduced in Chapter 159.

ponctuel / ponctuelle
punctual
Introduced in Chapter 220.

porter
to carry; to wear
Introduced in Chapter 65.

posséder
to own
Introduced in Chapter 148.

pourquoi
why — and the answer word that is built to match it Introduced in Chapter 36.

poursuivre
to chase
Introduced in Chapter 212.

pourtant
however, yet
Introduced in Chapter 158.

pousser
to push
Introduced in Chapter 181.

pouvoir
can — the verb that turns a demand into a request Introduced in Chapter 37.

préférer
to prefer
Introduced in Chapter 138.

prendre
to take — the grasping verb English borrowed a dozen times over, from prehensile to prison to surprise Introduced in Chapter 28.

préparer
to prepare
Introduced in Chapter 180.

près
near
Introduced in Chapter 96.

près de near to Introduced in Chapter 188.

présenter
to introduce Introduced in Chapter 180.

presque
almost
Introduced in Chapter 217.

prêt / prête
ready
Introduced in Chapter 245.

prêter
to lend Introduced in Chapter 180.

prévenir
to warn
Introduced in Chapter 208.

prévoir
to foresee, to plan for Introduced in Chapter 141.

prier
to pray
Introduced in Chapter 151.

prochain
next Introduced in Chapter 132.

profiter
to enjoy, to make the most of Introduced in Chapter 209.

profond / profonde
deep Introduced in Chapter 160.

promettre
to promise
Introduced in Chapter 177.

proposer
to propose
Introduced in Chapter 180.

propre
clean
Introduced in Chapter 244.

protéger
to protect Introduced in Chapter 177.

puis
then Introduced in Chapter 96.

quand
when — and a silent d that comes back to life
Introduced in Chapter 36.

quarante
forty Introduced in Chapter 105.

quatorze
fourteen — the longest of the welded teens, and the least worn Introduced in Chapter 14.

quatre
four
Introduced in Chapter 6.

quatre-vingt-dix ninety Introduced in Chapter 136.

que
what — the partner of qui, and the one that always elides
Introduced in Chapter 43.

Quel âge as-tu ?
asking someone's age — a fixed phrase you can use whole
Introduced in Chapter 17.

qui
who — Latin quis, unchanged in twenty centuries, and the shortest question in French Introduced in Chapter 43.

quinze
fifteen — and the fortnight the French count in Introduced in Chapter 14.

quoi
what, standing on its own — the stressed twin of que, and the one that survives after a preposition Introduced in Chapter 43.

ralentir
to slow down
Introduced in Chapter 151.

ramasser
to pick up
Introduced in Chapter 180.

ranger
to tidy up
Introduced in Chapter 242.

rapide
fast
Introduced in Chapter 89.

rarement
rarely Introduced in Chapter 156.

réaliser
to achieve
Introduced in Chapter 210.

récemment
recently Introduced in Chapter 140.

recevoir
to receive
Introduced in Chapter 65.

recommander
to recommend
Introduced in Chapter 151.

reconnaître
to recognise Introduced in Chapter 210.

reculer
to move back
Introduced in Chapter 152.

réduire
to reduce Introduced in Chapter 238.

refroidir
to cool down
Introduced in Chapter 206.

refuser
to refuse Introduced in Chapter 238.

regarder
to look at, to watch
Introduced in Chapter 64.

remarquer
to notice
Introduced in Chapter 153.

remercier
to thank Introduced in Chapter 175.

remplacer
to replace
Introduced in Chapter 153.

remplir
to fill
Introduced in Chapter 234.

remplir un formulaire
to fill in a form
Introduced in Chapter 145.

rencontrer
to meet
Introduced in Chapter 153.

rendre
to give back
Introduced in Chapter 210.

renoncer
to give up
Introduced in Chapter 183.

réparer
to repair
Introduced in Chapter 233.

repasser
to iron
Introduced in Chapter 233.

répéter
to repeat
Introduced in Chapter 233.

répondre
to answer
Introduced in Chapter 137.

réserver
to book
Introduced in Chapter 205.

résoudre
to solve Introduced in Chapter 238.

respirer
to breathe
Introduced in Chapter 151.

ressembler
to look like
Introduced in Chapter 181.

revenir
to come back
Introduced in Chapter 62.

rêver
to dream
Introduced in Chapter 149.

riche
rich
Introduced in Chapter 91.

rien
nothing
Introduced in Chapter 139.

rire
to laugh
Introduced in Chapter 59.

risquer
to risk
Introduced in Chapter 238.

rond
round
Introduced in Chapter 94.

rose pink Introduced in Chapter 130.

rouge
red — and English red is not a lookalike but an actual cousin Introduced in Chapter 16.

rougir
to blush
Introduced in Chapter 153.

rugueux / rugueuse
rough Introduced in Chapter 244.

s'amuser
to have fun
Introduced in Chapter 146.

s'approcher
to come near Introduced in Chapter 150.

s'asseoir
to sit down — a verb you do to yourself, from Latin sedēre, and the one French verb that ships with two accepted sets of forms Introduced in Chapter 31.

s'éloigner
to move away
Introduced in Chapter 150.

s'ennuyer
to be bored
Introduced in Chapter 146.

s'habiller
to get dressed
Introduced in Chapter 138.

s'habituer
to get used to Introduced in Chapter 239.

s'il vous plaît
please (literally "if it pleases you")
Introduced in Chapter 23.

s'inquiéter
to worry
Introduced in Chapter 146.

saigner
to bleed
Introduced in Chapter 153.

sale
dirty
Introduced in Chapter 92.

salé
salty
Introduced in Chapter 94.

saluer
to greet
Introduced in Chapter 175.

salut
hi / bye (informal)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

samedi
Saturday — the Sabbath day
Introduced in Chapter 7.

sauter
to jump
Introduced in Chapter 143.

sauver
to rescue
Introduced in Chapter 177.

savoir
to know (a fact)
Introduced in Chapter 64.

se coiffer
to do one's hair
Introduced in Chapter 235.

se dépêcher
to hurry
Introduced in Chapter 239.

se disputer
to quarrel
Introduced in Chapter 145.

se fâcher
to get angry
Introduced in Chapter 146.

se lever, debout
to stand — French has no single verb for it, so the movement is se lever ("to lighten yourself") and the state is être debout, literally "on end"
Introduced in Chapter 31.

se plaindre
to complain
Introduced in Chapter 209.

se produire
to happen, to occur
Introduced in Chapter 140.

se promener
to go for a walk
Introduced in Chapter 148.

se rendre compte
to realise
Introduced in Chapter 239.

se reposer
to rest
Introduced in Chapter 235.

se réveiller
to wake up
Introduced in Chapter 235.

se taire
to be silent
Introduced in Chapter 211.

sec
dry
Introduced in Chapter 94.

sécher
to dry
Introduced in Chapter 205.

seize
sixteen — the last word French inherited already welded Introduced in Chapter 14.

semblable
similar Introduced in Chapter 245.

sembler
to seem Introduced in Chapter 149.

sentir
to feel; to smell
Introduced in Chapter 65.

sept seven Introduced in Chapter 6.

septembre
September — the month that still says “seven”
Introduced in Chapter 10.

sérieux / sérieuse
serious
Introduced in Chapter 190.

serrer
to squeeze
Introduced in Chapter 213.

servir
to serve
Introduced in Chapter 149.

seulement
only Introduced in Chapter 217.

signer
to sign
Introduced in Chapter 145.

silencieux / silencieuse
silent
Introduced in Chapter 244.

simple
simple
Introduced in Chapter 191.

six
six
Introduced in Chapter 6.

skier
to ski
Introduced in Chapter 183.

soir
evening (le soir — masculine)
Introduced in Chapter 1.

soixante
sixty
Introduced in Chapter 136.

soixante-dix seventy Introduced in Chapter 136.

sombre
dark
Introduced in Chapter 192.

soudain
suddenly Introduced in Chapter 187.

souffrir
to suffer
Introduced in Chapter 149.

soulever
to lift
Introduced in Chapter 213.

soupçonner
to suspect
Introduced in Chapter 213.

sourire
to smile
Introduced in Chapter 143.

souvent
often Introduced in Chapter 98.

sucré
sweet (with sugar)
Introduced in Chapter 93.

suffire
to be enough
Introduced in Chapter 236.

suggérer
to suggest
Introduced in Chapter 213.

sûr / sûre
safe, sure
Introduced in Chapter 160.

surprendre
to surprise
Introduced in Chapter 213.

sympathique
nice, friendly
Introduced in Chapter 133.

tard
late
Introduced in Chapter 187.

télécharger
to download
Introduced in Chapter 183.

téléphoner
to phone
Introduced in Chapter 145.

tenir
to hold
Introduced in Chapter 176.

tenter
to attempt Introduced in Chapter 211.

timide
shy
Introduced in Chapter 190.

tirer
to pull
Introduced in Chapter 181.

toucher
to touch
Introduced in Chapter 206.

toujours always; still
Introduced in Chapter 95.

tourner
to turn
Introduced in Chapter 179.

tousser
to cough
Introduced in Chapter 241.

traduire
to translate
Introduced in Chapter 144.

tranquille
quiet, peaceful
Introduced in Chapter 218.

transporter
to transport
Introduced in Chapter 211.

travailler
to work (a third -er verb — and the origin of “travel”)
Introduced in Chapter 5.

travailleur / travailleuse hard-working Introduced in Chapter 246.

traverser
to cross
Introduced in Chapter 208.

treize
thirteen — three-ten, with both halves now legible Introduced in Chapter 14.

trembler
to tremble
Introduced in Chapter 241.

trente
thirty Introduced in Chapter 105.

très
very — Latin trans, 'across', which crossed over into an intensifier and takes no de at all Introduced in Chapter 44.

triste
sad
Introduced in Chapter 56.

trois
three Introduced in Chapter 6.

trouver
to find
Introduced in Chapter 67.

tu / vous
you (familiar / formal)
Introduced in Chapter 2.

tu as you have — the informal one, and it sounds exactly like the last one Introduced in Chapter 17.

tu es
you are — two letters, and it sounds like a single vowel Introduced in Chapter 19.

tuer
to kill
Introduced in Chapter 211.

un
one — and, at the same time, "a/an"
Introduced in Chapter 6.

un an, des ans
a year — and the annual, the anniversary and the annals inside it Introduced in Chapter 17.

un peu
a little — the opposite end of the same scale, and the same bare de after it Introduced in Chapter 44.

unir
to unite
Introduced in Chapter 239.

utile
useful
Introduced in Chapter 191.

utiliser
to use
Introduced in Chapter 62.

valoir
to be worth
Introduced in Chapter 239.

vendredi
Friday — the day of Venus
Introduced in Chapter 7.

vérifier
to check
Introduced in Chapter 234.

vert, jaune
green and yellow — vert is the standard, expected Latin viridis descendant shared by nearly every Romance language; jaune comes from a Latin word that literally meant "yellow-GREEN," and is usually said to share its ultimate PIE root with German's gelb, though that particular link is less secure than it first appears Introduced in Chapter 27.

vide
empty
Introduced in Chapter 90.

vider
to empty
Introduced in Chapter 234.

vieillir
to grow old
Introduced in Chapter 207.

vieux
old
Introduced in Chapter 89.

vingt
twenty — a single inherited word again, and the base French will later count in Introduced in Chapter 15.

violet
purple
Introduced in Chapter 130.

visiter
to visit (a place)
Introduced in Chapter 137.

vivre
to live
Introduced in Chapter 61.

voici
here is — a frozen command, see here, and the word that lets you introduce somebody who is not you Introduced in Chapter 38.

voler
to fly, to steal
Introduced in Chapter 238.

voter to vote
Introduced in Chapter 241.

vouloir
to want — and why je voudrais is the form you will actually use Introduced in Chapter 37.

vous avez
you have — plural, and polite to one person
Introduced in Chapter 17.

vous êtes
you are — and the circumflex marks the s that used to be there Introduced in Chapter 19.

vraiment
really
Introduced in Chapter 189.

zéro
zero
Introduced in Chapter 136.

Review Questions

Try these without looking ahead. Every prompt comes from the same canonical lesson data as its chapter. Answers begin in the next section.

Chapter 1

1.1 salut — let your eye and hand meet one known word
Which written letter stays silent at the end of salut?

1.2 salut — one supported copy
Copy the visible word salut once, then report how many letters you wrote.

1.3 salut — look, hide, write, compare
After hiding the model for five seconds, write the casual greeting and then compare it.

1.4 One heard greeting — write what you know
From the heard cue sa-LU alone, write the known casual greeting.

Chapter 22

22.1 (oui, continued) — The other "yes," si
French has two words for yes. Which one contradicts a negative?

Chapter 45

45.1 (reading) — six things you would be told
Which line tells you to listen?

45.2 (reading) — six lines off a form
How old is she?

45.3 (reading) — the first paragraph
Where does she live?

Answer Key

The first response is the canonical display answer. When a question accepts other authored forms, they appear underneath.

Chapter 1

1.1 salut — let your eye and hand meet one known word
Answer: t
Also accepted: the final t; final t

1.2 salut — one supported copy
Answer: salut — five letters
Also accepted: salut; 5; five

1.3 salut — look, hide, write, compare
Answer: salut

1.4 One heard greeting — write what you know
Answer: salut

Chapter 22

22.1 (oui, continued) — The other "yes," si
Answer: si
Also accepted: si!

Chapter 45

45.1 (reading) — six things you would be told Answer: ecoute
Also accepted: Écoute; Écoute !; listen

45.2 (reading) — six lines off a form
Answer: twenty
Also accepted: vingt; vingt ans; 20

45.3 (reading) — the first paragraph
Answer: paris
Also accepted: à Paris

Index

Look up an English meaning, a dedicated language topic, or a chapter topic. Each linked reference opens the chapter where the material is introduced; the focus labels name only explicitly typed lesson sections.

A

a baby le bébé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 58, p. 487
a bag le sac
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 609
a baker le boulanger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 889
a bakery la boulangerie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 753
a balcony le balcon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 1131
a ball le ballon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 1191
a ban l'interdiction
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 1161
a banana la banane
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 547
a bank la banque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 735
a bank account le compte bancaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1509
a bank card la carte bancaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1509
a banknote le billet de banque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1341
a bathroom la salle de bain
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 583

a bathtub la baignoire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 815
a battery la batterie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1491
a beach la plage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 633
a bear l'ours
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 657
a bedroom la chambre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 583
a bee l'abeille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 663
a belt la ceinture
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 839
a bicycle le vélo
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 779
a bill, an invoice la facture
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 1001
a bin la poubelle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 827
a bird l'oiseau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 651
a birthday l'anniversaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1695
a biscuit le biscuit
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 871
a blanket la couverture
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 821
a block of flats l'immeuble
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1671
a board; a painting le tableau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 901
a booking la réservation
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 1137
a border la frontière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 797
a bottle la bouteille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 601
a box la boîte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 621
a branch la branche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1521
a brick la brique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1365

a bride la mariée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1335
a bridegroom le marié
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1335
a bridge le pont
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 741
a broom le balai
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 827
a building site le chantier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1671
a butcher le boucher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1329
a butcher's la boucherie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 1137
a butterfly le papillon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1317
a button le bouton
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1479
a cake le gâteau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 553
a cap la casquette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 847
a car la voiture
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 741
a car park le parking
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 779
a career la carrière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1377
a carrot la carotte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 553
a cash machine le distributeur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1509
a castle le château
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 1173
a cave la grotte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1677
a ceiling le plafond
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 595
a cellar la cave
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1353
a century le siècle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 957
a chair la chaise
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 577

a championship le championnat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1371
a charger le chargeur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1491
a cheek la joue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 445
a cherry la cerise
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 865
a choice le choix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1503
a church l'église
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 741
a cinema le cinéma
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 785
a class; a classroom la classe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 901
a clean split down Europe — Romance HAS its years, Germanic IS its years j'ai vingt ans / I am twenty
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 17, p. 195
a cloud le nuage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 639
a coach l'entraîneur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1371
a coat le manteau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 765
a coin, a room la pièce
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1341
a cold le rhume
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1263
a colleague le collègue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 1197
a colour la couleur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 921
a comb le peigne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 827
a company l'entreprise
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 1197
a computer l'ordinateur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 809
a concert le concert
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1491
a connection la correspondance
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1371
a contract le contrat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 1197

a cook le cuisinier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 883
a corridor le couloir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 595
a cough la toux
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 457
a court le tribunal
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1485
a cousin (female) la cousine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 481
a cow la vache
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 651
a crossroads le carrefour
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 791
a cucumber le concombre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 859
a cup la tasse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 601
a cupboard le placard
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 595
a curtain le rideau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 815
a customer le client
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 895
a date la date
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 957
a daughter; a girl la fille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 475
a daughter-in-law la belle-fille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 1155
a debt la dette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1509
a decision la décision
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1503
a defeat la défaite
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1371
a dentist le dentiste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 1149
a desert le désert
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 645
a dessert le dessert
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 877
a destination la destination
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1539

a dialect le dialecte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1323
a dictionary le dictionnaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1545
a diet le régime
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1611
a difference la différence
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1659
a dining room la salle à manger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 1131
a discount la réduction
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1341
a district, a neighbourhood le quartier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 759
a doctor le médecin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 457
a doorbell la sonnette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 1131
a drawer le tiroir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1311
a drawing le dessin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 921
a dream le rêve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 1081
a dress la robe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 759
a driver le chauffeur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 889
a driving licence le permis de conduire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1671
a drum le tambour
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1689
a duck le canard
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 657
a factory l'usine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 791
a farmer l'agriculteur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 883
a fence la clôture
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1353
a fever la fièvre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 457
a fiancé le fiancé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 1155

a fiancée la fiancée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 1155
a film le film
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 915
a fine l'amende
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1515
a finger le doigt
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 433
a firefighter le pompier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 895
a flame la flamme
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1359
a flat l'appartement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 1131
a flower la fleur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 627
a fly la mouche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1317
a folder, a file le dossier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 1167
a foot le pied
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 433
a foreigner l'étranger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1653
a fork la fourchette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 601
a form le formulaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1665
a fountain la fontaine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 1173
a fox le renard
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 657
a fridge le réfrigérateur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 809
a frog la grenouille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 669
a fruit le fruit
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 541
a frying pan la poêle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1311
a game le jeu
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 915
a garden le jardin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 583

a gate le portail
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1353
a glass le verre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 595
a goat la chèvre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 663
a granddaughter la petite-fille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 58, p. 487
a grandfather le grand-père
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 475
a grandmother la grand-mère
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 475
a grandson le petit-fils
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 58, p. 487
a grocer's shop l'épicerie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 785
a guest l'invité
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 58, p. 487
a guide, a guidebook le guide
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 1167
a guitar la guitare
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1689
a gym la salle de sport
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 1191
a hammer le marteau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1533
a hat le chapeau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 765
a helmet le casque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1671
a hen la poule
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 657
a hill la colline
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 645
a hospital l'hôpital
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 463
a hotel l'hôtel
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 747
a hundred cent
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 771
a husband le mari
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 481
a jacket la veste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 839

a jewel, a piece of jewellery le bijou
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 853
a journalist le journaliste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 1149
a journey, a trip le voyage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 803
a judge le juge
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1485
a key la clé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 577
a keyboard le clavier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1323
a kidney le rein
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 1075
a kitchen; cooking la cuisine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 577
a knee le genou
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 439
a knife le couteau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 601
a label l'étiquette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 1167
a ladder l'échelle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1533
a lamp la lampe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 583
a landscape le paysage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1539
a large river le fleuve
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 1137
a law la loi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1485
a lawn la pelouse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1677
a lawyer; an avocado l'avocat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 889
a leaf; a sheet of paper la feuille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 627
a leg la jambe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 433
a lemon le citron
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 565
a lesson la leçon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 901

a letter la lettre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 853
a letterbox, a postbox la boîte aux lettres
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 797
a library la bibliothèque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 753
a lie le mensonge
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1659
a lift, an elevator l'ascenseur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 779
a lion le lion
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 663
a lip la lèvre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 951
a little — the opposite end of the same scale, and the same bare de after it un peu
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 415
a living room le salon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 589
a loan le prêt
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 226, p. 1509
a lock la serrure
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 163, p. 1131
a lot — a beautiful blow, two words fused, and the p that never sounds beaucoup
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 415
a lung le poumon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 1075
a magazine le magazine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1545
a map; a card la carte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 621
a mayor le maire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1641
a meal le repas
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 877
a mechanic le mécanicien
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1329
a medical appointment la consultation
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1611
a medicine le médicament
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 457
a meeting la réunion
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 1197

a melon le melon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 865
a mirror le miroir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 589
a mistake l'erreur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1545
a mobile phone le téléphone portable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1377
a monkey le singe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 663
a month le mois
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 711
a monument le monument
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 1173
a mosquito le moustique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1317
a mother-in-law la belle-mère
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 1155
a motorbike la moto
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1635
a motorway l'autoroute
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1515
a mountain la montagne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 627
a mouse la souris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 651
a muscle le muscle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1263
a museum le musée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 741
a mushroom le champignon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 859
a nail (finger or toe) l'ongle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 445
a nail for hammering le clou
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1533
a necklace le collier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 853
a needle l'aiguille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1533
a neighbour le voisin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 58, p. 487
a nephew le neveu
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 59, p. 493

a niece la nièce
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 59, p. 493
a notebook le cahier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 609
a notice, an opinion l'avis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 1001
a number (on a door, a phone) le numéro
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 951
a nurse l'infirmière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 883
a painter le peintre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1647
a parcel le colis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1665
a park le parc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 100, p. 741
a passport le passeport
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 1137
a path le sentier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1677
a pavement le trottoir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 791
a pay slip la fiche de paie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 1167
a peach la pêche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1479
a pear la poire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 559
a pebble le caillou
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 1179
a pen le stylo
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 609
a pencil le crayon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 609
a pharmacist le pharmacien
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 1149
a pharmacy la pharmacie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 747
a phone le téléphone
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 615
a photo la photo
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 621
a photographer le photographe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 1149

a piano le piano
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1689
a piece of news la nouvelle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1323
a pig le cochon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 651
a pillow l'oreiller
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 821
a pilot le pilote
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1497
a plain la plaine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 1179
a plan, a project le projet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 995
a plant la plante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1521
a plaster, a dressing le pansement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1611
a plate l'assiette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 76, p. 595
a platform le quai
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1635
a player le joueur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 203, p. 1371
a plumber le plombier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1329
a pocket la poche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 833
a poem le poème
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1647
a police officer le policier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 883
a possibility la possibilité
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1503
a postcard la carte postale
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 169, p. 1167
a postman, a postwoman le facteur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 895
a potato la pomme de terre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 547
a prescription l'ordonnance
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1443
a present, a gift le cadeau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 615

a price; a prize le prix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 921
a printer l'imprimante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1377
a problem le problème
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 907
a promise la promesse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1341
a pupil l'élève
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 59, p. 493
a rabbit le lapin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 669
a racket la raquette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 1191
a radio la radio
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 809
a reason la raison
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1503
a red light le feu rouge
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 791
a researcher le chercheur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1497
a restaurant le restaurant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 747 a result le résultat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1659
a ring la bague
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 853
a river la rivière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 627
a rock le rocher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 1179
a roof le toit
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 74, p. 583
a root la racine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1521
a rope la corde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1365
a rubber, an eraser la gomme
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 907
a rug, a carpet le tapis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 809
a rule la règle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 1161

a salad; lettuce la salade
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 571
a salary le salaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 174, p. 1197
a sandwich le sandwich
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 877
a sauce la sauce
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 877
a saucepan la casserole
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1311
a scar la cicatrice
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1263
a scarf l'écharpe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 839
a school l'école
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 735
a scientist le scientifique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1497
a screen l'écran
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1323
a seat le siège
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1347
a second la seconde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 957
a seed la graine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1521
a sheep le mouton
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 87, p. 663
a sheet le drap
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1311
a sheet of paper la feuille de papier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1377
a shelf l'étagère
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 815
a shirt la chemise
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 759
a shop le magasin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 735
a shop assistant le vendeur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 123, p. 883
a shoulder l'épaule
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 439
a show le spectacle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1491

a shower la douche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 815
a singer le chanteur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 223, p. 1491
a skirt la jupe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 765
a small bag le sachet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1365
a snake le serpent
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 86, p. 657
a sofa le canapé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 589
a soldier le soldat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 1143
a son-in-law le gendre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 167, p. 1155
a song la chanson
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 915
a soup la soupe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 553
a spoon la cuillère
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 77, p. 601
a stadium le stade
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 785
a stamp le timbre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1665
a star l'étoile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 639
a statue la statue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 1173
a steering wheel le volant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1347
a stone la pierre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 633
a stop l'arrêt
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1635
a storm l'orage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 945
a strawberry la fraise
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 865
a street la rue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 729
a student l'étudiant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 889

a suitcase la valise
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 621
a supermarket le supermarché
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 785
a swimming pool la piscine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 107, p. 785
a swimsuit; a sports shirt le maillot
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 847
a syrup le sirop
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1443
a tablet (medicine) le comprimé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1443
a tax l'impôt
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1665
a taxi le taxi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 779
a teacher le professeur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 59, p. 493
a team l'équipe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1695
a television la télévision
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 111, p. 809
a theatre le théâtre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 753
a thorn l'épine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1677
a thousand mille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 963
a thread, a wire le fil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 230, p. 1533
a thumb le pouce
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1263
a ticket; a banknote le billet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 80, p. 621
a tie la cravate
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 839
a tiger le tigre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 669
a till, a checkout la caisse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 895
a time, an occasion la fois
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 921
a tip le pourboire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1635

a toll le péage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1515
a tomato la tomate
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 547
a tool l'outil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1689
a tooth la dent
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 433
a toothbrush la brosse à dents
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 821
a tortoise la tortue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 675
a tourist le touriste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1653
a towel; a napkin la serviette
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 821
a tower la tour
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 170, p. 1173
a town, a city la ville
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 729
a tradition la tradition
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 1143
a train le train
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 735
a tree l'arbre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 81, p. 627
a trunk le tronc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 254, p. 1677
a tunnel le tunnel
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 253, p. 1671
a twin le jumeau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1653
a university l'université
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1545
a vacuum cleaner l'aspirateur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 833
a valley la vallée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1317
a vase le vase
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 228, p. 1521
a vegetable garden le potager
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1353
a victory la victoire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 1191

a village le village
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 747
a violin le violon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 256, p. 1689
a volcano le volcan
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 1179
a vote le vote
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1641
a waiter le serveur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 125, p. 895
a wall le mur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 577
a wallet le portefeuille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 847
a walnut, a nut la noix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 571
a wardrobe l'armoire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 112, p. 815
a watch la montre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1479
a waterfall la cascade
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 171, p. 1179
a wave la vague
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 645
a week la semaine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 711
a wheel la roue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1515
a widower le veuf
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1335
a window la fenêtre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 73, p. 577
a wolf le loup
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 85, p. 651
a woman; a wife la femme
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 481
a word le mot
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 901
a worker l'ouvrier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1329
a wound la blessure
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 185, p. 1263
a wrist le poignet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 451

a writer l'écrivain
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1647
a year — and the annual, the anniversary and the annals inside it un an, des ans
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
a yoghurt le yaourt
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 565
about, approximately environ
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1455
above au-dessus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 1093
Above, Below, In front, Behind, Beside
chapter topic; Chapter 157, p. 1093
Actor, Actress, Poem, Writer, Painter
chapter topic; Chapter 249, p. 1647
advertising la publicité
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 195, p. 1323
advice le conseil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 1161
afterwards, next ensuite
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 1087
ai · as · a — three spellings, one ear
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 17, p. 195
aller · venir · naître · mourir — the shape of the list
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
almost presque
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1455
Almost, About, Only, Together, Nevertheless
chapter topic; Chapter 217, p. 1455
already déjà
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 989
Already, Recently, the Day before Yesterday, Formerly, To Happen
chapter topic; Chapter 140, p. 989
although bien que
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 1099
always; still toujours
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 711
an accountant le comptable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1497
an actor l'acteur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1647
an actress l'actrice
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 249, p. 1647

an address l'adresse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 951
an adult l'adulte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1653
an advert, an announcement l'annonce
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 1001
an aeroplane l'avion
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 99, p. 735
an airport l'aéroport
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 759
an ankle la cheville
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 451
an answer la réponse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 907
an ant la fourmi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 669
an apple la pomme
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 541
an architect l'architecte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 166, p. 1149
an arm le bras
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 49, p. 433
an armchair le fauteuil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 193, p. 1311
an army l'armée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 1143
an attic le grenier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 200, p. 1353
an aunt la tante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 481
an ear l'oreille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 951
an elbow le coude
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 451
an elderly person la personne âgée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 250, p. 1653
an electrician l'électricien
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 196, p. 1329
an elephant l'éléphant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 88, p. 669
an email le courriel
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 957
an emergency l'urgence
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1611

an employee l'employé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 224, p. 1497
an engine le moteur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 227, p. 1515
an engineer l'ingénieur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 124, p. 889
an entrance l'entrée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1347
an envelope l'enveloppe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 252, p. 1665
an exam l'examen
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 126, p. 901
an example l'exemple
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1659
an exit la sortie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1347
an idea l'idée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 907
an illness la maladie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 463
an interview l'entretien
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 204, p. 1377
an island l'île
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 633
an office; a desk le bureau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 108, p. 791
an ointment la pommade
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1443
an onion l'oignon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 547
an orange l'orange
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 68, p. 547
an umbrella le parapluie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 615
an uncle l'oncle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 57, p. 481
and — Latin et unchanged, and a t that never joins to the next word et explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 383
anger la colère
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 469
angry fâché / fâchée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1629
Ant, Elephant, Rabbit, Frog, Tiger
chapter topic; Chapter 88, p. 669

anxiety l'angoisse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 1081
anything at all n'importe quoi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 983
anyway de toute façon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 1099
April — perhaps the opening month avril
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 9, p. 113
Arm, Leg, Foot, Finger, Tooth
chapter topic; Chapter 49, p. 433
around autour
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1449
Around, Everywhere, Elsewhere, Up there, Suburbs
chapter topic; Chapter 216, p. 1449
arrival l'arrivée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1539
art l'art
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1695
Asking a Question — Three Ways, and Which One to Use
chapter topic; Chapter 36, p. 349
asking someone's age — a fixed phrase you can use whole Quel âge as-tu ?
explicit focus: pronunciation; Chapter 17, p. 195 at the bottom, at the back au fond
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1281
-ātum · -ītum · -ūtum — where the endings came from
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 18, p. 213
au, aux — where à and le melt together
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 375
au printemps, en été — saying you are in a season
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 11, p. 133
August — the month renamed for the emperor Augustus août
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 10, p. 123
autumn — the season English borrowed whole l'automne
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 11, p. 133

B

Baker, Student, Driver, Lawyer, Engineer
chapter topic; Chapter 124, p. 889
Ball, Racket, Gym, Swimming, Victory
chapter topic; Chapter 173, p. 1191
Banana, Orange, Potato, Tomato, Onion
chapter topic; Chapter 68, p. 547

Bank card, Cash machine, Bank account, Loan, Debt
chapter topic; Chapter 226, p. 1509
Battery, Charger, Singer, Concert, Show
chapter topic; Chapter 223, p. 1491
beans les haricots
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 859
Bear, Fox, Snake, Hen, Duck
chapter topic; Chapter 86, p. 657
because — three words fused into two, par ce que, 'by this that' parce que
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 383
beef; an ox le bœuf
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 859
Beef, Vegetables, Mushroom, Beans, Cucumber
chapter topic; Chapter 119, p. 859
beer la bière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 871
Beer, Juice, Ice cream, Chocolate, Biscuit
chapter topic; Chapter 121, p. 871
behind derrière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 1093
below au-dessous
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 1093
beside à côté
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 1093
Bicycle, Underground, Taxi, Car park, Lift
chapter topic; Chapter 106, p. 779
big, fat gros
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 699
Bill, Tip, Stop, Motorbike, Platform
chapter topic; Chapter 247, p. 1635
bitter amer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 705
black — the straightforward one, straight down from Latin noir
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 16, p. 183
blood le sang
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 439
blue — a Germanic word that went to France, changed clothes, and came back bleu
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 16, p. 183
boots les bottes
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 847
Boots, Cap, Swimsuit, Size, Wallet
chapter topic; Chapter 117, p. 847

Border, North, South, West, Letterbox
chapter topic; Chapter 109, p. 797 boring ennuyeux / ennuyeuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1467
Boring, Fun, Strange, Different, Same
chapter topic; Chapter 219, p. 1467
Box, Suitcase, Ticket, Map, Photo
chapter topic; Chapter 80, p. 621
brave courageux / courageuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1293
bread — and the companion who is, literally, someone you share it with le pain
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 13, p. 153
Bread, Water, Wine
chapter topic; Chapter 13, p. 153
breakfast le petit-déjeuner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 559
Bridegroom, Bride, Widower, Success, Failure
chapter topic; Chapter 197, p. 1335
brother — and the friar who is one le frère
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 12, p. 141
brown (chestnut) marron
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 927
brown (of hair, skin) brun
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 927
busy occupé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 933
Busy, Free, Open, Closed, Calm
chapter topic; Chapter 131, p. 933
but — Latin magis, more, which stayed more in Spanish and became but only here mais
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 383
Butcher, Mechanic, Electrician, Plumber, Worker
chapter topic; Chapter 196, p. 1329
butter — masculine, and the same borrowed word as English butter, not two separate coinages le beurre
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 34, p. 335

C

ç — the little tail that softens c script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing, etymology; Chapter 4, p. 45 calm, quiet calme
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 933

can — the verb that turns a demand into a request pouvoir
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 37, p. 359
Car, Bridge, Park, Church, Museum
chapter topic; Chapter 100, p. 741
Carrot, Cake, Soup, Honey, Oil
chapter topic; Chapter 69, p. 553
Castle, Tower, Monument, Statue, Fountain
chapter topic; Chapter 170, p. 1173
ce, cet, cette, ces — pointing at a noun
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 367
certainly certainement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1287
change (coins); currency la monnaie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 135, p. 957
cheerful joyeux / joyeuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1293
Cheerful, Serious, Shy, Brave, Fearful
chapter topic; Chapter 190, p. 1293
Cheese, Butter, Salt, Egg
chapter topic; Chapter 34, p. 335
cheese — masculine, and named for its MOULD rather than for the milk it's made from le fromage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 34, p. 335
Chest, Stomach, Ankle, Elbow, Wrist
chapter topic; Chapter 52, p. 451
chicken le poulet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 541 (chien, chat, continued) — chat
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 26, p. 279
child — one spelling for both genders, the article alone showing which; literally "not yet speaking" l'enfant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 33, p. 329
chocolate le chocolat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 871
Class, Lesson, Exam, Word, Board
chapter topic; Chapter 126, p. 901
clean propre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1617
Clean, Cut, Forget, Look for, Lose
chapter topic; Chapter 63, p. 517
clear, light (of a colour) clair / claire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1305
closed fermé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 933

clothes les vêtements
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 103, p. 759
coffee — masculine, and the one drink-word nearly all of Europe borrowed along the same single road le café
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 32, p. 323
Coffee, Tea, Milk, Sugar
chapter topic; Chapter 32, p. 323
Colours
chapter topic; Chapter 16, p. 183
Come back, Study, Pay, Use, Show
chapter topic; Chapter 62, p. 511
comfortable confortable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 1105
Comfortable, Uncomfortable, Polite, Rude, Unpleasant
chapter topic; Chapter 159, p. 1105
Comment vas-tu ? / Comment allez-vous ?
grammar topic; explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar; Chapter 3, p. 33
Company, Colleague, Salary, Meeting, Contract
chapter topic; Chapter 174, p. 1197
complicated compliqué / compliquée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1299
cooked cuit / cuite
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1305
Cooked, Ripe, Dark, Clear, Distant
chapter topic; Chapter 192, p. 1305
cotton le coton
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 1185
courage le courage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1269
Cow, Pig, Bird, Mouse, Wolf
chapter topic; Chapter 85, p. 651
cream la crème
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 571
Cry, Wash, Cook, Play, Learn
chapter topic; Chapter 60, p. 499
Cupboard, Ceiling, Corridor, Glass, Plate
chapter topic; Chapter 76, p. 595
curious curieux / curieuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1461
Curious, Jealous, Proud, Nervous, Quiet
chapter topic; Chapter 218, p. 1461
customs la douane
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 164, p. 1137

D

dangerous dangereux / dangereuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 1111
dark sombre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1305
day (le jour — masculine) jour
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
de la — the half of the partitive that was missing
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 375
dear; expensive cher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 681
December — the month that still says "ten" décembre
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 10, p. 123
deep profond / profonde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 1111
Deep, Low, Unknown, Dangerous, Safe
chapter topic; Chapter 160, p. 1111
Defeat, Championship, Player, Coach, Connection
chapter topic; Chapter 203, p. 1371
departure le départ
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1539
des — the plural of un, and the last shape of some
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 375
despite malgré
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1287
Despite, Unfortunately, Luckily, Certainly, Really
chapter topic; Chapter 189, p. 1287
Dialect, Piece of news, Advertising, Screen, Keyboard
chapter topic; Chapter 195, p. 1323
different différent / différente
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1467
difficult difficile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 681
Difficult, Dear, High, Full, Empty
chapter topic; Chapter 90, p. 681
dinner le dîner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 559
dirty sale
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 693
distant lointain / lointaine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1305
District, Airport, Clothes, Shirt, Dress
chapter topic; Chapter 103, p. 759

divorced divorcé / divorcée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 1125
Dog and Cat
chapter topic; Chapter 26, p. 279
dog and cat — chien is the REGULAR, expected descendant of canis (unlike Spanish's mysterious perro); chat continues cattus, the same Egypt-to-Rome story as Spanish's gato chien, chat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 26, p. 279
Draw, Paint, Count, Win, Hide
chapter topic; Chapter 66, p. 535
Drawing, Life, Time, Colour, Price
chapter topic; Chapter 129, p. 921
Driving licence, Helmet, Tunnel, Building site, Block of flats
chapter topic; Chapter 253, p. 1671
dry sec
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 705
du pain, de l'eau — asking for some
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 13, p. 153
dust la poussière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1359

E

é è ê — the three hats on e, and the one that hides an s
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing, usage and culture; Chapter 4, p. 45 earth, land la terre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1359
Earth, Mud, Dust, Smoke, Flame
chapter topic; Chapter 201, p. 1359
easy facile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 675
egg — masculine, a genuine cousin of English egg, and the one French noun whose final consonant vanishes only in the plural l'œuf, les œufs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 34, p. 335
eight huit
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
eighteen — free, once you have the rule dix-huit
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 15, p. 173
elections les élections
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1641
electricity l'électricité
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1683

eleven — and not "ten-one", which is the whole surprise onze
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 14, p. 161
elle est allée — the participle agrees
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
elle s'est lavée — the auxiliary lies about the rule
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
elles se sont souvenues — the verbs with no other form
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
elsewhere ailleurs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1449
Employee, Pilot, Accountant, Scientist, Researcher
chapter topic; Chapter 224, p. 1497
empty vide
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 681
energy l'énergie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1683
enough, and rather — one word doing both jobs, and it takes de before a noun and nothing before an adjective assez
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 415
Entrance, Exit, Luggage, Seat, Steering wheel
chapter topic; Chapter 199, p. 1347
esse — the first stem
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229
est-ce que — the phrase that announces a question before it starts
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
été — the third stem
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229
evening (le soir — masculine) soir
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1 everywhere partout
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1449
experience l'expérience
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 225, p. 1503
Experience, Choice, Decision, Possibility, Reason
chapter topic; Chapter 225, p. 1503
eye — masculine, with a plural that looks irregular but is the REGULAR outcome of Latin oculos; œil's own singular is the piece that changed l'œil, les yeux
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 35, p. 341
Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Stomach
chapter topic; Chapter 35, p. 341

F

failure l'échec
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1335
fair, right juste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1623
false, wrong faux / fausse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1623
Family, and the Oldest Words We Have
chapter topic; Chapter 12, p. 141
family — feminine and fixed, whoever is in it, and once meant the household's servants la famille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 33, p. 329
famous célèbre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 939
far loin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 717 far from loin de
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1281
Farewells
chapter topic; Chapter 4, p. 45
fast rapide
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 675
father — one of the oldest words anyone can reconstruct le père
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 12, p. 141
fear la peur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 469
fearful peureux / peureuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1293
February — the month of the purification festival février explicit focus: pronunciation, usage and culture; Chapter 9, p. 113 fifteen — and the fortnight the French count in quinze
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 14, p. 161
fifty cinquante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 771
finally enfin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 1087
Find, Fish, Chicken, Fruit, Apple
chapter topic; Chapter 67, p. 541
fini · vendu — the other two classes
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 18, p. 213
fire le feu
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 645
Firefighter, Postman, Waiter, Customer, Till
chapter topic; Chapter 125, p. 895

fish le poisson
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 541
five cinq
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
Five Ways to Point
chapter topic; Chapter 38, p. 367
Flat, Dining room, Balcony, Lock, Doorbell
chapter topic; Chapter 163, p. 1131
Floor, Stairs, Mirror, Living room, Sofa
chapter topic; Chapter 75, p. 589
flour la farine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 865
flu la grippe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 215, p. 1443
Flu, Prescription, Tablet, Syrup, Ointment
chapter topic; Chapter 215, p. 1443
fog le brouillard
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 945
foreign étranger / étrangère
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1473
Foreigner, Tourist, Adult, Elderly person, Twin
chapter topic; Chapter 250, p. 1653
former, ancient ancien / ancienne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 1119
formerly, in the old days autrefois
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 989
forty quarante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 771
four quatre
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
Four lines, and the joiner that moves nothing
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 48, p. 431
fourteen — the longest of the welded teens, and the least worn quatorze
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 14, p. 161
free libre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 933
free of charge gratuit / gratuite
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1623
fresh, cool frais / fraîche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 1119
Friday — the day of Venus vendredi
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 89

friend — masculine or feminine by a regular swap, and the reason le/la elides to l' before a vowel l'ami, l'amie
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 33, p. 329 friendly aimable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1473
friendship l'amitié
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1269
Friendship, Hope, Trust, Courage, Shame
chapter topic; Chapter 186, p. 1269
from now on désormais
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 1087
full plein
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 681
fun, amusing amusant / amusante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1467
funny drôle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 939

G

garlic l'ail
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 120, p. 865
gas le gaz
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1683
Gate, Fence, Cellar, Attic, Vegetable garden
chapter topic; Chapter 200, p. 1353
generous généreux / généreuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1629
Generous, Lazy, Hard-working, Talkative, Angry
chapter topic; Chapter 246, p. 1629
geography la géographie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1695
Geography, Mathematics, Art, Team, Birthday
chapter topic; Chapter 257, p. 1695
glasses les lunettes
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 615
gloves les gants
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 116, p. 839 good (adjective) bon / bonne
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
good evening bonsoir
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1
good night (going to bed) bonne nuit
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1

goodbye (literally "until the seeing-again") au revoir
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 4, p. 45
grapes le raisin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 565
grass l'herbe
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 134, p. 951
Grass, Ear, Lip, Number (on a door, Address
chapter topic; Chapter 134, p. 951
Green and Yellow
chapter topic; Chapter 27, p. 283
green and yellow — vert is the standard, expected Latin viridis descendant shared by nearly every Romance language; jaune comes from a Latin word that literally meant "yellow-GREEN," and is usually said to share its ultimate PIE root with German's gelb, though that particular link is less secure than it first appears vert, jaune
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 27, p. 283
Greetings
chapter topic; Chapter 1, p. 1
grey gris
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 687

H

habeō litterās scriptās — the buried possessive
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 18, p. 213
habēre — the root you already met
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
half past — literally "and a half" et demie
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 8, p. 101
ham le jambon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 565
happy heureux
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 469
hard dur / dure
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1617
hard-working travailleur / travailleuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1629
he has, she has — the verb worn down to a single letter il a, elle a
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
he is, she is — the most frequently said word in the language il est, elle est
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229

Head and Hand
chapter topic; Chapter 21, p. 259
health la santé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 1075
Health, Brain, Lung, Liver, Kidney
chapter topic; Chapter 154, p. 1075
Hearing, Sleeping, Walking, Running
chapter topic; Chapter 30, p. 303
heat la chaleur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 945
heavy lourd
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 699
hello / good day bonjour
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1
here is — a frozen command, see here, and the word that lets you introduce somebody who is not you voici
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 367
here, there, over there — three distances, and the same ci and la already frozen inside voici and voila ici, là, là-bas
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 367
hi / bye (informal) salut explicit focus: pronunciation, writing, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 1, p. 1 high, tall haut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 90, p. 681
him and her, standing alone — where elle is the same word twice and lui is not lui et elle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 407
history, a story l'histoire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 232, p. 1545
holidays les vacances
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 803
homework les devoirs
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 127, p. 907
honest honnête
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1473
honey le miel
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 553
hope l'espoir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1269
Hospital, Illness, Thirst, Tiredness, Ill
chapter topic; Chapter 54, p. 463
hour (feminine) heure
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 8, p. 101
how comment
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 21

how — a word you have been using since your first lesson comment
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
How Are You?
chapter topic; Chapter 3, p. 33
how are you? — the neutral everyday question comment ça va ?
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 3, p. 33
how much and how many — one word where English needs two combien
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
How Much, and What to Call People
chapter topic; Chapter 44, p. 415
however, yet pourtant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 1099
Husband, Woman, Uncle, Aunt, Cousin
chapter topic; Chapter 57, p. 481

I

I je
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 21
I am — from Latin sum, and one of the oldest word-shapes in Europe je suis
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229
ï ë ü — the two dots that say "say me on my own"
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 4, p. 45
I have — one syllable, one vowel, and all that is left of Latin habeō j'ai
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
I'm sorry (literally "I am desolate") je suis désolé(e)
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 24, p. 271
"I speak French" — your first full sentence (français = French) Je parle français
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 5, p. 63
ice cream; ice; a mirror la glace
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 871
il parla · habló · falou — the same tense, four fates
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 18, p. 213
il parla — the past you read but never say
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 18, p. 213
ill, sick malade
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 463

in front devant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 157, p. 1093
In that case, Late, Suddenly, Until, Since
chapter topic; Chapter 187, p. 1275
in that case, so alors
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1275
inside dedans
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 723
Interview, Career, Printer, Mobile phone, Sheet of paper
chapter topic; Chapter 204, p. 1377
Introducing Yourself
chapter topic; Chapter 2, p. 21
iron; an iron (for clothes) le fer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 833
"it is ... o'clock" — the frame that tells the time il est, … heures
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 8, p. 101

J

j'ai couru — not every motion verb qualifies
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
j'ai parlé — the past built from "have"
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 18, p. 213
j'ai vingt ans — having your years
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 17, p. 195
Jacket, Tie, Belt, Gloves, Scarf
chapter topic; Chapter 116, p. 839
jam la confiture
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 71, p. 565
January — the month of Janus, god of doorways janvier
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 9, p. 113
je fus — the second stem
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229
je me suis levé — the pronominal family
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
je sais pas — the ne that speech leaves out
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 391
je suis allé — the past built from "be"
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
je suis monté / j'ai monté les valises
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
je vais partir — the future made out of "go"
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 391

jealous jaloux / jalouse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1461
Jewel, Ring, Necklace, Perfume, Letter
chapter topic; Chapter 118, p. 853
joy la joie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 469
Joy, Fear, Anger, Sadness, Happy
chapter topic; Chapter 55, p. 469
juice le jus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 121, p. 871
July — the month renamed for Julius Caesar juillet
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 10, p. 123
June — the month of Juno, queen of the gods juin
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 9, p. 113

K

kind, nice gentil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 693
Kitchen, Window, Chair, Key, Wall
chapter topic; Chapter 73, p. 577

L

l'aube — the white that stopped being a colour
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 16, p. 183
la consonne finale — the rule under half this book
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 399
(la main, continued) — French kept it too
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 21, p. 259
(la tête, continued) — The circumflex is a receipt grammar topic; explicit focus: pronunciation; Chapter 21, p. 259 last dernier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 939
late tard
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1275
laundry, linen le linge
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 833
lazy paresseux / paresseuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1629
le pluriel en -s — written, and never heard
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 399

(le temps, il pleut, continued) — il pleut
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 25, p. 275
le vin rouge — where the colour goes
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 16, p. 183
leather le cuir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 1185
Leave, Carry, Send, Receive, Feel
chapter topic; Chapter 65, p. 529
Lemon, Grapes, Jam, Yoghurt, Ham
chapter topic; Chapter 71, p. 565
les bateaux — the plural that is not irregular
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 399
les lettres que j'ai écrites — the fossil
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 18, p. 213
life la vie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 129, p. 921
light (not heavy) léger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 699
lightning l'éclair
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1527
Lightning, Thunder, Climate, Environment, Pollution
chapter topic; Chapter 229, p. 1527
Look at, Listen to, Wait for, Buy, Know
chapter topic; Chapter 64, p. 523
love l'amour
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 1081
low bas / basse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 1111
luckily heureusement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1287
luggage les bagages
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 199, p. 1347
lunch le déjeuner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 559
Lunch, Dinner, Breakfast, Rice, Pear
chapter topic; Chapter 70, p. 559

M

Magazine, Dictionary, University, Mistake, History
chapter topic; Chapter 232, p. 1545
March — the war-god's month, and the old start of the year mars
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 9, p. 113

married marié / mariée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 1125
mathematics les mathématiques
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 257, p. 1695
May — the month of Maia, goddess of growth mai
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 9, p. 113
Mayor, Elections, Vote, Politics, Economy
chapter topic; Chapter 248, p. 1641
me and you, standing alone — the heavy twins of je and tu, split by stress exactly as quoi split from que moi et toi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 407
me / myself (reflexive and object pronoun) me
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 21
metal le métal
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1365
midnight — literally "the night's middle" minuit
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 8, p. 101
milk — masculine, and the one drink in this chapter French did not have to borrow le lait
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 32, p. 323
modern moderne
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 1119
Modern, Former, Fresh, Spicy, Raw
chapter topic; Chapter 161, p. 1119
Monday — the Moon's day lundi explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 89 money; silver l'argent
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 79, p. 615
mother — and the reason English calls physical stuff "matter" la mère
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 12, p. 141
Mother-in-law, Son-in-law, Daughter-in-law, Fiancé, Fiancée
chapter topic; Chapter 167, p. 1155
mouth — feminine, and originally the Latin word for cheek, not mouth at all la bouche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 35, p. 341
mud la boue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1359
Muscle, Thumb, Wound, Scar, Cold
chapter topic; Chapter 185, p. 1263
music la musique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 915
Music, Sport, Game, Film, Song
chapter topic; Chapter 128, p. 915

must — the third of the set, and the one with a debt inside it devoir
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 37, p. 359
my name is... (literally "I call myself") je m'appelle…
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 2, p. 21

N

narrow étroit
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 693
nasty, mean méchant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 945
natural rubber le caoutchouc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 202, p. 1365
Natural rubber, Metal, Brick, Small bag, Rope
chapter topic; Chapter 202, p. 1365
near près
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 717 near to près de
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1281
Near to, Far from, At the bottom, On the right, On the left
chapter topic; Chapter 188, p. 1281
necessary nécessaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1299
Neck, Shoulder, Knee, Face, Blood
chapter topic; Chapter 50, p. 439
Neighbour, Guest, Baby, Grandson, Granddaughter
chapter topic; Chapter 58, p. 487
neither, not either non plus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 983
Nephew, Niece, Pupil, Teacher, Laugh
chapter topic; Chapter 59, p. 493
nervous nerveux / nerveuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1461
never; ever jamais
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 717
Never, Now, Then, Far, Near
chapter topic; Chapter 96, p. 717
nevertheless, however cependant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1455
new nouveau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 675
next prochain
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 939

nice, friendly sympathique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 133, p. 945
Nice, Nasty, Heat, Storm, Fog
chapter topic; Chapter 133, p. 945
night (la nuit — feminine) nuit
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
nine neuf
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
nineteen — the last number before the system changes again dix-neuf
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 15, p. 173
ninety quatre-vingt-dix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 963
no / not non
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 22, p. 265
noisy bruyant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 132, p. 939
Noisy, Last, Next, Famous, Funny
chapter topic; Chapter 132, p. 939
none, not a single aucun / aucune
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 983
noon — literally "the day's middle" midi
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 8, p. 101 nose — masculine, a silent final z, and another genuine cousin of its English counterpart le nez
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 35, p. 341
nothing rien
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 983
Nothing, None, Neither, Which One, Anything at All
chapter topic; Chapter 139, p. 983
November — the month that still says "nine" novembre
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 10, p. 123
now maintenant
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 717
Numbers One to Ten
chapter topic; Chapter 6, p. 73
Nurse, Cook, Police officer, Shop assistant, Farmer
chapter topic; Chapter 123, p. 883

O

October — the month that still says "eight" octobre
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 10, p. 123

of, from — the word already inside du, and the one that does what English does with an apostrophe de
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 375
Office, Factory, Pavement, Crossroads, Red light
chapter topic; Chapter 108, p. 791
often souvent
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 729
oil l'huile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 69, p. 553
old vieux
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 89, p. 675
on the contrary au contraire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 1099
on the left à gauche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1281
on the right à droite
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 188, p. 1281
on top dessus
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 723
On top, Underneath, Inside, Outside, Today
chapter topic; Chapter 97, p. 723
one — and, at the same time, "a/an" un
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
One heard greeting — write what you know
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
one, people, and in practice we — a noun for man that turned into a pronoun on
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 391
only seulement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1455
open ouvert
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 131, p. 933
Opening Hours, a Notice, the Rent, an Advert, a Bill
chapter topic; Chapter 142, p. 1001
opening hours, a timetable l'horaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 1001
or — the same three letters as the question word for where, kept apart by one accent ou
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 383
(oui, continued) — The other "yes," si
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 22, p. 265
outside dehors
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 723

P

pain la douleur
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 53, p. 457
Pain, Fever, Cough, Medicine, Doctor
chapter topic; Chapter 53, p. 457
paper le papier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 78, p. 609
Parle ! — the command, and the pronoun that goes missing
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 41, p. 391
parlé — the past participle
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 18, p. 213
parler · parlé · parlez — one sound, three jobs
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 18, p. 213
parlez-vous — the third way to ask
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
pas de pain — where the partitive collapses
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 399
Passport, Customs, Booking, Butcher's, Large river
chapter topic; Chapter 164, p. 1137
pasta les pâtes
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 571
patient patient / patiente
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1473
peace la paix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 1143
Pen, Paper, Notebook, Pencil, Bag
chapter topic; Chapter 78, p. 609
pepper le poivre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 72, p. 571
père / father — one sound-law
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 12, p. 141
perfume le parfum
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 118, p. 853
permission la permission
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 1161
person — feminine no matter who is meant, even a man, and secretly "nobody" when it stands next to ne la personne
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 33, p. 329
petit, petite — the ending that wakes the letter before it
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 42, p. 399
Phone, Umbrella, Money, Present, Glasses
chapter topic; Chapter 79, p. 615
Photographer, Journalist, Architect, Dentist, Pharmacist
chapter topic; Chapter 166, p. 1149

Pillow, Blanket, Towel, Soap, Toothbrush
chapter topic; Chapter 113, p. 821
pink rose
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 927
Pink, Purple, Brown (chestnut), Brown (of hair, Pretty
chapter topic; Chapter 130, p. 927
Plaster, Emergency department, Emergency, Medical appointment, Diet
chapter topic; Chapter 243, p. 1611
plastic le plastique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 1185
Plastic, Cotton, Wool, Silk, Leather
chapter topic; Chapter 172, p. 1185
Please
chapter topic; Chapter 23, p. 269
please (literally "if it pleases you") s'il vous plaît
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 23, p. 269
pleased, glad content
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 475
pleased to meet you (literally "enchanted") enchanté(e)
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 21
Police, Theatre, Library, Bakery, Town hall
chapter topic; Chapter 102, p. 753
polite poli / polie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 1105
politics la politique
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1641
pollution la pollution
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1527
poor pauvre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 687
Postcard, Folder, Pay slip, Label, Guide
chapter topic; Chapter 169, p. 1167
pretty joli
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 927
Promise, Discount, Sales, Coin, Banknote
chapter topic; Chapter 198, p. 1341
proud fier / fière
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1461
punctual ponctuel / ponctuelle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 220, p. 1473
Punctual, Foreign, Friendly, Honest, Patient
chapter topic; Chapter 220, p. 1473
purple violet
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 130, p. 927

pyjamas le pyjama
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1479

Q

quarter past — literally "and a quarter" et quart
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 8, p. 101
quarter to — literally "minus the quarter" moins le quart
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 8, p. 101
quel, quelle — which
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
quiet, peaceful tranquille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 218, p. 1461

R

rain la pluie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 639
rarely rarement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 1087
Rarely, Afterwards, Finally, From now on, Still
chapter topic; Chapter 156, p. 1087
raw cru / crue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 1119
Reading — Instructions, a Form, and a First Paragraph
chapter topic; Chapter 45, p. 423
ready prêt / prête
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1623
really vraiment
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1287
recently récemment
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 989
recycling le recyclage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1683
red — and English red is not a lookalike but an actual cousin rouge
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 16, p. 183
rest le repos
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 1081
Rest, Sleep, Dream, Anxiety, Love
chapter topic; Chapter 155, p. 1081
Restaurant, Hotel, Pharmacy, Village, Post office
chapter topic; Chapter 101, p. 747

Result, Difference, Example, Truth, Lie
chapter topic; Chapter 251, p. 1659
Return, Arrival, Departure, Destination, Landscape
chapter topic; Chapter 231, p. 1539
rice le riz
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 70, p. 559
rich riche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 687
Right, Left, World, Journey, Holidays
chapter topic; Chapter 110, p. 803
ripe mûr / mûre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 192, p. 1305
Roof, Garden, Lamp, Bathroom, Bedroom
chapter topic; Chapter 74, p. 583
rough rugueux / rugueuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1617
round rond
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 705
Rubber, Homework, Answer, Idea, Problem
chapter topic; Chapter 127, p. 907
rubbish les déchets
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 255, p. 1683
Rubbish, Recycling, Energy, Electricity, Gas
chapter topic; Chapter 255, p. 1683
rude impoli / impolie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 1105
Rug, Television, Computer, Fridge, Radio
chapter topic; Chapter 111, p. 809
Rule, Permission, Ban, Safety, Advice
chapter topic; Chapter 168, p. 1161

S

sad triste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 56, p. 475
Sad, Pleased, Daughter, Grandfather, Grandmother
chapter topic; Chapter 56, p. 475
sadness la tristesse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 55, p. 469
safe, sure sûr / sûre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 1111
safety la sécurité
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 168, p. 1161

Salad, Pasta, Cream, Pepper, Walnut
chapter topic; Chapter 72, p. 571
salt — masculine, cousin of English salt by common descent, and the source of a salary story no ancient writer actually tells le sel
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 34, p. 335
salty salé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 705
Salty, Bitter, Round, Square, Dry
chapter topic; Chapter 94, p. 705
salut* — let your eye and hand meet one known word
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
salut* — look, hide, write, compare
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
salut* — one supported copy
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 1, p. 1
sand le sable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 633
Sandwich, Sauce, Vinegar, Dessert, Meal
chapter topic; Chapter 122, p. 877
Saturday — the Sabbath day samedi
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 89
scissors les ciseaux
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 221, p. 1479
Scissors, Watch, Pyjamas, Button, Peach
chapter topic; Chapter 221, p. 1479
Sea, Stone, Sand, Beach, Island
chapter topic; Chapter 82, p. 633
Second, Change (coins), Date, Century, Email
chapter topic; Chapter 135, p. 957
see you later (literally "to more late") à plus tard
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 4, p. 45
see you soon (literally "to well-soon") à bientôt
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 4, p. 45
see you tomorrow (literally "to tomorrow") à demain
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 4, p. 45
seize / dix-sept — the seam
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 15, p. 173
September — the month that still says "seven" septembre
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 10, p. 123
serious sérieux / sérieuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1293
seven sept
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73

seventeen — the number where French stops inheriting and starts building dix-sept
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 15, p. 173
seventy soixante-dix
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 963
shame la honte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1269
shampoo le shampooing
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 827
Sheep, Goat, Lion, Monkey, Bee
chapter topic; Chapter 87, p. 663
Sheet, Drawer, Armchair, Saucepan, Frying pan
chapter topic; Chapter 193, p. 1311
shoes les chaussures
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 765
Shop, School, Bank, Train, Aeroplane
chapter topic; Chapter 99, p. 735
Shower, Bathtub, Wardrobe, Shelf, Curtain
chapter topic; Chapter 112, p. 815
shy timide
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 190, p. 1293
silent silencieux / silencieuse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1617
Silent, Clean, Hard, Smooth, Rough
chapter topic; Chapter 244, p. 1617
silk la soie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 1185
similar semblable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 245, p. 1623
Similar, Fair, False, Ready, Free of charge
chapter topic; Chapter 245, p. 1623
simple simple
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1299
Simple, Complicated, Necessary, Useful, Useless
chapter topic; Chapter 191, p. 1299
since, for depuis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1275
single célibataire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 1125
sir and madam — my lord and my lady, worn down, and the two words French uses where English uses a surname Monsieur, Madame
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 415
sister — the one family word that broke the pattern la sœur
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 12, p. 141

Sitting, Standing, Opening, Closing
chapter topic; Chapter 31, p. 313
six six
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73 sixteen — the last word French inherited already welded seize
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 14, p. 161
sixty soixante
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 963
size; the waist la taille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 117, p. 847
skin la peau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 445
Skin, Nail, Chin, Throat, Cheek
chapter topic; Chapter 51, p. 445
sleep le sommeil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 155, p. 1081
smoke la fumée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 201, p. 1359
smooth lisse
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 244, p. 1617
snow la neige
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 639
So, However, Anyway, On the contrary, Although
chapter topic; Chapter 158, p. 1099
so-so (literally "like this, like that") comme ci, comme ça
explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 3, p. 33
so, therefore donc
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 158, p. 1099
soap le savon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 113, p. 821
society la société
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1485
Society, Government, Law, Court, Judge
chapter topic; Chapter 222, p. 1485
socks les chaussettes
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 771
Socks, Thirty, Forty, Fifty, Hundred
chapter topic; Chapter 105, p. 771
Soft, Dirty, Young, Kind, Narrow
chapter topic; Chapter 92, p. 693
soft; mild; sweet doux
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 693
sometimes parfois
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 729

Sorry
chapter topic; Chapter 24, p. 271
spicy épicé / épicée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 161, p. 1119
Spoon, Knife, Fork, Bottle, Cup
chapter topic; Chapter 77, p. 601
sport le sport
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 128, p. 915
spring — literally "the first time" le printemps
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 11, p. 133
square carré
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 94, p. 705
Standing Alone
chapter topic; Chapter 43, p. 407
still, again encore
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 156, p. 1087
stomach — masculine, nasal like la main but through a different vowel, and the word that closes four chapters of everyday nouns le ventre
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 35, p. 341
strange étrange
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1467
Strawberry, Cherry, Melon, Garlic, Flour
chapter topic; Chapter 120, p. 865 strong fort
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 687
Strong, Weak, Rich, Poor, Grey
chapter topic; Chapter 91, p. 687
success le succès
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 197, p. 1335
suddenly soudain
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1275
sugar — masculine, closing a chapter where every drink-word is; the fourth and longest road of the four le sucre
explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 32, p. 323
sujet, verbe, objet — the order that carries the meaning
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 40, p. 383
summer — literally "the heat" l'été
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 11, p. 133
Sun, Star, Cloud, Rain, Snow
chapter topic; Chapter 83, p. 639
Sunday — the Lord's day dimanche
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 89
Supermarket, Cinema, Stadium, Swimming pool, Grocer's shop
chapter topic; Chapter 107, p. 785

suppletion — three verbs in a trench coat
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 19, p. 229
sweet (with sugar) sucré
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 699
swimming la natation
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 173, p. 1191

T

Taking, Asking, Helping, Loving
chapter topic; Chapter 28, p. 287
talkative bavard / bavarde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 246, p. 1629
Tax, Form, Envelope, Stamp, Parcel
chapter topic; Chapter 252, p. 1665
tea — masculine, and the drink whose name split in two depending which Chinese port a trader dealt with le thé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 32, p. 323
Teach, Drink, Eat, Give, Live
chapter topic; Chapter 61, p. 505
Telling the Time
chapter topic; Chapter 8, p. 101
temperature la température
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 194, p. 1317
ten dix
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
thank you merci
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 3, p. 33
the bill l'addition
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 247, p. 1635
the brain le cerveau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 1075
the chest la poitrine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 451
the chin le menton
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 445
the climate le climat
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1527
The Compound Past
chapter topic; Chapter 18, p. 213
the day before yesterday avant-hier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 989
The Days of the Week
chapter topic; Chapter 7, p. 89

the economy l'économie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 248, p. 1641
the emergency department les urgences
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 243, p. 1611
the environment l'environnement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1527
the face le visage
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 439
The First Verbs
chapter topic; Chapter 5, p. 63
the flag, in order — and two of its three colours are loanwords bleu, blanc, rouge
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 16, p. 183
the floor, the ground le sol
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 589
The Four Seasons
chapter topic; Chapter 11, p. 133
the future l'avenir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 995
The Future, This Evening, a Plan, To Foresee, To Organise
chapter topic; Chapter 141, p. 995
the government le gouvernement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 222, p. 1485
the hand — feminine despite ending in a consonant, and the root of half the words you know la main
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 21, p. 259
the head — from Latin for a clay pot la tête
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 21, p. 259
the left la gauche
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 803
the liver le foie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 154, p. 1075
the (masculine / feminine / plural) le / la / les
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
The Months: Caesars and Counting
chapter topic; Chapter 10, p. 123
The Months: Gods and Beginnings
chapter topic; Chapter 9, p. 113
The months that are off by two
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
the Moon (feminine) la lune
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 7, p. 89
the morning le matin
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 711

the neck le cou
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 50, p. 439
the north le nord
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 797
The Past That Takes être
chapter topic; Chapter 20, p. 245
The People You Introduce
chapter topic; Chapter 33, p. 329
the police la police
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 753
the post office la poste
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 101, p. 747
the rent le loyer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 142, p. 1001
the return le retour
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 231, p. 1539
the right la droite
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 803
the sales les soldes
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 198, p. 1341
the same pareil / pareille
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 219, p. 1467
the same two Latin verbs, and the opposite solution — Spanish kept them apart être / ser · estar
explicit focus: usage and culture; Chapter 19, p. 229
The same writing, with a clock
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 47, p. 429
the sea la mer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 82, p. 633
the south le sud
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 797
the stairs l'escalier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 75, p. 589
the stomach l'estomac
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 52, p. 451
the suburbs la banlieue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1449
the sun le soleil
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 83, p. 639
the throat la gorge
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 51, p. 445
the town hall la mairie
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 102, p. 753
the truth la vérité
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 251, p. 1659

the underground, the metro le métro
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 106, p. 779
The Welded Teens
chapter topic; Chapter 14, p. 161
the west l'ouest
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 109, p. 797
the wind le vent
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 84, p. 645
the world le monde
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 110, p. 803
then puis
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 96, p. 717
there is, there are — literally it has there, and the y is a Latin word for there that survives nowhere else il y a
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 367
they are — the hiss against ils ont's buzz ils sont, elles sont
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229
they have — the form that refuses to look like the rest ils ont, elles ont
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
Thin, Big, Heavy, Light, Sweet
chapter topic; Chapter 93, p. 699
thin, slim mince
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 93, p. 699
thirst la soif
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 463
thirteen — three-ten, with both halves now legible treize
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 14, p. 161
thirty trente
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 105, p. 771
this evening ce soir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 995
this is, that is — ce plus est, with the elision you have been hearing since l'eau c'est
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 38, p. 367
Thread, Needle, Nail for hammering, Hammer, Ladder
chapter topic; Chapter 230, p. 1533
three trois
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
three languages, one retreat — and it spread by contact, not coincidence passé simple · Präteritum · passato remoto
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 18, p. 213
Three More Ways to Use a Verb
chapter topic; Chapter 41, p. 391

thunder le tonnerre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 229, p. 1527
Thursday — the day of Jupiter jeudi
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 89
tiredness la fatigue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 54, p. 463
to achieve réaliser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1413
to act agir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 1063
to add ajouter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1221
to admire admirer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 1063
To admire, To act, To move forward, To move back, To lower
chapter topic; Chapter 152, p. 1063
to advise conseiller
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 1031
to allow permettre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1215
to announce annoncer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1221
to answer répondre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 969
to appear apparaître
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1221
to applaud applaudir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1401
To applaud, To cross, To increase, To decrease, To warn
chapter topic; Chapter 208, p. 1401
to ask — an ordinary, polite, everyday word, and one of the sharpest false friends French holds for an English speaker demander
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 28, p. 287
to, at — one letter, Latin ad, and the accent that keeps it apart from the verb a à
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 39, p. 375
to attempt tenter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1419
to avoid éviter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1227
To Be, and the Three Verbs Inside It
chapter topic; Chapter 19, p. 229
to be bored s'ennuyer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 1025

To be bored, To have fun, To get angry, To worry, To smoke
chapter topic; Chapter 146, p. 1025
to be born naître
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1395
To be born, To die, To grow old, To marry, To divorce
chapter topic; Chapter 207, p. 1395
to be enough suffire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1569
To be enough, To burn, To throw away, To calculate, To hit
chapter topic; Chapter 236, p. 1569
to be silent se taire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1419
To be silent, To fear, To attempt, To transport, To kill
chapter topic; Chapter 211, p. 1419
to be worth valoir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1587
to begin commencer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 969
To begin, To visit (a place), To answer, To put, To believe
chapter topic; Chapter 137, p. 969
to believe croire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 969
to bleed saigner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 1069
to blush rougir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 1069
to book réserver
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1383
To book, To spend, To save, To order, To dry
chapter topic; Chapter 205, p. 1383
to borrow emprunter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1257
to brake freiner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1425
to break casser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1389
To break, To touch, To taste, To heat, To cool down
chapter topic; Chapter 206, p. 1389
to breathe respirer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 1055
to build construire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1551
to burn brûler
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1569

to buy acheter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 523
to calculate calculer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1569
to call / to call oneself (s')appeler
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 21
to carry; to wear porter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 529
to celebrate fêter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1245
to change changer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1209
to chase poursuivre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1425
to chat bavarder
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 1049
to check vérifier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1557
to clean nettoyer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 517
to close — from Latin firmāre, "to make firm," so a French door is not shut but made fast; the same verb gave Italian "to stop" and Spanish "to sign" fermer
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 31, p. 313
to come back revenir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 62, p. 511
to come near s'approcher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 1049
to compare comparer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 1031
To compare, To advise, To convince, To criticise, To prove
chapter topic; Chapter 147, p. 1031
to complain se plaindre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1407
to continue continuer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 1013
to convince convaincre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 1031
to cook cuisiner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 60, p. 499
to cool down refroidir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1389
to correct corriger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1245

To correct, To direct, To destroy, To exaggerate, To celebrate
chapter topic; Chapter 182, p. 1245
to cough tousser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1599
To cough, To tremble, To scream, To vote, To welcome
chapter topic; Chapter 241, p. 1599
to count compter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 535
to criticise critiquer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 1031
to cross traverser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1401
to cry pleurer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 60, p. 499
to cut couper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 517
to decide décider
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 1013
to decrease diminuer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1401
to defend défendre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1257
to deliver livrer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 1049
to depend dépendre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1227
To depend, To share, To avoid, To throw, To turn
chapter topic; Chapter 179, p. 1227
to deserve mériter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1575
to destroy détruire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1245
to die mourir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1395
to direct diriger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1245
to disappear disparaître
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1257
to discover découvrir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 1043
To discover, To seem, To serve, To suffer, To dream
chapter topic; Chapter 149, p. 1043
to discuss discuter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 1019

to divorce divorcer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1395
to do one's hair se coiffer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1563
to download télécharger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1251
to draw dessiner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 535
to dream rêver
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 1043
to drink boire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 61, p. 505
to drive conduire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 975
to dry sécher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1383
to eat manger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 61, p. 505
to empty vider
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1557
To enjoy, To imagine, To point out, To inform, To complain
chapter topic; Chapter 209, p. 1407
to enjoy, to make the most of profiter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1407
to exaggerate exagérer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 182, p. 1245
to exchange échanger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1251
to exist exister
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1437
to explain expliquer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 1013
To explain, To translate, To decide, To try, To continue
chapter topic; Chapter 144, p. 1013
to express exprimer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1437
to fear craindre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1419
to feed nourrir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1605
to feel; to smell sentir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 529
to fill remplir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1557

to fill in a form remplir un formulaire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 1019
To fill, To empty, To measure, To weigh, To check
chapter topic; Chapter 234, p. 1557
to find trouver
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 67, p. 541
to finish — and the second regular family, which grows an extra syllable in the plural finir
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 41, p. 391
To fix, To brake, To function, To float, To chase
chapter topic; Chapter 212, p. 1425
to fix, to stare at fixer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1425
to float flotter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1425
to fly, to steal voler
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1581
to fold plier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 1037
to forbid interdire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1215
to foresee, to plan for prévoir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 995
to forget oublier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 517
to function, to work fonctionner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 212, p. 1425
to get angry se fâcher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 1025
to get dressed s'habiller
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 975
to get used to s'habituer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1587
to get worse empirer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1575
to give donner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 61, p. 505
to give a present offrir un cadeau
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1413
to give back rendre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1413
to give up renoncer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1251
To give up, To exchange, To download, To ski, To slip
chapter topic; Chapter 183, p. 1251

to go (and, oddly, "to be" in "how are you?") aller
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 3, p. 33
to go for a walk se promener
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 1037
to go on holiday partir en vacances
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1605
to go with accompagner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1221
to greet saluer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1203
to grow old vieillir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1395
to happen, to occur se produire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 140, p. 989
To Have, and How Old You Are
chapter topic; Chapter 17, p. 195
to have fun s'amuser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 1025
to hear — from a Latin verb meaning "to stretch toward," so English's intend is its closest surviving cousin, and French still keeps the older sense in entendu and s'entendre entendre
explicit focus: grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 30, p. 303 to heat chauffer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1389
to help — English aid arriving by the Latin road, while English help came by the Germanic one; the two words are unrelated aider
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 28, p. 287
to hide cacher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 535
to hit, to knock frapper
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1569
to hold tenir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1209
to hope espérer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 975
to hurry se dépêcher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1587
to imagine imaginer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1407
to improve améliorer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1575
to increase augmenter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1401

to inform informer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1407
to insist insister
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1593
To insist, To interrupt, To tie, To mix, To obey
chapter topic; Chapter 240, p. 1593
to interrupt interrompre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1593
to introduce présenter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1233
to invite inviter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1203
to iron repasser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1551
To iron, To repair, To build, To photograph, To repeat
chapter topic; Chapter 233, p. 1551
to joke plaisanter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1605
to jump sauter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 1007
to kill tuer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1419
to kiss embrasser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1203
To kiss, To greet, To thank, To invite, To park
chapter topic; Chapter 175, p. 1203
to know (a fact) savoir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 523
to know (a person, a place) connaître
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 975
To know (a person, a place), To prefer, To hope, To drive, To get dressed
chapter topic; Chapter 138, p. 975
to laugh rire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 59, p. 493
to learn apprendre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 60, p. 499
to leave (something); to let laisser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 529
to lend prêter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1233
to lift soulever
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1431
To lift, To surprise, To suspect, To squeeze, To suggest
chapter topic; Chapter 213, p. 1431

to like AND to love — one French verb where English keeps two, so the strength comes from what follows it, and adding bien makes it WEAKER aimer
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 28, p. 287
to listen to écouter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 523
to live vivre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 61, p. 505
to live / to dwell (a second -er verb — same pattern) habiter
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 5, p. 63
to look at, to watch regarder
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 523
to look for chercher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 517
to look like ressembler
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1239
To look like, To push, To pull, To waste, To overtake
chapter topic; Chapter 181, p. 1239
to lose perdre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 63, p. 517
to lose weight maigrir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1605
To lose weight, To feed, To go on holiday, To joke, To tidy up
chapter topic; Chapter 242, p. 1605
to lower baisser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 1063
to maintain entretenir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1437
to marry épouser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 207, p. 1395
to measure mesurer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1557
to meet rencontrer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 1069
to miss, to be missing manquer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1575
To miss, To deserve, To improve, To get worse, To offer
chapter topic; Chapter 237, p. 1575
to mix mélanger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1593
to move away s'éloigner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 1049
To move away, To come near, To chat, To plug in, To deliver
chapter topic; Chapter 150, p. 1049

to move back reculer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 1063
to move forward avancer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 152, p. 1063
to move house déménager
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1563
To move house, To rent, To rest, To wake up, To do one's hair
chapter topic; Chapter 235, p. 1563
to move (something) déplacer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1209
to notice remarquer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 1069
To notice, To replace, To meet, To blush, To bleed
chapter topic; Chapter 153, p. 1069
to obey obéir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1593
to observe observer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 1037
To observe, To take part, To go for a walk, To fold, To own
chapter topic; Chapter 148, p. 1037
to offer offrir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 237, p. 1575
to open — an -ir verb that takes -er endings, from a Latin verb reshaped to look like its own opposite, and the source of English overt and overture ouvrir
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 31, p. 313
to order commander
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1383
to organise organiser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 141, p. 995
to overtake dépasser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1239
to own posséder
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 1037
to paint peindre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 535
to park garer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1203
to pay payer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 62, p. 511
to phone téléphoner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 1019
to photograph photographier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1551

to pick (flowers, fruit) cueillir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1257
to pick up ramasser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1233
to play jouer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 60, p. 499
to plug in brancher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 150, p. 1049
to point out indiquer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 209, p. 1407
to pray prier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 1055
to prefer préférer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 138, p. 975
to prepare préparer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1233
To prepare, To introduce, To lend, To propose, To pick up
chapter topic; Chapter 180, p. 1233
to promise promettre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1215
To promise, To allow, To forbid, To protect, To rescue
chapter topic; Chapter 177, p. 1215
to propose proposer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 180, p. 1233
to protect protéger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1215
to prove démontrer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 147, p. 1031
to pull tirer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1239
to push pousser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1239
to put on weight grossir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1437
to put; to put on mettre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 969
to put up (a guest) héberger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 1055
To put up, To pray, To recommend, To slow down, To breathe
chapter topic; Chapter 151, p. 1055
to quarrel se disputer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 1019
to reach atteindre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1413

To reach, To achieve, To give a present, To give back, To recognise
chapter topic; Chapter 210, p. 1413
to read — from a Latin verb that first meant "to gather," which is why reading, electing, collecting and being elegant all turn out to be the same act lire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 29, p. 295
to realise se rendre compte
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1587
to receive recevoir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 529
to recognise reconnaître
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 210, p. 1413
to recommend recommander
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 1055
to record enregistrer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 214, p. 1437
To record, To maintain, To exist, To express, To put on weight
chapter topic; Chapter 214, p. 1437
to reduce réduire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1581
To reduce, To refuse, To risk, To solve, To fly
chapter topic; Chapter 238, p. 1581
to refuse refuser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1581
to rent louer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1563
to repair réparer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1551
to repeat répéter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 233, p. 1551
to replace remplacer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 153, p. 1069
to rescue sauver
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 177, p. 1215
to rest se reposer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1563
to risk risquer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1581
to run — Latin currere, the root under current, course, courier and curriculum, and the verb that shows why chien palatalized its c and courir did not courir
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 30, p. 303
to save (money) économiser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1383

to scream hurler
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1599
to seem sembler
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 1043
to send envoyer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 65, p. 529
to serve servir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 1043
to share partager
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1227
to shout crier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 1007
to show montrer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 62, p. 511
to sign signer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 145, p. 1019
To sign, To fill in a form, To phone, To discuss, To quarrel
chapter topic; Chapter 145, p. 1019
to sit down — a verb you do to yourself, from Latin sedēre, and the one French verb that ships with two accepted sets of forms s'asseoir
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 31, p. 313
to ski skier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1251
to sleep — Latin dormīre, unchanged in French, and the source of dormitory and dormant, though not of the dormouse dormir
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 30, p. 303
to slip glisser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 183, p. 1251
to slow down ralentir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 151, p. 1055
to smile sourire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 1007
to smoke fumer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 1025
to snow neiger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 178, p. 1221
To snow, To go with, To add, To announce, To appear
chapter topic; Chapter 178, p. 1221
to solve résoudre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 238, p. 1581
to speak / to talk (your first regular -er verb) parler
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 5, p. 63
to spend (money) dépenser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 205, p. 1383

to squeeze serrer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1431
to stand — French has no single verb for it, so the movement is se lever ("to lighten yourself") and the state is être debout, literally "on end" se lever, debout
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 31, p. 313
to stir, to move bouger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 184, p. 1257
To stir, To pick, To defend, To disappear, To borrow
chapter topic; Chapter 184, p. 1257
to stop arrêter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1209
To stop, To change, To move, To take off, To hold
chapter topic; Chapter 176, p. 1209
to study étudier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 62, p. 511
to suffer souffrir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 149, p. 1043
to suggest suggérer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1431
to surprise surprendre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1431
to suspect soupçonner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 213, p. 1431
to switch off, to put out éteindre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 1007
to switch on, to light allumer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 143, p. 1007
To switch on, To switch off, To jump, To smile, To shout
chapter topic; Chapter 143, p. 1007
to take off, to remove enlever
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 176, p. 1209
to take part participer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 148, p. 1037
to take — the grasping verb English borrowed a dozen times over, from prehensile to prison to surprise prendre
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 28, p. 287
to taste goûter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1389
to teach enseigner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 61, p. 505
to thank remercier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 175, p. 1203

to think — from a Latin verb meaning "to weigh," which is why English pensive, ponder, compensate, expense and even the flower pansy all sit in one family penser
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 29, p. 295
to throw lancer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1227
to throw away jeter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 236, p. 1569
to tidy up ranger
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 242, p. 1605
to tie, to fasten attacher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 240, p. 1593
to touch toucher
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 206, p. 1389
to translate traduire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 1013
to transport transporter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 211, p. 1419
to tremble trembler
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1599
to try essayer
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 144, p. 1013
to turn tourner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 179, p. 1227
to understand — literally com- + prendre, "to take together," so in French understanding IS grasping, and the verb conjugates exactly like the one it is built from comprendre
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 29, p. 295
to unite unir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 239, p. 1587
To unite, To be worth, To get used to, To realise, To hurry
chapter topic; Chapter 239, p. 1587
to use utiliser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 62, p. 511
to visit (a place) visiter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 137, p. 969
to vote voter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1599
to wait for attendre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 64, p. 523
to wake up se réveiller
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 235, p. 1563

to walk — and also to work, so ça marche is the most useful two words in the chapter; its own origin is genuinely unsettled between a Frankish verb and a Latin hammer marcher
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 30, p. 303 to want — and why je voudrais is the form you will actually use vouloir
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 37, p. 359
to warn prévenir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 208, p. 1401
to wash laver
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 60, p. 499
to waste gaspiller
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 181, p. 1239
to weigh peser
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 234, p. 1557
to welcome accueillir
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 241, p. 1599
to win; to earn gagner
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 66, p. 535
to work (a third -er verb — and the origin of "travel") travailler
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 5, p. 63
to worry s'inquiéter
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 146, p. 1025
to write — Latin scrībere, "to scratch," with a propped-up é- that French added in front of every borrowed sc-, sp- and st- word écrire
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 29, p. 295
today aujourd'hui
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 723
together ensemble
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 217, p. 1455
Tool, Guitar, Piano, Violin, Drum
chapter topic; Chapter 256, p. 1689
toothpaste le dentifrice
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 114, p. 827
Toothpaste, Shampoo, Comb, Bin, Broom
chapter topic; Chapter 114, p. 827
Tortoise, New, Old, Fast, Easy
chapter topic; Chapter 89, p. 675
Tree, Flower, Leaf, Mountain, River
chapter topic; Chapter 81, p. 627
trei-ze — which half is which
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 14, p. 161

trousers le pantalon
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 104, p. 765
Trousers, Shoes, Hat, Coat, Skirt
chapter topic; Chapter 104, p. 765
Trunk, Thorn, Lawn, Path, Cave
chapter topic; Chapter 254, p. 1677
trust la confiance
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 186, p. 1269
Tuesday — the day of Mars mardi
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 89
twelve — the second welded teen, and the one that shows the pattern douze
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 14, p. 161
twenty — a single inherited word again, and the base French will later count in vingt
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 15, p. 173
two deux
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 6, p. 73
Two Ideas, One Sentence
chapter topic; Chapter 40, p. 383

U

uncomfortable inconfortable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 1105
underneath dessous
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 97, p. 723
une heure — one o'clock
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 8, p. 101
une question — the question you make with your voice alone
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
une seule règle — both halves are the same fact
grammar topic; explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 20, p. 245
unfortunately malheureusement
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 189, p. 1287
unknown inconnu / inconnue
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 160, p. 1111
unpleasant désagréable
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 159, p. 1105
until jusqu'à
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 187, p. 1275
up there là-haut
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 216, p. 1449

useful utile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1299
useless inutile
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 191, p. 1299

V

Vacuum, Laundry, Washing powder, Iron, Pocket
chapter topic; Chapter 115, p. 833
Valley, Temperature, Butterfly, Fly, Mosquito
chapter topic; Chapter 194, p. 1317
Vase, Plant, Seed, Root, Branch
chapter topic; Chapter 228, p. 1521
vegetables les légumes
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 119, p. 859
Verbs of the Mind
chapter topic; Chapter 29, p. 295
(vert, jaune, continued) — jaune
grammar topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 27, p. 283
very — Latin trans, 'across', which crossed over into an intensifier and takes no de at all très
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 44, p. 415
vīgintī — the number French counts in etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 15, p. 173
vinegar le vinaigre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 122, p. 877
Volcano, Plain, Waterfall, Rock, Pebble
chapter topic; Chapter 171, p. 1179

W

Want, Can, Must
chapter topic; Chapter 37, p. 359
war la guerre
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 165, p. 1143
War, Peace, Army, Soldier, Tradition
chapter topic; Chapter 165, p. 1143
washing powder; the washing la lessive
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 115, p. 833
water — the most worn-down word French ever took from Latin l'eau
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 13, p. 153

we are — and the only plural that keeps the regular ending nous sommes
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229
we have — and the ending is finally something you can hear nous avons
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
weak faible
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 91, p. 687
Weather
chapter topic; Chapter 25, p. 275
weather — le temps means BOTH "time" and "weather," the SAME Latin tempus polysemy as Spanish's tiempo; il pleut keeps Latin's pl- UNCHANGED, unlike Spanish's llueve le temps, il pleut
explicit focus: grammar; Chapter 25, p. 275
Wednesday — the day of Mercury mercredi
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 7, p. 89
well / good / fine bien
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 1, p. 1
wet mouillé
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 95, p. 711
Wet, Week, Month, Morning, Always
chapter topic; Chapter 95, p. 711
what's your name? (literally "how do you call yourself?") comment vous appelez-vous?
explicit focus: grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 21
what, standing on its own — the stressed twin of que, and the one that survives after a preposition quoi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 407
What the Ear Cannot Hear
chapter topic; Chapter 42, p. 399
what — the partner of qui, and the one that always elides que
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 407
Wheel, Engine, Toll, Motorway, Fine
chapter topic; Chapter 227, p. 1515
when — and a silent d that comes back to life quand
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
where — and the accent that separates it from a completely different word où
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
Where French Changes Its Mind
chapter topic; Chapter 15, p. 173
Where Two Words Melt Into One
chapter topic; Chapter 39, p. 375

which one lequel / laquelle
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 139, p. 983
white — a Germanic word in a Latin language, running against the traffic blanc
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 16, p. 183
who — Latin quis, unchanged in twenty centuries, and the shortest question in French qui
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 43, p. 407
why — and the answer word that is built to match it pourquoi
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 36, p. 349
Wind, Fire, Hill, Desert, Wave
chapter topic; Chapter 84, p. 645
wine — the word that refused to wear down, in any language le vin
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 13, p. 153
winter — literally "the wintry season" l'hiver
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 11, p. 133
with a cold enrhumé / enrhumée
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 1125
wool la laine
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 172, p. 1185 worried inquiet / inquiète
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 162, p. 1125
Worried, With a cold, Single, Married, Divorced
chapter topic; Chapter 162, p. 1125
Writing — Four Lines, And The Joiner That Moves Nothing
chapter topic; Chapter 48, p. 431
Writing — My Own Line
chapter topic; Chapter 46, p. 427
Writing — With A Clock
chapter topic; Chapter 47, p. 429

Y

yes oui
explicit focus: etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 22, p. 265
Yes and No
chapter topic; Chapter 22, p. 265
yesterday hier
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 98, p. 729
Yesterday, Often, Sometimes, Town, Street
chapter topic; Chapter 98, p. 729

you are — and the circumflex marks the s that used to be there vous êtes
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229 you are — two letters, and it sounds like a single vowel tu es
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 19, p. 229
you (familiar / formal) tu / vous
explicit focus: pronunciation, grammar, etymology; Chapter 2, p. 21
you have — plural, and polite to one person vous avez
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
you have — the informal one, and it sounds exactly like the last one tu as
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology; Chapter 17, p. 195
you're welcome (literally "of nothing") de rien
explicit focus: pronunciation, etymology, usage and culture; Chapter 3, p. 33
young jeune
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 92, p. 693
Your own line — the first writing with no model
script and writing topic; explicit focus: writing; Chapter 46, p. 427

Z

-ze — the ten you keep meeting
etymology topic; explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 14, p. 161
zero zéro
explicit focus: etymology; Chapter 136, p. 963
Zero, Sixty, Seventy, Ninety, Thousand
chapter topic; Chapter 136, p. 963

Other

œ — one letter, not two script and writing topic; explicit focus: script, writing; Chapter 12, p. 141